With some 200,000 soldiers still keeping vigil at the front, Christmas 1943 will find many menfolk of military age missing in Swiss homes. But the defenders of Swiss neutrality will not be forgotten. A nationally collected Christmas fund will, as in previous war years, provide for special holiday treats, as well as for useful gifts among needy men.

At no time of the year is Switzerland lovelier than it is during the Christmas season. It is a symphony in white with a sapphire sky stretching over regal mountains and sparkling snowfields. In spite of these critical times, when there will be no foreign visitors to enjoy Swiss winter splendor and its accompanying gala of snow and ice sports, the Swiss people themselves are determined to keep fit by means of these priceless gifts from Nature.

THE LIGHT OF CHRISTMAS

We must remember that righteousness exalteth a nation, and that no nation is truly exalted that is not righteous, no matter how great its strength, nor how far-flung its power.

We must remember that those nations who had banished righteousness within their own borders, then went ahead to bring darkness upon all mankind.

That nation will shine as light in the world that shines in righteousness among its own people.

We must demand of our leaders that they remember the teaching of the Holy Child of Bethlehem when they come to write the peace which shall end these days of struggle.

If eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, then eternal vigilance in these things which we have named is the price of that new and better world for which we Christians pray, the promise of which came to us first in the birth of the Holy Child, on the first Christmas Day.

"O Holy Child, now come to us
Though our desert be least,
Bless us as we kneel to Thee
In Thy Eucharistic Feast
Where Thine Altar Candles shine like stars
Shone once in the distant East."

NO BLACKOUT FOR CHRISTMAS

with me when we were born. What we celebrate with joy and gladness each recurring Christmas Day is the Event of the Ages—The Divine Invasion, God Himself coming to dwell among men in the Holy Child of Mary.

The glory of God brought down to earth, down into our midst to dwell among us—this is the magic, the secret, the power, and the wonder of Christmas. In gratitude and thanksgiving for this wonderful event, mankind will never, be well assured, let Christmas die.

AND SO TONIGHT, as Christmas casts its magic wand over our hearts and the heavenly glory of that awesome event—God's coming to earth—wraps us in its spell, have no fear that Christmas will ever be blacked-out of the hearts and souls and minds of men. Mankind will never let that beautiful story die. Men could but poorly live without the star-shining vision of the Christmas kind of world that God wills this world to be and mankind will not soon forget the wonder of the Christmas fact, the Divine Invasion, the event of the ages.

There is, we know it, a peace that surpasses all understanding, and at Christmastime it seems almost within our reach, for heaven and earth draw close together then as only then they meet.

May you find anew, this Christmas Eve, this peace of God and may you win from Him Whose wondrous birth we celebrate, hope and faith and courage to live gallantly and splendidly even in the midst of a sad and troubled world.

SILENT NIGHT, HOLY NIGHT

O course we shall sing this immortal music many, many times this holiday season. It has become the most famous Christmas Hymn in the world today. It is so great in its simplicity, so universal in its appeal, and so popular that it literally encircles the globe. The December issue of Coronet carries a lovely story of this immortal Masterpiece, which, it says, has become as indispensable to the spirit of Christmas as the silver-trimmed tree, that no Christmas could be complete without it. Wherever Christmas is celebrated, there the spirit of the holiday is heightened and intensified with the singing of this lovely Hymn.

Perhaps the most beautiful thing about this celebrated Hymn is its birth. On Christmas Eve, in the year 1818, in an obscure little Austrian village, Joseph Mohr, the village priest, composed this poem for the holiday and brought it to his organist, Franz Xavier Gruber, who was also the village school teacher, and asked him to prepare a melody for it so that they might feature it in the village Church the following evening. We are told that in less than an hour Gruber had composed this immortal, deathless melody, and that it was introduced in the church the next evening, and made a profound impression on the villagers.

An organ builder from another village heard the song and was so struck by its beauty that he committed it to memory and carried it away to other neighboring villages where some strolling concert singers were so profoundly impressed they included it in their concert repertoire, and sang it wherever they went and found for it an army of admirers. It spread like contagion and today the entire world ushers in the Christmas festival by singing Silent Night.

How little those simple folk, listening that night realized they were attending the birth of a Masterpiece that Coronet says, has become as deathless as the holiday spirit is exalted.

This was never a folk song, as some think. Folk songs are built up through the ages by the people and are constantly changing, but both the words and music of this Hymn are just as they were written that first Christmas Eve a hundred years ago and have never been revised.

I like to think how those composers would have laughed with a rosy scorn, had some one said, the song will live until the end of time, but the writers will vanish, forgotten, as a dream dies in the night. This is literally what has happend. Authentic records tell us that the composers have been completely forgotten by a world that once a year chants their Hymn to inaugurate the Christmas.

CHRISTMAS EVE

We love to watch on Christmas Eve
With those poor shepherds, waiting dawn,
While lilts that voice, "No longer grieve,
To you and all the Christ is born."

We thrill to hear the Angel say,
"This sign to you from Heaven I show,
Go, find a manger filled with hay;
There lies the Babe. So you shall know."

Whole-souled we join the Choir's chant,
"Glory to God, to men good will,
Peace on the earth." (Our foremost want,
While hosts each other strive to kill.)

Breathless we bend in Bethlehem's cave,
Before the Man-Child born that night.
Let unbelievers sneer and rave.
Christmas assures us, Right is might.

LEONARD AND RUTHIE'S TWINKLE TREE

A Christmas Story
By KATHLEEN HAY

The firelight sparkled across the walls of Leonard and Ruthie's room, as they hung up their stockings before the chimney. They were very happy tonight. It was Christmas Eve!

"I want a twinkling Christmas tree," said Ruthie, clapping her hands together, "over in the corner by the window, and a big dollie sitting under it in a carriage with a blue coverlet, and a doll's house, and—"

"Wait, Ruthie, it's my turn. I want some soldiers and a real little village, with red, blue and green stop lights, and policemen on the corners, and signs with . . . . 'Watch your step—don't run fast,' and a real fire engine, and train that can run."

Big sister Marjorie laughed a merry laugh.

"Why, you'll have a real model village, with all the safety rules to keep people well and happy, and now it's time to say good night, for how can you expect Santa Claus to make his rounds, if the girls and boys over the world sit up so late? See Fido and Pussy White are already half asleep on the rug."

"Good night . . . good night . . ." Ruthie and Leonard began obediently, as they jumped merrily beneath the warm, soft coverlet . . . "we will shut our eyes like Pussy White and Fido, and dream about our Christmas Twinkle tree; don't forget where to plant it, Sister. . . right where the stars are peeping through that window in the corner."

"I don't think you and Ruthie have given me a moment to forget. I suppose it must have an extra amount of sparkling lights this Christmas, to be a real twinkle tree!"

"Yes, oh, yes," both Ruthie and Leonard agreed in a breath, "good night and happy dreams."

Big Sister turned the lights low and tiptoed out, leaving the room very quiet, while flickering shadows began to play across the pink walls.

Directly Pussy White uncurled from the small ball that she had made of herself on the rug, and sat up quite straight as she began to wash behind her ears in the firelight's glow. Fido, too, sat bolt upright.

He looked over at Pussy White enquiringly. . .

"I want to find the twinkle tree for Master Leonard and Mistress Ruthie. . . where do you think it grows?"

Pussy White shook her small head, slowly.

"I don't just know where that particular kind grows, but you'll get lost and freeze, it's snowing outside; as for me, I'd prefer the comfort of this nice room and fire!"

"So would I," replied Fido, "if the twinkle tree that they want so badly was alight in that corner, but it's not, and usually, by this time, it's already planted and decorated. Downstairs there's so much company, they may have forgotten, and these children are too good to us for us to forget them."

Pussy White looked thoughtful.

"And, how, if you please, if we found one could we get it here?"

"Oh, never mind about that part, it comes later; now while all are making merry downstairs, and Master Leonard and Ruthie are sleeping, you and I can slip down the back stairway and into the forest."

(To be concluded.)

WHEN JESUS CAME

When a new baby comes into the family, everyone is happy. Announcements are sent to all the friends and relatives.

It was a wonderful time when the baby Jesus came to live in the world, because people had been looking for Him for hundreds of years. Angels came down from Heaven to tell the shepherds that the Baby was the Saviour of the world.

This is why Christmas is such a happy time.

The New Testament gives a long list of the people who were in the family a great many years before Jesus came. This is to show that He belonged to a family of kings. We are not told the names of the great-grandfathers of any of the disciples. It does not make any difference to God what kind of families we have. The only thing that counts with Him is for us to be born again into His great family.

Before Jesus came, an angel said to Mary, "You will have a Son, and you are to call His name Jesus; because He will save His people from their sins." Jesus was a common name among the Jewish people. It had been the name of great and good men in their nation, and they loved it. But after this Jesus was to be a wonderful name, nor for Jews only, but for everybody in the world.

Seven hundred years before Jesus came, a prophet named Micah said that He would be born at Bethlehem. The only reason he knew this was that God, who knows everything, told him.

The wise men came from a far country and brought beautiful gifts to the little Lord Jesus, because they knew He was a king. Mary and Joseph and Jesus were a poor family, and as far as we know, no one else ever gave them any gold.

A few months before Jesus was born, God sent a little boy named John into the home of the good man, Zacharias. Little John's mother, Elizabeth, was the cousin of Mary, the mother of Jesus.

Long before God had promised to send John to make the way ready for Jesus. In that Eastern country, when a king planned to make a journey, someone would run before to tell the people that he was coming. He was the king's forerunner. So John was called the forerunner of Jesus.

When Jesus was a tiny baby, Joseph and Mary took Him to the Temple. A good man named Simeon had gone to the Temple to pray that day. God had told Simeon that he would not die until he had seen the Saviour that was to come into the world.

The old man took the Baby in his arms, and tears of joy ran down his withered cheeks. Looking up to Heaven he said, "Lord, now I am ready to die,

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NEWS

Dr. Howe Accepts Election

TO BECOME PROFESSOR AT VIRGINIA SEMINARY

Alexandria, Va.—The Rev. Reuel L. Howe, S. T. D., was elected Professor of Pastoral Theology in the Virginia Theological Seminary at the November meeting of the Board of Trustees and has recently accepted the election. He will enter upon his new studies in February, at the opening of the second semester.

Dr. Howe is a native of the state of Washington, a graduate of Whitman College and of the Philadelphia Divinity School. He began his ministry in the District of Spokane. From there he moved to Elsmere, New York. For the past six years he has been Professor of Pastoral Theology and Director of Clinical Studies at the Philadelphia Divinity School.

Dr. Howe is well known for his work in Philadelphia in training Seminarians, and also for his very valuable contributions to various summer schools, such as the Advanced Conference of the Third Province. Profoundly concerned that clergymen shall have a thorough grasp of theology and all the traditional Seminary disciplines he is also concerned that they shall understand the human beings to whom they must minister, know how to present the Gospel and the resources of Christianity in such fashion as to be intelligible, and also know how to use the resources provided by the relevant sciences.

It is expected that in addition to his regular courses, he will develop the field-work at Virginia and integrate this with the classroom studies, and that, as a result of his close supervision, students will learn a great deal more from this side of their training than has been possible previously.

The Chair of Pastoral Theology at Virginia has been vacant since the retirement of the Rev. C. Sturges Ball, S. T. D. The various courses in that department have been taught by visiting lecturers. These gentlemen have made very great contributions to the Seminary, but inevitably there has been a lack of continuity in their work, and also inevitably they have been unable to give much personal supervision to the students or to enter into the life of the institution as a resident teacher would.

CONVOCATIONAL PLAN GOT WORKOUT IN DIOCESE

Detroit, Mich.—The Convocational plan set up at the Convention of the Diocese of Michigan last January got a large-scale workout during October and November, when meetings involving nearly 1,200 clergy and vestrymen of the diocese were held in each of the 11 Convocations.

Michigan borrowed the Ohio plan of Convocational Vestry Conferences for the presentation of the 1944 Missionary Extension Program and the discussion of the share each parish would take in that program. Five meetings were held in regions outside of Detroit, and six in the metropolitan area, running from October 19 through November 12, at the rate of two or three each week.

Each Convocational Vestry Conference was held at dinner, with the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Creighton, D. D., bishop of the diocese, as host. The team which accompanied him numbered in each case three besides himself; those cooperating as team leaders including the Rev. Gordon Matthews, executive secretary of the diocese; the Rev. Irwin C. Johnson, of St. John's, Detroit; the Rev. Austin E. DuPlan, of Grace Church, Port Huron; the Rev. Howard V. Harper, of St. Paul's, Jackson; Mr. John R. Watkins, of Christ Church Parish, Detroit, and Mr. Harold Thompson, of St. Philip's and St. Stephen's Parish, Detroit.

At each conference, following the presentation of the Missionary Extension Program of the Diocese and General Church for next year, each vestry, after private conference, indicated the share in that program which it will place before the people of its parish during the annual Every Member Canvass.

The Executive Council has approved the presentation of a greatly increased Missionary Extension Program, and the objectives set before the vestries at the Convocational Vestry Conferen es were considerably larger in every case than for this year. However, the great majority of vestries gladly accepted the objectives and a considerable number voluntarily increased them.

Bishop Creighton and the members of the team are greatly encouraged at the fine response received during the conferences.

SIX EPISCOPAL CHAPLAINS GRADUATE IN CLASS 22

Williamsburg, Va.—Class 22-43 of the Naval Training School had six chaplains who are of the Episcopal Church. At the recent graduating exercises, Capt. J. K. Richards, U. S. N., Commandant, U. S. Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School, New York, told the class:

"Go out from this school determined to guide and protect the young Americans with whom you will work. Stand by them in their hour of need. Inspire them with a Faith in God, that no matter what may come, they will meet it with the will to win, that the great ideals of this country we love so dearly, may go on to future generations and that the will of God may be the ultimate goal of all nations."

Episcopal Chaplains in the class were: Scott Field Bailey, St. Paul's Church, Waco, Texas; Hollis W. Colwell, Church of the Ascension, Troy, N. Y.; Willian Forman Creighton, son of the Bishop of Michigan, and rector of St. Clement's, St. Paul, Minnesota; Judson S. Leeman, of St. Barnabas Hospital, Newark, N. J., and recently in charge of St. Peter's, Port Chester, N. Y.; Harry E. Owings, Jr., on the staff of All Saints, Brookline, Mass., and Arthur B. Ward, St. James, Lewistown, Montana.

Mr. Jordan New Director

APPOINTED TO DEPARTMENT OF PROMOTION OF NATIONAL COUNCIL

New York, N. Y.—Robert D. Jordan of Akron, Ohio, is the new Director of the Department of Promotion of the National Council according to announcement by the Presiding Bishop. Mr. Jordan will take office on January 3. He was nominated by Bishop Tucker and his appointment confirmed by the National Council at its December meeting, and Mr. Jordan has now accepted his disappointment.

Mr. Jordan was born in Palestine, Texas, on January 18, 1902. He attended grade school at Muskogee, Oklahoma, then went to the Shattuck School at Faribault, Minn., from which he was graduated in 1920. He attended the University of Virginia in 1920 and '21, then returned to Shattuck as instructor in Latin and French for three years.

Employed by the Skelly Oil Company, Tulsa, Oklahoma, for 14 years, Mr. Jordan started as a refinery employee and ended as Division Manager. During the last ten years of his term with Skelly, he spent much of his time in sales promotion work.

In Pueblo, Colo., Mr. Jordan headed the local Community Chest with a successful record, then moved to Akron in May, 1943, to do sales-promotion work for the Sieberling Rubber Company.

An Episcopalian all his life, Mr. Jordan was confirmed in Muskogee, Oklahoma, by Bishop Thurston. He is married and has a daughter of thirteen.

Musical selections for the program are:

1. Hymn 551, "The First Noel".
2. "Welcome, Yule," Ancient Carol.
3. "The Sleep of the Child Jesus," F. A. Gevaert.
4. "Carol of the Russian Children," from White Russia, arranged by Harvey B. Gaul.
5. "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming," M. Praetorius.
6. "Sleep, Little Dove," from an Old Alsatian Carol, harmonized by E. Cuthbert Nunn.
7. "Good King Wenceslas," traditional descent.
8. "Masters in This Hall," based on an old French Carol, arranged by T. H. Candlyn.

Canon James Green is headmaster of the Cathedral School Choir.

CHINESE IN UNIFORM NEED SPECIAL INTEREST

New York, N. Y.—The Rev. Dr. Almon R. Pepper, of the National Council's Division of Christian Social Relations is urging that Church people interest themselves in the special needs of Chinese in uniform, as recently outlined by the Christian Commission for Camp and Defense Communities.

Chinese in the armed forces, the Commission states, face a complicated adjustment. Many speak English poorly, many understand it little or not at all. Often they have come to the United States at a mature age on scholarships, as sons of American citizens, or as merchants. Thus, in addition to the adjustment from civilian to army life, they have also to complete the adjustment to American ways and customs.

It is stated further, that English classes in the Army do not fit the needs of all the Chinese, and that often they make slow progress. Chinese in uniform feel ill at ease in the average recreation hall, service club or USO and are reticent about using such facilities. Many Chinese soldiers are terribly concerned about their destitute families in China.

The suggestion made is that "if Chinese or other Orientals are located in your area and their peculiar needs are to be met, it will be necessary to seek them out rather than to wait for them to come to you. They should be encouraged to use all opportunities open for learning English, for interpretation of regulations, and for friendship. The goal for integrating them into normal American ways and life should be kept in mind. If special group activities for them are set up, it should be only where such activities by interpretation and special guidance will help them integrate more readily into their normal surroundings. Opportunities for them to meet travelers of their own race or returned missionaries, any who know their country and language and are in a position to offer them special guidance, should be used."

AUBURNDALE CHURCH TOTAL LOSS

Boston, Mass.—The Church of the Messiah, Auburndale, was totally destroyed in a spectacular fire on the night of November 15, with an estimated loss of $100,000. Within three days, everyone connected with the parish had received a personal letter from the rector, the Rev. Richard P. McClintock, bringing home the fact that the Church of the Messiah, more than mere bricks and mortar, is in the hearts of those belonging to it, a fellowship of prayer and worship, friendliness and co-operation. Until it is intelligently possible to rebuild the Church, which has had an active life of 75 years, services will be held in the Auburndale Club. While the fire followed a fathers' and sons' banquet, its origin is undetermined. Nothing was saved except the parish records.

Roosevelt, Wilkie Define Beliefs

ON WHAT THE FUNCTIONS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH ARE TODAY

New York, N. Y.—President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie have defined what they believe to be the functions of the Christian Church in the world today. The President believes it is the business of the Church to be the comrade of men as they pioneer for the right; to minister to the discouraged, the suffering and the dying; to support men in their self-dedication to God's will and to bring to all persons "a light that is not of men." Mr. Willkie feels that the Church must "rediscover, reassess, and reaffirm its ideals and convictions"; and that new social situations of our day demand new and concrete statements of justice, personal and social.

The statements were made in response to an inquiry by the Rt. Rev. Walter H. Gray, suffragan bishop of the Diocese of Connecticut, who is president of the Church Congress. Church Congress is an organization which states its purpose as "to stimulate the Church's study and discussion of living issues," and to encourage constructive thought on the Christian faith and on the place and function of the Church in modern society.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement:

The history of the Church in this country is an essential part of our history as a nation. In all previous national crises men of religion have stood beside their fellowmen and stood in the front ranks; the preacher was with the pioneers who rolled back the frontier; he was with the men who carried guns at Lexington and Gettysburg and Chateau Thierry. To minister to the soldier who lies wounded and eager for the sight of home, to offer the final consolations of religion to the dying—these have been, and still are, the holy privileges of the chaplain. To maintain a high resolve on the home front—a resolve based on spiritual values both on the field of battle and in the councils of peace—this has been, and still is, the supreme duty of the Church Militant.

In these days of struggle which try every soul and every institution and every tradition, we are all in desperate need of a light that is not of men. May God grant that the Church will not fail in providing that light in our present darkness. For if we lack spiritual guidance for our immediate problems and set our feet in consequence upon obscure ways, our children shall wander for long years in a moral wilderness.

Mr. Willkie's statement:

Spiritual and moral values, now dormant, must be revived and translated into economic, social, ethnic and political democratic realities in order to attempt to justify the blood, the hope and the trust which has been expended during these barbarous years. It must be the Church's daily task to stimulate, encourage and satisfy the democratic ferment now awakening throughout the world: for only in this way will the hope ripen into confidence, and trust deepen into conviction.

The Church today has an unexcelled opportunity to exercise and develop leadership through both its clergy and laymen. For during the period immediately following the close of the military phase of the war, new patterns of human conduct will be measured and established.

At the close of World War I, we saw a cruelly wounded world turn defiantly against formal religion. The "Lost Generation" emerged. As the postwar demoralization grew, spiritual symbols were discarded and accepted religious guides were ignored. The lack of moral and ethical stamina warped the judgment of individuals and distorted their actions; rightful burdens were rejected. And as the postwar years ripened into the prewar years, it became apparent that the Church had lost ground.

In the present critical hour in the long history of religious democracy, the trend toward unity among organized religious groups is a heartwarming sign that once again the Church is in the vanguard of the march forward.

Particularly in the treacherous, degraded, allied fields of race hatred and nationalistic megalomania—dual philosophies antipathetic to all religious teachings—the Church must lead a ceaseless, victorious fight for justice, moral and social.

I am convinced that this is the time for the Church to rediscover, reassess and reaffirm its ideals and convictions. As one who looks into the future with hope and confidence, I believe that now we must make a deliberate choice—whether we will translate our verbal declarations of faith into tangible deeds of action or whether we are content to forfeit our right to keep faith with the future.

CHURCHES UNITING IN UNIVERSAL WEEK OF PRAYER

New York, N. Y.—Perhaps there never has been a time when Christians needed to pray more than during these days of suffering and conflict. Christians need to pray for themselves, that they may be true to Christ and the Church. Also, they need to pray fervently for others. United prayer helps to bind Christians of the world into an unbreakable fellowship. While there are many things that Christians are prevented from doing because of circumstances over which they have no control, yet there is always one thing they can do—they can pray. "Men ought always to pray" for one another in times of war as well as in times of peace.

The Universal Week of Prayer, which is to be observed around the world during the week of January 2-9 of next year, offers an opportunity for the churches to engage in united and simultaneous prayer. This is a world fellowship of prayer.

The writer of *Universal Week of Prayer Topics for 1944 is Rev. J. Harry Cotton, President of McCormick Theological Seminary of Chicago. The general theme for the week is, "The Power of God." The daily subjects developed by Dr. Cotton, are:

Sunday, "Power in Evil Hands."
Monday, "Evil's Hour in God's Eternity."
Tuesday, "The Self-Restraint of God."
Wednesday, "The Gospel of Power."
Thursday, "God's Strong Use of Human Weakness."
Friday, "Strength for the Day."
Sunday, "The Final Triumph."

The Universal Week of Prayer, coming as it does at the very threshold of the New Year, offers to the churches one of their greatest opportunities to have fellowship across denominational lines at the deep levels of our Christian faith. Wherever possible, the Week of Prayer should be observed unitedly by all the churches of a community, under the sponsorship of the Ministerial Association or the Council of Churches.

Last year the churches of Tarentum, Pennsylvania, and for the third time, held their Week of Prayer in the homes of the community. The first year there was an attendance of 2183 in 96 meetings; the second year, the attendance was 2346 in 116 meetings; last year's attendance was 2323 in 124 meetings. What this community has done, others may do, also.

The President of our nation for the third consecutive year has proclaimed next New Year's Day a National Day of Prayer. He and other leaders of our nation are looking to the churches across the country to be responsible for the carrying out of all plans for the making of this first day of the new year, a day of united prayer.

It is to be greatly desired that the churches and ministers of all our Protestant denominations will take responsibility in making plans for the fullest possible observance of the day. Since the time is short, prompt action is necessary. It is to be hoped that all of us will think in terms of our possibilities and not of our limitations, in making this period of prayer one of the most far-reaching spiritual experiences in the life of our several communities.

It is suggested that, wherever practicable, the National Day of Prayer and the Week of Prayer be planned for together. Many, if not all communities, will want to begin the Week of Prayer on Saturday—New Year's Day. The churches acting separately or unitedly will feel that they should begin these eight days of prayer with a watch-night service on New Year's Eve. This will provide a way by which men and women may welcome the New Year in a Christian, rather than a pagan way.

These days of prayer are an answer to the desire of many serious-minded Christians who have wanted to see something done unitedly in prayer by the churches during these dark days. "It is better to walk with God in the dark than alone in the light."

*The Week of Prayer booklets may be ordered from the Department of Evangelism of The Federal Council of Churches, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y. Price 5c per single copy.

A pamphlet has been prepared containing helpful materials for use in preparing a program for the New Year's National Day of Prayer. It is not an order of worship. It contains materials and suggestions for the local committee in the preparation of their own order of worship. Order from the Commission on Worship, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y. Single copies sent free upon request.

RECTOR IS VERSATILE GENIUS

Montenegro, Brazil.—"A versatile genius" is "Mechanical Minded Minister" the Rev. Libero V. Cordova, rector of the Church of the Holy Spirit, Montenegro, in the State of Rio Grande do Sul, according to the Rev. Custis Fletcher, Jr., who says that he remodeled the chapel, built the furniture, put in the leaded glass window over the altar.

He is statistician for the Church and in that office he thought an adding machine would be a help but it cost too much, so he made one, of wood. He has long felt that a parish paper was needed but the parish could not afford one. He spent his spare time carving wooden type and when he had enough, built a hand-operated printing press. The paper is not only legible but has proved, he reports, a stimulant to his people. He looks after several missions and often journeys many miles on horseback for baptisms and weddings where there is no resident minister.

While he was a theological student he taught science in the Church high school. The laboratory equipment was most inadequate, so Mr. Cardova made more, including a telephone, telegraph sender, scales and measuring instruments. Most of the school's museum collection of stone and minerals, birds and snakes, was collected by him. Once on the way to a Church convention he was driving along the beach toward Rio Grande when he saw a flock of birds not represented in the school's collection. He stopped the car and shot a bird. Later he acted as taxidermist, and gave the neatly stuffed bird to the school.

SANTA CLAUS WITH AN AMERICAN ACCENT

Members of the Eighth Army Air Force in England have opened a Hobby Shop. Here the boys spend their spare time making toys for English children: model tanks, fire trucks, cradles, tommy-guns, little wooden locomotives, racing automobiles with real windshields. The boys go to the schools in poorer districts and ask the teachers which children need things and what they like the most. The boys set a goal of 2,400 toys to be made and stuffed with candy and gum from their weekly rations.

NEWS NOTES

Of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific

Berkeley, Cal.—Incomplete returns from the canvass to renew units ($10 per year for five years) for the support of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific already show a slight increase over the number for the previous period. As more units are subscribed, it will be possible to expand the work by the addition of more members of the faculty.

Early reviews praise the Jubilee symposium, Christianity and the Contemporary Scene, edited by Randolph Crump Miller and Henry H. Shires. Dean James M. Malloch, of Fresno, writes: "Remarkably clear survey of the problems, opinions, and attitudes of contemporary Protestantism, with some treatment of Eastern Orthodoxy and Roman Catholicism, plus an inspiring address on the world today by a noted Jewish educator. Valuable bibliographies."

---

The Post-War Rehabilitation School, sponsored jointly by the Pacific School of Religion, the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, and the Starr King School, has 30 students under Director Arthur Swift, Jr. A comprehensive program includes study of special regions and languages, plus the Christian background necessary for rehabilitation work.

Professor William Ernest Hocking, of Harvard University, will be a special lecturer at the Pacific School of Religion for the quarter beginning in January.

DR. W. B. RILEY'S DIAMOND JUBILEE TO BE CELEBRATED

Minneapolis, Minn.—Christmas Day, December 25, 1943, will mark the 60th Anniversary of Dr. W. B. Riley's ordination in the ministry. Dr. Riley is a native of Kentucky, and on Christmas Day, 1883, he was ordained in the First Baptist Church of Dallasburg, Ky. At the insistence of the Ordaining Council, he preached his own ordination sermon on the text. "Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

After attending the Valparaiso Normay School Valparaiso, Ind., Hanover College, Hanover, Ind., and Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, he took up pastorates at Carrolton and Warsaw, Ky., from 1883 to 1887. He was then called to the Tabernacle Baptist Church at New Albany, Ind., which church he served for two years. He served the Lafayette Baptist Church of Lafayette, Ind., for three years, and was pastor of the First Baptist Church of Bloomington for two years, then was called to Calvary Baptist Church of Chicago, which church he served five years. In 1897 the First Baptist Church of Minneapolis called him to be pastor, in which church he served 45 years.

In 1902 he founded the Northwestern Bible and Missionary Training School, and in 1935, the Northwestern Evangelical Theological Seminary. Over 2,000 students have graduated from these schools, and gone throughout the world. The Diamond Jubilee will mark a celebration to be held at the Northwestern Theological Seminary and Bible Training School.

Dr. Riley's ministry has been varied. Since 1893 he has published over 100 volumes, many of which have gone into several editions.

Dr. Riley, while advanced in years, is still active as President of the school, and is conducting evangelistic campaigns almost continuously.

DIOCESE OF SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA

A New Woman Worker in the Diocese and One of the Newest Missions

Roanoke, Va.—Miss Beryl Virginia Ball of Jamaica, Long Island, has come to Southwestern Virginia to be assistant to Deaconess Amelia Brereton in the work at St. Mark's Mission, Honey Branch, and her other activities in the area around Dante, Virginia; the mission being located about two miles from Dante on the road to St. Paul.

A native of Long Island, Miss Ball is a graduate of Jamaica High School, a Bachelor of Arts of Syracuse University, where she majored in Sociology. She also took a course in Religious Education at Union Theological Seminary, New York. She has had interesting experience as a leader in Church School work, counsellor for young people in conference and camp, work with Girl Scouts and varied activities on a newspaper.

For many years the missionaries at Dante lived in the town, in property owned by the Clinchfield Coal Corporation. The first resident missionary was Deaconess Maria P. Williams, who organized the work there about 1908 and conducted it beautifully for thirty years. Her last assistant, Deaconess Edith A. Booth, of New York, succeeded to the position of missionary in charge on the retirement of Deasoness Williams in 1938, and had as her able assistant Deaconess Amelia Brereton of Pennsylvania. On the retirement of Miss Mabel R. Mansfield as director of handicraft in the diocese, Deaconess Booth took over that work and Deaconess Brereton took charge of the mission work at Dante.

In January, 1939, Mr. A. B. Kilgore and his wife gave to the diocese a lot for a chapel on Honey Branch on the road between Dante and St. Paul, at the intersection of the boundaries of Scott, Wise and Dickenson Counties, and a nice chapel was erected on that lot. More recently the Diocese has acquired a property of approximately nineteen acres across the road from the chapel. On that property was a dwelling which has been considerably remodeled and improved and is now used as the home for the missionaries. Deaconess Brereton and Miss Ball live there and most happily Deaconess Booth also, since that is as good a location as any for her headquarters in connection with the handicraft work in the various missions in the diocese, several of which center around the Dante area. All three of these splendid women workers are most happy and enthusiastic over their new home.

RAYMOND FERRIS ELECTED DEAN

New York, N. Y.—The National Council has been informed that the Rev. Raymond T. Ferris has been elected Dean of the Cathedral of St. Luke, Ancon, Panama Canal Zone. He succeeds the Rt. Rev. C. A. Voegeli, now Bishop of Haiti.

Mr. Ferris went to the Canal Zone a year ago, and has been in charge of St. Mary the Virgin at Silver City. He was ordained in 1937, and was in charge of St. John's Church, Mount Morris, N. Y., from his ordination to the diaconate until his departure for Panama.

Dean Ferris is a graduate of Hobart College and the Episcopal Theological School. He is 30 years old.

CHURCH DEBT LIQUIDATED

Summerton, S. C.—St. Matthias' Church made the final payment on a burdensome church debt on December 1 of this year. Just a little more than four years ago the congregation, under the priest-in-charge, the Rev. W. R. Haynsworth, began a five-year campaign to eliminate the debt. Much gratitude is felt that with God's help it has now been completed.

On December 10, the bishop of the diocese, the Rt. Rev. Albert S. Thomas, visited the church to participate in a special service of thanksgiving, which included the burning of the mortgage, and to deliver the sermon of the occasion. The Bishop encouraged the congregation, not only to rejoice in the liquidation of the debt, but with determination to go forward to the accomplishment of even greater things.

MARTINSVILLE HAS A SUPPLY MINISTER

Martinsville, Va.—Beginning the first Sunday in November, the Rev. Appleton Grannis is serving Christ Church, whose rector, the Rev. Charles C. Fishburne, Jr., is a Chaplain-Lieutenant in the Navy, at present stationed at the Naval Base near Norfolk.

The Rev. Mr. Grannis, retired but temporarily drafted back into active service, has had an interesting career. A graduate of Columbia University with the degree of Master of Arts and from the General Seminary in New York, he was ordained priest in 1897, and, after serving in Essex Fells, New Jersey, and St. Michael's, New York, was rector of Trinity Church, Boston; The Church of the Holy Apostles, New York City; St. Anne's Church, Lowell, and was rector of St. Paul's American Church in Rome, Italy (1939-40), and at the time of his retirement was rector of The Church of the Good Shepherd at Clinton, Mass.

ACTIVE CHURCHMEN'S ASSOCIATION

Trenton, N. J.—The newly-organized and extremely active Episcopal Churchmen's Association of the Diocese of New Jersey believes in publicity. Evidence is provided by its mimeographed monthly paper, "Everyman," now grown to about 2 1-2 single spaced pages 8 1-2 x 13.

Edmund W. Palmer is editor of the paper as well as diocesan chairman of the organization. The current issue of the paper has of course a Christmas reference, pointing the example of the early Christians in their worship, education and service, all directed to the work and will of God's greatest Gift.

"Everyman" carries also reports of laymen's meetings in various parts of the diocese, news of laymen's activities in other dioceses, and a report on the Men's Advent Corporate Commission.

"COME AND WORSHIP" BROADCAST

Trenton, N. J.—The Episcopal Churchman's Association has completed arrangements for a series of radio broadcasts. Charles P. Hutchison announces that the initial broadcast went out December 15, and there will be a weekly program on Wednesdays at 9:00 P. M.—fifteen minutes of prayer, hymn and Bible reading. The Program is titled "Come and Worship". The broadcast is from station WTTM, Trenton, 920 kilocycles.

Participants in the program, Mr. Hutchison says, are selected from the eleven Episcopal parishes in Trenton and Bordentown, and every parish will be represented on the program at some time. So far arrangements have been made for the broadcasts to continue a month.

UNITED CANVASS ENCOURAGING

Wakefield, R. I.—The United Canvass was used this year in Rhode Island only in one corner of the "South County", in the Towns of Narragansett and South Kingstown, the latter comprising the villages of Wakefield, Peace Dale, Kingston, etc. The Movement was sponsored by the Ministerial Association, and the chairman was the Rev. John R. Wyatt, rector of the Church of the Ascension, Episcopal, in Wakefield. In the United Canvass was the Church of the Ascension, Wakefield, St. Peter's-by-the-Sea, Narragansett, the Rev. Thom Williamson, rector; twelve Protestant churches, and the two Roman Catholic Parishes in Wakefield and Narragansett. Posters, window exhibits, post cards, and newspaper advertising were used in publicity, and the papers gave news notices also, specially the Narragansett Times, which gave almost a whole page to short histories of all sixteen parisnes in the United Canvass. While the United Canvass was not begun this year until shortly before the actual date of Loyalty Sunday (December 5) yet the results were encouraging. More interest was manifested than before, and the financial results showed that the United Canvass was worthwhile.

WHEN JESUS CAME

because you have let me see the Saviour."

Then a very old lady named Anna came in. She had worked for God many years, and prayed much. When she saw the Baby, God whispered the wonderful secret to her, too; and she told others that the Saviour had come.

Jesus grew up just as all little boys do. He slept and ate and played. His body grew straight and strong, and tall, and his mind grew, too.

But He lived in a plain little cottage at Nazareth, and did all that His father and mother told Him to do. He learned the trade of a carpenter from Joseph, and earned money to buy food for His little brothers and sisters. He was a perfect example for all the boys that should live in the world in all the years to come.—Adapted from Marian Madison, in Burning Bush.

GHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

"Only God could have thought of Christmas."

"Gladness is a duty, though its roots must go deep if its flower is not to wither."

They who do their souls no wrong,
But keep at eve the faith of morn,
Shall daily hear the angels' song,
"Today the Prince of Peace is born!"
—Lowell.

The will of God is not a burden to carry, but a pillow to rest on.
—Hannah Whitall Smith.

Out of the travail of new birth,
Lord God, there comes a glad release.
Oh, holy hour when all the earth
Shall know the beauty of Thy peace—
Thy vision that can never die—
Thy song that rings against the sky!

Through the porthole I can see
One tiny circle of blue, cloud-flecked.
Because it is there. I know there is also
The infinite sky.
—Bonaro Wilkinson.

The world today is one year further away from the birth of Jesus, but—glad and happy hope!—it is one year nearer the final triumph and reign of Jesus.

There is a healing something at work in the world; and when you and I have blundered about and come to the end of our resources, there are open to us great reservoirs of power which we can't begin to tap until we've despaired of our own. —Sel.

Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed.
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed.
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.
—Horatius Bonar.

Dear Lord, I pray this Christmas
For all men everywhere,
For some are glad, and some are sad,
And some are full of care;
To every heart give courage,
And take our fears away.
Be near to all Thy children, Lord,
This blessed Christmas Day.
—Sel.

Word of God—the grand unveiling of His glory and His grace;
When the lamps of earth are failing,
Here is light for all our race.

Sleep, Holy Babe,
Upon Thy mother's breast;
Great Lord of earth and sea and sky,
How sweet it is to see Tee lie
In such a place of rest.
—Edw. Caswell.

There is a law of life. It was written in fragments in the human heart. It was set down in old times, as Peter puts it in the epistle, not by the will of man; but holy men of God spoke as thy were moved by the Holy Ghost. Then it was incarnate in a Life.
—Paul Sherer.

I do not see my way; but I know that He sees His way and that I see Him.—Kingsley.

A Prayer

LORD, GIVE ME FAITH, to trust Thy loving care
For those I love.
I may not shield them from the bitter strife
That spells out life,
Nor free the coming years from shadowing fears;
But know, that for each one there is a Way.
And Thou wilt guide them through it day by day.
Lord, give me Faith to trust Thy loving care
For those I love.

Amen.

FOREIGN

From the Spiritual Issues of the War

FRENCH ARCHBISHOP'S ADDRESS TO DEPORTED SCOUTS

The Archbishop of Toulouise, Mgr. Saliege, who has more than once shown himself antagonistic to Nazi methods in France, gave the following courageous address to a body of French scouts when they were about to leave for compulsory labor in Germany.

"My friends, you are leaving for Germany. Under constraint? Or freely? It is not for me to know. One can be subject to a law without giving it one's adherence. You are leaving; that is a fact. What advice shall I give you? This, and nothing but this: bear witness to France and to Christ. However greatly France may be humiliated at the present time, proudly keep your hope. Our cause was just; you cannot be told that often enough. If by our fault we have lost the war, the justice of our cause remains intact. Take to a foreign country the qualities of your race. Say to yourselves that you have a mission; 'I shall show what it means to be a Frenchman, a young Frenchman, eager, loyal, ingenious, a good comrade, and an observer who does not let himself be taken in by appearances, but who sees what lies behind those appearances.'

"You are going to a country that has its own beauty, its own greatness. The Germans are a great people. You must not fail to recognize their qualities. But you must also see their enormous shortcomings . . . You will see that behind appearances which are beautiful, something is lacking, which is not knowledge, but which one might simply call mind (esprit). It is a triumph of technique, of utilitarianism, and that in the service of force . . . In the presence of this collective pride you will represent the French conception of life, the human conception, according to which the individual counts, peoples have rights, and men are brothers. The glory of France throughout her history has been the glory of the fraternity of humanity. A Frenchman who does not see in each man his brother would not be true to his race. An old-fashioned word expresses very well what you should be in Germany: 'Gentilhommes.'

"You will be witnesses of Christ. You are not unaware that Christ has many adversaries in Germany, who refuse to accept His doctrine of charity, pity and mercy. They refuse to accept the humiliated Christ, the suffering Christ, the Christ of the Crucifixion, the Christ who hides the strength of victory under the weakness of apparent defeat. . . . You will accept suffering with dignity, without complaint. Witnesses of Christ, you will be kind, good, charitable toward all men, whatever their race, whom you meet during your work. . . .

"In July, 1902, Charles de Foucault gave himself this commandment: 'I shall accustom every man, be he Christian, Mohammedan, Jew or heathen, to look upon me as his brother.' You will agree that if you make this commandment yours, the fair name of France and of Christianity can only gain by it. . . . Be strong, be faithful, be loyal to your belief. Then you will be neither dupe nor victim. Prayer and the sacraments will give you the necessary help. Here, your leaders, your priests, and your friends will pray for you. Nothing can destroy the communion of souls. Through Christ, in Whom you are united, we shall be in touch one with the other. There is no separation for those whom the charity of Christ has joined together. You have understood me: you go to fulfill a mission . . . a French mission. Let France through you be loved, be respected, be admired; let Christ through you be adored. I give you my blessing as you go. How much happier shall I be to give you my blessing on your return!"

CHURCH LEADERS ASK FOR PRAYER FOR INDIA

The following Call to Prayer for India and Famine Relief Appeal was issued by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and the Moderator of the Free Church Federal Council:

"At this time when Lord Wavell is taking up his new responsibilities as Viceroy of India, we wish to ask our fellow-countrymen to support him with their prayers and at the same time to pray for India, so that, if it may be, the way shall be found to bring to an end both the present deadlock and that alienation which it both expresses and increases. Let our prayers be continuous, and find their focus on Sunday, November 28th, which the National Christian Council of India has appointed as a special day of prayer for India, and which the Bishop of Dornakal as President of that Council has asked us to observe in union with our Indian fellow-Christians.

"Another feature in the Indian situation calls both for our prayers and for our practical sympathy—the famine from which so many in India are suffering. The first requirements in the famine-stricken areas of India is clearly the provision and effective distribution of adequate food supplies; and under present conditions this must be the responsibility of the Government. We are advised, however, that financial help is also urgently required for the relief of certain special kinds of distress arising from famine.

"A fund for this purpose is, therefore, being opened which will be put at the disposal of the National Christian Council of India for use in the areas worst stricken. We appeal to British Christians to contribute generously to this fund and so to make a gesture of practical sympathy with their Indian brethren.

"This appeal has the support of the India Committee of the Conference of British Missionary Society. Subscriptions should be sent to: Indian Famine Relief, care The British Council of Churches, 56 Bloomsbury Street, London, W. C. I. (Signed) William Cantuar; John Baillie (Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland); R. D. Whitehorn (Moderator of the Free Church Federal Council)."

MARSHAL STALIN MEETS METROPOLITAN SERGIUS

London—Reuter reports that the following historic statement was broadcast from Moscow on Sunday, September 5th:

"On Saturday Stalin, as chairman of the Council of People's Commissars, received Metropolitan Sergius (locum tenens of the Patriarch's see), the Leningrad Metropolitan Alexey, and Nikolay, Metropolitan of the Ukraine. Molotov, vice-chairman of the council, was present.

"In the course of the interview the Metropolitan Sergius informed the chairman that the authoritative circles of the Orthodox Church had formed the intention of convening in the near future a conclave of bishops for the election of a Patriarch of Moscow and of all Russia, and for the establishment of a Holy Synod. The head of the Government, Comrade J. V. Stalin, then stated that on the part of the Government there would be no objection to this proposal."

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

I WAS GREATLY encouraged over the general moral state of man the other day when a taxi driver resisted the temptation to overcharge. There were four passengers for three different destinations. At the first stop, one man got out. His fare was 25 cents. A second stop, some distance away, the other man got out and the driver said "50 cents". They quite naturally gave him 50 cents apiece. When he realized the misunderstanding, the taxi driver returned one of the fares and said, "Oh, it is only 25 cents apiece."

If a taxi driver is able to resist such temptations, which could easily be yielded to without much danger of being found out, then the manifold temptations of each day's life can be resisted by us all. This question occurred to me—would he have been so honest if I had not been along to witness? I believe so from the very character and outlook of the man revealed in his conversation. Is this a "minor" incident? Perhaps, but the very pin-points of temptation reveal us as we are and the successful resistance to the minor is the best possible preparation for the major crises which come at the most unexpected moments.

THIS MAN was quite probably unconscious of the possible conflict and the whole incident was undoubtedly a fairly well established pattern of conduct. In many minds such situations pose a dilemma and the process of choice moves to the fore and complicates a simple issue of honesty. One of the evil symptoms of our age, and most every other age, is the attitude of "can I get away with it?" in such matters. We are honest, in other words, only when we feel dishonesty is going to pinch us and make us pay. Not only does our conduct make this all too clear, but in our thinking we practice deception and try to relate our conduct as we want it to our innate desire to be right with the universe. We would warp a law to serve our ends and call it expedient or justified.

THIS WHOLE SUBJECT of honesty and temptation and self-justification has to do with man's freedom. Very much as the Little Locksmith had to struggle with the bees in the yellow lantern of her writing sanctuary (she called it The Thimble) to show the way out to freedom, so do most of us who get involved in dishonesties need someone to show us the slavery of it and the impossibility of freedom as long as they are indulged in. Again in "The Thimble" one day flew a humming bird. It flew to the raftered ceiling and could find no way out. In a frenzy of terror it flew back and forth. The Little Locksmith knew the way was so simple. Why, she thought, could the bird not have sense enough to see. She left him alone and when she returned he was gone. At last he had made the great discovery that what he had imagined was a prison was really wide open.

Those who know not the wide open way of redemption through Christ can seldom see the way out of their involvements nor how to extricate themselves from the barbed wire entanglement of their misdeeds, and from the clutch of their dishonesty and disunity. We must get one fact straight and keep it straight—we are absolutely dependent upon God. That is the basic assumption for the real curative treatment of life's difficulties.

When we are free, there is no longer need for rebellion against God, society, or anything else—when we are free from self and the domination of the laws self manufactures for its own private use. Only as God is in the midst of them must we obey the laws and impulses, and can we with assurance strike out towards the dawn.

Memorandum on Jewish Rescue and Palistine

IN A FEW MONTHS' TIME the gates of Palestine will be closed to the Jewish people; the homeless refugee will be confronted there of all places with the mocking legend "No Jews admitted". Even the mere trickle of immigrants now permitted under the Palestine White Paper will cease forever . . . unless that infamous document is immediately revoked.

The issue here is not Zionism but the necessity of using the one practical avenue of escape open to a people whom our enemies are exterminating. It is a question of our moral responsibility for the murder of hundreds of thousands of human victims through passive acquiescence in their betrayal and destruction.

Twenty-five years ago a British Government promised to re-establish Palestine as a home for the Jewish people and to facilitate Jewish immigration there. The fifty-one nations of the League, and later by unanimous resolution the Congress of the United States, approved and endorsed this promise, on the basis of which Great Britain was given the trust and responsibility of the Mandate for Palestine. In the years that followed Jewish immigrants drained swamps and watered the dry lands and developed agriculture and built industry.

In Europe on the other hand the persecution of the Jews grew worse; the pressure to emigrate more intense. But the world was divided into two parts—that which the Jews had to leave if they were to exist at all, and that which they were not permitted to enter. Palestine alone, internationally recognized as the one country to which Jews were entitled to come "as of right and not of sufferance" offered welcome and deliverance. More than 300,000 Jews who might have been victims of Hitler's extermination policy found there a haven and a home.

BUT IN APRIL, 1939, the appeasement policy of Munich was extended to the Midle East. Even though Arab standards of living in Palestine had risen and the Arab population there had greatly increased in the years of Jewish immigration, it was sought on grounds of expediency to buy the doubtful loyalty of the Arab countries outside of Palestine. So it was that the White Paper doomed to death hundreds of thousands of Jews who might have been saved; and, finally, in April, 1944, Palestine is to be closed forever to Jewish immigration.

No wonder that Mr. Churchill in a brilliant speech in the House of Commons in June, 1939, described the White Paper as a breach and a repudiation of Britain's promise; no wonder, too, that the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations condemned it as illegal and inconsistent with Britain's obligations.

It has taken decades of hard work, planning and cultivation to bring Palestine to the point where, as a practical matter, it can, within the near future, absorb two million Jews. It is the only place immediately available. The conquest of the Mediterranean by the United Nations has made it unnecessary to fear any longer those elements among the Arab peoples who responded to vicious Axis propaganda.

This is not a problem merely special to the Jews. The world is engaged in a great moral struggle which is epitomized in the torture and extinction of the Jews by the Nazis. If nothing is done at this time, millions more will be murdered. To the extent that we remain passive in the face of this issue, a dark shadow is cast over the cause of human freedom and the vision of a decent world after the war.

The Palestine White Paper Must Be Abolished!

Write therefore to Hon. Cordell Hull, State Department, Washington, D. C. The salutation is "My dear Mr. Secretary". Your letter may be brief. The following specimen letter may serve as a guide, but please compose your own for greater effectiveness:

"The Palestine White Paper issued by the British Government in May, 1939, prohibits further Jewish immigration into Palestine after April, 1944. The terrible persecution of the Jews of Europe at the hands of the Nazis imposes a charge on all other nations to help them if possible and, at the very least, not to block their escape. As a practical matter, Palestine is the one place in the world which is best equipped and willing to admit Jewish refugees within its borders. It would be shocking, indeed, if the policy laid down in the White Paper should be allowed to stand. The White Paper should be rescinded at once. Will you please exert your moral and political prestige to the end that British and American statesmanship may again unite in rescuing the persecuted Jews of Europe from their tragic fate."

Letters should also be addressed to President Roosevelt, to Senator Tom Connally, Chairman Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C., and to your local newspaper.

The organized letter writing campaigns of the committees of correspondence have produced widespread and effective action. . . . Concentrated public opinion is thus mobilized behind the letters you write and is strengthened in turn by your expression of opinion.

NEW YEAR THOUGHTS

By Lillian Gray

Let us walk softly, friend:
  For strange paths lie before us all untrod,
  The New Year, spotless from the hand of God,
Is thine and mine, O friend.

Let us walk straightly, friend;
  Forget the crooked paths behind us now,
  Press on with steadier purpose on our brow,
To better deeds, O friend.

Let us walk gladly, friend;
  Perchance some greater good than we have known
  Is waiting for us, or some fair hope flown
Shall yet return, O friend.

Let us walk, humbly, friend;
  Slight not the heart's ease blooming round our feet;
  The laurel blossoms are not half so sweet,
Or lightly gathered, friend.

Let us walk kindly, friend;
  We cannot tell how long this life shall last,
  How soon these precious years be overpast;
Let Love walk with us, friend.

Let us walk quickly, friend;
  Work with our might while lasts our little day,
  And help some halting comrade on the way;
And may God guide us, friend.

Isolationism in Modern Dress

By WILLIAM C. KERNAN

THE LEADING ARTICLE in the December issue of THE READER'S DIGEST is one by Mr. William Hard, called AMERICAN INTERNATIONALISM. Since Mr. Hard is an editor of THE READER'S DIGEST and since this magazine has a very large audience, what Mr. Hard has written becomes a matter of first-rate importance.

Mr. Hard's article is plausible. He rides with the tide of popular opinion, which is against isolationism, by calling his piece AMERICAN INTERNATIONALISM and by advocating a "World Union of all countries, large or small, developed or undeveloped, 'good' or 'bad', on the model, not of the League of Nations, which we rejected, but of the Pan-American Union, to which we have belonged for more than fifty years. He is opposed to "general alliances with special countries in peacetime" and gives good and sound reasons for his opposition. He is against imperialism, and there he is right again. He is for "world-wide economic peace and welfare" and a freer flow of goods across national boundaries. And certainly that makes sense.

One is reminded that Mr. Hard is merely proposing that all the nations of the world plan to cooperate with each other as the United States has sought to cooperate with the rest of the world during the past ten years. We do not forget our "good neighbor" policy which is an expression of this kind of cooperation, or our reciprocal trade agreements which are designed to open the markets of the world to the trade of the world, or our refusal to participate "in general alliances with special countries in peacetime," or our renunciation of imperialism. But we also remember that this policy of voluntary cooperation did not dissuade the Nazis of Germany, or the Fascists of Italy, or the imperialists of Japan, from following their voluntary courses which did not bring cooperation or peace, but war.

ALL THAT Mr. Hard proposes, in reality, is an intensification of this program of international voluntary cooperation after the war is over. His World Union would simply include representatives from all the nations of government, finance, export and import industries, labor, and agriculture, who would meet continuously on a voluntary basis to solve the problems of the world. "The World Union," he writes, "shall have no power to impose its economic conclusions upon any country anywhere. It shall have power only to transmit its conclusions to all countries and to try to secure their adoption by as many countries as can be persuaded to see whatever common sense the conclusions may contain. . . . I contend that it is not only undesirable but impossible to lodge any power of compulsion in any international world body, political or economic. . . ." Mr. Hard's internationalism is powerless. It has no teeth in it.

I contend that this means that in the post-war world, as in the pre-war world, there will be no means at hand to restrain an aggressor nation if it cannot be persuaded to restrain itself, and no way to prevent an imperialistic nation from grabbing as much of the world's wealth as it considers consistent with its self-interest. I cannot see the essential difference between Mr. Hard's highly seasoned plea for world cooperation without obligation to world law, and the simple, straight forward statement of the isolationist-nationalist, Mr. William J. Grace, who said (NEW YORK TIMES, September 7, 1943), "We realize that a nation like an individual has an obligation of charity to other nations. But we must stop at charity and not join with them in any kind of super-government. Furthermore, the individual's first obligation is to himself, and this nation's obligation is first to itself." I take this to mean that England's first obligation is to itself, and Russia's to itself, and China's to itself, and that if cooperation serves their self-interest, cooperation will prove acceptable to them. If cooperation does not serve their self-interest, then so much the worse for cooperation. I take this to mean that the same international lawlessness which lies at the root of the present war is to be encouraged further after the war.

Mr. Hard would not state the case so baldly. He probably would deny it entirely. But when he writes that his World Union "shall require no surrender of sovereignty whatsoever from its member governments," he is taking the isolationist-nationalist position. He is saying, in effect, that national self-interest comes first and that each nation has the right to act independently if it cannot be persuaded to cooperate with other nations. This is the same lawless world of yesterday and today. It promises no lasting peace for the world of tomorrow. Indeed, it cannot. For world peace will depend on more than voluntary cooperation with each nation retaining its full freedom of action. It will depend upon a federated world in which the welfare of mankind is the first consideration in precisely the same way that peace in the United States depends upon the federation of our forty-eight states.

WE SHOULD NOT suppose that the isolationists have no interest in the rest of the world. They have a lot of interest in it—all selfish. There is a new kind of isolationism in the United States. It is nationalistic. It talks much about sovereignty. It wants all it can get for America. The world matters little to it except as the world can make America big. As Mr. Samuel Grafton has pointed out so clearly, "It is among our former isolationists, most of all, that the demand is heard for acquisition of distant islands, for exclusive air routes, for superiority over Britain on the shipping routes." This is how the people, who once would have little to do with the rest of the world, now want to exploit the world for America's benefit. In a distorted sort of way they could even call themselves internationalists. Isolationism is so discredited in this country for its past follies and failures, that the isolationists themselves must now appear in the guise of internationalists to plead their cause at all.

Mr. Hard has given the new isolationism the best strategy for success yet devised. By using it they can conform outwardly to the popular demand for international order while they actually commit themselves to nothing of the kind. They can come out in favor of consulting with the other nations of the world about political and economic matters. There is no harm in that, is there? We do not have to come to any agreement about anything, do we? We can go our own way, can't we? There is no international police force to curb us if we want someone's islands or air bases, is there? We have our own army and navy and air force, and we can build them even bigger than they are if we want to, can't we? Sure, let's consult with the other nations. We commit ourselves to nothing by doing that. It won't do us any harm. We might even get something out of it. This is isolationism in modern dress—isolationism which consults, but which will not surrender.

This system of isolationism masquerading in international garb cannot organize the world for peace. I suspect that Mr. Hard knows this. For, although he is strongly opposed to "general alliances," he is in no way hostile to "special agreements with Britain or Russia, or both, for limited periods and for limited purposes. . . ." Now, why should Mr. Hard contemplate the necessity of such agreements which, of course, are alliances for so long as they last? Does he suspect that "continuous consultation" is not going to produce permanent peace? He can think of emergencies arising in the post-war world while the nations are absorbed in peaceful and continuous consultation. He can foresee that when these emergencies arise not all nations will act together. "So," says he, "it is necessary that nations willing to act be free to act." Hence, the temporary agreements or alliances. This means war, doesn't it?

THIS PRINCIPLE that in any given emergency "the nations willing to act be free to act," is the same thing that the isolationist, Senator Nye, proposed recently when he said that "every nation must retain its sovereign rights to be able to declare war whenever the people see fit." It is strange how Senator Nye, the isolationist, fits into this picture, strange that he should have said that in the event of aggression by any country, the major powers should then combine temporarily to halt the aggressor, "like a posse goes after an outlaw"—and that Mr. Hard should write that one of the purposes of his temporary agreements would be "to protect an innocent nation against spoilation."

Mr. Hard and Senator Nye—how alike these gentlemen talk at times! Mr. Hard writes about American internationalism and Senator Nye speaks on nothing but isolationism. B utit becomes increasingly difficult to see how the proposals of Mr. Hard, the internationalist, differ from those of Senator Nye, the isolationist. And if you inquire why this is, I should answer, because Mr. Hard has dressed up isolationism in modern clothes.

Cheer Up About the Church

I AM SO GLAD that the Bishop of Manchester has thought it right to say, in his Diocesan Letter for August, 1943, what is long overdue. He here defends the present atmosphere and tone of England from the attacks of those who seem to think they do God service by their condemnations. This is, as the Bishop says, "defeatism in the realm of character and of service. I see much in these days of our young people, both in uniform and out of it, and in all kinds of circumstances, and I often find myself both proud of them and very thankful. The clergy are working very bravely amongst them, so are a multitude of lay men and women. Sometimes we meet with discouragement but there is no need for despair. . . . Christians can despair of no generation, and certainly there is no need to despair of that which is growing up today. We can pray and plan and work. We can influence and help. We can set an example. We must not discourage or decry. Today's problems sound a trumpet-call to greater and more devoted service in His cause and in His Power."

It is not my ambition here to amplify the Bishop's cheering statement, but please allow me to pass on to you an episode, yesterday, in the District Railway.

A MOST INDUBITABLE Working Man, dressed for the part, in the prime of life, found an old clergyman seated beside him. Instead of merely bearing this with patience, the Working Man opened the conversation. "Do you know St. James', Gunnersbury?" I feared that I did not, and felt somehow my ignorance was pitiful indeed. My fellow traveller had a way with him, which made you want to go to any Church where it was possible to find him present. There was a merry twinkle in his eye. He plainly saw life from its happiest angle, and totally declined to be depressed. Then, to my vast astonishment, he said, "You ought to know St. James', Gunnersbury. You see I am Churchwarden of the Church, and it is a good Church, and I am fond of it. We are working very hard at things up there."

I had to tear myself away from him. We shook hands, twice, before I left the train, so as to make quite sure I should remember St. James', Gunnersbury, and its Churchwarden.

I left the station, thinking hard. Here was an Englishman, undoubtedly, who had no hesitation in religion; he was honestly proud to be a servant of the Church of God. There was no black-edged tone about his speech, nor was his conversation hesitating. He loved his Church, and wanted other men to do the same. Why can't we be like him?

The next man that I met explained to me that no one went to Church. Churches were empty. It was no good rebuilding anything. The cause of Christianity in England was rapidly declining to its close. The Churches were completely obsolete. It was a pity, for they had done good, but nothing now could remedy their state. Yet the memory of the Churchwarden of St. James', Gunnersbury, met for a moment in the District train, gave me immunity from sharing the depression of those views. Between my spirits and this melancholy infection stood the strong Angel of St. James', Gunnersbury.

THE STORY OF GOOCHLAND. By Richard C. Wight. The Richmond Press, Richmond, Va. Pages 76. Price $2.50.

Characteristic of people who own land, especially those who hand it down from father to son, is the love of the community in which they were reared. This is true of Richard C. Wight whose ancestral home is in Goochland County, Virginia. The "Story of Goochland" is a series of sketches that "fond recollection" brings to mind. It is not a history of the county, and does not attempt to cover the whole county. Rather it is a journey along the James River with visits to old homes, churches, and other places familiar to the author. Occasionally there is a jaunt to a place back from the river.

This book preserves many facts and legends of historical interest. Such records are a delight to the people who now own the old homes or who are associated with the places described. They contain much that is interesting for future generations. This book is a definite contribution in preserving historical material of Goochland County.

The Imperishable Message of Eternal Salvation.

Dr. Walter Lowrie in his very valuable little book just published, "The Short Story of Jesus," closes with this very suggestive paragraph:

One of the attempts made in the second century to supply an ending to St. Mark's mutilated Gospel expresses this thought with admirable brevity: "But they (the women) gave Peter and his companion a brief account of all that had been enjoined; and after that Jesus Himself sent out by means of them from east to west the sacred and imperishable message of eternal salvation."

That strikes a fine keynote for the Epiphany Season. The season that tells us of the imperishable Light of God's Love. In these dark days, it sometimes is difficult to believe that God's Love has been manifested to the world. Yet constantly there comes a time in every man's life, when he senses that there is something greater to life than all our petty desires and ambitions. He feels then that there is a Life spelled with capital letters, that makes sense of his own small life. This feeling is an awareness of "the imperishable message of eternal salvation." We may express it differently, and we do. But it is the message that God's Church has been presenting down through the ages in spite of "wars and rumors of wars." It is the message that the Church of the Living God presents to men today.

The Epiphany Light is here to stay. The darkness created by man cannot destroy the Light created by God. That is the imperishable message of eternal salvation.

Whose War is This?

It is not our intention to enter into a political controversy. But along with a great many others, we were perturbed at the blast issued by the President of the American Federation of Labor against the anonymous author of the statement that the threatened railroad strike and the other strikes by organized labor had retarded the war effort. If this statement was made by General Marshall, the Chief of Staff, we wish that he had not sent it out anonymously. For if any one has won the confidence of the public it is General Marshall. If any one knows the seriousness of the slightest halt in the war effort it should be the Chief of Staff.

We have always had, we trust, a keen sense of appreciation of the American Laboring Man. But this diatribe by the A. F. of L. President does something to one's sympathy for his group. After all this is Labor's War. The first thing done by Hitler after coming into power was to abolish all unions. You cannot have bargaining rights under National Socialism. You do as you are told and you work for the wage assigned you by the Government. This is doubly true in Japan.

Labor's rights should be protected during the war. But Labor's rights cannot be definitely separated from the rights of all of us and especially the man on the battle front.

Let's do our part together for the winning of the war and then turn our attention to the internal problems on the home front.

Curiously enough we published only a few weeks ago a message of President Green's to the Churches of America. The Churches respect labor and are sympathetic with their desire to improve working conditions. But the Churches of America, we believe, will not be sympathetic with any movement that weakens the war effort. We have as much at stake as Labor, for Labor, after all, in this country in the large holds membership in some religious organization. This is total war. We are all involved.

A Useful Book.

Our copy of the Living Church Annual for the year 1944 has just come. We always look forward to receiving this most useful handbook. In spite of war conditions the current edition is up to the standard of its predecessors.

One change is quite noticeable. The Lectionary has been moved from the front to the back. We are not quite sure that we like this change. We do like the clear and readable manner in which the Lectionary has been printed.

We congratulate the publishers and commend them for the continued publication of this most useful book.

Young Africa Goes to School

By GEORGE W. CARPENTER, Ph. D.

Educational Secretary, Congo Protestant Council

MANY YOUNG AMERICANS now overseas are discovering with surprise that Christian schools have preceded them into the remote corners of the earth, preparing the way for understanding, friendship, and effective team-work at every sort of task. The total impact of these schools is immeasurably great. It must in any true appraisal be counted one of the major formative forces of this era. It is a force that makes for the fullest self-realization of all peoples and so contributes to the growth of a democratic world order.

Nowhere have these schools made a larger contribution than in Africa. Here the archaic patterns of tribal culture existed until yesterday in almost complete isolation from the outside world, but are today being overwhelmed by the alien cultures of the colonizing powers. That the adjustment is being made successfully is due largely to the great resilience and power of adaptation which African peoples possess. It is also due to the existence, all over the continent, of Christian schools which serve as mediator and interpreter between African and European conceptions of things.

Interpreter the school must be indeed, and the teacher, for the barrier of language that stands between the African and the European is the first of many that must be overcome. No African is even moderately well-educated if he does not speak at least two languages fluently—that of his tribe and the European language used in his area—English, French, Afrikaans, or Portuguese. Many Africans need three or more languages. Some use six or seven I know one African pastor who, in addition to French and some English, knows fifteen African languages well enough to preach effectively in any of them. Fortunately Africans have a strong natural bent for languages; their memories are retentive, their minds quick to catch new words and idioms, and they practice assiduously without the least embarrassment.

BUT CULTURE AS WELL as language must be interpreted. Writing was unknown in Africa, cut off as it was by deserts, mountains, a forbidding coast and terrifying diseases. Now that these barriers have been overcome, the whole world of books awaits the African, beckoning him to take for his own all the heritage of man's accumulated knowledge and wisdom. Hence the four R's—reading, writing, arithmetic and religion—as the basic tools of understanding and growth, hold central place in the primary schools of Africa. Coupled with them are the most urgently needed applications of knowledge to their own problems of daily life: hygiene to help them combat disease and improve the health of their communities; agriculture to help them secure more adequate food supplies, and, where possible, a cash income from the sale of produce; simple carpentry and masonry to acquaint them with the use of improved tools and enable them to build better houses and furnishings; geography and history to acquaint them with the backgrounds and relationships of the people with whom they have contacts, and the interchange of raw materials and manufactured goods in which they are equally concerned with the rest of us.

In material equipment few of these schools would take a prize. Often the school building is merely a grass-thatched mud hut, hardly distinguishable from the other structures of the village. Rude wooden benches or mere logs serve as seats, crude tables as desks. The single panel of blackboard was once part of a packing case, but black paint makes it serviceable. If imported chalk is not obtainable, sticks of hard clay from the river bank will do. Some schools have reverted to the method of the ancient Greeks and write with pointed sticks on a bed of sand on the ground.

BOOKS ARE SCARCE TOO. The many tribal languages of Africa make it exceedingly difficult to carry out the basic educational principle that schooling should begin in the child's mother tongue. Often cognate languages must be grouped together to form a unit large enough to make the publishing of books practicable. Even so, hundreds of different languages are used in these village schools, and in many of them only a handful of books or leaflets exist. Primers are passed from hand to hand until they are worn to shreds. Sometimes there is no book intermediate in difficulty between the primer and the New Testament. Yet the children do learn to read and to write, and many of them go on to the more efficient and better-equipped schools at the mission centers for further training. For many thousands of African boys, however, and a much larger proportion of girls, the village school is the only one they will ever know. Strong efforts are being put forth, therefore, to make them more effective, through the provision of better-trained teachers, better equipment, better oversight, stronger community interest and backing, and more vital courses of study.

In teacher-training and in general education at upper grade school and high-school level, notable progress has been made in recent years in many parts of Africa. The vast majority of such schools are boarding schools located at mission stations and operated under the direct supervision of missionary teachers. The best of these schools contrive to maintain the atmosphere and social structure of an African community even while they cultivate a growing understanding of the common world culture to which we all are heirs. African crafts and art forms are studied appreciatively under the best obtainable African teachers. African tribal lore and local history are investigated and recorded. The laws and customs of tribal society are studied with a view to ensuring respect for the old ways and the preservation of all that is compatible with modern conditions of life. The object of these schools is not to turn out an imitation European, but to create a new and finer type of African.

ABOVE ALL these schools are Christian in aim and character. The Christian faith is not presented abstractly as a body of theology demanding intellectual assent, or as a series of historical occurrences remote in time and place. Rather it is the touchstone of judgment in all the choices and acts of daily life; it is the viewpoint from which all else is regarded and understood. Africans are profoundly aware of unseen forces at work in nature and in human personality. The Christian view of God as Creator, sustaining

Power, compassionate Father, and redeeming Love is supremely satisfying to them. As one old African woman remarked when she heard the story of Jesus: "I always knew there must be a God like that!" The African finds indeed that Christ comes to him "not to destroy but to fulfil."

So essential for the stability and development of the peoples of Africa are these Christian schools that in many areas they are accorded government support and constitute the main school system of the colonies. In Belgian and Portuguese colonies, however, the political dominance of the Roman Catholic Church results in the exclusion of Protestant schools from public aid. Efforts are being made to secure equal recognition for all Christian schools, for there is no doubt that from these schools are coming the leaders of the new Africa, men and women fit and ready to take their place in building a world of understanding and brotherhood in which all peoples everywhere may find fulfillment. freedom, and peace.

A NEW YEAR'S WISH

I wish for all the dogs that live
The kindest masters earth can give,
And space to freely run and leap,
And kennels neat in which to sleep.

I wish for all the cats around
That true affection may abound,
With comforts such as kittens seek,
In cozy nooks from which to peek;

And, round the fireside's ruddy glow,
May dog and cat the pleasures know
Of homes where love still reigns supreme,
As man and beast together dream!

AROUND THE YEAR

Carl had begged so hard to be allowed to stay up to see the new year in that his father had said, "All right, Carl. You may curl yourself up on the davenport and wait for the new year to come in."

That was about eight o'clock, the time that Carl was usually dropping off to sleep in his bed upstairs. He lay there watching the dancing flames in the fireplace. He watched the shadows on the ceiling. He listened to the click of his mother's knitting needles until at last he did just what his father had known all the time he would do. He fell asleep. Not only that, he began to dream. It was a wonderful dream, all about the many things which had come to Carl in the past year.

First of all, Carl saw a long hillside, glistening white. On it some children were coasting. There was one little boy in a red cap. He had a new sled. There was another little boy with no sled. Carl saw the one offer the other his sled. He saw them make friends. He saw that the little boy with the red cap was himself. The other was Timmy, who had been his best friend ever since that day last January.

Next Carl saw a little boy looking in a store window at some valentines. The little boy did not seem happy. A little girl came along. She, too, looked inside. She said something to the boy and they went in together. When they came out, they each had some valentines.

"Oh," thought Carl. "That was the day in February that I lost my quarter, and Mary shared her valentine money with me."

Next he saw three people walking along beside a stream. They had on coats and hats. The wind was blowing. They were looking for something. The little girl pointed. There was a bluebird sitting in a pussywillow tree.

Carl laughed when he remembered the day last March that Mother, Father, Betty and he had gone to look for pussywillows and had found the bluebird sitting among them.

Then they were gone, and he saw two children pulling a wagon. In it was a plant full of rosy blossoms. "Easter!" said Carl. "Betty and I saved our money for a long time to buy that plant for Mother. That was the way we brought it home from the store."

In a flash Carl saw next some children dancing around a Maypole, while mothers and fathers looked on and clapped their hands. And then they, too, were gone.

In their place were two little boys gathering strawberries. Their lips were all red. Carl could remember how good those berries had tasted on that day in June when he and Timmy had gone to Grandfather's farm.

July brought back the picnic along the lake, with Betty and Carl building sand castles. And there was the new puppy which was now so much bigger.

Next he had a fleeting glimpse of August vacation at the seashore, and then school in September. October took them back to the farm. There was Carl riding beside his grandfather on the big load of pumpkins. He could see the very one he had chosen for his jack-o'-lantern, and the way it had grinned at folks on Hallowe'en.

There were some people sitting at a table filled with good food. A man, whom Carl saw was his father, was carving a big turkey. It was Thanksgiving, and those were the Baileys whose house had burned a few days before. He remembered how glad they had been to share their home with the Baileys, especially at Thanksgiving time.

Then it was December and Christmas, with Carl and Betty putting out the little figures in the creche to show the lovely Christmas story as they always did on Christmas Eve.

And so the year had gone; one whole year full of fun and happiness, with so many things for which to be glad.

Carl awoke with a start. Bells were ringing. Whistles were blowing. "Wake up, son," his father said. "Here comes a brand new year!"—Story World.

SNOW FAIRIES

I watched a little snowflake
Come sailing from the sky;
It played a joke on me when
It fell right in my eye!

Another little snowflake
Came dancing toward the south;
It looked at me a minute—
Then landed in my mouth!

They seemed like little fairies,
Upon a holiday,
Just out for fun and frolic
And asking me to play!

WINTER GUESTS

There are birds that in the fall,
When the winds give hint of cold,
And the wild geese honk and call
Far above the streams and wold,
Who forbear to make reply
When their kinsfolk southward fly.

Saucy Jay and Chickadee
Greet me from the elm tree bare,
And they seem to say to me,
"Have you any crumbs to spare?
We can live the whole long day
On the scraps you throw away.

"We're your winter guests, you know;
Feed us when there's ice and snow."

Internment Experiences Told

Missionaries Returned from Shanghai Tell How They Lived

New York, N. Y.—Among the internment camp experiences now related by the missionaries who returned from Shanghai on the Gripsholm is the creation of "Pootung University". With thirteen professors from St. John's University, Shanghai, in a community of 1,100 men, and plenty of leisure on hand, something educational was bound to emerge. Americans, Britains and Netherlanders, with representatives of every level of education and experience made up the camp. "As soon as it was announced that there would be classes," writes Donald Roberts, one of the St. John's group, "men forgot their troubles and began to give thought to what they would study."

More than 150 classes were registered, in subjects including the natural and social sciences, navigation, shorthand, accounting, history, religion, and at least fifteen languages. Professors from the University of Shanghai and Soochow University joined those from St. John's. Ellis Tucker, professor of mathematics and director of studies at St. John's, was director of the camp university. Closely related to the academic subjects, if less formal, was the instruction given in plumbing and electrical equipment for the reason that all such work, in fact, all work of any kind in the camp, was done by the men themselves.

Eight buildings of the British American Tobacco Company made up the camp, in a compound about 40 by 120 yards. Adjoining the compound was the Happy Garden, so designated by the military, for outdoor recreation, a stretch of ground covered with rubbish left when a village was bombed there at the opening of the war five years before. Prolonged clean-up efforts turned it into a smooth field, where at least four games of softball were played every fair day, except when the campers were punished by closing the grounds. Some of the campers had gardens here and grew lettuce, tomatoes and corn. "But most of us," Mr. Roberts adds, "were content with pluckings of the few fresh dandelion leaves that nature afforded when spring came around."

An orchestra, mostly professional and presumably including Mr. Roberts' violin though he does not say, and a chorus, provided music, popular, classical and sacred, according to the occasion, including hymns. Church services were in the hands of a committee, of which Bishop Lloyd R. Craighill, of Anking, was a member. A French ship steward once said to Mr. Roberts, "Bishop Craighill reminds me of—you remember the bishop in Les Miserables?"

"How hard to convey an idea of all that made up our life," observes Mr. Roberts, thinking it over. "There is Ellis Tucker, for example, up before dawn, as always, mixing with hot water from a thermos flask a drink of a Chinese tinned product called Lacovomalt. He did this for me, too, those cold February and March mornings, and I didn't need to get out of bed. Or there is Philip Sullivan's thermos flask exploding, bringing gentle protests from a Briton below for the ancient floor grime that leaked upon his bed. And could we be more careful, too, he added, when we did our daily mopping. (Well, nearly daily. If the day was damp we sometimes only dusted.)

"There is Montgomery Throop at his bedside teaching New Testament Greek to a zealous Briton; and Morrie Wilson sitting on his bed, listening patiently to the life philosophy of colored Mr. Anderson at the bedside next to him. 'Battle of the giants' is the comment when Randall Norton sits opposite Hayes, the Englishman, at chess. They are the best two players in camp, and a silent, awed group stands about as they match their wits. Thus we lived, close together, each man's life open to the eyes of all, yet each enjoying a respect for the space that was his."

YOUTH WEEK JAN. 30-FEB. 6.

Theme: One Faith, One Fellowship

Chicago—Youth Week will be observed by more than 2,000,000 Protestant Christian young people of the United States and Canada from January 30 to February 6, 1944, it has been announced by Dr. Roy G. Ross, general secretary of the International Council of Religious Education.

Sponsored by the United Christian Youth Movement, Youth Week observances will involve the participation of more than 50,000 youth groups.

"United Christian youth can make an effective attack on the crucial problems facing young people in American communities today," Dr. Ross stated in announcing plans for Youth Week. "In a time when fellowship has been broken in so many parts of the world, a note of hope for the future is sounded in the theme for Youth Week—'One Faith, One Fellowship.' "

Community service projects in areas of special need, "as a means of expressing Christian faith in friendly service," will be developed as an important feature of Youth Week activities in many communities. The war-time service program of the United Christian Youth Movement will serve as a guide for such projects.

Youth Week observances in many communities will include Church worship services with an emphasis on youth; community-wide interdenominational youth services on an interracial and international basis where possible; Church and community forums for discussing youth problems and opportunities for services; social activities in Churches, sponsored by inter-church groups for developing fellowship among young people, and offerings from youth for relief and missionary programs.

Carols Sung In War Plant

Boys' Choir of Old St. Paul's Sings for Workers of Koppers Company

Baltimore, Md.—Thousands of workers in the shops, plants and foundries of the American Hammered Piston Ring Division of Koppers Company, paused in their vital job of producing the piston rings necessary to keep our fighting planes in the air against our enemies, to listen to the sweet voices of the members of the Old St. Paul's Boys' Choir in a most unique Christmas Carol Service.

Dressed in their spotless vestments, the boys trudged along through war workers through the vast plant area. Without accompaniment the choir, directed by Edmund S. Ender, sang their beautiful Christmas carols. There were tear stains on the cheeks of many women workers whose sons are scattered along the outposts of the world fighting for that "Peace on Earth, Good Will toward Men" the boys were singing about.

This was certainly the first time the famous choir ever sang for war workers as the scene of their labor of devotion to God and Country, and it was probably the first time that any war plant ever had the pleasure of hearing our beautiful carols sung with such a setting. Let us hope and pray that it will not be the last.

Each of the boy singers was personally thanked for his great contribution to the war effort by Allen W. Morton, General Manager of the plant. They made one trip through the plant in the afternoon for the 8 to 4 shift, and then made quick work of fried chicken and trimmings while waiting for the shift to change. In the early evening again they carried their carol message to the workers on the 4 to 12 shift.

Company-owned station wagons transported the boys to and from the war plant.

RED CROSS CLOSES BUSY YEAR

Washington, D. C.—The passing of 1943 marks the close of the busiest Red Cross year in history. People the world over have been affected by Red Cross activities, and a review of accomplishments is particularly fitting during the Christmas season.

The American Red Cross, which is but one of more than 60 national societies, this past year has tackled every type of job. Abroad and at home, on the war front and in training camps, it has served the armed forces faithfully. And, despite this tremendous task, it has equally served civilians in many parts of this war-ravaged world.

The Red Cross Blood Donor Service, which collected more than 4,000,000 donations, provided help in saving the lives of thousands of our wounded. Further, the Red Cross enrolled 27,600 nurses for the Army and Navy, while volunteers representing every nationality group in the United States prepared the gigantic total of 925,000,000 surgical dressings. The Red Cross also packed and shipped some 6,000,000 food parcels for distribution to American and United Nations prisoners of war and 160,000 parcels for convalescent prisoners.

For able-bodied fighting men the Red Cross has provided clubs and recreation centers overseas. With all military and naval units, at home and abroad, are trained representatives who, through wise and human counsel and action, help those men who are faced with personal and family problems.

The Red Cross Home Service Inquiry Unit, during a recent 15-month period, handled 383,299 messages to, and inquiries concerning, relatives in war-devastated regions. During the same time the unit took care of 353,634 similar messages and inquiries received from abroad. Countries of origin and destination were Albania, Belgium, Luxemburg, Bulgaria, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Holland, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Norway, Palestine, Syria, Poland, Roumania, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland and Yugoslavia.

War relief for civilian refugees was continued in the past year, food, clothing, soap and other supplies going to Russia, North African, Middle Eastern and certain occupied countries. Since the outbreak of war in September, 1939, the total value of civilian war relief furnished by and through the American Red Cross has aggregated more than $77,000,000.

On the home front Red Cross instructors trained 400,000 women in home nursing, taught first aid to 1,500,000, and swimming and water rescue to an additional 300,000 persons. Last but not least, volunteers made 12,000,000 garments for use at home and abroad.

MISS POWELL GOING TO PUERTO RICO

New York, N. Y.—From Ireland, Italy and the Labrador, Miss Violet May Powell is going to Puerto Rico to take charge of the Craft Shop which has long been an important feature of St. Andrew's Mission, Mayaguez. Miss Powell (pronounced to rhyme with Lowell, not with Howell) was born in Dublin and is a specialist on Irish folk lore and drama. She has studied sculpture in Florence and London, and has modeled a collection of costume dolls representing Irish folk of the western islands, which have been shown in a number of American exhibitions. She has worked with the Grenfell Mission. In the United States her parochial connection is with Calvary Church, New York.

Work with all your might, but trust not in your own power to achieve. Pray with all your might for God's guidance and blessing. Pray, then work; work and pray; and again pray and work. Whether you see much fruit or little fruit, remember that God delights to bestow real blessing; this comes generally in answer to earnest and believing prayer. —George Muller.

Higher Hopes For Japanese

MISS SKILES HAS LIVED INTIMATELY WITH JAPENESE AND HAS FAITH IN THEIR CHRISTIANITY

New York, N. Y.—On the basis of information obtained from dubious sources, a weekly magazine recently printed an article about Christianity in Japan containing a number of sweeping statements and superficial observations which disturbed many readers who have known Japanese Church people intimately for many years.

Among comments and corrections which were called forth by the article is this statement from Helen Skiles, for twenty years on the Church's staff in the Diocese of Kyoto. She left in December, 1940, only when it became necessary for the foreign missionaries to go, in order to avoid harm and embarrassment to the Japanese Church people.

Christianity will stay in Japan and in any other part of our world just as long as there are human hearts into which the Spirit of Christ can enter and make His abode. It does not much matter whether that heart be in a red, yellow, black or white-skinned body.

When one reads sweeping statements about the doom of Christianity in lands now temporarily dominated by powerful military machines, one wonders how the written record of the faithfulness of Christians in our own land would appear, if prepared by a newspaper reporter from across the sea, particularly our record for the years since the so-called World War I. Without any persecution from outside sources, we have been willing to drift away from the faith of our Christian forefathers to such an extent that statistics now show an appalling number of American people with no religious affiliation of any kind. What headlines that bit of information would make for the propaganda reporters in other lands.

Fortunately, some of us who have lived intimately with the Christians of Japan have higher hopes for the lasting qualities of their religion than those who predict the end of Christianity there. The devotion to Christianity which we witnessed in those last days spent in Japan still carries for us convincing weight when we think of the future of the Church there. There was a dear friend who came early in the morning offering sufficient money to support a piece of work for a period of three years. A letter was received from another Christian friend in which she said, "This parting is only an incident in eternal life. We know that we can have Christian fellowship in our hearts always in spite of the horrible war." Money was given by village children to be used for some work among children in the United States. These and many other concrete memories will keep alive my faith in our Japanese Christians.

To one who interviews a drunken army or navy officer in a geisha house, on the survival of Christianity in Japan, the answer will probably be, "It must go." But to those of us who have shared the deep Christian fellowship of great souls in Japan, the answer is, "There will always be witnesses of our Lord in that land."

To the extent to which we expect our Christian friends in other lands to maintain their confidence in us—confidence that we will be true to Christ's Way of Life through these difficult days, that we will not falter, not compromise, not waver in our loyalty to Him—to that extent, I believe, we can have faith in our fellow Christians throughout the world, and in that faithful company of believing souls in Japan.

NEWS OF THE CHURCH

The Bishop Rowe Memorial Building Fund has reached a total of $38,500. The total goal is $55,000 for the building and a modest endowment for maintenance. Bishop Bentley is hoping that all the money will be in hand by the time it becomes possible to start building.

The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief has received and disbursed $113,218.16 in the period January 1 to December 1. The amount includes the $25,000 gift of the Woman's Auxiliary. Thirty different agencies and pieces of work were aided by the Fund.

———

The Episcopal Church is now affiliated as a sponsor, with the Servicemen's Christian League. One of the best known activities of the League is publication of a magazine called "The Link" which is distributed to Chaplains in the armed services.

———

Bishop Harry S. Kennedy, newly consecrated for service in Honolulu, says that if being a Chaplain in the Army does not take all the conceit out of a man—being a father of three small boys will. When his sons were told of his election, the 9-year-old said, "You're not fat enough to be a Bishop." The 11-year-old said, "And you're not good enough to be a Bishop"; the 14-year-old son added: "And you don't know enough to be a Bishop."

———

Charles T. Bridgeman, for many years the Church's representative in the Jerusalem and the East Mission, has been made Archdeacon in Syria. The appointment was by the new Bishop in Jerusalem, the Rt. Rev. W. H. Stewart.

———

Through the National Council's arrangement with insurance companies, it is now possible to offer a blanket bond for treasurers of dioceses, missionary districts, parishes, Church organizations, institutions, etc., at 17 1-2 cents per hundred. This is a small fraction of the cost of individual bonds.

CHURCH PENSION FUND VOTES TO ENLARGE TO 24 TRUSTEES

New York, N. Y.—The Board of Trustees of The Church Pension Fund has been enlarged so as to increase its membership from eighteen to twenty-four Trustees, and two of the vacancies thus created have been filled by the election of Leighton H. Coleman and Jarvis Cromwell, according to an announcement made by Bishop Cameron J. Davis, President of the Fund.

"The death during the past year of the Honorable Frank L. Polk, Mr. J. P. Morgan and Mr. William Fellowes Morgan, three of our Trustees who bore so large a share of our responsibilities and whose long association with the Fund gave them such a background of experience," Bishop Davis states, "has convinced us of the wisdom of enlarging our Board so that we may add to our membership some younger, interested Churchmen and thus secure a continuity of experience and policy. Although normally the Trustees are elected by the General Convention of the Church, vacancies can be filled by the Board of Trustees itself. We expect to fill the other four vacancies in due course. The enlargement of the Board, which has been under consideration for some time, was accomplished by amending the Constitution of the Fund at a recent meeting of the Trustees."

Mr. Coleman, a graduate of Williams College, is a member of the law firm of David Polk Wardwell Sunderland & Kiendl, who are counsel for the Fund. He is a grandson of the late Bishop Coleman, of Delaware, and the late Bishop Rulison, of the former Diocese of Central Pennsylvania, now the Diocese of Bethlehem. A vestryman of St. James' Church, St. James, Long Island, he is also a director of the Church Society for College Work and a trustee of St. Luke's Home for Aged Women in New York City.

Mr. Cromwell, a graduate of Princeton, is president of William Iselin & Co., textile factors of New York. A communicant of St. James' Church, New York City, and St. Peter's Church, Morristown, New Jersey, he is also a vestryman of the Church of St. Mary's by the Sea, Northeast Harbor, Maine, and is a trustee of St. Luke's Hospital in New York city, and of St. Mark's School, Southboro, Massachusetts. Amongst his many business associations, he is a Trustee of the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, and a Director of the Niagara Fire Insurance Company of New York. Both Mr. Coleman and Mr. Cromwell are also directors of the Church Life Insurance Corporation and The Church Properties Fire Insurance Corporation, which are wholly-owned subsidiaries of the Fund.

The Church Pension Fund is the established pension system of the Protestant Episcopal Church, administered for the benefit of the clergy and their families. Its benefits, which are now being paid at the rate of over $1,400,000 a year to a total of approximately 2,400 beneficiaries, include an Age Allowance, a Disability Allowance and allowances to Widows and Minor Orphans. Since it was first established in 1917, it has paid total benefits of approximately $23,500,000.

According to a report rendered to the Board of Trustees at their recent meeting, Bishop Davis estimates that the Fund's total assets at the end of this year will be approximately $36,700,000. The Fund is supported by pension assessments payable by all of the parishes, missions and other ecclesiastical organizations of the Protestant Episcopal Church, at a total rate of over $1,000,000 a year. It is stated that the record of these payments, which are based on each clergyman's salary, has been practically perfect since the inception of the Fund in 1917.

At the recent meeting of the Trustees, all of the officers were re-elected. They are Bishop Davis, president; Bishop Benjamin M. Washburn and Allen Wardell, vice-presidents; Bradford B. Locke, executive vice-president; Charles D. Dickey, treasurer, and Robert Worthington, secretary.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR CHILDREN OF JAPANESE CHRISTIANS

Boston, Mass.—The 66th anniversary of the Massachusetts Woman's Auxiliary was observed in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul recently. Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill was the celebrant and the Rev. Kenneth deP. Hughes, rector of St. Bartholomew's, Cambridge (colored congregation), preached impressively at the morning service of Corporate Communion. Miss Elise G. Dexter, president, opened the afternoon meeting, where Bishop Sherrill spoke in behalf of increased missionary interest and gifts before Bishop Charles S. Reifsnider made a deeply moving and compelling statement of the position of Japanese Christians in Japan and in this country. Bishop Reifsnider's message was received with sympathetic understanding and the allotment of Christmas gifts for children of Japanese Christians in the relocation centres was oversubscribed.

"THE BATTLE FOR SUNDAY"

Boston, Mass.—"The Battle for Sunday" is the Rev. H. Robert Smith's term for the many interests asking special Sunday attention throughout the year. In his leaflet for Grace Church, Newton, Dr. Smith cited October 31 as an interesting though extreme example for its titles include Temperance, Youth, Girl Scout and United War Fund Sunday, as well as Reformation Sunday, Nineteenth Sunday after Trinity, Eve of All Saints' Day and Feast of Christ the King.

REMARKABLE CHURCH GROWTH

Rock Springs, Wyo.—The Church of the Holy Communion has had a remarkable growth during the year 1943. When the Rev. Canon Henry A. Link took charge the communicant list was 397. Today it has 750. This is not a mushroom growth. The war workers in the mines are from Oklahoma or Arkansas, not one a member of our church. Eighty-five, mostly adults, were added by confirmation, the balance as the result of parish visitations. English, Welsh and Scotch families living in Rock Springs for years were ferreted out of hiding.

PROFESSORS OR COOKS HARDEST TO GET IN CHINA?

Housekeeping problems in Hsichow, free China, where Hua Chung College is located, near the Burma border, continue to be as annoying as they are unusual. Simple things such as salt and sugar, flour and lard, are major achievements when obtained. Reporting on a few details, Mrs. John Coe, whose husband is on the college faculty, writes:

"Salt comes in large bricks, about half of it being mud, and has to be hammered into small pieces and boiled down before it is usable. A coarse variety of yellowish-white local sugar is scarce and prohibitive in price; brown sugar comes in the shape of beehives and has to be pared down for use. Meat is simply hacked off a carcass; unless one knows the butcher's art, one has no way to know what one is buying. Flour ground locally is never the same quality twice. Lard is bought in its most primitive form—the cook simply buys a side of the pig and brings the mass of fat and membranes home to be tried out. Local kitchens are dark holes with chimneyless stoves that burn charcoal."

As for servants, the college faculty was needing two or three professors, and Mrs. Coe's comment is, "I don't know whether an economist, a chemist or a cook is harder to get in this part of the world." Of Dr. Francis Wei, president of the college, Mrs. Coe says, "He is the strength and support of the whole institution."

"THE GREATER TASK BEYOND VICTORY": BISHOP OF SOUTHWELL'S COMMENTS

In his Diocesan Magazine for September the Bishop of Southwell, Dr. F. R. Barry, writes:

"The news becomes more and more exciting; people are even beginning to ask themselves whether the end might possibly come this year.

"We do not know when the end will come, or what price we may yet have to pay. But just because things are so much better we need perhaps to be faithfully reminded that the turn of the tide may be the real danger point; any relaxation of effort now might prolong the struggle for years. The longer it lasts, the less hope will there be of rebuilding the new world from the ruins. The clear duty now is to throw in everything sparing no exertion and no sacrifice, for victory in the shortest time possible.

"When by the mercy of God that is given to us, it will be but the prelude to a greater task; and how far are we ready to face that? All this facile talk about 'planning' may, I think, only too easily be a way of escape from the real issues. It is no good talking about a planned society so long as we run away from the question,—

"What is society to be planned for?

"And that in turn is a question of theology,—

What is the Will of God for men and women?

What does human life really mean?

What are the things worth living for and dying for?

"Till that is faced we are all at cross purposes. If we want to start on any creative building we must not be at the mercy of catchphrases. There are plenty of them about at present. Equal opportunity, for instance.

"Equal opportunity for what? . . . We have surely to ask whether these things for which we claim equal opportunity—education is the crucial instance—are in themselves things that are worth having, and what kind of things are most worth having. That involves having some clear idea what are the true purposes of a man's life—as the phrase goes, some standard of real values; which means, in the end, some knowledge of the true God.

"Now the real danger of modern democracy is that it should turn its back on this truth and think it 'democratic' to claim that any opinion is just as good as another. The truly democratic quality does not mean anything so silly. It means a society in which all men 'count', all have a life to live and a part to play, and should have opportunity to become their best, because all matter, in the sight of God. True democracy rests upon religion; and religion rests upon the recognition of the overriding sovereignty of God, and the supremacy of real values. Without that we are all at sixes and sevens.

"The sources of politics lie beyond politics. If we try to embark on widespread social change, without some great conviction in common about the things which give life its meaning, we shall end in a social and moral chaos, leading inevitably to dictatorship.

" 'Mass-democracy' always ends in tyranny.

"Thus we cannot hope to see through the task to which our people is dedicated, for which we have paid so mighty a price already, unless there is at heart of our common life a true and vitalizing faith in God. In all our plans and dreams for reconstruction the Church has still the decisive part to play. Here is an extract from a letter written by an officer in Tunis:

" 'I reckon a battle without faith is impossible. And our boys had faith, and they won a battle. I hope it will be so after it's finished . . . And above all, the officers who lead in battle lead in this, too, and I'm convinced that when we've won this war, there will be a return to Church by the people at home, led by us, not in the spirit that "Faith without works is dead", but in the spirit that "works without Faith are dead." '

"Are we ready at home to take part in that movement?"

DAILY INTERCESSIONS INAUGURATED

Harrisburg, Pa.—The new dean of St. Stephen's has inaugurated a daily Eucharist in the Cathedral, at ten a. m., beginning on the second anniversary of Pearl Harbor, December 7. Intercessions will be offered for all in the armed forces of the Nation, and the men and women from the Cathedral who are in the service of our Country will be remembered by name once a week. The names have been divided up, so that a portion will be read each day, the same day each week. The dean will be assisted in these celebrations by Bishop J. Thomas Heistand and Canon Clifford W. French.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

BETTY'S BETTER WAY

Betty just loved to play. And what good times she did have! Sometimes she would give a tea party for her dolls, using her little set of dishes and the small table that her brother Tom had made for her birthday. Sometimes she would cut out pictures.

At other times she would fix up a playhouse, putting a shawl over the backs of four chairs. By turning the seats outward, and with the shawl for a roof, she would have quite a nice house, and then she could put her doll furniture into it and have a grand time.

But when she got tired of her play, Betty didn't like to put away her things. She wanted to go off and leave them for someone else to pick up and put where they belonged.

One day a surprising thing happened. Betty and her mother were alone for lunch. Betty had had a good time all morning playing in the dining room, on the porch and in the living room. But this was one of the days when she didn't want to put anything away. The house was very untidy.

When lunch time came, Betty was hungry. She went out into the kitchen, and was surprised to find her mother eating a nice lunch from a little tray in a sunny window.

"I want some lunch, too," Betty said, feeling quite neglected.

"That's too bad," smiled her mother, "but I don't see why my daughter should expect her mother to get lunch for her when she won't pick up after herself. You see, darling, I'll have all that work to do which really belongs to you now that you are such a big girl. So I'll not have time to fuss fixing something good for you to eat."

Betty's lips quivered as she saw her mother take two or three more mouthfuls of a delicious-looking sandwich.

"Oh dear," Betty wailed, "whatever'll I do? I'm so hungry!"

But her mother went right on eating.

Betty stood and watched her, and soon tears came to her big blue eyes. "Mummie," she said, "aren't you ever going to give me any more to eat?"

Betty's mother looked up as though she were quite surprised. "Why, my dear," she said, "I must hurry, wash these dishes and tidy up the house and porch. If somebody should come this afternoon, the caller would think things were much out of order. As long as you don't want to pick up, you might go out and play on the lawn. Perhaps that will help you forget you are hungry."

By this time Betty was so surprised she didn't know what to say next. Then an idea came to her and away she flew.

In just a few minutes she came back and called out from the hall, "Oh, Mummie, I have everything all picked up and it looks wonderful. Come and see."

"I'll be glad to," Betty's mother nodded cheerfully, "and while I'm looking, you might come and eat the nice lunch I've put on the table for you, for I did that while you were putting your playthings away."

So after that Betty tried to remember to take out only a few playthings at a time, and to pick up after herself as soon as she finished each kind of play. And when she really tried, she usually succeeded.—Janet Richards in Nat. Kindergarten Asso. Release.

WHEN JANE WAS HAPPY

Jane was very unhappy. She sat all alone on the steps and watched a group of girls busily at work under the maple tree on the lawn. She wanted so much to be with them, but when she tried to join them, they said, "Run away, Jane. You are too little to do what we are doing."

Jane knew what they were doing. They were making paper doll dresses. They had all their crayons and paints with them, and each was trying to see who could make the prettiest dress. She so wanted to watch them, even if she was too small to help.

She wished they would do something else. They let her play tag and hide-and-go-seek with them, and she went with them bathing in the river, but now they did not want her. Two tears came from her eyes and ran slowly down her cheeks.

She opened her picture book and tried to read the rhymes under the pictures, but her eyes were so full of tears she could not see well.

All at once she looked toward the sand box. Little Brother Albert was sitting there. He didn't look very happy. He had a little shovel and was digging a big hole in the sand, and then filling it up again. He looked lonely, too.

All at once Jane jumped up and went toward the sand box. Perhaps Albert felt badly, too, because he was so little he had to play alone all the time.

"Come, Albert," she said, "let's make some sand cakes. Here is a nice round tin to put them in."

She showed Albert how to fill the molds with the damp sand, and soon a row of cakes and pies in all kinds of shapes were spread on a board, and they were building a village of little rounded sand houses in the sand box itself. They played together happily until it was time for lunch.

"Did you have a nice time this morning, Jane?" asked Uncle Walter, at luncheon. He had been sitting on the porch all the morning reading and writing. "I did not see you playing with the girls," he said.

"They said I was too little," explained Jane.

"I see," said Uncle Walter, "but you did not think Albert was too little to play with you."

"I did at first," said Jane, "then I knew how I felt myself, when the girls didn't want me, so I played with him."

"I see," said Uncle Walter again. "Well, I do not think you are too little to go to ride with me this afternoon. I have to go a long way, and we will not be back until dinner time. Would you like to go?"

Would she! Jane hurried to get her hat and coat, and away they went. Somehow she knew that it was because she had not thought Albert too little to play with her that Uncle Walter had chosen her for the ride.—P. R. Wade

ALWAYS WELCOME

We live near a large army camp, and I have been pleased to learn how kind soldiers are to all dogs. I have never seen a soldier mistreat a dog in any way. No matter how bedraggled and dirty the dog may be, he is always welcome. More than once I have seen a soldier divide his meal with some hungry dog that has found its way into the camp.

And a dog will follow marching soldiers all day long, no matter how rough the going is. And, no matter how short the ration is, the soldier manages in some way to find a few scraps for the dog he thinks so much of at the end of a long march.

Yes, if a dog could speak, I am sure he would say:

"There is something about a soldier that is fine!"—Fred Cornelius, in Our Dumb Animals.

LOVELY LITTLE THINGS

Every year, each season brings
So many lovely little things—
Blossoms on the orchard trees,
Bright-hued birds, bronze-winged bees,
Silver leaves and blades of grass,
Changing hues as seasons pass,
Rambling roses, pansy faces,
Scarlet sumac, Queen Anne's laces,
Snow stars like white butterflies
Fluttering down from winter skies.
Oh, I could never name them all!
Summer, winter, spring, and fall,
Each in turn, without fail brings
Lovely little things.

"Now, what is that noise?" said the glad New Year;
"Now, what is that singular sound I hear—
As if all the paper in all the world
Were rattled and shaken and twisted and twirled?"

"Oh, that," said the jolly old Earth, "is the noise

And all to do honor, New Year, to you."

He was ordained deacon by Bishop Whittle in 1889 and priest by Bishop Randolph in 1896. In 1874 he married Susie A. Winston. He served at St. Stephen's Church, Petersburg, from 1889 to 1897. Afterwards he served at St. Paul's, Newport News; Meade Memorial, Alexandria, and St. Mary's Church, Berryville. All of these are in the State of Virginia. He retired in 1923.

The Seminaries of the Church Need Your Support

St. Paul says, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach, except they be sent?

The task of the seminaries of the Church is to help the right men to respond to this challenge.

The Presiding Bishop has appointed January twenty-third as Theological Education Sunday, asking the clergy to put before their people the needs of the seminaries of the Church where men are prepared for the ministry.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

A Christian Chinese wrote to the Bible depot in Mukden, Manchuria: "My son is going to the city to college to study English. Tell me, has the Bible yet been translated into English? If so, I would like to have a copy in that language for him."

Life, true life such as Christ calls us to, with all its obligations to others, its honest and spontaneous devotion to spiritual ends, its risks, its reality, and purity, may not seem attractive to the spiritual sick. In fact, nothing so thoroughly reveals a man to himself, nothing so clearly discloses to him his real aims and likings, as the answer he finds he can give to the simple question, "Are you willing to be made whole?"

—Marcus Dods.

Viewing the universe we are face to face with the Divine Architect. When a Bedouin was asked how he knew there was a God he replied, "How do I know whether a camel or a man passed my tent last night? By the footprints in the sand."

"Gladness is a duty; but its roots must go deep if the flower is not to wither."

For one man who rejects Christianity because he misunderstands it, ten reject it because they understand it too well—because they know it is a call to a sacrificial life.

—E. Herman.

You never get to the end of Christ's words. They pass into proverbs; they pass into laws; they pass into doctrines; they pass into consolations; but they never pass away, and after all the use that is made of them they still are not exhausted. —Dean Stanley.

How often the cry has risen which Voltaire voiced in the eighteenth century: "Ere the beginning of the nineteenth century Christianity will have disappeared from the earth." But it has not disappeared. It's expressions change but at the heart of it are creative factors that everlastingly keep their hold: a great need, a great salvation, a great gratitude and a great compulsion.

—Dr. Harry E. Fosdick.

The challenge is for each of us, who call ourselves members of Christ, to put first in all things our allegiance to Jesus, to believe that His teachings were meant to apply to all mankind, in every age, without exception and without compromise; to accept the doctrine of "love thy neighbor" as we accept that of "loving God"; to believe firmly in the power of God and His ability to save the world, and eventually to bring about that perfect state of mankind that we believe is to be the Kingdom of God.

—From a member of the RAF to the (Eng.) Guardian.

SONG OF THE ORDER OF THE THOUSANDFOLD

Knights of the Order of the Thousandfold,
  What is it, God wants done, thou canst not do–
The mighty deeds of faith once wrought of old
  Thou canst today renew.

Why wait for some "far-off divine event"–
  The present hour doth claim thine utmost zeal.
Go forth with the belief that thou art sent
  To make Christ's promise real:

His promise; that by faith thou mayest do
  As mighty works as He Himself hath done,
And greater works than these; go prove it true,
  And glorify God's Son.

Not by thy power or might, but bowed in prayer,
  Thou shalt prevail as Jacob did of old;
Princes with God to be, His gifts to bear,
  And bless a thousandfold.

LETTERS

"Signature Letter"

Mr. Editor:

I doubt whether the matter is worth your space, but I thought you might be interested in this letter I received in the mail today:

My dear Mr. Green:

I say you are dead right re—your letter on "signature, etc." Some years ago I was in court on account of a marriage I had performed for another rector (then ill), and was asked by the attorney, "Is this your signature?" To my amazement I had to reply, "Some one else has signed my name". Result: a regular row. I have never allowed this to happen again.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) Frederick J. Compson,
Rector the State Hospital,
Middletown, Connecticut

This is a concrete example of what can happen to a clergyman who is careless about records.

Gift to the Army and Navy Commission

January 5, 1944.

Mr. Editor:

I shall be very grateful if you will be able to give publicity to the fact that the Army and Navy Commission has received a very generous personal gift toward our financial goal of 1944.

The donor is Mr. George Frederick Jewett, of Spokane, who is a member of the Chapter of the Cathedral of St. John the Evangelist, Spokane. Mr. Jewett was a delegate to the last General Convention from the Missionary District of Spokane. He has made a gift of $10,000 through the Cathedral of St. John the Evangelist to be credited to the gift from the Missionary District of Spokane.

This is indeed a generous and inspiring gift, and it is our hope that it will lead others to make similar gifts.

With kindest regards,
Faithfully yours,
Henry K. Sherrill,
Chairman the Army and Navy Commission of the Episcopal Church.
Boston, Mass.

Bishop Perry Resigns Charge of European Churches

Mr. Editor:

I should be glad to have you publish in the next issue of the Southern Churchman an announcement that on the New Year, I resigned to the Presiding Bishop my charge of the American Churches in Europe. At the request of Bishop Tucker at General Convention in 1937, I continued my active charge of these Churches until he should be ready to undertake this part of his responsibility as Presiding Bishop, which I assumed, as the Canons provide, when I was elected to that office in 1930.

During the past three months I have been engaged in plans for extended use of the American Churches on the Continent when the way is open for our return to them.

These plans now are in the hands of the Presiding Bishop subject to his direction.

James W. Y. Perry,
Bishop of Rhode Island.
Providence, R. I.

SOLDIER'S LETTER

Day of Prayer Observed in Camp

Dear Captain:

Received your letter the other day, but we're real busy out here, and this is the first chance I've had to answer it. That night last March when I promised I'd write and keep in touch with you was a promise I meant and I'll continue to live up to it. I can say, Sir, that your letters have been a comfort and a help to me in many ways.

As you know, Sir, Saturday was proclaimed a Day of Prayer by President Roosevelt, and I hope it was used as such by everyone. We here at camp held open air prayer meetings. If the civilian population could have seen all the battalions standing with heads bared and bowed praying to God for victory for our cause, praying for our buddies "Over there" and for our loved ones at home, it would have done them a world of good. We, the men upon whose shoulders the fate of humanity and Christianity depend, know the value of prayer. We know great armies can be welded together. We know all the best types of machines and equipment can be produced, but we also know that, without God's help, we are powerless. We can see, by the fate of other nations that forgot how to pray, that, alone, we are helpless. The men in Africa, Sicily, Italy, Russia, in the Solomons, Tarawera, New Britain, they all prayed and God answered their prayers. As our armies swarm against Hitler's Europe they'll pray and we here in training pray. We pray not so much for ourselves, but for those around us, our buddies, our country, our cause and beliefs, our loved ones at home. We pray because we believe in God and realize how small and humble we are in the Majesty of His Glory. Thank God I was brought up in Church and taught Christianity and how to pray, for the world is a much better place when one has faith.

Yours in Service,
Private L. L.

ITEMS FROM THE FIELD

Turkey—While making visitations in Turkey, where British communities form the easternmost section of his long diocese, Harold Buxton, English bishop of Gibraltar, visited a British construction camp five hours by train from Ankara. After an early celebration he asked some volunteers to practice hymns for Evensong. When the hour came he found they had prepared twelve hymns for him to choose from and would gladly have sung them all. The Bishop's rare visits and those of the chaplains and clergy still free to move about in these isolated regions are highly valued.

China—In a roundabout way word comes from China that a foreigner who is still resident in the occupied city of Wuhu has been able to travel about because he is Irish. He has been permitted to visit a number of country churches and schools, encouraging the Christians.

Clothing in China

"As money depreciates and prices go up, we live plainer and plainer and think higher and higher," writes Ruth Earnshaw Lo from Hua Chung College, Hsichow, in far western China. "Little by little we have all been reduced to the bare essentials for living. Hardly anyone has any foreign supplies, such as coffee or baking powder. All our clothes are wearing out. The newest thing anyone has is two years old. Our shoes should be preserved in museums. We are all used to each other now and only when some one from the outside sees us do we catch a reflection of how odd we are. Hairpins have given out and long bobs are still the fashion. We gave up stockings long ago. Nightgowns have been transformed into petticoats and pajamas into underwear. One more winter will see us in matting. The chief reason for not wearing local dress is that the cheapest cloth of which a dress could be made costs nine dollars an inch."

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

WE CANNOT forget yesterday. We cannot escape today. Yesterday is still fresh and close to us. Today is near and ineluctable. We must live each today as a continuation of each yesterday, and hard as we try to be Jekyll one day and Hyde the next, we find it impossible to keep the traces of make-up from the one from spoiling the disguise of the other. Yesterday is sometimes a thing of joy to remember and treasure as a precious stone, a bauble to hold and fondle and live life around. But not always. An episode of sorrow may be etched in sharp and deep lines which no chemical can remove. This kind of painful recollection we shun and would black out and not face. But it is there and we must allocate time and space for battling through to freedom. If we neglect for a single day this confronting of the failures and mistakes and occurrences of the day before, we shall find that the smears, now wet and more easily removed, will dry and harden and the extra effort required to scrape and cleanse will be difficult to summon. Whatever conflict or variance or impingement or enmity has bemuddled the clear flow of life's stream, handle it now in the presence of God. If it be something to correct, admit the wrong and ask God for strength to correct it. If it be some perplexing why concerning pain or death, seek to trust God with the answer and ask for strength to see it through the sharp and acute moments of now to the more bearable adjustment of then. Now, now is the time. Do not delay. It is possible, "through Jesus Christ our Lord."

TODAY IS another thing. It is largely unknown. That is why fear creeps in to handicap and addle one. The configuration of the day becomes grotesque and shackled by the evil condiment of fear and the mixed up thoughts born of trepidation and anxiety. We dread the day and would rather stay in bed with covered up head and plead a sick headache, please excuse us. It is not so easy as this, nor is it ever quite so dreadful as we imagine. The palsy of our minds comes from the habitual stitch of evasion. We would rather take a tortuous, roundabout road to an end than to cut straight through and ahead. But not all days are pushed into the horror chambers of our mind. We long for some days to come and anticipate with keenest delight certain moments we know are in them. This often makes us impatient, and we desire the clock to spin and just for once to give up its ticking. Jesus walked into each unknown day with God close by, therefore, how could He be dismayed over any prospect, no matter how alarming? Or how could He fail to cherish the good things and the beautiful with God so near to point them out, even the most subtle and tenuous, and to make Him sensitive and appreciative? No matter what lies in store for us, of rapture or of heartache, or of that great middle plain of the splendid familiar between, our use of them all is multiplied by offering whatever comes to God for His blessing and His accompanying.

Broadcast November 16, 1943.

EDITORIAL

ecumenical movement is in the process of coming to birth. True it embraces only the Protestant world. But we have a Protestant heritage. We are proud of it. The true spirit of Catholicity we believe will best be served by a uniting first in a spirit not of uniformity, but of "unity in diversity" the divisions of Protestant Christendom; then perhaps Rome will see the light. For the consummation of that goal this paper will earnestly strive.

We are glad to pray for re-union with Rome under the guidance of God's Holy Spirit. We are confident that such re-union will come about on a higher plane than mere submission to Papal authority.

We have set the machinery, by the proper constitutional means, through which we may channel our efforts toward the achievement of Church Unity. We pledge our support to our Commission on Approaches to Unity. We feel that such irregular activities as those advocated by the Octave Council do not further unity.

The Wise Men

By B. S. MURRAY

ONCE MORE the Church of God, in grateful mood, celebrates the Epiphany Festival repeating that most romantic of all stories, the visit of the Magi.

Suggestive, too, is it that the Epiphany falls close to the New Year. Before a week elapses the star gleams in the sky guiding wise men over hill and dale to Bethlehem and the Holy Child, over whose head shines a halo brighter than the pale glimmer of the star. Henceforth they need no guidance from the twinkling lights in heaven, for they have found Him Who is the Light of the world.

The Wise Men of the East who followed the star acted as men determined to satisfy themselves of the real significance of the facts which had come under their observation. They possessed the spirit of true seekers! Today, we need to recapture that spirit. After all, a man's measure is often found in the nature of things he is seeking. If he seeks little unworthy things they are apt to dwarf him. If he seeks great things they are likely to enlarge him. They will extend his mental and spiritual frontiers, enlarge his boundaries, make clear his horizons and give distance to his skyline. The leaders of the human race have always been seekers. As members of life's long procession we must follow in their steps and, seeking God first, and obeying the dictates of that supreme inspiration, Christ, be invariably directed to things that are of chiefest importance. There are so many interesting subjects awaiting adventure that if we are to know anything worthwhile we must seek. The mere impressionist is the indolent and dangerous person. We have too many re-thinkers and repeaters; we need more thinkers and seekers. And this takes courage and a daring which despises any safety first policy. Like the wise men we must follow the Star of Bethlehem. They were wise men! Are we sharing that wisdom?

THE WISE MEN would not have imagined anything significant in the appearance of the star if they had not already trained themselves in the science of astronomy, nor would they have learnt its real importance without the arduous journey they were content to undergo. Their imagination was disciplined to seek. Their motto? Be prepared! So we knights of the Cross of Christ must seek that knowledge that makes man wise unto salvation and, reinforced by sacramental grace, follow Christ all through life's way. Our Church is a teaching church which prepares us by training in thought, word, and deed, through the avenues of worship and service, to glorify God and enjoy Him forever. Nothing could have hindered those men of patience and endurance from following that star. When we reflect how immense their enterprise was, how they lost the star, and had to make local inquiries and how, finally, they concluded their journey guided by a dream, we must salute their persistence. It is this pioneer spirit that has made America great. Columbus had it. Washington the churchman and his little army through that dreadful winter at Valley Forge had it. That spirit is alive today in our heroic youth who venture forth counting not the cost. In the last analysis a man is measured by his capacity to take punishment and take it head up and standing. American youth, having caught the gentleness and strength of Christ and committed to His way of right and duty, face issues like the wise men. They, too, at the end of their journey, see the King who shared man's fortune and who in Himself manifested the perfect unity which exists between the Divine and the human. The dream of a new world lures our heroes forth, knowing that after they seek, find, and enthrone "Christ first", then shall they have that dynamic which makes for an abundant, heroic, successful, happy life. We must, therefore, come and worship Him, and, catching His radiance, shine forth in the light of our witness to truth and goodness and so guide tired, perplexed people to worship Him in whom all that is Divine and human comes to its perfect unity.

The Wise Men were led to Christ by following their particular vocation. This is a practical lesson we must learn today for we ought to be finding Christ in our daily duties. Our profession should be leading us to a deeper understanding of life and its highest meaning. There must be something wrong with a task that is not doing this. All honest work is honorable and should reveal to us the hidden purposes of life. Every type of employment should become a medium of Christian revelation and should make us more like Christ. It is surprising to find that the same vocation will make one man a fine, generous soul and utterly degrade the other man. Whilst the Star led the wise men to Christ it is quite possible that others were led to superstition and materialism. However, one is grateful that the Epiphany festival, at the beginning of the New Year, challenges us to spiritualise our work and follow our vocation so that we may come to Him who is the Author and Finisher of our faith.

THE WISE MEN were challenged to follow the gleam of a new order robbed of all national, racial, and religious prejudices. In their hearts was the longing for the Kingdom of God, the hope for the merging of racial, national and religious interests under the avowed kingship of the living God, wherever He might reveal Himself. God's revelation took these "benighted" heathen to the place where their hopes should find first true cause for worship and adoration. Stars still point the way for wise men! God never withholds the means to guide earnest seekers for, at the end of the quest, is the unchangeable Christ. Nor do we have to undertake a journey to a far-off land; America is our Holy Land. Christ, the Eternal Contemporary is here, "closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet", in homes, churches, everywhere, seeking entrance in our hearts to dwell. Of course the scene whither the star led the wise men could not possibly have been the least like they had expected, yet they were incapable either of disappointment or surprise but just glad to do reverence to what they found, Christ. They had reached Bethlehem, their "house of bread," and there would receive that food which would satisfy the hunger of their hearts. So may ours, too, for the Church of God with the true, living Bread of God awaits our contact with her inexhaustible supply. Like the wise men we, too, must first give ourselves and then present our gifts of prayer, service, and money, "minted life", these three, holy, and acceptable unto God, which He will consecrate to His glory and the extension of His kingdom here and now. Impossible? Not at all! Change your thinking! Practice the Golden Rule today, everywhere. Love thy neighbor is the only way to make the world a neighborhood. It is Christ's way. The

"Understanding the Book of Revelation"

Five Sermons on the Apocalypse of John

By WILLIAM R. MOODY

Foreword.

THE BOOK OF REVELATION is, without doubt, the most difficult and the least understood of all the New Testament writings. I cannot remember ever having undertaken a Series of Sermons which has cost me as much serious and concentrated study as these five sermons have cost. It is the first time in my ministry that I have undertaken to preach on The Book of Revelation as a whole. After I had announced my topics, and had begun the actual writing of the addresses, I discovered—to my confusion—that I knew far less about this book than I thought I did. It was a closed book to me, too. I had to pound out an understanding of it for myself before, in good conscience, I could stand up to interpret it for you. I have read the Book of Revelation over seven times in the preparation of these sermons. I have consulted the scholars and the commentaries, burning the midnight oil. Bit by bit, passage by passage, here a little and there a little, I have filled in the picture, trying to discover what was in the mind of the man who wrote this book; trying to put myself into his way of thinking; and then trying to find words in which I might convey his thinking to you. I do not know how well I may succeed in opening up this book for you, but I have succeeded in opening it up for myself. And I have found that when it is properly understood it is truly a Christian book, and that it has a vital message for this present day. If I can help you in any way to get that message, and to understand it, then I am repaid.

"THE EVERLASTING GOD"

IN THE TIME of the Emperor Domitian, when the Christian community received and stood up under the second great shock of persecution, there began to be circulated in the East a book reported to be from the pen of the Apostle John. This Apostle's name was a magic name among the Christians of the Empire, and especially among those around the city of Ephesus in Asia Minor, where the book first appeared. Saint John was known to have been the closest of all the Apostles to the Lord Jesus Himself, and he was also, at the end of his life, the Bishop of Ephesus. The appearance of a book bearing his name would have been an event in any case, but in that time of bitter persecution and distress it came with all the thrill and encouragement of a voice Divine.

Was the Apostle still alive when this book appeared? Did he actually write it? This is one of the most warmly contested points in Christian history, and has been so almost from the first appearance of the book. It is not likely we can settle it; and fortunately it is not necessary for us to do so. The book speaks for itself.

Certain things about the book should be said, however, in this connection. The Book of Revelation is written in very bad Greek. It is in the language of the streets and of the alleys and of the docks, where men spelled out their reading painfully, word by word, if they could read at all; yet the internal construction is the most intricate and elaborate in the whole literature of the Western world. This contrast is so great that it is not beyond belief that the author deliberately wrote in "dialect". Scholars tell us that the best Greek in the New Testament is to be found in the Epistle to the Hebrews; and that the language of the Gospel of Saint John, while good, is peculiar, in places almost childish in construction, written almost like a child's primer. But the language of the Book of Revelation is rough and gaunt, and at times scarcely grammatical.

But this made small difference to the Christians who received it in the time of the Emperor Domitian. Most of them were poor, and all of them were frightened. The soldiers of the Emperor were seeking out the Christians, in many places actually from door to door. No Christian in those days went to his bed at night without the gnawing fear that before the morning he might hear the rough knocking at the door, to be dragged away to drum-head trial, and death before the leering crowds in the arena. To men living thus on the edge of tragedy this book came as the word of God Himself, spoken by the mouth of the Beloved Disciple.

Knowledge of the Book of Revelation spread rapidly over the whole Empire in that time of Christian trial and torture of soul and body and everywhere it brought encouragement and defiance of tyranny and a heightened faith in the power and in the final victory of God. It was the voice of Christianity at war, the voice of the "Christian-underground", the voice of defiance from the catacombs against entrenched and wicked privilege, and power abused. And as such it has never lost its place and poignancy in all the centuries since it first came to the eyes of men.

Because of what it is, and of what its message is, the Book of Revelation is a dangerous book for the uninformed. In the first place, it is the child of controversy unto death. Coming, as it does, out of battle, it carries a spirit of bitterness not found anywhere else in the New Testament. The enemies of Christianity are pictured as obscene beasts and cruel monsters; whereas those who fight on the side of God are set forth in flashes of piercing light. And the Book is the most Hebraic in the New Testament. The pictures of Heaven are not really pictures of Heaven at all, they are glorified remembrances of the Jewish Temple, and of the Temple worship at Jerusalem. The average reader today, knowing practically nothing about the Hebrew Temple and its worship, misses the true quality and meaning of these passages. To take these pictures literally is to become involved in a fantastic jungle of highly colored nonsense, and many people have lost themselves in this wilderness. They are not meant to be taken literally. They are symbols, hiding the writer's real meaning except from the initiated. The Roman officer, finding this book in the days after its first appearance, would have recognized it as a Christian document, but its inner meaning would have escaped him entirely. Its declaration of war to the death against the pagan social system, of which Rome was the crown, and against the Jewish Church which had rejected Christ, and which was symbolized by Jerusalem and Babylon, would have been hidden from him, as would also the confident expectation that Rome, and the pagan system which Rome symbolized would one day come to the same defeat and destruction which had already fallen upon apostate Jerusalem. This, of course, was treason; but it was cloaked in cryptic language to which only the initiated had the key. But the Book of Revelation has always been a difficult book, even for Christians.

The very fact that this book was written in cryptic symbolism, and needs a key, has made it the happy hunting ground of religious quacks and fakers for two thousand years. Misused, it is a dangerous book. Understood, and used as the writer intended it to be used, it carries the same tremendous, vital religious and social message today that it carried for those embattled Christians who first heard it in the pagan Roman world.

IN THIS SERIES of Sermons, of which this is the first, I do not intend to take the Book of Revelation chapter by chapter, and passage by passage, to try to explain its meaning. Even if I had the knowledge to do that, I would not have the time. What I want to do is to open this book up for you, so that you may read it intelligently for yourself. And as you read it, I suggest that you will find in it five values which are just as strong, and just as needed today as ever they were in the history of mankind. And these are the values which gave the book its power in the battle between the Christians of the second century and the pagan Roman world.

First: A vivid sense of the reality and of the present power of God.

Second: An unwavering faith in Jesus.

Third: A realization of the reality and of the power of sin.

Fourth: A firm belief in the ultimate destruction of evil, and the victory of God.

Fifth: A clear vision of a redeemed humanity.

I will conclude what I have to say today with a consideration of the first of these points. And in the weeks which follow I shall take the others up in order. (Note: These sermons were preached in Christ Church, Baltimore, Md., during Advent, 1943.)

FROM THE FIRST WORD of the Book of Revelation straight through to the last, there is the tremendous and pervasive assumption of the reality, and of the Presence, and of the present Power of God. "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty!" This is a fully Christian assumption. This is the foundation stone of the Christian faith.

In a world of change and dismay, in a world where whirl is king, having driven out the lesser gods of earth, here is one fixed and unchanging star, the Polestar of the human spirit! "I am the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord; the first letter in the human Alphabet and the last! I will give to him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely! He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son!"

Out of the muck and confusion of this present time, with all its misunderstandings and its distress, what word is more helpful, more necessary than this one? The reality, and the permanence, and the present power of our God is one great truth which we, as Christians, must stress! You need that conviction in your own life! Those about you need to believe it! There is but one God; and all other gods that men worship are but shams and shadows! The power of the evil that is in the world will upset them, and will destroy their worshippers with them: but the true God has the power finally to destroy evil, and to deliver His faithful ones even from the power of the lions!

Our God, the Everlasting and the Omnipotent, is presently and intimately concerned with everything that we do. This is clearly shown in the opening chapters of the Book of Revelation, in those passages which describe the Risen Lord as in conversation with His Churches. There they are, the little Churches of the Province of Asia—seven of them—and seven was the perfect number, so they stood for all such Churches everywhere in all ages—and the Spirit of the Triumphant Jesus knows each one intimately, and each member of them by name,—knows their problems, their struggles, their sins, their triumphs,—He knows them all, and by name He warns and condemns, rewards and blesses them!

What a solemn thing it is for us, today,—and what a blessed thing,—to know that the great and omnipotent King of the Universe knows us each one by name, and that He is with us in each single thing we do, warning us, upholding us, rewarding us! Ah, if you can believe that, it will give you strength for your living in these difficult days! In times like these it means everything to the true Christian to feel that he is not "going it alone",—that the Eternal God is with him, and that underneath are the Everlasting Arms!

In the Book of Revelation there is one dominant thought which is at variance with our usual thinking. We divide the world into "present and future", the "here" and the "hereafter": but in the Book of Revelation there is no such strong line drawn. Heaven and earth, in this book, are shown as a part of one pattern and one tapestry. What happens here is reflected there; and what happens there is reflected here! And I am persuaded that what this book says is true. We are closer to Heaven, and Heaven is closer to us, than we think.

There is a strong line drawn in the Book of Revelation, marking a cleavage in the universe, but it is not a temporal line, dividing the "here" from the "yonder": it is a moral line, marking the evil from the good! The thing that counts, in this book, is not that a man is dead, as this world knows death; what counts is why he died,—for if he died for righteousness and for God, then he is not dead, but living! God is the just and righteous King of Saints!

Mark this teaching well. It has its modern application.

OURS IS A WORLD AT WAR. And the Book of Revelation is the book of Christianity at war. The Book of Revelation is not a book of peace. It is a book of conflict. It came out of as bitter a battle as the Christian community ever had to fight, a battle literally unto the death. The writer of this book sees the struggle of the Christian Church with the pagan and apostate world of his day as a recapitulation of the struggle which Jesus had to fight when He walked among men in the flesh. In the pages of this book we see earth and Heaven as a battleground between the forces of the Everlasting God, and the sinister and powerful forces of unrighteousness. The evidence of this conflict meet us, not just on every page, but in almost every paragraph in the book.

There are the Churches,—the seven Churches,—typical of all Churches everywhere, weak and struggling and tempted, and sometimes prideful, and all of them under attack. There they are, just as we see them today, with all their faults, surrounded by the pagan

Church Unity

The Southern Churchman has upon a number of occasions stated its position in regard to all proposals for Church unity. That position is one of extreme interest in all such proposals. We backed the majority report of the old Commission on Approaches to Unity and we shall give our support to the work of the new Commission authorized by the last General Convention.

A new and yet old proposal for unity came to our desk this past week. It is an extremely interesting one. We are sure that most of the clergy of the Church know about this proposal. We doubt if the rank and file of the laity of the Protestant Episcopal Church are cognizant of it. It is a proposal for unity with the Roman Church. We are interested in union with Rome because there will always be a divided Christendom, unless Rome becomes a definite part of any scheme of re-union. We are not interested in re-union with Rome on the basis of the proposal which we are about to present to you.

We received from the Church Unity Octave Council of England several tracts. One tract is entitled, "The ANNUAL Call of the Church Unity Octave. Eight Days of Prayer for Reunion 1944. (From the Feast of St. Peter's Chair at Rome, January 18th to 25th, the Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul the Apostle of the Nations.)" The opening paragraph of this tract reads as follows:

"The Church Unity Octave Council appeals again for the due observance of this octave of prayer for the healing of the schism of the XVI century by the union of the Anglican Communion with the true centre of unity, the Holy and Apostolic See of Rome."

A second tract titled The Church Unity Octave, gives a list of daily intentions for the Octave—"Jan. 18th St. Peter's Chair at Rome. The return of all" the Other Sheep to the "One Fold;" to the repairing of all the breaches with Rome."

Then it gives a list of Recommendations. To quote:

1, Receive Holy Communion as often as possible.

2. Attend Mass daily for the intentions of the Octave.

3. Say a Decade of the Holy Rosary each day for the above intentions.

4. Offer a penance, a fast, the Stations of the Cross, or some devotion as an act of Reparation for the sins of Heresy and Schism.

5. Offer Prayer or Intention at Mass every Thursday for "Reunion with the Apostolic See."

6. Study the question of Reunion.

We give these two quotations from the Church Unity Octave pamphlets published in England, because we are a part of the Anglican Communion. And in case anyone might think we are meddling in the affairs of the English Church, we ask you to turn to page 94 of the 1944 Living Church Annual. There you will find listed under the heading "Church Clubs," with a subhead "Church Unity," the following two groups: (1) Church Unity Octave Council, and (2) Confraternity of Unity. The former states that it is "an Association of Priests and laymen, worldwide in scope, formed to promote the better observance of the Church Unity Octave, by members of the Anglican Communion committed to the following proposition": It is only by the re-union of all Christians into the one visible Kingdom of Christ, symbolized by the Chair of St. Peter, the central see of Christendom at Rome, that the power of the Church can be directed, without the present waste and rivalry, to the conversion of the whole world, by the one true Faith to Christ the King." This is a direct quote from the English pamphlet. The latter organization says that it is composed of members of the Anglican Communion, "who believe that the See of Rome is the Center of Unity for all Churches."

We believe that both of these statements, the recommendations made for the observance of the Octave, and that the true center of unity is the Holy and Apostolic See, are untrue to the real spirit of Anglicanism. We believe further that the laity of this Church should be made aware of the seriousness of this challenge to our heritage, by even so small a minority group as is represented by the Church Unity Octave.

In the first place the Anglican Communion has never officially recognized the Roman See as the Center of Unity. We have always recognized the validity of the orders of the Orthodox Church and its equal value with Rome. We have upon various occasions admitted our willingness to re-unite with Rome when she was willing to put aside her unscriptural pretensions and deal with us as equals, and not merely as erring children being taken back into the fold. We have had rather close contact with Roman priests over a number of years. During the first six months of the past year, we worked with them in Army Camps and Naval Training Stations. In odd moments we enjoyed many enlightening conversations with these faithful priests of the See of Rome. Their position, formed by their heritage and their obedience was perfectly clear—"Come our way, and everything will be all right."

It seems to us a little absurd, if not ludicrous, for a small group of priests in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the Church of England to place so much emphasis upon this misguided approach to re-union with Rome.

There is a broader field. In spite of the War an

PRAISES GENERAL ROBERT E. LEE

In his latest book, "A Man Stood Up To Preach", Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones, prominent minister of Detroit, Michigan, had this to say of General Robert E. Lee:

"The men in the uniform of gray went back to run-down farms, devastated regions, war-scourged cities, impoverished estates. Many of their homes were in ashes; they had to begin all over again. On an April day in 1865, through long lines of weeping men there rode the commander-in-chief of the defeated army, grave of countenance but calm of spirit. All his material possessions were gone; beloved Arlington had passed out of his hands. There came an offer of a home in England, where he might spend the rest of his days in comfort, ease and luxury. He declined it. He refused $25,000 a year, offered him by an insurance company, saying, 'I can receive no money that I have not earned', and became president of a small and struggling college at a salary of $1,500. He nourished no rancor, showed no bitterness, called upon his former soldiers to support the Union.

"One day a mother put her little child in his arms and asked that he offer a prayer for her first-born. General Lee bowed his head over the child, held him close, handed him back to his mother, saying, 'Teach him to deny himself.'

"When men can meet defeat in such a spirit, victory is present. He who rules his own spirit is greater than he who takes a city."—From The United Daughters of the Confederacy Magazine.

General Lee's birthday is January 19th.

Church's way. The democratic way. And all those who are working for "a perfect society in a perfect state" are following their star of faith, hope, and charity.

"As with gladness men of old
Did the guiding star behold;
As with joy they hailed its light,
Leading onward, beaming bright;
So, most gracious God, may we Evermore be led to Thee."

There, in His presence, we shall worship Him and go forth new men, pioneers of the new way, in this new day; world, with their temptations, their sins, with their faith and their triumph,—the Churches in the midst of a battle! And each one of them is just a sector of the battle, each one apt to lose the vision of the whole sweep of the conflict in the hardness of the little sector where they fight! To them the Great Captain speaks, and to them He gives His own broad vision!

And there are the martyrs, crowds upon crowds of them, slain for the faith of the true God from the foundation of the world, trooping up like soldiers from a battle, showing their wounds; and the shed blood of them crying from the torn earth, and from the swords of the gladiators, and from the encrimsoned manes of the lions. A battle!

And there is the terrible and persistent power of sin, pictured for us, and of the evil in men's hearts, and of the evil in the universe itself,—evil which must be defeated, and defeated, and defeated again and again, each time at more dreadful cost,—evil rising from each defeat like a hydra-headed dragon, spewing forth venom and hatred and persecution and woe upon the earth! A battle! The whole book is a battle!

And, balanced against all this, and towering above it, is an overwhelming sense of the glory of God, which is the glory of Righteousness,—a glory which holds within itself the sure promise of Victory to come! No matter how grim the struggle, no matter how set with dark terror the stage, His Presence, and His Power dominate the scene; and behind all the darkness of the rage of the Beast,—which is sin,—we hear the distant singing of the saints, and the sound of the harpers like the sound of mighty waters, filling the universe with the praise of God, and with the shout of His Victory to come!

"And I saw a great white throne, and Him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them . . . And I heard a great Voice out of Heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He shall dwell with them, and they shall be His people; and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God!"

BOOK NOTES

By the Faculty of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific. Edited by Randolph Crump Miller.

WILLIAM LAWRENCE, by Henry Knox Sherrill. Harvard University Press. $2.00.

When Bishop Lawrence, of Massachusetts, at what he and others thought was the end of his active career wrote his autobiography, Memories of a Happy Life, it seemed there would be little more to be recorded. Nothing could have been more fallacious. The next fifteen years of this wise, vigorous and lovable man were among the most interesting of the ninety-one. So deep were the roots of his many interests in church, education, community and individual lives that, like the monarch of the orchard, his life went on bearing rich fruit long after normal expectancy. This was all the more remarkable because of the finality with which he severed his connections of other years, "When I am out, I am out". Bishop Sherrill has written with charm and sympathy of these Indian Summer days from the vantage of one who shared them intimately. It is happy reading and will be eagerly welcomed by the legion of friends (he seemed to know everyone) and by all others to whom the name William Lawrence has long been a symbol for the life rich and full.

THE CASE FOR CHRISTIANITY, by C. S. Lewis. Macmillan, 1943. 56 pp. $1.00.

The many who have been delighted by The Screwtape Letters will be eager to read this new book by Mr. Lewis. It contains two series of recent broadcast talks, one on "Right and Wrong as a Clue to the Meaning of the Universe", and the other on "What Christians Believe".

In the first series the author presents, for the educated layman, a brief but surprisingly thorough discussion of ethical philosophy. Again and again the conclusions are driven home, that man's ethical sense indicates a real quality behind the universe, that nothing less than man's full moral responsibility is compatible with the facts, and that man's inability to fulfil his own moral recognitions involves him in a dilemma from which he cannot escape unaided. All this, however familiar, is an excellent preface to the Christian claim, and Mr. Lewis' manner of saying it is nothing short of delightful.

To this reviewer, the second series seems less successful than the first. However, that may be because the theme is more common and hence less amenable to the author's brilliantly original style. The orthodox Christian view is stated in popular form. The oft-repeated argument for Jesus' divinity is given, that either Jesus was what He said He was or else He was a knave or a fool, etc. Because He is divine, we must believe that He taught about Satan and hell, etc. Surprisingly little is made of the supremely original Christian proposition, that the world's dying and rising Saviour was fully man. The author insists that theories of the atonement are of little value beside the fact; yet his own interpretation will doubtless appeal strongly to many readers.

The book abounds in telling illustration and good humor. It would make an excellent gift for a "doubting" friend.

Christopher Saur---One Man Bible Society

By MARGARET T. HILLS

Commemorating the Bicentennial of a Notable Achievement in the Story of the Bible in North America

A GERMAN BIBLE, the first in a European language printed in North America? Even before an English Bible? Indeed, that is so. Of course, the first Bible printed in all of America was that for the Indians in Massachusetts, in 1663; but that is another story.

It was the last day of August, 1743, when, in the shop of Christopher Saur in Germantown, Pennsylvania—just two hundred years ago—the last sheets of a German Bible came from the press, the culmination of three years of pioneering work.

The printer and publisher, Christopher Saur, was a pious, energetic, and ingenious young man, who came from Germany in 1724, with his wife and small son. After graduating from the University of Marburg, he had studied medicine at Halle. In Germantown he led a busy life as physician, apothecary, optician, glazier, woodturner, and clockmaker. Although not attached to any organized religious group, he was a deeply religious man. The lack of spiritual reading matter among the German community in Pennsylvania and Virginia moved him so, that he wrote several people in Germany for supplies of such books, and then set up a press to try to do something about it here. Paper, type, ink, and labor were expensive and scarce. His first press he built himself. In 1738 he started a series of very popular German almanacs, containing "various needful and edifying theological things, and also household remedies." The next year he began a religious newspaper, the first in the United States, which at one time had a circulation of 10,000 copies. In 1739 he also printed a German hymnal of some 800 pages for the Seventh-day Brethren at Ephrata, Pennsylvania. Then he began to think of printing a Bible. He had already been selling and giving away Bibles, Testaments, and other religious books sent him from Germany—a sort of one-man Bible Society. But the printing of a complete Bible in good type was an enterprise not to be rushed into. In his almanac and newspaper he asked for subscriptions for a Bible, so that he could form some idea of how many copies were needed, and to help cover the purchase of paper and type. He wanted it to be sold at a price "so low, that the parsimonious and avaricious may have no excuse; and those of lesser means, no burden." A few font of type was contributed by Dr. Heinrich Ehrenfried Luther, head of a famous type foundry at Frankfurt-am-Main. The press seems to have been secured from another printer, who lacked Saur's ability to get things done. The paper had been requested from a religious organization in England; but he may have used American paper. The ink he made himself from a formula of his own devising. The text followed was that of one of the Luther editions printed at Halle. Saur's first edition consisted of 1,200 copies. The fat, square volume is usually bound in stout, brown calfskin over oak boards, sometimes with a little simple tooling. The title page is strikingly printed in red and black, and charming cherubs appear at the end of the Old Testament and of the New. The volumes were sold at eighteen shillings, which is about $2.50; but—announced Christopher Saur—"to the poor and needy we have no price." In his preface Saur says the book contains no notes or explanations, because, "firstly, . . . by means of Scripture parallelisms, one phrase frequently illuminates another in the spiritual sense; secondly, because it is certain that to him who reads the Scriptures with an upright heart, the Holy Spirit in the heart reveals His true meaning by the reading itself; and according as every believer himself undergoes such an experience in himself, individually, so one believes assuredly that the time nears when the whole earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord (Isa. 11:9), and there shall be no need that brother teach brother and admonish him to know the Lord (Jer. 31:34) . . ."

To friends of the American Bible Society it is interesting that the first Bibles printed in this country were not profitmaking books, but what we now call missionary editions, and also were without "note or comment."

A fascinating sidelight on the Saur Bible is that twelve copies were sent to the Dr. Luther in Frankfurt who had supplied the type. The ship on which they were sent was attacked by pirates off the coast of France, and the cargo sold at auction. Two years later, the Bibles were redeemed by Dr. Luther and presented by him to various European libraries.

In 1745 Saur began a series of German New Testaments, which continued to appear until 1775.

After setting up a papermill of his own and a foundry for making cast-iron stoves, in addition to his other activities, the older Christopher died in 1758. His son Christopher carried on the press, and in 1763 printed 2,000 more German Bibles, this on paper made at Williamsburg, Virginia.

A third edition, printed from type cast in Saur's newly established type foundry, was printed in 1776. Only a part of this edition was bound and sold before the American Revolution reached Germantown. Saur, an elder of the Church of the Brethren, opposed war, and was held a loyalist by his fellow-townsmen. As he refused to take the oath of allegiance to the State of Pennsylvania in 1778, his goods were confiscated and sold at auction, including many unbound copies of this last edition. These, bound, were still on sale in Philadelphia early in the nineteenth century. The fascinating story that these unbound sheets were used as litter for horses or gun wadding by either the British or Continental troops during and after the battle of Germantown, seems to be unfounded.

Now, two hundred years later, the American Bible Society is printing thousands of German Bibles, many of which may be returned to Germany to help supply the post-war need there; all because the time still seems far off when, as the elder Saur quoted in his preface, "the whole earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, and there shall be no need that brother teach brother and admonish him to know the Lord."

CHANGING EMPHASES IN AMERICAN PREACHING, by Ernest Trice Thompson. Westminster Press. $2.00.

These Stone Lectures at Princeton Theological Seminary provide fascinating reading for clergy and lay people alike concerning five giants of American Christianity. In a stimulating manner, the author gives something of the flavor of the preaching and writing of these men: Horace Bushnell and the beginning of American liberalism, Henry Ward Beecher and the popular revolt against Calvinism, Dwight L. Moody and the high tide of revivalism, Washington Gladden and the development of the "new theology", Walter Rauschenbusch and the challenge of the social gospel. If we are to understand the destiny of Christianity and the American scene, we must come to grips with the distinctive features of our own brand of the Christian religion, of which five exciting portraits are provided in this volume.

GROWN UP

I'm growing up, my mother says—
Today she said I'd grown;
The reason why is this: Now I
Can do things all alone.

And though I'm glad that I don't need
Someone to brush my hair,
And wash my hands and face, and button
Buttons everywhere—

Although I'm very glad indeed
To help myself instead,
I hope that I won't have to try
To tuck myself in bed.

BECAUSE SHE WHISPERED

"Hurry and get your coat on, Judy, or you'll be late for school. It's a quarter to nine."

Judy had only three blocks to go; but even then it seemed as though it was all she could do to make it. She often wondered how Marie was always there in time. She lived half a mile away. And she was sure if she lived where Jack did, she would never get there at all.

But in spite of it all, Judy was never late. She always managed to get there somehow. Of course, I can't tell you whether or not she would have been able to get there if it hadn't been for her mother's help.

As she was running down the sidewalk—Judy never walked—she caught up with Sandra. Now Judy and Sandy were good friends, and always found plenty to talk about. So they chatted all the way into the classroom and to their seats.

Sandra sat right in front of Judy. The last bell hadn't rung yet, so it was perfectly all right that Judy talked then.

The tardy bell rang, and everyone turned around and faced Miss Bailey.

"Good morning, everyone," said the teacher cheerfully. "Will you stand and salute the flag, please?"

Judy and Sandra joined the thirty-five others in the usual morning salute: "I pledge allegiance to the flag—"

"Does Elaine have a new dress on?" Judy whispered to Sandy.

"I don't know. Looks like it."

Judy had begun her day by whispering the very first chance she had. But she always whispered in school.

Miss Bailey called the roll.

"Wayne Adams."

"Here."

"Margie Anderson."

"Present."

"Judith Bateman."

There was a pause; and then Lewis poked Judy to warn her, as he often had to do when she was talking so fast.

"Oh! I'm here."

Miss Bailey said nothing to Judith. She had already talked to her so much, and it did no good.

It wasn't that Judith didn't like Miss Bailey. In fact, Judy thought her the nicest teacher she had ever had. And it wasn't because Judy didn't like school. She had one of the highest averages in the class. It just seemed as though she couldn't learn to keep still.

When the telephone rang at ten minutes to three, Judy took that as a signal to talk to Victoria across the aisle. So Judy didn't hear the list of names Miss Bailey read after she hung up the receiver. She just told them to report to the office after school.

At three Judy hurried home, because Aunt Anna and Grandmother were going to be there.

The other four whose names had been read went to the office, and were told why they had been sent for.

The next morning Judy hurried off to school as usual, at seven minutes to nine. As the tardy bell rang, she was surprised to notice that Sandra was not in her seat.

"Judith, where were you last night after school?" Miss Bailey asked.

"I was home. Grandma and Aunt Anna were there," Judy answered.

"Didn't you hear me tell you that you were to stop at the office after school?"

"No, ma'am." Now, Judy was afraid. One usually didn't have to go to the office except for having done something wrong or being tardy.

"I looked for you, but you must have hurried home. Five of the pupils from this class were asked to go to the City Hall this morning to represent our school district in a conference. The bus left at eight-thirty, and so they couldn't wait for you. I'm very sorry this happened."

I don't need to tell you how Judy felt. You know that. Neither Miss Bailey nor Judy said anything about why Judy hadn't heard the announcement. They both knew why; and Judy knew that Miss Bailey knew.

Judy had other faults besides whispering. She was by no means perfect. But I can tell you one thing—she had learned it was better not to talk in school.—Evelyn Carlson, in Burning Bush.

COPY AND PASS ON

God is love. Our God loves you.
He does and always will.
He seeks your love and needs it, too.
No one your place can fill.

Don't think of God as far away
And vague,—not to be known.
He walks beside you all the day
Because you are His own.

So try to love Him. He's your Friend
And Father, always near.
Do all for Him. Keep Him in mind.
Love drives away all fear.

SATISFIED?

It is said that a Quaker put up a sign on a vacant piece of ground next to his house, which read, "I will give this lot to anyone who is really satisfied". A wealthy farmer, as he rode by, read it. Stopping, he said, "Since my Quaker friend is going to give that piece away, I may as well have it as anyone else. I am rich. I have all I need, so I am able to qualify." He went up to the door and when the aged Friend appeared, explained why he had come. "And is thee really satisfied?" asked the owner of the lot. "I surely am," was the reply. "I have all I need, and am well satisfied." "Friend," asked the other, "if thee is satisfied, what does thee want with my lot?"—Exchange.

THE SONG

Somehow the task seems lighter,
When we do it with a song;
It stills the heart's complaining
And keeps the courage strong.

No lot seems so grievous,
Nor filled with cares the day,
When love takes up the burden
And sings along the way.

Somehow, though skies are gloomy,
Or roads are rough and long,
He will not lack for comrades
Who travels with a song.

Annual Week Of Prayer

FOR THE UNITY OF CHRISTENDOM

January 18-25, 1944

Washington, Conn.—The Rev. Dr. Hodgson, Canon of Christ Church, Oxford, and General Secretary of the World Conference on Faith and Order, has issued the following announcement:

Year by year in this week, in every continent, Christians are praying together for the unity of Christ's Church. We in the Faith and Order Movement join in these prayers, praying that the work with which we are entrusted may be blessed and guided so as to help forward the wider cause.

Current events make clear the need of our work. In the discussions on the South India proposals, in the conferences between Episcopalians and Presbyterians in the United States, in the negotiations between Congregationalists, Methodists and Presbyterians in New Zealand—here and elsewhere we see Churches hindered from union by differences in the field of faith and order. We hear them saying that they can get no further without more thoroughgoing theological investigations of the grounds of division.

Let us thank God for the progress that has been made, progress that in many lands has brought many Churches to the point of actually seeking to achieve union.

Let us pray that God's blessing may rest upon all efforts to heal the divisions wrought by differences in faith and order.

Let us pray in particular that through the work of our Movement—of the Continuation Committee, of its Officers and Executive Committee, of the Commission on the Church, of the American Theological Committee, of the Commission on Ways of Worship, of the Commission on Intercommunion—

the Churches may be helped to find their way to overcome the difficulties which are keeping them from union.

Edgar Hoover Salutes "Our Future Citizens" in Annual Observance Jan. 30-Feb. 6.

Chicago—Emphasizing the importance of work with boys and girls, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, has called upon adults to "welcome the opportunity to salute our future citizens in the annual observance of Youth Week," in a statement released by the Rev. Philip C. Landers, director of public relations for the International Council of Religious Education. Youth Week is sponsored annually by the United Christian Youth Movement which is administered through the International Council of Religious Education.

Youth groups of 42 Protestant denominations are cooperating in the observance, in which more than 2,000,000 young people of the United States and Canada will participate during the period of January 30 to February 6. Historically, this observance dates back to the founding of the International Society of Christian Endeavor sixty-three years ago and has been observed since by youth groups of many denominations.

"As we salute our future citizens in Youth Week," Mr. Hoover states, "we must accept the responsibility of guiding our young people so they will develop into upright, courageous citizens. By doing so, we will put our Faith into action.

"I know from my own experience that a deep and sincere belief in God carries the individual through times of great crisis. Our Faith can and will result in victory if our belief embraces a consciousness of responsibilities which we must discharge fully if we expect Divine guidance and assistance.

"The task of building a better world for tomorrow is one for young hands, and because I have the fullest confidence in youth I believe it will be done well," Mr. Hoover said in concluding his endorsement of Youth Week.

Special attention will be paid to youth in thousands of church services during Youth Week, while more than 50,000 groups of young people will take part in special programs designed to emphasize their activity in helping to win the war and the peace both on the battle front and the home front. In addition to the 42 Protestant denominations which are cooperating in the observance as members of the United Christian Youth Movement, other constituent agencies taking part include the Boy Scouts of America, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and the International Society of Christian Endeavor.

QUOTAS FILLED

Boston, Mass.—The Episcopal Church quota of Chaplains being full in the Army and much more than full in the Navy, there is no urgent demand for more Chaplains in either branch of the service. The Commission will notify the public through the Church papers in case enther Army or Navy makes further demands for Chaplains.

7 RACIAL STRAINS INCLUDED IN CHURCH SCHOOL

Honolulu, T. H.—The 420 pupils enrolled at St. Andrew's Priory, Church school for girls in Honolulu, includes seven racial strains as well as 17 "oters". There are Hawaiian, Chinese, Caucasian, Portuguese, Japanese, Korean, and Filipino. The pupils are 154 Episcopalian, with 74 members of various Protestant bodies, 34 Roman Catholics, 28 Mormons, 7 Buddhists, and 123 pupils who claim no religious affiliation.

The Rev. Mr. Bodger In America

Comes to Confer About Missionary Work in Papua

New York, N. Y.—Armed with letters of commendation from General Douglas MacArthur and General Edwin D. Patrick, the Rev. John D. Bodger, M. C. L., has arrived in New York and conferred with Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker about missionary work of the Church of England in Papua. He is diocesan Chaplain to the Bishop of New Guinea and Sub Dean of the Cathedral there. General MacArthur made possible transportation to the United States, and wrote: "May I take this opportunity to express my deep appreciation of the services that you and your Mission performed in assisting the Armed Forces in Papua and to wish you every success in your tour in the United States."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, who met Mr. Bodger in Australia, says, "He has accomplished great things there, and serves the whole community as doctor, engineer, counsellor and priest. His knowledge of the country is unsurpassed and has been of great value to American personnel who are stationed in that difficult land. He has extended hospitality to many American soldiers." Mr. Bodger will, while in this country, visit a number of Church centers to tell of the work in his field, which is under the Australian Board of Missions, and which has received aid from the Aid to British Missions funds raised by the Church in the United States. In that connection, Senator Lodge says, "There is no one in a better position to acquaint the families of our boys in the Southwest Pacific with the actual conditions under which they are living and fighting. I am sure they will all be enriched by hearing what he has to tell."

"Hon. the Revd." (which is his correct title) John Dewhurst Bodger is a native of England, 42 years old, of boundless energy and engaging personality. Following his father's death when he was 2½ years, he was educated at the Royal Infant Orphanage, and at Kings School, Peterborough. Out of school for a year, he worked in an aircraft factory twelve hours a day, doing his share in World War I.

Victor Ludorum at School Sports in 1919, and also 1st XI. Colours cricket and soccer football. Interested in Scouting since 1912, taking part in the Jamborees at Olympia in 1920, Wembley in 1924, and was Chaplain on the Adriatic Scouters and Guiders Cruise with Lord and Lady Baden Powell in the Mediterranean in 1934. Theological and missionary training was received at St. Augustine's College, Canterbury, 1920 to 1924. This training course includes such subjects as medicine, surgery, printing, Pedagogy, Carpentry. He passed his general ordination examinations, but was too young to be or-

Federal Project At St Paul's

Rehabilitation Project Has Been Set Under Government Auspices

Lawrenceville, Va.—A Federal rehabilitation project has been set up at St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute, Lawrenceville, one of the American Church Institute schools.

The men who are being sent to St. Paul's under government auspices are veterans who have been in service and who have been released on account of physical disabilities. They are eligible for instruction in various fields from professions to trades and industries. So far St. Paul's has been authorized to instruct some interested in auto mechanics and tailoring. In time it is hoped that all the trades will pass the federal standards.

J. T. Thornton, vice-president of St. Paul's, says that this institution is one of the first, if not the first, to qualify for such instruction.

IMPORTANT FOR ST. PETER'S-BY-THE-SEA

Narragansett, R. I.—A purely voluntary committee from the ladies of the Summer Colony at Narragansett Pier were banded together to rehabilitate the rectory of St. Peters's-by-the-Sea. This old house has not had a thorough going over for more than a generation, and the rectory family were naturally joyful over the prospect of living in a rectory fully weather-proof, safe from old-fashioned and now dangerous electrical installations, and with new paint inside and out. The chairman of the committee is Mrs. Henry C. Beadleston, of Narragansett and New York, who has been looking at the rectory from across the street for six years. A few of the others are Mrs. Malcolm McConihe, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Isaac Emerson, of Baltimore; Mrs. Arthur Lippincott, of New York; Miss Margaret Levey, of New York; Mrs. William Elkins, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Craig Biddle, of Narragansett and New York; Mrs. Alfred Brosseau of Narragansett and Greenwich, Conn.; Mrs. Ernest Foster, of New York; and many others. The work was started this week, the structural changes and strengthening being the first on the program. The parish recently celebrated its 90th anniversary.

The Rev. Thom Williamson is rector of St. Peter's-by-the-Sea.

DIOCESE AND PARISH

On the Move in Right Direction

New York, N. Y.—Good news from Northern Michigan reached the National Council in the form of a letter from Bishop Herman Page, saying, "Things here seem definitely on the upswing".

Bishop Page looks forward hopefully to real development in the year 1944. Indications of the intention to go forward cited by the Bishop are: "Sault Ste Marie has pledged an increase of approximately 90% on the red side; Marquette about 63%; Iron Mountain, 400%; Calumet, 400%; Manistique, 300%, which would give an increase in those places alone of about $2,000."

"While this sum may not seem large to you people," Bishop Page concludes, "it looks pretty big to us. At any rate it indicates that the diocese is on the move and in the right direction."

ENCOURAGING ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Evansville, Ill.—"If priests and their vestries want to accomplish things badly enough, they can be accomplished," said Stewart A. Cushman, commenting on the recent Every Member Canvass in St. Matthew's Parish, Evanston. "During the years that we have been stressing missions," he continues, "we have always been able to take care of our parish needs and have in seven years increased our mission giving from $670 to $3,600. During that time we have paid off a $27,000 mortgage, have put thousands into renovating the rectory and the parish house, and have continually increased our rector's salary."

The canvass at St. Matthew's showed few large givers, but a high percentage of the parish pledging. Of new pledgers who are either newly confirmed or new to the parish, 58 pledged, and all but 15 of them pledged to missions. Of those who had been pledging previously but have not formerly pledged to missions, 51 this year made a pledge for the red side. There were also 77 increases on the mission side from old pledgers. This makes a total of 171 families who are either giving to missions for the first time, or giving more.

St. Matthew's now has 327 people pledging on the parish side and 246 pledging on the mission side.

CANVASS MOST SUCCESSFUL

Wakefield, R. I.—The first United Church Canvass held in the Wakefield area is reported most successful. The Rev. John R. Wyatt, rector of the Church of the Ascension was chairman of the Canvass, which took in 16 of the 18 Christian churches in the vicinity. The only two not participating were inactive and without clergy.

Mr. Wyatt says, "The Canvass this year was a venture in cooperation more than anything else, since only about half the churches had actual visitations. However, the newspaper publicity coupled with a similar poster display that covered the town with the same message, and a window display to bring it all to a focus, have gone a great distance in helping toward better feeling and understanding among various Church groups. The window display in a prominent window of a Main Street drug store featured the prayer books of all churches labeled as such, and opened to the Lord's Prayer, and the Hymnals opened to 'O Come All Ye Faithful'. The sub-poster carried the words, 'All Christians raise their voices in words of common prayer and praise in the worship of God.'"

The newspaper ads were paid for by contributions from all the participating churches. In at least one church, the Ascension, there were 50 new pledges amounting to over a thousand dollars, that can be at least partially attributed to the Canvass.

One of the Roman Catholic clergy (both of them were delighted to participate in the Canvass) made this suggestion: "I am very pleased to cooperate locally, but if my Bishop or some other official hears about it, I am likely to get into hot water. Why isn't there a Roman Catholic on the official board of the United Church Canvass? That would help us tremendously."

First Chapel To Be Constructed

Priorities Granted for Building in New Housing Development

Alexandria, Va.—Building priorities have been granted to the Episcopal Church in Virginia by the War Production Board, for the construction of the first chapel to serve the new Parkfairfax and Fairlington housing developments. The Chapel of St. Clement will be the first religious building to go up in the new neighborhood. It is expected that construction will require only a month, and that the first services will be held early in February. The Rev. Darby Wood Betts has been named chaplain, and building plans have been approved, and a religious, social and educational program is being worked out. Mr. Betts said that only the sanctuary will be consecrated, and the rest of the building will be available for varied types of educational and recreational activities.

Proposed organizations listed by Mr. Betts include the men's and boys' choirs which are already functioning at services in the Immanuel Chapel at Virginia Theological Seminary, a planning council, young people's group, discussion forums, Woman's Auxiliary, Church School, day nursery, recreation committee, Cub Scouts, Girl Scouts, and other units which will contribute to the well being of the community.

The new chapel will be white, of Colonial design, and with a seating capacity of 200.

dained so returned to college for another year, spending most of it in hospital work. He "passed top" in the Bishop's examination for deacons, and was ordained in 1924. He confesses that in England he had charge of two parishes and spent his "spare time at soccer for the Northampton Nomads, Hockey for Northampton Town, and Rugger for Northampton 'Saints'". During his last year in England he took a special course in tropical medicine at Livingstone College. He left England in 1928 for Papua to join the New Guinea Anglican Mission. He visited all the mission stations there, and was located for the first six months at Boianai, then transferred to Dogura to take charge of St. Paul's School and to do pioneer work in the mountain districts. During the next 14 years he opened nine outstations. His first furlough was taken in England in 1933. St. Paul's school, Fr. Bodger tells with some pride, is the first school in Papua to gain Standard V certificates in Government Examination conducted by an Inspector from Queensland.

Other activities include assisting in building the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul at Dogura; inauguration of intermission sports between various missionary bodies; appointment by the Governor-General of Australia to be non-official member representing Christian Missions, of the Legislative Council of the Territory of Papua; organization of the Jubilee Festival of the Mission in 1941.

Fr. Bodger describes his war work modestly: "Teleradio station at Dogura; assisted troops in locality in variety of ways, hospital, hospitality, rescue work, guides, construction of two air strips, establishment of outposts, chaplaincy work, welfare work, etc."

Fr. Bodger is taking his first furlough for five and a half years, and first home leave for ten years. He has visited his brother, rector of St. Cuthbert's, Montreal, Canada, and will later pay a visit to England before returning to his field.

FORWARD MOVEMENT CARDS IN SPANISH

La Gloria, Cuba.—Forward Movement Calendar card printed in Spanish is being distributed by Archdeacon J. H. Townsend. He had them printed and so far has distributed 4,000. The cards are headed "Almanaque Episcopal," with the calendar for the year, and the back carries a calendar of Church feasts and fasts.

Archdeacon Townsend is arranging to print "A Traver de la Via" in Spanish—Bishop Wilson's "What Every Churchman Ought to Know," as well as a number of other things, including Forward—day by day for Lent.

Personal Notes Of Interest

The Rev. William Fargo Bayle has resigned the rectorship of St. Stephen's Church, McKeesport, Pa., to become rector of the Church of Our Saviour, Dubois, Pa., effective February 1.

The Rev. Edward M. Claytor for the past three years rector of Grace Church, Waycross, Ga., has accepted the appointment by Bishop Barnwell to be rector of Christ Church, Augusta, effective from January 1, 1944. Christ Church is located in the Mill District of Augusta and is regarded as one of the outstanding opportunities for welfare work in the diocese.

The Rev. Samuel B. McGlohon, retired rector of St. Paul's Church, Savannah, Ga., is now able to sit up after an illness extending from November, when he suffered several heart attacks. Mr. McGlohon is 84 years of age and was active right up to the time he became ill. In fact, he was taken ill after celebrating the 8 o'clock Sunday Eucharist for Dr. Wright at Christ Church. For years Mr. McGlohon has been a trustee of the University of the South at Sewanee, representing the Diocese of Georgia, and is also secretary of the Park and Tree Commission of Savannah. His physician gives high hopes of his complete recovery.

Captain Frank H. Lash, a Navy chaplain for 27 years, prepared today to leave Great Lakes, Ill., to become Senior Chaplain with the U. S. Naval Forces in Europe, officials here announced.

He has been Senior Chaplain of the U. S. Naval Training Station and District chaplain of the Ninth Naval District, concurrently, for the past two years and eight months. And he is the have entered foreign service in that time.

In his place at Great Lakes will be Captain John E. Johnson, Chaplain Corps, from Long Beach, Calif. Captain Johnson will be Senior Chaplain of the training station. Captain Joseph T. Casey from Seattle, Wash., is scheduled to head the Corps in the Ninth Naval District.

Captain Lash, a clergyman of the Episcopal Church and a member of the Diocese of Washington, D. C., was commissioned a junior grade lieutenant at the outbreak of war in 1917, after four years as a civilian minister at El Reno, Okla.

He has had a varied career, serving aboard many ships and land bases. In World War I, he was aboard the U. S. S. Missouri and later on the U. S. S. Mississippi. He was the Fleet Chaplain of the U. S. Asiatic Fleet from 1927 to 1929; Chaplain at the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, from 1929 to 1932; a tour of duty at Great Lakes from 1935 to 1938, and then Fleet Chaplain of the U. S. Pacific Fleet. He returned to Great Lakes in 1941.

He was commissioned Captain, July 1, 1940.

Captain Lash was born in Sioux City, Iowa, May 18, 1890. He studied theology at Phillips University, Enid, Okla., with the class of 1912. The following year he had earned a Master of Arts degree, and in 1932 was awarded a Doctor of Divinity from the same university.

The Rev. C. B. Lucas has resigned the rectorship of the Church of the Holy Communion, Buffalo, N. Y., where he has served for more than 14 years, to become a chaplain on the staff of the Detroit Episcopal City Mission.

Born in Columbus, Ga., and spending more of his life in the south, Mr. Lucas felt called to the ministry while holding a responsible railroad position as a public relations official.

He was ordained by the Rt. Rev. Kirkman G. Findlay, D. D., bishop of Upper South Carolina, and served in parishes in Winnsboro and Chester, South Carolina, before going to Buffalo.

Mr. Lucas will spend much of his time in hospital bedside visitation, especially at the Receiving Hospital.

The Rev. Edward Randolph Welles, rector of Christ Church, Alexandria, Va., has accepted a call to become dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo, New York, effective January 25, 1944.

He became rector of Christ Church in 1940. During this period the Church grew rapidly in many ways, including the phenomenal growth in communicant strength from 364 to more than 900.

DEATHS

Rev. Stephen Osborne Southall

On Friday, December 10, the Rev. Stephen Osborne Southall, a retired clergyman of the Diocese of Southern Virginia, died at his residence at Amelia Court House, Va.

The Rev. Mr. Southall was the son of the late Dr. Philip Francis Southall and Eliza Goode Southall. He was born at the family home, Woodstock, in Amelia County, Va., May 15, 1858. He attended Kennore School in Amherst County, Va., and was a graduate of the University of Virginia and the Virginia Theological Seminary. In 1889 he was ordained to the diaconate by Bishop Whittle and in the following year was advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Randolph. He was a member of the Virginia Historical Society. Prior to his retirement several years ago he had served as Rector in various parishes, all in the State of Virginia.

The Rev. Mr. Southall was a brother of Mrs. Thomas R. Hardaway, of Amelia, and of the late Judge Robert Goode Southall and the late Dr. Philip P. Southall. In addition to his wife, Mrs. Pride Wood Southall, he is survived by three sons, Lieutenant Stephen O. Southall, Jr., U. S. A.; Valentine W. Southall, Commonwealth Attorney of Amelia County, and Robert G. Southall, III, now in the Yukon Territory.

The burial was from Christ Church, Amelia, with the Rev. Morton Townsend, minister-in-charge, officiating.

The Rev. Mr. Southall was an upright man, loyal to his Church and a true and loyal soldier and servant of the Lord Jesus Christ.

IN MEMORIAM

Entered into Life Eternal at dawn on Sunday, October 31, 1943, at her home, Colonial Beach, Va., MRS. LUCY PRATT ASHTON NINDE, aged 66, widow of the late Doctor Frederick Fairfax Ninde, an honored and beloved physician of the Northern Neck of Virginia.

Born at "Waterloo," King George County, Va., Mrs. Ninde was the daughter of the late Lewis Alexander Ashton and Mary Barnes Hooe of "Barnsfield," and a lineal descendant of both George Mason of Gunston, author of the Virginia Bill of Rights, and of Betty Washington Lewis of Kenmore, sister of George Washington.

Frail of body, but strong in character, an understanding leader and sympathizer in every worthy cause brought to her attention, high of purpose, ever loyal and kind, possessed of a charming personality, she won the love and respect of all with whom she came in contact. Truly she was a Christian of the highest type, and devoted to her church.

Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Floyd Cartwright on November the second at old St. Paul's Church, King George County, where she was organist in her early youth; and there she was laid to rest, in the churchyard, beneath a profusion of flowers. Her body was tenderly borne by a godson, three nephews, and her two physicians.

"Her children arise and call her blessed." They are: Mrs. Healy Settle, of Colonial Beach, Mr. Julien Ridgely Ninde of Arlington, Va., and Miss Virginia Lewis Ninde of Washington. Also surviving her are four grandchildren; a sister, Mrs. Alice Ashton Fitzhugh, and a brother, Mr. Lewis Alexander Ashton, Sr., both of King George County, Virginia.

Father, in Thy gracious keeping
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping.

MARIA PENDLETON DUVAL

The news of the death of this distinguished lady on December 29, 1943, at the University of Virginia where she had made her home for the years of her retirement, will bring to a large circle of friends throughout the country a sense of loss, cherished memories and a fond regret.

As teacher, Assistant Principal and Principal, Miss Duval spent thirty-five years of her life at Stuart Hall (originally called the Virginia Female Institute), Staunton, Virginia. She succeeded her cousin, Mrs. J. E. B. Stuart, as Principal in 1889, and held that position until 1915, when she resigned, bought a handsome property at Charles Town, Jefferson County, West Virginia, and established a similar school there, St. Hilda's Hall. This school was promoted by the interest of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Diocese of West Virginia, and became a distinguished success. When Miss Duval retired and closed the school in 1933 it was felt to be a great loss to the Church and State.

A Virginian of the Virginians Miss Duval was descended from early colonial families among the founders of the State. Miss Duval was the daughter of the late Robert Randolph Duval of Richmond, and Sarah Dandridge Cooke of Winchester, and was born in 1852. She was the granddaughter of John Rogers Cooke, attorney, one of the makers of Richmond; and a niece of John Esten Cooke, author, with whom she made her home after the death of his wife. She was educated at Mr. Powell's School in Richmond. Her devotion to her Church and State was perhaps her outstanding characteristic. She lived on a high spiritual plane, with a great enthusiasm, a fine sense of humor and a ready wit. She felt keenly her responsibility for the young lives committed to her care, and was tenderly beloved by them.

She leaves two sisters, Miss Florence Beverly Duval, of Lexington, Virginia, and Miss Esten Duval, of Charlottesville, Va., and two brothers, Mr. St. John Duval, of Richmond, and Mr. Edmund Pendleton Randolph Duval, Professor of Mathematics at the University of Oklahoma. Mrs. Carter Harrison, a sister, died several years ago.

The Rev. Robert Gibson of Christ Church, held a brief service at Miss Duval's residence, Oakhurst Circle, and the Rev. Churchill Gibson assisted by the Rev.

Several of our nice church buildings have gone up in smoke within the past few months. Fortunately they had some insurance protection, but none had enough to pay the cost of rebuilding. How about your church? Is your insurance protection sufficient to replace a destroyed building? This is a very important question.

IN MEMORIAM

CARY VERDIER PENDLETON

January 27, 1904—May 19, 1943

The life of CARY VERDIER PENDLETON is a story of the triumph of the spirit over frustration and disappointment.

A frail body denied him many of the joys of childhood and youth, but the sweetness of his spirit and the loveliness of his character never varied.

With improved health and a genius for mechanics, he turned eagerly to aviation. By hard work and rigid economy he "won his wings," only to be overtaken by illness so severe that his solo flight was his last experience in the air. There ensued a long losing battle in which he bore himself with superb courage to the very end. The tools which had responded to his skill were laid aside; the hands which had safely guided a car from the summit of Pike's Peak to the city below in a blinding snowstorm and bitter cold must relinquish the wheel to others; and the feet that had climbed the mountains of North Carolina must find their place in the wheel chair.

Yet no word of complaint escaped his lips, and, except in moments of excruciating pain, he greeted all who visited him with cheery words and a sunny smile. For Cary Pendleton lived in a world of eternal realities, and that world was full of light. The birds were his friends; the stars were his companions in the long wakeful hours of the night; all people were his Father's children and were entitled to sympathetic interest and kind and generous consideration, which easily ripened into genuine affection.

His room became a source of light and helpfulness. By innumerable little kindnesses and increasing thoughtfulness of others he fulfilled a ministry of far-reaching influence and brightened the pathway of many across whose lives had fallen the shadow of sorrow and loss.

Not as a stranger Cary Pendleton walked with Christ every day, and, when the gates of Heaven opened to receive, he entered as one who had come Home. "Wearing the white flower of a blameless life," he passed into the Light to hear the great "Well done," and to take his place, clothed in white, among those "once with suffering tried but now with glory crowned."

His going creates a deep loneliness in the hearts of those who love him, but his brave, pure spirit is a perpetual challenge and a continuing inspiration.

"Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

The Seminaries of the Church Need Your Support

St. Paul says, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach, except they be sent?

The task of the seminaries of the Church is to help the right men to respond to this challenge.

The Presiding Bishop has appointed January twenty-third as Theological Education Sunday, asking the clergy to put before their people the needs of the seminaries of the Church where men are prepared for the ministry.

A REFRESHING BOOK

Mr. Editor:

May I call to attention, and especially to the attention of the clergy, a little book entitled, "The High Church Tradition" by the Reverend G. W. O. Addleshaw, Vice Principal of St. Chad's College, Durham.

This book is of special interest at this time when the most vital need of the Episcopal Church, and of the whole Anglican Communion, is a strenghtening of the spirit of unity in our own life as a Church by the deepening of belief in the plain teachings of our Prayer Book as to the reality and meaning of the Holy Catholic Church of Christ.

In his book of less than 200 pages, Vice Principal Addleshaw brings into view the spiritual vision and power of those great Seventeenth Century Divines, Hooker, Andrews, and the others, whose writings are studied far too little among us, and in doing this he brings into view the marvellous spiritual riches given to us in the Prayer Book, of which some of us today seem to have small realization. One of the many moving quotations is from that truly believing and noble evangelical, Charles Simeon, who declared that "the finest sight short of heaven would be a whole congregation using the prayers of the Liturgy in the true spirit of them".

This book reminds us that in our Prayer Book we have that Divinely Inspired Worship of the Holy Catholic Church which meets the true spiritual need of our age and of every age. It reminds us that if we are truly to appreciate and use the Prayer Book we must realize that it is not a mere collection of services but a Liturgy in the deep spiritual and practical meaning of that word, a Liturgy which those great Anglican Theologians understood and which they held to be "incomparable" not merely, or primarily, because of the majesty and beauty of its language but because of the Divinely-given spiritual and practical truth which it enshrines and expresses for us.

This is a truly refreshing book. It is scholarly, true to history, liberal in the true meaning of that much abused word, and loyal to the Faith of Christ "as this Church hath received the same". And it shows the vital relation which the Prayer Book holds to that present-day movement of the Spirit known as the Liturgical Movement.

William T. Manning,
Bishop of New York.

THEOLOGICAL SUNDAY

January 23, 1944

At the request of the Joint Commission on Theological Education, I have designated the third Sunday after Epiphany, January 23rd, as Theological Education Sunday, 1944.

The Joint Commission on Theological Education for several years past, has selected a Sunday on which they request that offerings be made for the work of Theological Seminaries. I commend this offering very earnestly to the attention of our clergy.

My understanding is that an offering taken in a particular parish can be designated for the Seminary in which it is particularly interested. The fees paid by students are never sufficient to cover the cost of higher education. Not only is the income derived from endowments inadequate to make up the discrepancy, but if Seminaries are to be kept in touch with the needs of our time, it does seem to me important that the living members of the Church should feel a deep responsibility for the training of men for the ministry.

I hope that the response to the appeal of the Joint Commission on Theological Education will be widespread and generous.

H. ST. GEORGE TUCKER,
Presiding Bishop.

Note—(A) The General Seminary had a Parish Offering prior to the National Theological Offering. They report here the total amount received for 1943.

Note—(B) Of this amount $834.16 from 42 churches was received directly from the National Theological Sunday Offering. The balance accrues from Sewanee's Annual Offering from approximately 302 churches carried on prior to the National Theological Offering which was authorized by General Convention in 1940.

SERIOUS SITUATION, BUT NO WORK CLOSED

Sioux Falls, S. D.—A serious situation as regards missionary clergy in South Dakota is reported by Bishop W. Blair Roberts. "Nine of our clergy—eight of them from the white field,—have enlisted in the Army," says the Bishop. "These, together with three removals from the District, leave us with but ten clergy in the white field to care for 52 parishes and missions. We have but two missionary clergy left in that field. All are doing extra work helping supply vacant posts, and missionaries in the Indian field are assisting in addition to their own large fields. We are using two retired priests, thanks to special permission from the Church Pension Fund. As a result we have not been forced to close any existing work."

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

IN THE HOMES where the cold bug and the flu bug dwell, some of them veritable pest houses, where the persistent condition of infection defies all attempts to eradicate it, where fever and coughs, sneezing and congestion, blowing and gargling, cough drops and nose drops make devastating demands upon each member of the family in turn or all members in chorus; where sickness is an endless chain of days and weeks and months—in such homes, where there are not enough hands to do the work (and not enough kleenex to wipe the noses), morale is quite likely at a low ebb. To those who dwell therein, with energy depleted and with the business of living almost more than they can manage, this period of winter in a wartime year seems like a long journey in the dark. To those so journeying I bring a message. First, I shall tell of the bond between us and practically every family in the land. We are all living in pest houses, and few there be who have escaped or will escape. That is comforting and keeps the bug of loneliness and isolation away at least, and in some measure lessens self-pity. Second, I want to urge patience. Fretfulness under duress leads to nerves on edge, and irritations come fast and easily. When one feels badly it becomes increasingly difficult to be patient. We do not expect it of a child, but every grown up must have it if the home life is to be spared disruption and misery. Third, I would remind that each day taken by itself is bearable and possible to live through, provided the essential tasks are done without brooding over them and without becoming martyrs because stuck with them—remember your turn will come and the wait upon will become the waited upon. Fourth, obey the doctor or if there is no doctor, and few there be for the terrible demands, be sensible and do what the doctor would prescribe, rest and good judgment. Whatever condition exists it will not last forever, regardless of one's feeling to the contrary.

TO THOSE who live in pest houses and who are inhabited by pests comes the chance to practice what they've preached to others and an opportunity to test the Christian meaning of love. Paul said it because Jesus taught it: "Love beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things."

Henry Drummond comments on this section of Paul's love song in part as follows:

"Do not quarrel, therefore, with your lot in life. Do not complain of its never-ceasing cares, its petty environment, the vexations you have to stand, the small and sordid souls you have to live and work with. Above all, do not resent temptation; do not be perplexed because it seems to thicken around you more and more, and ceases neither for effort nor for agony nor prayer. That is your practice. That is the practice which God appoints you; and it is having its work in making you patient, and humble, and generous, and unselfish, and kind, and courteous. Do not grudge the hand that is moulding the still too shapeless image within you. It is growing more beautiful, though you see it not, and every touch of temptation may add to its perfection. Therefore, keep in the midst of life. Do not isolate yourself. Be among men, and among things, and among troubles and obstacles."

When the daily perspective of a God-high view of things is found we can keep our sense of sanity and proportion and humor even though mother has a cough and sore throat, daddy has a cough and sore throat, son has a cough and sore throat, baby has stopped up nose and is sneezing, the children's nurse has a sore throat and a cough, and even the dog is threatened with distemper. Also from this effective perspective we shall be enabled to handle or distribute most of our responsibilities.

THE CONVERSION OF SAINT PAUL
(January 25.)
THE COLLECT

O God, who, through the preaching of the blessed Apostle Saint Paul, hast caused the light of the Gospel to shine throughout the world; Grant, we beseech Thee, that we, having his wonderful conversion in remembrance, may show forth our thankfulness unto Thee for the same, by following the holy doctrine which he taught; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Conversion of St. Paul

By EZRA FLOYD FERRIS

IT WOULD REQUIRE volumes to deal adequately with the life, letters, and work of the Apostle to the Gentiles. Space allowed here necessarily confines us to the matter of his conversion, and requires that even this simple subject be dealt with briefly. The historic facts of his conversion testify to the tremendous power of life which was his as his life, letters, and work witness to the eternal reality Paul found in the person of the Christ.

We are not here concerned with the difference in detail which appears in the accounts of Paul's miraculous conversion, nor yet with the miracle itself. Some manifestation of power from some source would seem to have been necessary, and it would also seem that the only power adequate to accomplish the sudden and complete conversion of such a zealot would be that of Christ Himself. In very truth, this "miraculous" event is as natural, in the same sense, and indeed by the same Power, as were the Virgin Birth and the Resurrection. Alfred Edersheim could "search the Scriptures daily" and become convinced by calm and careful investigation that "Jesus is the Christ". A different power was necessary in the case of Saul of Tarsus. If I understand the Jews at all, the conversion of any one of them is a miracle. Certainly then something happened, along that road leading to Damascus. The persecutor of The Church becomes, very suddenly, the outstanding preacher of the Gospel. He who made others suffer for their faith becomes of a sudden the chief sufferer. He who would have destroyed that faith becomes its outstanding proponent. He who had pride in race and ancestry, who was "an Hebrew of the Hebrews" and a Pharisee of the Pharisees (of the very strictest sect) and could boast of his righteousness under the Law, became suddenly a man of humility, so that he was moved to describe himself as "the least of the Apostles". The mark of Gamaliel's learning and fame was upon him, and he gloried in that fact, but suddenly he sat at the feet of the lowly Nazarene and unlearned all the great Gamaliel had taught him. Yea, more—this learned proud Jew becomes the Apostle to the Gentiles. If any miracles be realities, the conversion of Saul—proud name among the Hebrews—to Paul, "the Little One", or the insignificant or humble one, deserves to rank among the chief miracles. This conversion brings home to us, and with power, the eternal truth that God does at times use strong measures to work His will for man.

IT FOLLOWS THAT Paul himself, apart from, and in addition to, his spoken and written testimony, his letters, his life, and his work—Paul himself strengthens the conviction of the thoughtful student that Jesus of Nazareth is The Eternal Son of The Eternal. We observe, for example, that this same Paul is a living power the world over, nearly two thousand years after his death—for the sole reason that he preached the Gospel of the crucified and risen Christ. And great as is that power, it expands continuously into the slums of our great cities, into the homes of isolated farmers and mountaineers; and in remote parts of the earth converts headhunters and cannibals into stretcher bearers for wounded or dying aliens. Caesar is today little more than a name—a name unknown to multitudes. Jesus is a name better known than even that of Paul, in part because Paul preached in that Name—and won lasting fame and power by so doing, though he sought it not.

NOT THE LEAST among the miraculous in the life of this man who was himself a "miracle" is this, that he is the author of the thirteenth of First Corinthians. It is nearly two millenniums since that "essay" on charity was written. It has been treasured by men of all races and climes through all the centuries since. Its brevity, comprehensiveness, grace of diction, and evident sincerity make it so nearly perfect that no man since Paul has undertaken to improve upon it. Its influence for good cannot be measured. As literature it is unsurpassed. As a philosophy of life it manifestly derives from heaven. It breathes the spirit of The Beatitudes, even of Christ Himself.

What manner of man wrote it? A Jew, learned in the law that taught the doctrine "an eye for an eye"; a zealot, who devoted himself to that righteousness which is of that law; a man who loved only his family and his friends; who saw his race superior to all others, the very chosen and the favorites of The Almighty; one whose hatred for and contempt of "The Nations" was superb; who believed that not only could no good come out of Nazareth, but that no good could come from any people save Israel in general and from the Pharisees in particular, of whom he himself was one of the most strict. That Saul could become Paul and write that chapter on LOVE is a miracle among miracles, indeed. Yes, something of stupendous import happened on the road to Damascus—perhaps on January 25th, A. D. 38.

We leave the critics of the Gospel to explain it away.

THE BOOK OF REVELATION

And He is the opener and interpreter of the Scriptures. And not only of the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, but of everything that God has written for man's understanding upon the face of the natural world. All of man's life and work and destiny is transformed and glorified and enriched with new meaning because of Him. And because of Him, all that is opposed to God is marked with the sign of its rebellion against the Best in life.

And He is the Champion,—the Leader,—in the following of Whom there is Victory. There is no victory for Righteousness, and there can be no peace which will last, except through Him.

Remember these things. Let us,—in simpler fashion, in a more direct way, perhaps, than in the Book of Revelation, but in equal earnestness and in equal zeal,—catch our vision of Him, the Risen Lord Jesus, as Judge of what we do, as Interpreter of our life, as Leader towards a better world to come!

"Understanding the Book of Revelation"

Seeing the Risen Jesus

By WILLIAM R. MOODY

THIS IS THE SECOND in a series of addresses on the Book of Revelation. Last week I opened up the subject, and listed five permanent values in the book, which—it seems to me—gave it its power when it first appeared in the persecuted Christian community in the time of the Emperor Domitian, and which give it worth and meaning in the world of today.

I said that the Book sets forth in vivid fashion a sense of the reality, and of the Presence, and of the present power of God; and that it shows an unwavering faith in Jesus; and that it exhibits an understanding of the reality and the power of sin; and a firm belief in the ultimate destruction of evil and the victory of God; and that it gives us a clear vision of a redeemed humanity. Today we give our consideration to the second of these three permanent values which I see in this book.

The Book of Revelation is the book of Christianity in conflict, the voice of the "Christian-underground" in a time of great persecution; it is a shout of defiance from the catacombs. When we have understood that, we are in a position to understand the book's limitations and its strength. For the Book of Revelation is a limited book, and it is a strong book. The fulness of the Gospel is not in it. If all the rest of the Christian Scriptures should be destroyed, and this book alone should remain, you could not reconstruct the heart of the Christian ethic out of it, as you certainly could do out of any one of the four Gospels, or out of the Book of the Acts, or out of most of the letters which are included in the New Testament. All the humanness and the depth of tenderness and compassion which plays such a large part in the Gospel story is lacking in this book. The humanness of Jesus, which makes Him the most attractive figure in the history of our race and which gives us the right to call Him "our Elder Brother", has no place here. And, beyond that, great areas of intellectual penetration into the character of God and the nature of man, which are of the essence of Christianity, do not appear here at all. The Book of Revelation, which is emotionally rich, is intellectually limited. I believe that this limitation comes, not from a lack of understanding on the part of the writer, but from the limited character of his deliberately chosen subject-matter. It is a limitation just the same, and therefore the Book of Revelation, like the Old Testament to which in so many ways it is kin, must be interpreted in the light which comes from the whole Gospel.

YOU CAN UNDERSTAND these limitations only when you understand what the Book of Revelation really is—a battle cry out of the midst of a great struggle. A battle-cry is limited by its situation, its necessity, and its purpose. But its very limitations add to its strength in the thing which it is intended to do. The Book of Revelation is a limited book, but it is also a strong book, because into those restricted points which the author has chosen it delivers its full strength and all of its power.

What is its purpose? Well, here is the weak and scattered Christian community, unable to defend itself and its loved ones with the sword and shield, unarmed save by the Gospel, living in the midst of a pagan community, from which many of its members have but recently been converted, under terrible pressure in the commercial world in which business was almost impossible except on a pagan basis, and in daily danger of arrest and trial and death for Christian belief,—what would you say that these Christians needed most in their daily living? They needed encouragement, and that is what the writer of this book gave them!

He said, "You, Christians! You think that you are weak and defenseless and alone; but I will show you that you are not alone! I will show you the vision of the great and deathless Leader, that peerless Warrior, Jesus, who stands at your side to defend you, and who cannot be finally defeated! I will show you how He fought, and how He won the battle, not only for Himself but for you, too! He, the Risen and the Living Lord, will give you strength and Victory!"

THAT IS THE REASON why, whenever skies are dark for Christians, and the going rough, the power of this book begins to shine again in the Christian community. This book was written for the poor, and the persecuted, and for those who are afraid of the rising power of evil in the world about them. It is to them that this book speaks most clearly,—to the poor man trying to live a Christian life in the squalor and the penury and the degradation of the slums; to the soldier who out of the wet and the muck and the blood and the tension of battle looks up to the great and peerless Leader of Righteousness,—his Leader,—Who is with him, and Who can never be finally defeated; for the man, the woman, oppressed by the wickedness of this world, and the desperate power of Satan, and who can see no way out except by Divine intervention;—to all these, and to many others like them, in the stress of great conflict and struggle, the message of this book comes with the impact of a thunder-bolt. God is still in His Heaven! Christ, the Risen and Eternal and Victorious Lord, stands ready at the head of the army of His saints! Justice will triumph, and tyranny will be thrown down, and humanity will be redeemed! And the time for this is at hand!

Thus speaks John to the Churches,—"Grace be unto you, and peace, from Him who is, and who was, and who is coming again; from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness",—and the word, in the Greek, is "martyr", which already had come to mean "he who bears witness to the Faith by the shedding of his blood",—"the faithful witness-through-death",—and the contrast is immediately drawn, by that word, with the clause which follows it, "raised from the dead by the power of God";—"Jesus Christ, who is the faithful martyr and the first-begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth: unto Him that hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God His Father; to Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever! Behold, He cometh with the clouds; and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced Him; and all the kindreds of the earth,—that is, of the pagan earth,—shall wail because of Him!"

THUS THE STAGE is set for the whole argument of the book, and thus the Champion of Righteousness is brought forth in radiant and superhuman strength. One after another the superlatives follow one another, as in a torrent of strength and triumph and power. "I am 'A' and I am 'Z'; the first letter in the human alphabet and the last; the beginning of all things, and the ending of them, saith the Lord, who is, and who was, and who is coming again, the Almighty!"

This mighty Champion of Righteousness appears and is described three times in the book. Of course He appears several other times, and His Presence is felt throughout the whole book, but in only three places is He described in detail. Each of these marks a turning point in the book. The first of these descriptions is in Chapter One; and the second is in Chapter Five; and the last is in Chapter Nineteen. In each of these places He is described differently, the description being a symbol of the tone and purpose of the section which is to follow. The description in Chapter Nineteen is, as we shall show later, the climax of the whole book, and is foreshadowed in all the previous sections. These descriptions are not meant to be taken literally. They are symbols only. They are what the modern artist would call "non-representational". And if you do not believe that, then get a brush and a canvass and try to paint a picture of these scenes exactly as they are described! It cannot be done. I know, because I have tried it. The descriptions in the Book of Revelation are not pictures,—they are symbols. And if they should be put on canvass exactly as they are given to us in the book you would not like them,—if you are like most of us,—any more than you like the distorted dream-sequences painted by some of our more outlandish modern artists.

So, let us pass over the strange and weird imagery and color of these descriptions, and seek for the inner meaning. Here, for the poor, the disinherited, is brought forth in vivid symbolism, the strong, the Risen and Triumphant Jesus!

AND, IN THE FIRST picture, He is the Lord and Judge of the Churches. And remember, the number of the Churches is Seven, and seven means "all the diverse elements of a situation drawn together into unity"; therefore this number symbolizes all the Churches of Christ, everywhere, in all the ages. The first duty of the Triumphant Jesus is to cleanse and to strengthen those Churches! The Gospel cannot be strong and victorious if the Churches are spiritually poor and weak and wretched. To warn, to rebuke, to encourage, to reward,—this is the first duty of the Risen Jesus!

But the second vision of the Risen Saviour,—in Chapter Five,—is different. Here He does not even appear in human form, but as "a Lamb as it had been slain". God, the Almighty Father, who is not described at all, is seated upon His glorious throne, and holds in His right hand a scroll,—an ancient book,—sealed with seven seals. These seals are not all on the outside, but come at stated places in the roll of manuscript, so that the opening of each seal allows only a portion of the book to be read. And none can be found able to open those seals and to read the book save only the Lamb that had been slain.

Here is the interpretation. The ancient scroll is the Bible, the Holy Scriptures. The number Seven, appearing here in the number of the seals, indicates completeness,—all the Scriptures, completely sealed, and only to be opened,—that is, understood,—through the sacrifice of the death of Christ for us.

Now this is perfectly Christian, and perfectly true. The Holy Scriptures,—especially those of the Old Testament, which are emphasized here by the ancient character of the scroll,—are a closed book except to those who approach them through the Lord Jesus. He has, indeed, opened for us the Scriptures; and He alone may do so.

And because of the emphasis upon the completeness of the revelation, we are justified in going beyond the Old Testament, and, indeed, beyond the Bible itself! We are justified in saying that He opens for us new meaning in everything that God has written upon the whole face of the natural world! These, too, are His Scriptures!

And, as the Scriptures are opened in their true meaning, to the understanding of mankind through the mediation of the Lamb which was slain, that very opening up of the truth spells the destruction of the pagan world-system, and of apostate Judaism,—the apostate Church,—with all its attendant hypocrisy, and all its greedy cruelty and immorality. And, by the same token, it means the growing strength and triumph and bliss of the Redeemed,—the True Israel of God,—the true Church of Jesus Christ.

THE LAST PICTURE of the Redeemer,—in Chapter Nineteen,—is the true climax of the whole Book of Revelation. Here we have the Leader of the Hosts of God, the Champion of Righteousness, who brings in the final victory. This picture comes after the description of the rage and power of Satan, and of the beasts, which surround him; and it sets the stage for the final battle in which the forces of evil are forever crushed, preparing the way for the descent of the Holy City from God out of Heaven, and for the triumph of the Redeemed.

The picture is painted with a strong brush. We see the earth in the power of the Beast. Everything is confusion, and bitterness, and blood-shed, and cruelty and woe, and getting worse,—evil feeding upon evil, and growing in wicked power; then, suddenly, the heavens are ripped open like a curtain torn asunder, and there, upon a gigantic white horse, His garments dipped in blood, His eyes like fire, and His weapon poised, is the Leader of Righteousness, the Lord of Lords and King of Kings! And there, behind Him, in gleaming white, rank upon rank, and file upon file, and legion upon legion, the armies and the hosts of Light, poised for the final conflict, ready for Armageddon!

The Book of Revelation is much more easily understood emotionally than intellectually. The tremendous pitch and climax of emotional tension which is built up for the believing reader at this point of pitched battle for the defeat of evil, and for the ushering in of the final redemption, is so tremendous that all considerations of reason and of logic tend to be swept away. I say "tend to be swept away", not actually! We shall speak more of this later. But on the surface emotion reigns supreme. And that, I think, is exactly what the writer intended. Indeed, it is exactly what he, himself, had experienced in the grip of the vision which he now describes to us.

But I have set for myself a more prosaic task. I am trying to find, and to bring forth for you, the core of reason and reasonableness in this book, quite apart from its emotional power. So I call you back to those three cardinal points which are basic to these visions of the Risen Jesus.

He is the Lord and the Judge of the Churches,—your church, if you will,—your parish!

"Gung Ho!

We imagine that most of our readers are now familiar with the very expressive Chinese slogan—"Gung Ho." It means "work together." It symbolizes the spirit that brought into being the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives. Under the duress of having their country invaded, far-visioned leaders in China inspired their compatriots to work together; not alone for the repelling of the enemy, but for the building of a New China. When peace comes and the true story of this great people's noble effort is told in full, the world will learn what it means to work together.

We have all been upset by certain things that have taken place within the last few weeks on the diplomatic front. In the first place we are an impatient people. We like to think that we can jump over unpleasant hurdles and reach success in an easy way. It is a national tendency. We have been brought up on stories of quick success. It is in our blood. Therefore we were lifted to a high plane of elation by the reported success of the Moscow, Cairo, and Teheran Conferences. The truth is that we have been given very few details of the plans made at these conferences. But the public assumed that they had ironed out all differences and the four great powers would from thenceforth work together in perfect harmony.

Now we are disturbed because of the Russo-Polish border dispute; the (we believe enemy inspired) English German peace overtures, and the disaffection of the de Gaullists. "Gung Ho" for the Allies has been by-passed, if you listen to the wailing of the pessimists.

If we are realists we recognize that we have not reached the zenith of our willingness and our power to cooperate as nations, even as Allies engaged in a global war. Surely as Christians we are aware of the imperfections resident in human judgments. But also as Christians we know that every step toward closer cooperation is a step in the right direction. "Gung Ho" has not reached its full strength, but it has not been defeated by some temporary setbacks.

These present difficulties are but an indication of the larger problems that will face us when "cease firing" is sounded. The war will be won with great difficulty, but the winning of the peace will take even greater strength, for it will take moral strength and courage.

It is at that point that the Christian Church can make its unique and valuable contribution. For there is no agency in the world that can teach people to work together as well as the Christian Church, when it is functioning according to the principles laid down by its Founder. In that task each of us, who claims membership in the Christian Church, has a part to play. It is best illustrated by a remark made to Leland Stowe by a wounded guerilla fighter, who had been told he could not go back into action. But he replied—"No one can fight for me." So no one can work for us in our place in the ranks of the Christian army. We work together to teach the nations of the world how they may work together for the building of a new world based on Christian love. Gung Ho!

Theological Education

By action of General Convention the Presiding Bishop was authorized to set aside a certain Sunday to be known as Theological Education Sunday. Bishop Tucker has designated this coming Sunday, January 23, as that day. It is hoped that an offering will be taken in every parish and mission of the Church for this very worthy cause.

There are twelve seminaries recognized by the Church. No one of them has an adequate endowment. The fees charged the students are in no sense sufficient to meet all the expenses and obligations. Last year through this method of special appeal $48,179.30 was contributed by 1,622 Churches. There are approximately 7,000 churches and missions in the Episcopal Church. This means that only 23 per cent of them took an offering in 1943, and that the average offering from the 1,622 churches was $29.70. We should do much better than that in 1944.

You may in your Parish designate the seminary to which you wish your offering to be sent. The Seminaries, like all institutions of learning, are facing unusual problems, due to the war. If the Church is to be strong it must have strong leaders. Strong leaders come, as a rule, from strong institutions. Give to your Seminaries that they may have the means to strengthen the work they are doing to properly equip men for the ministry.

Reading on Top—Helps

We quote the following story from an article by Mr. Ralph W. Bayless in the Bible Society Record for January, 1944.

"One day there stood in the Depository salesroom a young colored man in Navy uniform. He was six feet tall. In his hand he held a New Testament. My interest became centered upon his good looks and immaculate dress, with its trimming matching the whites of his eyes and his pearly teeth, that I ventured to ask in what department he served. His reply was, "See this? (describing his special insignia); that's the sign that I am a cook on a submarine." I never liked the idea of going too far down under the water; so I changed back to the New Testament, and asked, "Do you ever read the Testament?" To which he replied,

"I do not only read it, but I study it carefully every day when I am up on top; but, man, when me goes down, then I gets plenty of time to think about what I's been reading up on top."

There is homely wisdom and unconscious spiritual insight in this story. People forget God's mercy and lovingkindness, when they are riding the crest of the wave of human good fortune. When the crest breaks and the trough is deep, not having sensed God's presence on the crest, it is very difficult to find Him in the trough. We need God in our hours of prosperity and we surely need Him in our days of adversity. We cannot find Him quickly in those evil days, unless we have sought His companionship through all the days—good and bad.

The reading on top becomes our guide and stay when we are on the bottom.

"I Am Upheld"

SELDOM a day passes but I am asked to send a Message to Toc H at home or abroad; and I am a very poor hand at framing messages. But five and twenty years have not obliterated the memory of a message I received upon the threshold of old Talbot House. Almost before my eyes, I still retain the figure of a Guardsman, Fred Hinks, a Portsea Club boy, who became Sergeant in the Grenadiers, a man equipped with a rare confidence in Christ. I should put his age down at about twenty-two. I knew him well. These were his final words to me as he went out into the stormy streets of Poperinghe, leaving the Old House finally, as it proved.

The Guards were due to open the attack on Passchendaele, and both of us realised that it would be costly. Sergeant Fred Hinks simply said to me: "Good-night. Don't mind, whatever happens. It's all right. I am upheld."

Those were his parting words. They may, of course, be easily explained as an illusion or a false prophecy, for he became part of that great cost; but I do not believe that he intended to comfort me with any certainty of supernatural safety. He was ready either for life or death. The instinct in him was that time well-spent within the Upper Room had robbed him of his fears and hesitations. He was upheld in a far deeper sense. He knew whatever happened to his body, nothing could overcome his life in Christ.

I AM UPHELD." Here, indeed, is a message bestowed on me by one upstanding man, leaving the warmth and welcome of the House to re-emerge into the night of war. God grant today that many men may say beneath their breath: "The future for me now contains nothing that I cannot bear. I am upheld. My own prayers and those of others are not in vain. The work indeed goes forward, though I may not myself behold fulfilled results. Our hopes and plans entail a sacrifice, which, even if it falls with its full weight upon my shoulders, I will not reject. I will endure the Cross for other men, if I am chosen to sustain its weight. God give me the quiet strength which solely can enable me to say "I am upheld," whatever comes to pass. Nothing shall shake that primal fact in me. Wherever duty takes me, I am upheld by Him in Whom I trust."

BOOK NOTES

By the Faculty of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific. Edited by Randolph Crump Miller.

A PRAYER BOOK MANUAL, edited by Henry M. B. Ogilby and Paul T. Shultz. Cloister Press. $1.00.

This is a refreshing book. It does not confuse beauty and ornateness. It does not imagine that dignity and reverence are achieved by forgetting simplicity. It recognizes that the chief marks of the Prayer Book are precisely dignity and simplicity. In them lies the secret of its beauty and the spirit of reverence which breathes from its pages.

The book does two things. It explains the meaning of the services and is a guide to the appropriate ceremonial.

In the former field, the exposition of the various services brings out admirably their meaning, reveals the spiritual movement in their order and should be most helpful to worshipers in the pews. In the second field the suggestions for the conduct of services are well balanced in accord with the best tradition, but thoroughly alive to the modern situation and aware that forms of worship are ever changing. Forms cahnge, but the underlying principles do not. With simplicity and dignity no "rite" achieves the beauty and reverence which we owe in the worship of God.

Of the many admirable features in the book, one may note the careful and convincing discussion of the importance of Morning Prayer and the reason for its sharing with Holy Communion the place of chief service on Sunday morning. The lucid and helpful statement of the meaning of the Eucharist and the sensible suggestions for the conduct of the Occasional Offices demand attention. In the discussion of the Burial Office there are some wise remarks about the use of the Prayer Book prayers. Indeed, what is there said suggests a further thought. The Prayer Book is an admirable aid to private devotion. The flood of small manuals has somewhat obscured this fact and our people need to be helped to know the Prayer Book better than they do.

This brief review may close by repeating that this is a refreshing book and to be commended to clergy and laity alike.

Retired Bishop of California.

THE CHURCH AND PSYCHOTHERAPY. By Karl Ruf Stolz. Abingdon-Cokesbury. $2.50.

Dr. Stolz has written many books in the field of pastoral psychology, and all of them have been helpful. This last one, published after his death, follows familiar lines, drawing its fundamental principles from the Bible and not making direct use of modern psychological theories. He prefers to show how the Church "anticipated psychiatry." After setting up these principles, the author turns to medical psychology and the work of the Church in all its functions, including pastoral counseling, preaching, worship, and education. There is an interesting chapter on the vocational neuroses of ministers, followed by one on the values of the "higher" ecumenicity. A helpful glossary of technical terms and a bibliography are appended.

EVERY DAY A PRAYER. By Marguerite Harmon Bro. Willett, Clark. $1.50.

Drawing upon the insights of all the great religions, Mrs. Bro has written an unconventional and extremely helpful little book of devotions. It is not just a compilation of quotations, and some of the best thoughts are those of the author. There are also many grand illustrations for the preacher's homiletical notebook.

PEACE beyond all telling
O Joy that knows no bound!
E'en here and now,
E'en there and then,
The link that binds high Heaven to men
In God's great Love is found.
And the angel song is swelling
As each New Year rolls 'round.

JANUARY NIGHT

On a cold and cloudless night
January stars are bright;
Glimmering above the Bear
Cassiopeia sets her chair.
On his journey in the west
Pegasus sinks down to rest,
And across the other side
See the bold Orion stride;
And Auriga, hands outspread,
Gleaming feet and gleaming head.
Taurus and Capella glow
While the Pole Star burns below.

ACCOUNT BOOKS

"Must I keep this stuffy old account book up to date, Mother? It's such a bother!"

My twelve-year-old niece, Freda, stood in the kitchen doorway, holding a small notebook at arm's length. I was spending a week at the home of my sister Doris, in the country. She and I were preparing sweet corn for drying.

Doris looked up at her daughter with a smile. Busy as she was that morning, she took time to talk to the little girl about her problem.

"Keeping account books does take time, Freda," she agreed, "but it is the best way to keep from spending too much money and going into debt. Did you ever hear your Daddy say, ' I don't know where all my money has gone'?"

"No, Mother, but I've heard him say that we couldn't afford things," Freda replied.

"That is because he keeps a record in his account book of all the money he takes in and all that he pays out. He knows just how much money we have spent and how much we have left. It is a sad thing to come to the end of one's money and not know where it has gone. Do you remember how sorry we all were last winter when our nice neighbor, Mrs. Brewster, moved away?"

"Yes, Mother. Did Mrs. Brewster move away because her money was all gone?"

"That's exactly the reason she had to give up her own home, Freda," Doris continued. "When her husband died, she was left with quite a large sum of money—enough to supply all her needs for the rest of her life if she spent it wisely. She didn't keep an account book, and she didn't realize how much she was spending until all at once she woke up to the fact that her money was almost gone. She didn't have enough left to meet the expense of living in a house of her own, so she had to go to live in a home for old ladies. She writes me that her new home is pleasant and comfortable, but she misses her old friends and neighbors, and wishes she could have gone on living here."

"Do you think Mrs. Brewster could have stayed here if she had kept an account book, Mother?" Freda asked soberly.

"Yes, Freda, I am sure of that. Mrs. Brewster said that was why she had to move. After her money had been spent, and there was no way to get it back, she told me all about it. That is one reason why your Daddy and I have had all of you children keep account books. We don't want you ever to make such a mistake as Mrs. Brewster made. We want you to have a record of what you have done with the money we have given you for an allowance and any money that you earn."

"Does Daddy's account book tell him when we can't afford things, Mother?" Freda inquired.

"Yes, Daughter, he finds out from the account book how much we have been spending for food, clothes, schoolbooks, light, water and heat—even how much we have spent for fun and good times, and he can tell about how much we shall need to spend in the future. Often he finds out that we can afford things—like our new refrigerator this summer."

"I am glad Daddy could buy the new refrigerator," Freda replied. "It keeps watermelons so nice and cold and freezes such good ice cream!"

"I'd like to have some ice cream for Aunt Lucia today," Doris suggested. "How would you like to make it, Freda? It will be ready by evening if you fix it now."

"Oh, Mother, I'd like to do that!" Freda exclaimed. "I'll make the kind we had for Daddy's birthday. Then I'm going to work on my account book. I want to keep it up to date, just like Daddy's!"—Lucia Mallory in National Kindergarten Association. Release.

MOUSE WHO TRAPS HIMSELF

Did you ever read the story of the fat Eskimo who crawled into an igloo for a feast and then ate so much he couldn't get back out of the passageway?

There are some mice in the West Indies who do much the same thing. They just love cocoanuts. So a mouse nibbles a hole in the cocoanut of his choice, squeezes inside, and eats and eats and eats. The cocoanut and the milk make him fat. When he tries to get out, the hole proves too small. So he lies down and goes to sleep, and then, when he wakes up, and could easily get out, the cocoanut proves to be too much of a temptation. He satisfies his hunger with more cocoanut.

Perhaps he isn't bright enough to think of making the hole larger. Or perhaps he is too lazy. Or it may be that he finds the cocoanut prison just too much of a heavenly place to leave.

Anyway, in that cocoanut he stays until some native comes along and picks the queer trap from the tree, and finds he has caught himself a mouse.—Irene U. Hartwell.

FAITH AND WORKS

An old Scotchman operated a small rowboat for transporting passengers across one of the little lakes in Scotland. One day a passenger noticed that he had carved on one oar the word "Faith" and on the other oar the word "Works". Curiosity led him to ask the meaning of this.

The old man, being a well-balanced Christian and glad of the opportunity for testimony, said, "I will show you". So saying, he dropped one oar and plied the other called "Works", and they just went round in circles. Then he dropped that oar and began to ply the one called "Faith", and the little boat just went round in circles again—this time the other way round.

After this demonstration, the old man picked up both "Faith" and "Works", and plying both oars together sped swiftly over the water, explaining to his inquiring passenger, "You see, that is the way it is in the Christian life. 'Dead works' without faith are useless, and 'faith without works' is dead also, getting you nowhere. But faith and works pulling together make for safety, progress and blessing."—Gleanings.

Laymen Determined To Work

Men Seized Opportunity When Convinced That They Could Further Work of Church

Syracuse, N. Y.—The Diocese of Central New York is on the threshold of being one of the best organized dioceses for laymen's work in the whole Church, according to a statement just released by the Rev. Wilburn C. Campbell, executive director of the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work. The initiative for the Central New York effort is being supplied by the Laymen's Club of the Fourth District. Fourteen churches in the Syracuse area are in this district. The Laymen's Club began six years ago, when it was organized along similar lines to the "Community Plan" of the Presiding Bishop's Committee as worked out in New Jersey. There is no constitution and no dues are paid. The program has included an annual Corporate Communion on Low Sunday, a family party beginning with Evening Prayer and Sermon, then buffet supper, speaker and entertainment. They have built a parish hall for the Indian mission, established a thriving mission in Liverpool and publicized the churches in the area by means of maps and pictures. The steering committee composed of two or more key men from the 16 parishes in the area meets once a month for lunch at the Chamber of Commerce Building. Special meetings are called when needed.

Mr. Campbell reports further that the enthusiasm of these keymen for their program has led them to organize other areas of the diocese. They detailed various men to visit Watertown, Utica, Elmira, and Binghamton for the purpose of enlisting a chairman or leader who would invite leading laymen from every parish in the area to a meeting.

Mr. Campbell attended the Laymen's Club meeting in Syracuse early in January. This was a dinner meeting with Bishop Malcolm E. Peabody as guest. After the dinner a larger meeting was held in St. Paul's Church. Next day, Mr. Harold Poole, one of the former presidents of the Laymen's Club, went with Mr. Campbell to Watertown to attend a luncheon meeting for interested laymen. These men elected Judge Clarence Giles to be their president and decided to work along lines similar to those of the Fourth District group. Mr. Donald Patrick, another former president, and Mr. Wellman Daniels, secretary-treasurer, met Mr. Campbell that evening at Utica, where Mr. Walter P. Muller was host at a dinner meeting for leading laymen of that district. At this meeting Mr. Muller was elected temporary president and a decision was reached to organize the district around the Utica area.

Later the same day, Mr. Dexter Wilson, first president of the Laymen's Club of the Fourth District, and Mr. Daniels went with Mr. Campbell to Elmira, where Mr. Wilson had arranged through J. Lawrence Kolb for a luncheon meeting for key laymen of the Elmira district. At this meeting temporary officers were elected with Mr. Kolb serving as president. These men were determined that the laymen should get behind a definite program of work. That evening the same men traveled to Binghamton, where a meeting at Christ Church had been arranged for keymen from Binghamton, Johnson City and Endicott. "It was the same story," Mr. Campbell said. "When the men saw what they could do to further the work and worship of the Church, they seized the opportunity. The guideposts of their programs are worship, education and service."

BISHOP OF WEST VIRGINIA HOLDS MISSION

Richmond, Va.—The Rt. Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, D. D., bishop of the Diocese of West Virginia will conduct a teaching mission in St. Paul's Church for six days, January 23-28, inclusive, sponsored by all the Episcopal churches in Richmond. The general subject "Worship."

City-wide services will be held every night at 8 o'clock, at which the choirs of the various churches will participate. In addition, Bishop Strider will give a brief address each morning at 11 o'clock in the church, which will be followed by a celebration of the Holy Communion. Various members of the Richmond clericus will have charge of the service each night. Mr. Echols also will conduct a question-box throughout the period.

The Rev. Frederick J. Warnecke, of St. Mark's Church, organized the young people for the mission, and the Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., of St. James, will serve as host to the visiting prelate.

WORTH OF WORK TESTIFIED TO

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Commenting on the work being done by Miss Bernice Jansen in the Diocese of Western Michigan, Bishop Lewis B. Whittemore says, "The worth of the work which she has carried on can be indicated by the fact that while this area was one of the worst delinquency areas in Barry County, the delinquency rate was cut in two after the first year of Miss Jansen's residence and the County Agent has testified that there has not been a single case during the last twelve months."

A suitable building has just been acquired as a dwelling house for Miss Jansen, and the Bishop looks forward to a growth in the work which will demand a new building which can be used throughout the year for various activities and as a dormitory in the summertime for the work camp which is operated.

Miss Jansen's work centers at Orangeville, Michigan.

Army and Navy Need Set

Presiding Bishop and Bishop Sherrill Confident the Church Will Not Fail in Task

New York, N. Y.—The Presiding Bishop announces that the needs of the Army and Navy Commission for 1944 will amount to a minimum sum of $440,000. "With ten million American men serving in the armed forces, in all parts of the world," says Bishop Tucker, "the work of the Commission is a major task before the Church at the present time. The Commission is aiding our Chaplains and our men in every way possible and commands the support of every loyal Churchman and woman. We must not fail our men in this crucial year of the war effort."

Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, chairman of the Commission, calls attention to the fact that General Convention "gave unanimous approval to this cause," and adds, "We are confident that the Church will not fail now. Where our hearts are, there will be our treasure also. For every reason we must keep the Church with our men and women wherever they may be, at home or abroad."

The Army and Navy Commission states that at the end of 1943 there were 297 Episcopal Chaplains on duty in the Army and 135 in the Navy. Materials supplied to Chaplains include: 307 portable altars; 117 Communion Sets; 4,255 pieces of altar linen; 29 Fair Linens for Army chapels; 414,829 Prayer Books for Soldiers and Sailors; 347,737 pieces of Forward Movement literature; 62,941 Holy Communion folders; 254,305 Church War Crosses; 28,619 Indentification cards.

Pension premiums of Chaplains amounting to $6,683.78 were paid for 412 Chaplains in November, and in the same month $2,145 was distributed in small individual discretionary funds.

REV. AND MRS. COVELL TENDERED RECEPTION

Orange, Va.—A delightful reception was tendered Rev. and Mrs. Charles V. Covell on the eve of their departure for Ashtubula, Ohio, by the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Thomas' Church on Christmas day. The affair was held in the parish house which was attractively decorated in evergreens and a large number of their friends from all of the congregations of Orange, called between the hours of four and six o'clock.

A handsome silver tray was presented Mr. Covell as a gift from the congregation in appreciation of his outstanding work as rector of St. Thomas' for the past five and a half years, and a check for $150 was presented Mrs. Covell. Both were tokens of appreciation of the congregation served by Mr. and Mrs. Covell. The presentation was made by Mrs. Gray Dunnington.

Conserration Takes Place

Rev. Harry S. Kennedy New Bishop of Missionary District of Honolulu

Colorado Springs, Colo.—With the laying on of hands by ten of his brother bishops in the Episcopal Church, the Rev. Harry Sherbourne Kennedy, rector of Grace Church in Colorado Springs for the past seven years, was consecrated January 11, to one of the great missionary tasks of the world today, the administering of the affairs of the missionary District of Honolulu. This important post, to which the new bishop goes at the age of 42, embraces the Hawaiian and Samoan Islands, with a population of 423,329 persons, including many races, and an area of 6,449 square miles. It offers the difficulties of a complex racial mixture, small and isolated groups, and great distances.

Appropriately the consecrating bishop, the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Church, was himself a missionary of one of the great missionary districts, with a 20 years' record of service in Japan. Of the attending bishops, also, four were from missionary districts: the Rt. Rev. Walter Mitchell, Arizona, the Rt. Rev. Winfred H. Ziegler, Wyoming, the Rt. Rev. James M. Stoney, New Mexico, and the Rt. Rev. Frank A. Rhea, Idaho.

Co-consecrators were Bishop Mitchell, and the Rt. Rev. Fred Ingley, bishop of Colorado. Bishop Kennedy was presented to the Consecrator,—the Presiding Bishop,—by the Rt. Rev. S. Harrington Littell, retired from the bishopric of Honolulu, and the Rt. Rev. Everett H. Jones, bishop of West Texas, himself recently consecrated. Reading the Litany was the Rt. Rev. Benjamin D. Dagwell, while Bishop Ziegler read the Epistle and Bishop Rhea the Gospel. Bishop Stoney read the certificate of ordination. Attending and participating in the service were the Very Rev. Paul Roberts, dean of St. John's Cathedral, Denver, who preceded Bishop Kennedy as rector of Grace Church, and the Rev. J. Lindsay Patton, who becomes the new rector of Grace Church in the very near future. Representing Honolulu, in addition to Bishop Littell was the Rev. Wo Ai Shim, a member of the clergy staff of St. Elizabeth's Mission there.

A rare 14th century Gothic chalice and paten, loaned for the occasion by All Saints' Church, Denver, was used in the Communion service, celebrated by the Presiding Bishop. The chalice, of solid silver, with a gold-lined bowl, is decorated on the cup with the traditional grapes, and six beautiful amethysts, while the pedestal is covered with six exquisitely modeled groups representing the crucifixion, the resurrection and the four Gospels.

Bishop Kennedy has had, in the 14 years he has served in the Colorado diocese, a wealth of experience embracing service in the scattered missionary charge of the San Luis Valley, the metropolitan congregation of St. Thomas's in Denver, and two years of service in the United States Army as a Chaplain. He was released from his Army duties in December, 1943, with the rank of Captain.

The new bishop of Honolulu was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1901. He received his education at Rutgers, the Colorado State College of Education, and the University of Southern California. He graduated from St. John's Theological Seminary in 1926; the degree of Doctor in Divinity was conferred on him in 1943 by Seabury-Western Seminary, Evanston, Ill.

Parishioners of Grace Church presented him with his pectoral cross and his bishop's ring, as well as his new vestments, and gave Mrs. Kennedy a handsome set of luggage for her trip to the Hawaiian Islands.

Bishop Tucker, who was the principal speaker at the consecration luncheon which followed at the Antlers Hotel, enlarged upon the missionary theme.

"Christians everywhere should feel called upon to do their best in bringing about the better world we must have if freedom and unity are to be achieved at the end of this war. Church people must demonstrate at home what missionaries preach abroad," he said.

"SUNDAY WOULDN'T BE SUNDAY"

New York, N. Y.—In the darkness of a recent cold Sunday morning, a New York bus driver taught a lesson in devotion to the Church. He remarked to a passenger, "I got up at four in order to get to the five o'clock Mass at the Paulist Fathers' Church. I don't like missing Mass. Sunday wouldn't be Sunday. But I have to go to that church. My own church doesn't have any Mass at all—until six."

WOMEN'S "WORLD DAY OF PRAYER"

Friday, February 25

The first Friday in Lent, February 25, is again observed by women of many communions as a "World Day of Prayer." Sponsored by the United Council of Church Women, plans and suggestions for its observance have been issued by the Council, and are obtainable from the Bookstore, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York 10. The material includes a handbook (10 cents), a program of worship ($2 for 100), and a poster (2 cents).

This observance really goes around the world. Reports from last year mention what was done on the Fiji Islands, at Chungking and in New Zealand, in India and Iraq, on the Belgian Congo and the British Isles, all across Canada and in Mexico and the United States.

Offerings taken in connection with the day are divided among four projects, two overseas and two in the United States, which are supported by a number of mission boards: to aid in publishing Christian literature for lands where it is scarce; to aid Christian colleges for girls in India and China; for work among migrants and sharecroppers, and for religious education among students in government schools for Indians.

Word From Japanese Prisoner

Family Hear From Interned Missionary, First Letter In Two Years

Seattle, Wash.—The first word in two years has reached the Rev. Herbert H. Gowen, of Seattle, from his son, the Rev. Vincent Gowen, who with his wife and two children are interned by Japanese at Camp Holmes in the Philippine Islands. The letter from Vincent Gowen said: "We were brought here after a few weeks in Bontoc in June last year. Since there was no transportation from our home in Sigota to Bontoc at that time, we could not take much with us. Two months after our arrival I was elected to the General Committee, a body of nine men chosen by the men of the camp to administer the internal affairs of the 500 Americans and British confined here. In recent months, the Japanese authorities have allowed this committee a large measure of control over all camp business. Camp work is divided among the able-bodied men and women.

"I was a waiter for several months, but with the organization of a high school I began teaching and for nearly a year have been principal of this school. This keeps me busy as at home, especially as much has to be attempted on a makeshift basis. All of us are well, and my figure is much improved. But our dress falls far short of Vogue standards.

"Rice is our staple diet, with some meat and eggs when available from the Baguio market and what vegetables and fruit can be obtained. We have become acquainted with many local varieties of food which were new to us. Cooking for so many people is naturally of a rough-and-ready kind, but for those in generally good health, the effects are not bad. Small stoves are available outside the main kitchen, and Frances supplements camp meals with efforts of her own, preserving some semblance of family life by meals which we eat in an outdoor shed.

"We have here the staffs of all our mountain missions; this allows us daily services. For recreation we have bridge, chess, and in the dry season, softball. A threadbare library provides a fair amount of reading matter.

"On the whole, the camp remains cheerful and harmonious, even though the lack of privacy is wearing, and still more the isolation and lack of news. We are anxious for the day when we can return to what is left of our home and resume the life from which we were so abruptly cut off. We would welcome repatriation."

From the State Department in Washington, came a note saying that the Gowens are in good health and adding: "Vincent is very popular around camp, both with the missionary and non-missionary groups. His amusing talks are always enjoyed at the camp's Saturday night socials and he has shown considerable interest in softball while serving in the capacity of official scorekeeper. Mrs. Gowen has made quite a name for herself as a splendid cook."

Royal Gift

A royal gift is to be made to All Saints' Cathedral, Cairo. His Majesty Farouk, the King of Egypt, visited the Cathedral and its adjoining buildings not long ago, and has promised to replace in bronze the wooden grillwork of the chancel.

Cathedral Operated Cafeteria

A total of 30,000 meals served, with no profit and no debt, was the record of St. Andrew's Cathedral Parish Cafeteria in Honolulu during the eleven months it operated. Securing a good meal at reasonable cost was a serious problem for service men in the city. After a time the opening of many new canteens diminished the need for the Cathedral cafeteria so the program was shifted to maintain a new Cathedral recreation center, not for large crowds, but especially for Churchmen who find their way to this hospitable Church center.

Joins Navy

William Lee Richards, Parish Aid man on the staff of the National Council, has been given leave of absence to join the Navy. He will be with a Ship Repair Unit. For the past seven years Mr. Richards has been with the Council, first in the former Field Department, and for the past four years heading the Parish Aid Division. He has worked in 23 dioceses and hundreds of parishes and is known to Church people from coast to coast.

C. P. C.

The Church Periodical Club hears of happy coincidences in its work. As the sending of books and magazines to missions overseas has become impossible for many fields, the society has been able to send reading matter to transports; mostly magazines which, when not read to tatters en route, are left for use at the other end. A Chaplain has written the CPC of a homesick young soldier, who wandered into a recreation hut hoping for something to read, and there he picked up a magazine with his own mother's name on it, sent with other magazines from her parish to the local CPC office and from there forwarded to the transport.

Demand Continues for Chaplain Enlistment

Stressing the need for more Chaplains in the Navy, Chaplain Robert D. Workman, Chief of Navy Chaplains, told graduating classes of the Chaplains' School at Williamsburg, Va., that the need continues to grow and will continue to grow. "Ships are still coming off the lines in tremendous numbers, great carriers, cruisers, battleships, hospital ships, transports, tenders,—each with its own complement of men—and each Commanding Officer will expect to have his Chaplain. Where are they to come from? The Church back home. Recruits still pour into the great Naval Training Stations, the new landing craft program gathers momentum, new hospitals are being erected, increases in Marine Corps and Coast Guard personnel continue—all demand that chaplain enlistment continue in an unbroken stream."

British Anniversaries

The word "Millenary" so rarely has occasion to be used that it looks like a typographical error. The Church of England has been celebrating 1943 as the millenary of St. Dunstan's appointment to be abbot of Glastonbury. Later he became the 24th Archbishop of Canterbury.

A 1900th anniversary recently in the British news is that of the invasion of Britain by Romans under Claudius. The presence of British captives in Rome while St. Paul was in prison there, and their return to England as Christians, is one of the earliest traditions of the English Church.

New Yorker in Jerusalem

Under the headline "New Yorker in Jerusalem" the London Church Times has a word of tribute for the Rev. Canon, now also the Ven. Charles T. Bridgeman, American priest maintained on the Bishop's staff in Jerusalem by the Good Friday Offering from American parishes. "It is nearly 20 years," observes the Times, "since Canon Bridgeman, who has just been appointed Archdeacon of Syria, went to Jerusalem from New York. He expected to remain for a few years and then return to the United States. On his study table are portraits of his wife and daughter, now in the United States, whom he has not seen since his last visit in 1938."

"Good Christian—Good Citizen"

Declaring that "A good Christian makes a good citizen," B. E. Hutchinson, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Chrysler Corporation, told a Rotary gathering that "I have become entirely persuaded that there is a direct relationship between the decline in the breadth and intensity of religious experience among men and the growth of that selfish materialism which seems to me to be the root and branch of the disorders of the present time."

WOMEN WORKERS ATTENDING INSTITUTE ON RURAL CHURCH

New York, N. Y.—Twenty experienced women workers of the Episcopal Church are attending a three-weeks' institute on The Rural Church and Christian Community service, which is being sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary and the National Council's Divisions of Domestic Missions and Christian Social Relations. The purpose of the Institute is to provide additional information and techniques for improving individual case work and general community service in order that the Church might more effectively serve individual and community needs. The Institute consists primarily of two basic courses, one on analysis of community organizations by Dr. Edmund deS. Brunner, professor of Rural Sociology at Teachers' College, Columbia University, and the other on principles of case work by Miss Eleanor Neustaedter, district secretary, Community Service Society of New York. The courses are supplemented with special sessions describing programs and resources available in federal and other agencies on the state and local levels. Among the leaders in these sessions are Dr. Niles Carpenter, dean of the School of Social Work, University of Buffalo; Miss Maude Kemp, student training supervisor, New York School of Social Work, Miss Mary S. Larabee, field consultant in Child Welfare of the United States Children's Bureau, and Miss Constance Hastings, Bureau of Social Assistance, Social Security Board.

Church leaders from the Episcopal National Council who are offering special sessions include the Rev. Dr. Almon R. Pepper, head of the Episcopal work in Social Relations; Miss Dorothy Stabler, secretary for Christian Social Relations of the Woman's Auxiliary; the Rev. Clifford L. Samuelson, associate secretary of the Division of Domestic Missions; Miss Edith L. Balmford, executive of the National Council Church Mission of Help; and Miss Adelaide T. Case, professor of Christian Education, at the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.

In addition to regular Institute sessions, members are attending the annual meeting of the Home Missions Council of North America, participating in sessions led by Professor Edward C. Lindeman, New York School of Social Work, and Dr. H. Paul Douglass, community survey specialist of the Home Missions Council and the Federal Council of Churches.

Most of the workers attending are from the Southeastern States. Many of them work in depressed economic areas where communities are low in health, educational, religious and other resources. Members of the Institute work with various racial and national groups, including Indians, Japanese, Negroes and Mexicans. A number of them serve share-croppers and agricultural migrants. Two workers from the West Coast are Miss Olive Meacham of San Joaquin, California, where she carries our extensive community service with Mexican agricultural migrants, and Deaconess Margaret Peppers, who has been serving the Japanese in their period of evacuation from the West Coast and is now stationed in the relocation center at Minidoka, Idaho. Among the members is Miss Bernice Jansen, leader of a community center in western Michigan which has attracted the attention of state and national officials because of the service being rendered to individual and community needs by the Church. Mrs. Monte Glovier, well-known community nurse and specialist concerning health conditions in the mountain areas of western North Carolina is among those present. Mrs. Genie Daly, rural worker in the Diocese of Maine, carries out an extensive year-round educational program together with maintaining numerous special projects during the summer months. Also present is Miss Harriet Orth, worker among the Arapahoe Indians at Ethete, Wyoming.

Headquarters of the Institute is Windham House, New York, with Miss Ellen Gammack, personnel secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary acting as executive secretary.

HONOLULU BECOMING STRATEGIC AREA OF OUR CHURCH

Colorado Springs, Colo.—The importance of foreign missions was stressed strongly by the Rt. Rev. Stephen E. Keeler, bishop of Minnesota, in his sermon at the consecration for Honolulu, of the Rt. Rev. Harry S. Kennedy, in Grace Church here, January 11.

"The stirring events in the Pacific are turning men's minds as to the significance of what is happening there," Bishop Keeler said. "Statesmen, the world over, are forcefully telling us that the world situation requires us to abandon the distinctions between 'home and foreign'—that we live in one world,—that what happens in any part of it is of vital concern to every part of it. That being true, this would be a queer time to abandon foreign missions. What is really required is that every Christian should become a foreign missionary at home in all the world.

"In the present war there is abundant evidence of the dividends now accruing from missionary effort expended in the islands of the Pacific decades ago. There have been evidences of a literal fulfillment of the saying, 'Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days.' The missionaries of generations past, and those who supported them in their work, have passed from the scene, and yet, 'their works do follow them.' How the fruit of their effort vividly illustrates the Saviour's words, 'He who loses his life for my sake shall find it.'

"The Christian Church is attempting to survey her task and to distribute her energies as to bring God's help accessible to every spot on earth, and especially to all points of unusual tension and distress. This is our missionary task. Divine justice requires it, Divine Mercy inspires it. The Divine Sufferer on the Cross sends us forth to it."

Speaking of the strategic importance which we face in our missionary work in Hawaii, Bishop Keeler said: "The national government is throwing literally millions of dollars into the development of the Islands as a great citadel of these United States. Even with the passing of the present emergency in the Pacific, the Islands will have an increasingly important place in the economic and political future of our nation. The islanders are becoming increasingly conscious of their destiny. Surveying the present situation in the Islands and even with a conservative estimate as to their future importance, it is not too much to say that the Bishopric of Honolulu is rapidly becoming one of the most strategic areas in the jurisdiction of our Church. There are certain economic factors, paternalistic in their attitude and with a monopoly in their economic control that are not too friendly toward the theology and polity of our Church. These combined with problems inherent in the many races living on the Islands make the position of Bishop of Honolulu an exceedingly difficult one.

"Perhaps the most striking thing about our opportunity in Hawaii is that of making a real contribution to the problem of enabling races to live together under one flag with opportunity of livelihood and happiness for all."

BISHOP-ELECT PARDUE'S CONSECRATION JAN. 25

New York, N. Y.—The Presiding Bishop announces that he has taken order for the Consecration of the Very Rev. Austin Pardue, D. D., Bishop-elect of the Diocese of Pittsburgh.

The service will be held at Trinity Cathedral, Pittsburgh, January 25 (Conversion of St. Paul) at 10:30 A. M. The Presiding Bishop will be chief consecrator.

Co-consecrators announced are the Rt. Rev. Howard R. Brinker, Bishop of Nebraska, and the Rt. Rev. Cameron J. Davis, Bishop of Western New York.

Dean Pardue will be presented by the Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann, retired bishop of Pittsburgh, and the Rt. Rev. Frank A. McElwain, retired bishop of Minnesota. The sermon will be preached by the Rt. Rev. Gaylord G. Bennett, suffragan bishop of Rhode Island.

Attending Presbyters will be the Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving, III, Pittsburgh, and the Rev. Harold L. Bowen, Evanston, Ill. The Rev. Robert D. Crawford, of Omaha, will read the Litany, and the Rev. John H. Fitzgerald, secretary of the House of Bishops, will be Registrar.

DIOCESE OF GEORGIA

St. John's Purchases House for Parish House and Rectory

Savannah, Ga.—St. John's Church has purchased the Green Meldrim home as a parish house and rectory. This house, a landmark of Savannah, is well known to tourists as the headquarters of General Sherman during the occupation of Savannah. It is just across the street from St. John's Church.

Since 1892 it has been the home of the family of the late Judge Peter W. Meldrim. Judge Meldrim was the successor to William Howard Taft and immediate predecessor of Elihu Root as president of the American Bar Association. The family, now finding the home too large, decided to sell it. The decision on the part of St. John's to acquire the property elicited a wide response from leading business and professional men as well as the general public. In fact the business and professional men contributed $1,000, anonymously to the fund. People of all creeds, interested in the home as one of Savannah's historic sites, aided St. John's Church most generously in securing the property.

The home, known for years as the Meldrim home, was built for Charles Green, an Englishman, who made a fortune in the cotton business. Most of the building material was imported by Mr. Green as ballast in his ships. It is noted for the intricacy of its exterior iron work and its interior finishings. The building could not now be duplicated for less than half a million dollars.

Before and during the War Between the States, many notable visitors were entertained there, among them: Commodore Josiah Tatnall, originator of the phrase "blood is thicker than water"; Secretary of War Stimson and Adjutant General Townsend and Quartermaster General Meigs, of the Federal Forces. During Judge Meldrim's lifetime President McKinley and Major-General Fitzhugh Lee, Daniel G. Gilman, of Johns Hopkins and Senator Mark Hanna were entertained there.

The Rev. Ernest Risley is rector of St. John's Church. Mr. E. B. McCuen was general chairman of the drive and Mr. Thomas H. Gignilliat actively promoted it.

Christmas and New Year's Services

Savannah, Ga.—Incessant rain—cold, drizzling rain—that in Augusta and some other places turned to ice as it hit the ground, interfered somewhat with the attendance at the Midnight Christmas services and very muchly with those held on Christmas Day. Fortunately, in Savannah, the rain held off until very early Christmas morning and all the parishes having the Midnight Service were filled.

At St. Paul's Church a New Year's watch service was held. Following a midnight celebration of the Holy Eucharist on New Year's eve, the young men of the parish took turns in keeping watch before the Sacrament until 8 in the morning, at which time the women took over until they were relieved at

MAJOR GENERAL CHARLES D. BARRETT, U. S. M. C.

Resolution passed by the Vestry of St. Paul's Church, Alexandria, Virginia, on the death of Charles D. Barrett.

In recognition of the many years of service to St. Paul's Church of Major General Charles D. Barrett, the Vestry of St. Paul's Church at its meeting held on November 8, 1943, wishes to express its great loss and its appreciation of his services as a member of the Vestry.

Retiring and unassuming, but nevertheless a leader in all of his undertakings, his advice and counsel in church matters was of inestimable value in the progress and welfare of our parish; and in spite of the great responsibility and arduous tasks of his profession, he always found time to devote to the tasks involved in his duties as a vestryman.

Even though he has been frequently absent from our meetings since the beginning of the present war, he evidenced his deep interest in our affairs, as well as in the affairs of our city.

A true Christian gentleman, a brave soldier and a leader of men, beloved by all who knew him, his loss to St. Paul's Church, as well as to our country, is irreparable.

Be it, therefore, resolved, That this expression of appreciation be sent to the family of General Barrett and that it be spread upon the minutes of this meeting, and copies of the same be published in the Virginia Churchman and The Southern Churchman.

SHORT, INTENSIVE COURSE GIVEN AT WINDHAM HOUSE

New York, N: Y.—To meet a growingly evident need for effective Church work in rural communities whose life is disorganized by conditions growing out of the war, an intensive short course of study in useful techniques is to be given at Windham House, New York, January 10-27, 1944.

The Institute, devoted to "The Rural Church and Christian Community Service" is sponsored by the National Council's Divisions of Domestic Missions and Christian Social Relations, and the Woman's Auxiliary.

Twenty women from all parts of the country will attend. They were selected with special care, and will represent various types of community; a mill town, a farming area, a small town, etc. The general purpose of the Institute is to bring together a group of women working in town and country churches, where they must take responsibility for meeting physical, social and religious needs of individuals. The Course given will include study, analysis and discussion of individual and community needs; clarification of the function of the Church in community service; development of abilities and knowledge of resources; and fellowship and exchange of experience.

During the Institute period, the women enrolled will have the opportunity to attend the annual meeting of the Home Missions Council, and to make field trips to various institutions and parishes which illustrate Christian community service. Church Missions House officers who will present material and lead discussions are: the Rev. Clifford L. Samuelson, associate secretary in the Division of Home Missions; the Rev. Dr. Almon R. Pepper, executive secretary of the Division of Christian Social Relations; Miss Dorothy Stabler, of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Mr. Samuelson is General Chairman of the Institute, Miss Ellen B. Gammack, personnel secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary, is serving as executive secretary of the Institute, and the program was developed by a planning committee including Dr. Pepper, Miss Stabler and the Rev. Bravid W. Harris, secretary for Negro Work in the Division of Domestic Missions, with the other National Council officers who are to participate in the sessions.

THEOLOGICAL EDUCATION SUNDAY

Sunday, January 23

Theological Education Sunday is January 23, 1944. Parishes everywhere are urged to take a special offering, to be sent directly to the theological seminary of the rector's choice. The offering last year amounted to $48,179.30, with 1622 parishes participating.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

"In the long run every thing is helpless before love."

"Where do I look for my happiness? This is one of the most searching tests that can be applied to any character."

Don't bark against the bad, but chant the beauties of the good. —Emerson.

"In our fight to set men free
Grant us wisdom,
Grant us courage,
That we fail not man or Thee."

Others also have pointed the way to God, but Jesus has strength to follow this way. From Him there radiated a positive force. The Spirit of God—which touched men's sick souls and restored them to life.

—Rev. B. S. Easton.

There are many kinds of harmful ignorance, but the most tragic is not to know love when it wants only to bless us, nor gentleness when it seeks to save us, nor wisdom when it speaks us of the things which belong to our peace. —Selected.

"Faith does not bid us close our eyes, but open them, to the glory of God in the common bush."

Give us, O God, the strength to build
The city that hath stood
Too long a dream, whose laws are love,
Whose ways are brotherhood,
And where the sun that shineth is God's grace for human good.

Humble souls, herein is rest;
Tread the path the saints have trod;
Learn of Christ this lesson blest—
Acceptance of the will of God,
By the Holy Spirit sent,
"I have learned . . . to be content".

When I was a young man I pitied my father for being a poor man and a humble preacher of the Word. Now that I am older I envy him his life and his career. —Lord Beaverbrook.

I think I can truly say that I am never less lonely than at times when I am alone, and when the choir invisible no longer seems invisible; when it seems to me as though I have only to push open the door and enter into the the other room where they are, unseen by me but not unable to see and minister to me. —Dr. Lyman Abbott.

"With mercy and with judgment
My web of time He wove,
And aye the dews of sorrow
Were lustred by His love,
I'll bless the hand that guided,
I'll bless the heart that planned,
When throned where glory dwelleth
In Immanuel's land."

"Heal us at the heart, and then let the world come on! We are ready for the conflict. Make us sound within, and we will stand in the evil day. We can defy circumstances, and resist the devil, if only our own breast become not a hold of traitors."

With Christ abiding in you, the Holy Spirit sheds abroad the love of God in your heart, and you love the brethren, the most trying and unlovable, with a love that is not your own, but the love of Christ in you.

—Andrew Murray.

I WOULD BE TRUE

I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

I would be friends of all—the foe, the friendless;
I would be giving, and forget the gift;
I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up, and laugh, and love, and lift.

How can this be, for well I know my failures,
Unless there comes grace, strength, and love from Thee?
O King of Love, my Master and my Saviour,
Grant these I pray. To serve Thee, set me free.

(Verses 1 and 2 by H. W. Walter, 1883-1918; verse 3 by Bishop L. W. B. Broughall, 1938, Hymn 640 Church of England in Canada Hymn Book.)

CHRISTMAS IN JERUSALEM—PILGRIMS IN UNIFORM

London, Dec. 16, 1943—An account of conditions in Jerusalem today has recently been received from an officer-observer. Readers will be interested to see this description of life in and around the Holy City, and to know of forthcoming Christmas celebrations there. The officer writes:

The streets of Jerusalem, the heights of Jericho and of Bethlehem, the winding paths of Nazareth are thronged today by Service men and women, who are spending their leave visiting the sacred relics of early Christianity, of Jewry and the Moslem faith.

In this land whence came the message of Peace and Goodwill there is a sober thankfulness that it has been spared the horrors of Nazi oppression, to which the refugees who have sought succor here bear witness. Pilgrims pass daily within the Gates of Jerusalem to pay homage.

As the war moves inexorably northwards and westwards, Palestine continues its war effort in field, town and village. Many of its sons and daughters, both Jew and Arab, are in uniform. Austerity meals and high prices remain, and the blackout is a reminder that the Luftwaffe is still across the sea. Service visitors wisely avoid controversial matters, and though they may obtain a clearer conception of current problems, they devote their brief leisure to seeing all that this historic country has to offer.

The ancient city of Jerusalem is never-changing. For centuries it has fascinated people from all parts of the world, and it has been the visitor who has changed; from the west he has brought new clothes and new fashions. Today the city knows no pilgrims but those who wear the universal dress of service.

Hordes of bootblacks still gather on the stone walk by the Jaffa Gate and clap their brushes in an invitation to visitors to try their skill. To their clear English, their Hebrew or Arabic has now been added Polish, French and Greek, thus forming a medley of languages of the United Nations. From the Jaffa Gate, a pilgrimage for the services is made weekly to the Garden of Gethsemane.

Within the walls built by Sulamein the Magnificent, the merchants of all races and all creeds offer their wares to the villagers or peasants, who journey by ass or by foot from the Hills of Judea and the Valley of the Jordan. Sometimes now they come by omnibus or perhaps by bicycle. To the tourist the merchants offer the rich assortment of souvenirs to be found in all the bazaars of the Orient.

Should the tourist in uniform wander off the guidebook track, he finds himself in a labyrinth of cobbled alleys and courtyards and hears chatter in many tongues. Bright-eyed youngsters, to whom the world outside is unknown, gambol and play, while their elders are busy at many crafts. The favorite pastime of the children is a game with cleaned date stones, strangely akin to the marbles of English and American youth.

Above the cobblestones, the tourists will see flower-boxes ever radiant with color, balanced crazily on narrow ledges, a display of which the dwellers in any narrow, sun-starved street in any western town would be very proud. The discerning tourist, should he look closely, may see between the ledges a long strand of wire. It is not a wire for the products of the wash-tub, but one by which the world of the east now receives news of the world in the west—a wireless aerial. In that one respect ancient Jerusalem has changed.

The new city of Jerusalem is always growing, with its clean facades of grey stone and cement. It is dominated by the Jesus Tower of the stately Y. M. C. A. building, which stands on a hill opposite the Mount of Olives and overlooking the Valley of Hinnom. The Y. M. C. A. has become one of Jerusalem's attractions, and tourists in uniform come, not only to the Services' Club with all its pleasant amenities, but to see the "Sermon in Stone". This building is a memorial to the inspired vision of two Americans, Dr. A. C. Harte and his close friend, James N. Jarvie. In its symbolism and design it seeks to convey the Christian message.

While the service tourists today are enjoying the sights, the voluntary organizations in Jerusalem are preparing plans for the Christmas Festival. The Services Y. M. C. A., the Club of the Jerusalem Y. M. C. A., the Church Army, the St. Andrew's Hostels of the Church of Scotland and other bodies devoted to the welfare of the services, are arranging special Christmas dinners and parties. Conveyances will take the visitors to the Watchnight Service at Bethlehem, and on Christmas Day it is hoped to augment the final carol services with a mass open-air service.

There is accommodation in Jerusalem's service hostels for several hundred men and women, and the Soldiers, Sailors and Airmen Families' Association bureau, which gives advice on where to stay, arranges tours and guides and recommends approved private hotels and apartments for officers and other ranks.

Mr. Alvar L. Miller, general secretary of the Jerusalem Y. M. C. A., and formerly a student at the University of Indiana, has had in 27 years a world-wide experience of the Association's activities. Thousands of service men have been welcomed at the Association's clubs and hostels in Jerusalem, and he has been greatly impressed by their exemplary conduct, particularly by that of the British personnel. "I find that the men of all nations who come here do appreciate something that is clean, wholesome and homely, and they do their best to keep it so," said Mr. Miller. "It has been a joy to work with and for them, and we shall do our best to make this coming Christmas an enjoyable one for all."

MR. SPEAKER GOES TO PRAYERS

The British Weekly (December 9th, 1943) printed an interesting account of prayers in the House of Commons by Mr. Jack Lawson, M. P. We print an extract from the article.

Speaker-r-r. Speaker-r-r. That call goes through the lobbies and corridors every day when the House of Commons is sitting. It starts faintly from afar, is caught up by another strong voice, then another, until the whole building resounds. Then—silence. An impressive silence. Members hurrying through the corridors stand aside, facing the coming procession, respectful, bowing as it passes. Whatever Party, opinion or creed, none ever fails to respect Mr. Speaker.

Over the great crowd in the Central Lobby a hush has fallen. Men and women of many nations in Service dress, mothers and fathers, sons and daughters, workers in many trades, representatives of many professions, people from widely different spheres of the nation's life stand there silent—almost in awe—as the simple but dignified procession passes through the close-packed, miniature democratic Britain.

The Speaker has gone to prayers.

Many visitors have seen him go into prayers, but none have ever seen him at prayers. That is a "service" reserved for Members, as the House is not "sitting" until prayers are over.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

KAJ MUNK, the great Danish poet and Christian minister and outstanding leader against the Nazi regime, was shot and killed recently by the Nazis. He will probably be greater in death than in life. One by one, the great Christian leaders of Europe who have opposed National Socialism have been killed or imprisoned—but in every case the spirit of them has grown stronger in their physical absence, and has filled their followers with a new sense of mission and responsibility. Such names as Munk, Berggrav and Neiomuller will keep the flame of resistance to this evil alive no matter what the individual cost. It is good to feel a kinship with these great Christian men and to know that we, too, will stand strong no matter what comes. Of course, we can be very brave and make many rash statements about what we would do under similar circumstances when those circumstances do not yet exist; however, we cannot know what we would do were the final test to come. But we do know that their witness is thrilling and inspiring and because of them we are more apt to be able to take it than if we were lonely individuals without such courageous and self forgetting leadership. The significance of these examples of patience and calm under the horrible conditions of physical and mental abuse and torturous times of confinement in foul prisons, kept at the ragged edge of starvation in the midst of filth, is not so much the brave but apparently useless resistance of the moment, but the powerful urge of hope for reconstruction and restoration following the war. Europe will be one mass of shambles, her cities will be in waste, her people will be bewildered and impotent, her future dust and ashes. Then it is that this strong remnant will rise and patiently lead these people through the difficult days ahead, back to the ways of peace and freedom. Just as the prophets of old led the people back from their years in bondage to restore the land which had been ravaged, and first of all to rebuild the spiritual temples destroyed, as did Ezra and Nehemiah, so will modern Christian prophets lead in the rebuilding of a country laid waste and the restoration of a people numbed and helpless after the plague of war. They shall cry from the depths of their own experience of suffering and hear the reply: "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people," which will put the glint of hope in their eyes, and the wine of purpose into their emaciated bodies.

WE HOLD WITH THEM the future, and woe be unto us if we are not good stewards of the trust. I mention all of this on a Saturday, when king trivia often thrusts himself to the fore, to ask us in sober reflection, to remember what our Christian brothers are enduring for His sake, and to make us ashamed of our complaints and unwillingness to do our share over here, which, in comparison, costs us nothing. Tomorrow in your own Church thank God for these men and women and ask God to endow you with the same faith and love as is theirs and to strengthen you for the immediate and courageous tasks which confront us in the realisms of race, juvenile delinquency, and the like.

searched that service carefully and we have failed to find any remote referencee to this ceremony of hand blessing. We do not know Bishop Boynton personally, though we voted for the confirmation of his election at the Cleveland Convention. We heard enough to feel that the ministry of his hands, as well as his feet and mouth, had been singularly blessed, long before his election as Bishop Coadjutor of Puerto Rico. Does this ceremony mean the blessing of his hands for the Apostolic ministry of the laying on of hands? Do we have to be so objective in all our symbolism that we must return to mediaeval practices? God forbid. Cannot the Holy Spirit guide us into new ways, that have just as much reality for us, in a true spiritual sense as some discarded practices?

It is the emphasis upon these things that we feel foreign to the true Catholic spirit of Anglicanism that upsets and disturbs evangelical churchmen.

The Shadow of Heaven

By F. W. NEVE

WAS IT NOT MILTON who described earth as being "the shadow of heaven?" This is not so fanciful as it may seem to some, for Christ Himself was constantly comparing the Kingdom of Heaven to some earthly counterpart. He even went so far as to compare the vine to Himself, and one of His greatest followers saw in the human body a resemblance to His Church. These earthly counterparts shadowed forth the heavenly realities, and thus showed how closely the two worlds are linked together. We have all seen the books used by small children, in which there are outline pictures which the child, with the aid of colored chalks or paints, is supposed to fill in and give the pictures their proper colors. And so we may speak of this earth of ours as being such a picture book, with the lines shadowing forth and suggesting something far more beautiful and sublime than itself. And this filling in, this beautifying with decoration and color is the work given by God to us His children. The shadow must become the reality. Christ has Himself given us a foreshadowing and foretaste of this transformation in His own Transfiguration, when His Body, which He had taken to Himself, as part of Himself, and which was of the same flesh and blood as our own, was endued with a heavenly beauty and radiance such as had never been seen before by the eyes of mortal men.

It has been seen what men can do in changing the outward aspect of the world and the conditions and circumstances of human life by developing the physical resources of this earth upon which we live. The transformation seems almost miraculous, and it not only throws light upon the wonderful resources of Nature, but also upon the powers of the human mind which has been able to discover the secrets of Nature and turn them to account in such a marvelous diversity of ways.

BUT HERE AGAIN we realize that we are dealing with the shadow of some great reality which lies beyond and out of sight. The chief significance and glory of these earthly wonders is that they serve as counterparts and types and foreshadowings of the Kingdom of Heaven. If Christ were now upon earth we might hear Him saying that the Kingdom of Heaven was like unto some of these modern inventions which we, with our dim spiritual vision, have never suspected of bearing any likeness to heavenly things.

But does not this vast development of the resources of the physical world, this liberation of the tremendous stores of physical energy suggest to our minds and imaginations the infinite resources of the spiritual world and the limitless stores of the divine energy? And as the sons of God, ought we not to be more vitally interested in the latter than in the former?

We certainly would be if we realized more clearly the fact that these spiritual resources have been placed at our disposal by God Himself, and that the principal reason for our being in the world at all is that we may learn to develop these resources and exercise this spiritual power. And what is more, they are placed at our disposal in order that we may use them to change and transform the shadowy outlines which have already been sketched out for us by our heavenly Father into the complete picture with all its delicate form and tracery and its beauty of coloring. In other words, the shadow of heaven is to pass from the shadow into the reality, which is none other than the Kingdom of Heaven upon earth.

The time has come when we, as the sons of God, are called upon to share with Him in the great work of creating a new earth out of the limitless resources of the spiritual world to which He has given us access through Christ, and which He has made available to every one of us by prayer and faith. The present chaos and confusion and evil in the world can only be remedied by Christ Himself working through His servants and followers. Modern science and philosophy, in spite of all the wonders that have been wrought by their inventions and discoveries, are powerless to save.

THEY ARE IN FACT in a measure responsible for the terrible destruction which has been caused by the great war. Earth has been made by them more like hell than heaven. But Christ can save. The resources at His command are fully adequate to meet the world situation. Did He not say just before His ascension, "All power is given unto Me in heaven and earth"? And did He not also say, and this time when He was face to face with a world situation more desperate than the present, even when He had to meet death, that the world might be saved, "Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world"?

It was to emphasize this truth that the Order of the Thousandfold was founded. Each member of the Order prays to be made a thousandfold more useful than ever before, and the prayer is based upon the fact that Christ has promised that those who believe in Him shall do as great, or even greater, works than He has done. It can easily be seen that if all praying people would seek earnestly for this greatly added usefulness, the Church of Christ would find in the spiritual world all-sufficient power to meet the needs of the world; and the children of God, as co-workers with Him, and sharing with Him the divine resources, would be able to bring this earth, which is now but the shadow of heaven, into ever more and more complete likeness to the Divine Ideal.

THE MIRACLE OF PRAYER

The soul has eagles' wings;
Beyond the furthest star,
Like to a bee it brings
Its treasures from afar.

The angels know its flight,
For it is like their own,
Swifter than even light
It reaches heaven's throne.

The miracle of prayer
Is ours from day to day,
For heaven and earth are one,
When with our souls we pray.

Then let us win from heaven
Rich treasures waiting there,
That they may be the leaven
To make this earth more fair.

—Frederick W. Neve.

Understanding the Book of Revelation

The Power of The Beast

By WILLIAM R. MOODY

I SHALL NEVER FORGET one blazingly brilliant day in Cairo, Egypt. The incident itself was a little thing,—but sometimes it is the little things that we remember. I went out to see the tombs of the Mamalukes,—the three hundred sixty-odd princes who were invited to dinner and then murdered by the grandfather,—or was it the great grandfather?,—of the present Egyptian King. We went through the vast, sprawling, dirty city, and into the place of the tombs. The Mamalukes are not buried in the open, but in a series of low, broad buildings. We went from the brilliant sunshine into the gloom of the house of sepulchre. There was not much to see, just the dusty tombs in a half light. The very air of the place carried the savor of dead hopes and vanished power. The corners were filled with shadows, and across the floor in the middle-distance ran a band of light, which came from a little window set in the wall. As I stood there looking at this desolation, and wondering why I had come so far across the city to see it, a great and repulsive scorpion, his wicked sting arched and ready, moved quick-step and stop, quick-step and stop, across that band of light!

I shall never forget it! It seemed to me as if that scorpion were the spirit of that place, venomous, malignant,—the symbol of hatred and revenge and wickedness!

The thing haunted me all day. And as I thought about it, I could see why, in so many places in the Bible,—and especially in the Book of Revelation,—evil is described as a scorpion, and the lash of God's judgment as a scorpion's sting.

I said last week that the Book of Revelation is not a deeply intellectual book, and that is so, in spite of the marvelously intricate symbolic pattern on which the book is built. It is emotionally powerful, not intellectually powerful. But there is one study in this book which is penetrating and deep, and that is the study of sin,—of its reality, of its nature, of its strength, and of its consequences. The writer of this book unmasks sin, and shows what it is, and shows what it does, and shows its inevitable end.

The power of sin is the power of the scorpion. It can sting, and hurt, and it can kill; but it cannot save, and it can never build anything! It cannot create! It has power only to tear down and to destroy.

If you are harboring a sin in your own life, remember,—you are harboring a scorpion! Some day, if you leave that sin there in your life, and in your mind, it will sting you! And its venomous sting will bring the poison of judgment and of desolation!

That is the message of this book about sin, and its consequences.

THE BOOK OF REVELATION is as carefully constructed as an intricate piece of symphonic music. Many of you go regularly to hear the symphonies, and you know how the great masters of the musical art take a theme and weave about it an intricate pattern of sound. The theme first blends with this pattern, and with that, bringing out in each new, bright colors in melody. Then the theme clashes with opposing elements in angry dissonance; and at times is submerged and overrun by opposing tones. But that theme always comes back again. And each time it is stronger, more clearly defined, reinforced, enriched, as the movement of the music rises to its climax.

Just so the Book of Revelation! The theme of the book is judgment; the judgment of God upon the sinful world, and,—arising out of that judgment,—the final triumph of the Redeemed.

The conflict out of which the great emotional power of the book of Revelation is built is the conflict between the scorpion of evil, and righteousness,—the Righteousness of God.

Since the Book of Revelation is a symphony, and not a history, we should not try to read it as if it were history,—as so many people do. They take the Book of Revelation and try to match it up with the time-sequence which they find in their history books. They say, "This verse refers to the past, and this to the present, and this one to the future". They get only a half-truth,—if that much,—out of such a scheme of interpretation, for the Book of Revelation is a symphony and not a history. There is no strong line drawn in it between the present and the past, nor between the present and the future; the line drawn in this book is between the evil and the good. The Book of Revelation applies not to the past, and not to the future, but to the present,—the eternal present. It speaks, according to its own author, of "things which must shortly come to pass"! We are to apply it to out own time; not to the things which belong to the years of the future, but to the days of the years of your own life, and mine,—the eternal present!

So do not say, as you read the Book of Revelation,—"I wonder if this refers to something that has long passed away; or if this is a prophecy of something which will be a long time in coming?" So far as you are concerned, the things in this book apply to your lifetime, to the days of the years of your pilgrimage! It is so written that in every age it applies to the eternal now. Later in this Series we shall show you why this is the case.

It must have struck you as peculiar that, in every age since this book was written, men have been able to find some figure in their own time to whom, with perfect logic, they might apply the "number of the Beast".

THE THEME of the book is judgment. And in the book there are three full cycles of judgment, each delivered with growing emotional intensity. (By another, less obvious count there are seven; but this double count is a favorite device of the author. The symbolic connection between three and seven will be explained later.) This is done, not to indicate that the world will be judged three times, but to underscore with the recurrence of each cycle the dread and dire solemnity of that judgment.

There is the cycle of the Seals, which close up the meaning of the Holy Book, and which only the Lamb may open. And there is the cycle of the judgment of the trumpets, the figure of which is drawn from the use of the trumpets which were blown by the priests as a part of the worship in the Temple in Jerusalem. This is the judgment, not of the scriptures, but of worship. And there is the cycle of judgment of the bowls, which are full of the wrath of God, now to be poured out upon the whole orbit of the earth. These were not deep "pots" or "vases", as is indicated by the translation "vials" in the Authorized Version, but were broad, shallow basins, shaped much like the alms-basins used in our Churches, to facilitate the pouring. They were the "bowls" used by the priests in the Temple worship to catch and to pour out the blood of the sacrificial animals.

And there are Seven seals, and Seven trumpets, and Seven bowls; and Seven is the number for "completeness"; therefore these three cycles are one judgment (as are also the seven cycles which may be counted in the book, into which these three cycles fit). When a thing is complete, it is complete. But you may walk around it, and look at it from another viewpoint. There is but one judgment of God upon the world. It may bear one aspect today and another tomorrow, but it is the same judgment, and the end of it will be the same. Whether the tyrant's name is Nero, or Attila, or Borgia, or Hitler, it is one judgment!

The use of the numbers as symbols takes a central place in the Book of Revelation. And notice: it is not the name that counts, it is the number! And in this book numbers are never digits, they are always symbols. Once you know what the numbers mean you have a key to almost every hidden secret in the book. (But not to all: there are at least three, and there may be seven, distinct orders of symbols used in this book.) The meaning of the numbers in the Book of Revelation is substantially the same as the meaning of the numbers in the Hebrew numerology, which was current in the time of our Lord. This symbolic use of numbers is not well-known today even to scholars.

SEVEN IS THE NUMBER of completeness. It meant all the diverse elements in a situation drawn together into one, and thus completed. Thus God was said to have finished His creation, and to have rested from the labor of it on the Seventh day.

Eight,—which is completeness plus one,—meant a new beginning,—fresh opportunity,—the winding up of the old and the opening up of the new. For that reason the first Christians,—who were all Hebrews and were acquainted with this number-language,—saw tremendous symbolic significance in the fact that the Lord Jesus rose from the dead, not on the Sabbath which was the Seventh day, and which would have meant "the end of all things is now here", but on the eighth day, which meant the completion of the past and the opening up of a great new future.

The number ten, which is seven, the number for completeness, plus three, the number for spiritual, meant great power. So the Beast having seven heads and ten horns meant "complete wickedness and great power".

By the same token the number six, which falls short of completeness by just one, means "incompleteness of a peculiarly painful kind". It comes so close to perfection, yet misses it! In the Hebrew numerology it meant "man", and more particularly "fallen man",—man made in the image of God, a creator in his own right, the child of God, and created to be the companion of God, yet fallen short of the fulness and completeness which God intended for him, and therefore doomed!

Only one man who ever lived was found worthy to bear the number "Seven", the number of human perfection,—Jesus of Nazareth, sacrificed upon the cross, and risen again! That is His number in the Book of Revelation. He walks among the Seven candlesticks, and holds the Seven stars in His right hand; and He wears Seven crowns. When He appears as the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, He appears with Seven horns, which means complete power ("All Power", He said, "is given unto me in Heaven and in earth"!); and Seven eyes, which means complete wisdom. Seven is His number, and, by inference, that is the number of His Seal, which is put upon every one of His faithful followers,—not their perfection, but His perfection, added to what they are, to make them perfect as He is perfect, because they believe in Him.

BUT SATAN copies God, makes a parody of God's virtues. And as Christ's followers are sealed, so the followers of the Beast are sealed with his number, which is not Seven, but Six, the number of imperfection. Six, and sixty, and six hundred—the number of the Beast!

What, then, is Evil? It is the measure by which man has fallen short of the perfection of Jesus, the perfect Man! That is the sin of the world; and that is your sin, and mine! Our number is Six. His is Seven.

It is the comparison of these two,—the incompleteness of man-without-God, and the completeness of man-with-God,—that brings the Judgment! Measure the world by that! Measure it for judgment! Measure the home-life of today by it! Measure business, today, by it! Measure politics by it! Measure the nations by it,—what they might be, and what they are!

We know what is good. We come close to it, sometimes, but never quite reach it. The measure of that gap between the good we know, and the good we do,—that gap which we are not strong enough to fill in,—is the measure of our woe and of our doom. And it is by filling in that gap that the Lord Jesus, through the power of God, gives us victory and salvation.

In the Book of Revelation the great enemies of the Church are three in number,—but remember that in the Book of Revelation numbers are always symbols, and that the number three symbolizes spiritual. There,—in Chapter Twelve,—is Satan, a great Dragon. This is the total spirit of Evil in mankind, the full measure of man's failure and of man's fall. His color is red, because of the ferocity with which he destroys men. I do not need to draw a picture for you of the way he eats men up. We can see evil plainly enough in others; it is only when evil is in ourselves that we have difficulty in seeing it.

This is the Father of Lies. His lashing tail is the scorpion's sting, drawing down even the stars from the heavens. His seven heads and seven horns and seven crowns tell us of the completeness of his evil power and the extent of his sway. He is everywhere, and his is bruising strength and unholy authority. He is the tempter. He is the caricature of God. He is the complete measure of all in which man has fallen short of the perfection which God planned for us in the beginning, and which,—God help us!,—we have not reached! All that is evil and full of tyranny in the other two beasts is in this Beast. They are but types and shadows of him.

THE SECOND Beast rises out of the sea. And the sea is the symbol of the heathen nations. He represents pagan society, earthly tyranny which, although it has many other forms, is best seen and recognized in the tyranny of the State over the bodies and the minds and souls of men. When the State sets itself up as divine, and says, "All loyalty belongs to me! Worship me!", we have this beast alive again.

Another Aspect of Race Relations

So often we think of racial tensions in this country, as existing only between the white race and the Negro race. There are other aspects to the racial problem that escape our provincial attention.

The January tenth number of "Christianity and Crisis" publishes under the head of "Los Angeles Poll on the Japanese Question" the answers to four questions. Here they are:

"Do you favor a constitutional amendment after the war for the deportation of all Japanese from this country, forbidding further immigration? Yes, 10,598; No, 732.

"Would you except American-born Japanese if such a plan as the above were adopted? Yes, 1,883; No, 9,018.

"Would you permanently exclude all Japanese from the Pacific Coast States, including California? Yes, 9,885; No. 999.

"Do you approve of the policy of freeing avowedly loyal Japanese to take jobs in the Midwest? Yes, 1,139; No, 9,750."

We ask our readers to think seriously upon the implications of the replies to these questions. They reveal at least that the race question is not confined to one section of the country, nor does it apply only to white and Negro. Those of us who have lived in the Southwest along the border know the feeling that often flares up in open hostility towards Mexicans. The race question is furthermore not an academic question. It is a reality that presents honest to goodness problems.

Many of our parishes will use as their study courses this Lent, the topic "Americans All." There we will endeavor to learn the Christian approach to this perplexing problem. Better racial understanding can only be built upon a Christian foundation.

If our armed forces are fighting to set the world free from the domination of a group that bases its whole philosophy of government upon racial superiority, we must learn in a quiet and effective way to put our own house in order.

A Fine Letter

We received a copy of the Washington Diocesan paper for January, which contains the first message that Bishop-elect Dun has sent to the clergy and laity of the diocese since his election. It is so fine in spirit that we take the liberty of quoting three paragraphs.

"You have done me the great honor of electing me your next Bishop; and, after much inner struggle, I have been convinced that it is God's will for me to accept that heavy responsibility. Now your decision and mine must be submitted to the other Dioceses and to the Bishops of our Episcopal Church for their approval. Only when that approval has been given may plans be definitely made for my consecration and installation.

There have come to me already several cordial invitations to speak in the Diocese and to share in decisions regarding plans under consideration. I have declined these regretfully because of my conviction that it would be presumptuous and unwise for me to act in any way as though I were your Bishop before I am that in fact. Meanwhile I am sure that you will all carry on devotedly as you have in the time during which you have been without an official leader.

No one could approach the many-sided responsibilities of the Bishop of Washington without fear and trembling. And it is very humbling to be the object of so many hopes, knowing well that no one man could fulfill all those hopes. I shall not attempt now to say what I think you should expect of your Bishop. I shall only say quite simply that the heart of a Bishop's position is to be a 'father in God' to the clergy and people of his diocese. I have had the experience of being the father of a little human family and of being something of a father to the intimate 'family' of this School. My prayer is that God will enable me to be a wise and faithful and loving 'father in God' to the much larger household to which I have been called."

This old Episcopal Church is safe under the leadership of such men as the Bishop-elect of Washington. The humbleness, the devout sincerity of this letter with no pompous frills, is encouraging to clergy and laity alike. We particularly like Dean Dun's emphasis upon the episcopal function of being a "father in God" to the clergy and people of his diocese. We wish more of our bishops would attach some importance to that function of their office.

We envision for the diocese of Washington and its new bishop-to-be, a happy and profitable relationship.

"Blessing the Bishop-Elect's Hands"

This is the caption under a picture on page five of the January sixteenth issue of the Living Church. The picture shows the Reverend Charles Francis Boynton, bishop elect of the missionary district of Puerto Rico, kneeling before a group of bishops, all gorgeously habited. The subtitle to the picture is that his hands are being blessed, "in preparation for his ministry."

Several things occur to us. The first is that we miss the figure of the Presiding Bishop of this Church, in his simple robes of office of a bishop of this Church. The extra millinery that adorns the bishops in this picture under question, are strange garments, we are thankful to say, in better than ninety per cent of the dioceses of this Church. We trust that most of the laity of the Church understand this fact.

The second observation is, that where does this ceremony come in the Prayer Book office of the "Form of Ordaining or Consecrating a Bishop"? We have

Regarding Marriage and Divorce

Dear Editor:

I have received the enclosed communication from Miss Helen Cummings in regard to Marriage and Divorce. She asked me to have it published in the Southern Churchman. I am therefore sending it on to you.

I think probably it is wise that people who have definite ideas on this subject should be given the liberty of expressing them through our Church papers. They do not necessarily represent the opinions of the Church paper and we should be careful, in publishing an article like this, to make that clear.

With kind regards, I am

Yours very sincerely,

H. ST. GEORGE TUCKER,
Presiding Bishop.

December 7, 1943.

Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker,
281 Fourth Avenue,
New York, New York.

Dear Bishop Tucker:

The Church is to be congratulated that you have again been chosen to the high office of Presiding Bishop but we lament that you will no longer be Virginia's Bishop. However, I am confident that Alexandria will always hold a warm spot in your heart and especially Christ Church which has long been your family church.

Your cordial response to the resolution of the Women's Auxiliary against liberalizing the marriage vow was very gratifying, showing as it did your deep concern for the preservation of the family unit.

St. Paul's also joined us in protesting against liberalizing the marriage vow. This vice that has challenged the attention of Congress and is sweeping the nation has been seen too often. It has become a common place, we have endured, then pitied and are now preparing to embrace, deliberately closing our eyes to the fact that it is a monster of a frightful mien destroying the foundations of society and defying the laws of God.

This modern fight against the age old sin, against the flesh and the devil, will be a bitter one, as always, but at least the Church can fight the good faith with strength from above and not spinelessly acquiesce to the devil.

The Church has been challenged. Shall we not meet this challenge?

An organized group is even now waiting an opportune moment to break down all opposition to liberalize the marriage vow, thereby making it quite clear that we should do more than watch and pray. We should be keenly alert to combat those efforts with a group of leaders of national ability as well as spiritual insight.

The Southern Churchman of October 23, page 14, mentions some Bishops upon whom one might depend for support. Would you be willing to publish the enclosed in the Southern Churchman? Thereby bringing it before the church as a whole and the vital need for vigorous and prompt action.

Very cordially and respectfully,

HELEN NORRIS CUMMINGS.

606 Cameron Street,
Alexandria, Virginia.

LIBERALIZING THE MARRIAGE VOW

A RESOLUTION to liberalize the marriage vow" was defeated at the General Convention of the Episcopal Church in 1940 and again in 1943 by a small majority. This majority should fight to a greater victory if a similar resolution is presented at the next Convention. A stronger opposition should be built up to meet this future situation and it should be ever on the alert to combat the pressure on the church to lower her high standards of living.

Twice at our last two General Conventions a strong minority has endeavored to have our church sanction remarriages of divorcees. If our church people desire a succession of marriages, the civil courts alone can grant them freedom. When their freedom is obtained, another denomination or a Justice of the Peace can marry them to another party. Divorces must come from the civil courts and after divorce is granted, only our Bishops can give permission to remarry in the church.

Clergy and even Bishops have been known to have "purple patches on their primrose paths", and a decision from such a source holds possibilities of grave injustice. Law, not emotions should govern such transactions.

If married life proves impossible to either party, a legal separation is permissible in the Episcopal Church. This, however, does not effect the indissolubility of the marriage nor does it grant either party freedom to contract another union.

The Living Church, September 26, 1943, on page 6, states the church has already provided laws concerning legitimate reasons for divorce, for consanguinity and for various impediments; such as physical disabilities as well as mental deficiencies.

The Southern Churchman, October 16, 1943, on page 14, quotes Bishop Ivins of Milwaukee as saying:

> "There are trends in Society and one is that about one marriage out of every four or five ends in the divorce court. Is the Church to be swept along with the sentiment of Society. or is the Church to act as a brake? The Church can do the best service to Society and to Christ, by standing firmly, rather than saying "Society is drifting along, so let's drift with it!"

THE BREAKING of these two commandments, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife" and "Thou shalt not commit adultery", are definite steps in wrecking the security and stability of the HOME which J. Edgar Hoover declared, not long ago, was approaching a national calamity. This calamity has now become so acute that it has forced itself upon the attention of our law makers and a Congressional Committee headed by Senator Pepper of Florida is studying the tragic situation of our delinquent juveniles or as someone expressed it, "our neglected juveniles and delinquent parents." This colossal self indulgence, this overwhelming desire for self-gratification is filling the juvenile courts with ever increasing police records that are a disgrace to a Christian Nation. Instead of striving to strengthen the ties of Home, strenuous efforts were made at our recent National Convention by a strong group of church men and women to so call "liberalize the marriage vow" thereby weakening the ties of home.

Mankind has the privilege of free will. He can choose any path he desires. Our world is also governed by cause and effect, and by the choice we make, we receive the logical effect.

Some cry out "no one should be punished for a mistake". However, we are punished for our mistakes; we reap the consequences of every mistake. We are likewise rewarded for every wise decision. These matrimonial mistakes are far reaching, they destroy the family unit. Although in the estimation of some parents, the destruction of the home is negligible.

GOD'S TEN COMMANDMENTS are the foundation stones upon which He decrees civilization shall rest. Quoting from "Forward day by day," October 24, page 23, "The Ten Commandments are not optional. Obey them and they make you. Disobey them and they will break you." With the passing of time these commandments are not relaxed, but even more strenuously enforced, but "I say unto you that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her in his heart", St. Matthew 6:28.

The urgency on the part of some of our clergy and laity to revise the prayer book might be a well devised plan to prevent the marriage service from being such a travesty, as it has become at the present time, to some of our church people. If the marriage vows are liberalized and sanctioned by the church, they may then well substitute "until I find someone more desirable" for the old vow "until death us do part".

May Christ have mercy on His bride the Church and guide her into the paths of righteousness.

REVELATION

And here, once more, we have the sinister copying of God for an evil purpose, which is a specialty of Satan. Christ's servants are marked; so the servants of the Beast must be marked, too. And sometimes they wear "party badges", and click their heels, and call out "Hail to the Beast!" And then they go to war for him, and die for Evil with the same devotion that the Saints have shown for Righteousness.

And as Christ died and rose again, so the Beast receives a deadly wound, and the deadly wound is healed, and the pagan world takes this as a greater wonder than Christ's resurrection from the dead. This refers, no doubt, to the legend then current in the Empire, that Nero had not really died by his own hand, but had only wounded himself, and had revived, and was soon coming again to take back the Roman Empire into his hand. But the writer of the Book of Revelation did not really believe the myth of "Nero redivivus". He looked upon it as a blasphemous caricature of the Christian Gospel of the Resurrection of Jesus; and he saw in it a pattern of the reappearance of pagan tyranny over the mind of man throughout the centuries until the end. He saw tyranny crushed by the blood, sweat, and tears of outraged humanity, only to rise again;—and then when humanity had again suffered beyond bearing, the tyranny would be crushed again at bitter cost, only to rise again, and again, until the end of the ages! The only power able to rise above that terrible cycle is the power of the true Gospel.

And this is true,—every man in his own life can, if he will, defeat that tyranny, and taste of the victory aforetime,—for our victory has already been won! But this is only for those who will ascend the cross with Christ.

NOW, A THIRD beast rises, and comes not out of the sea,—not out of the nations of the Gentiles,—but out of the earth,—the good earth,—which has always been understood as the symbol of Israel, the Chosen People of God. And since in the Book of Revelation the Israel of God is often applied not only to the Jewish nation, but to the Christian Church as well, we have this sobering and terrifying fact,—this Beast comes out of our own household of Faith! The third enemy of God and Righteousness is the quisling Church; the Church that has sold itself to the world! Not the true Church, but traitors in the Church, the apostate followers of the true God. The pattern is, first, Israel that has rejected Christ and crucified Him; and, second, Christians who under pressure of the world renounce their Faith. Many in those days, rather than suffer martyrdom, renounced their religion.

In this Beast the insidious and horrible copying of God becomes more subtile, and more terrible. This is the Anti-christ,—the Church turned to blasphemy. This Beast is like the Lamb; but he has a heart and tongue of a dragon! He dresses himself in the very vestments of holiness. His mouth is filled with words from the Gospels, and he touches and handles holy things, and holds in his hands the Sacraments,—but he worships the Beast, and has sold himself to the Dragon!

This is the picture: Jesus is standing before Pilate, and Pilate says, "I will release this man. I find no fault in him." And the High Priest of Israel, arrayed in vestments distinctive of his office as the priest of God, standing in the very line of the Patriarchs and the Prophets, replies,—"If you release this man you are not Caesar's friend!"

O vile hypocrisy! O dark extremity of hate,—for leaders of the Church, and members of the Church, to make a show of loyalty to Jesus with their lips, and to betray Him by the way they live!

These are the deadly enemies of God, and of the Redeemed! It is because of these that God's judgment falls,—as it falls this day, upon mankind!

And the number of the Beast is six hundred sixty and six! The measure of our imperfections,—all our little sins as well as our big ones,—multiplied by ten, the number which means power, and that total multiplied by ten again, until the number and the weight of them becomes a mighty and a bitter tide! Six, and sixty, and six hundred!

IN SEARCH OF MATURITY, by Fritz Kunkel, M. D. 292 pages. Scribner's, New York. $2.75.

Dr. Kunkel is well known for his admirable work in the field of religion and psychology. This book is presumably a summation of his thought, particularly directed to the clergyman. The first part deals with the need for better understanding between religious forces and the psychologist. The Church has, as Dr. Kunkel writes, often been ignorant of the vast advances made in human understanding by modern psychology. And the psychologist has tended in turn to scoff at religion, judging it by its poorer representatives. So the second part of the volume develops a religious-psychology. Here Dr. Kunkel again presents that "We-Psychology" of which he is the founder. The chapters on the "Ego" and "Imagery" ought to be read by every clergyman who desires to understand the complex nature of his parishioners a bit better. The final section of the book tells us how we can educate ourselves to that integrated personality which is the goal of good psychology and good religion alike. This section is replete with illustrations and suggestions for method. This is an intensely stimulating book which is not too technical for the average parson, though it does demand some knowledged of depth psychology in the final sections.—F. J. Warnecke.

JOY

She is not dwelling where the motley crowd
Seeks empty revelry at midnight hour,
Nor yet where laughter echoes long and loud,
Nor where men strive for fame, or wealth or power.

She is not there, though men have sought her far
When others said, "Go there—'tis there she bides!"
And they have found her like a shining star
That 'neath a cloud its radiant beauty hides.

But where the heart is given all to love
And only gentle thoughts and deeds remain,
When beauty lifts the longing soul above
Here we at length discover Joy's domain.

And we behold her—true Joy—standing there—
Tranquil, serene, most beautiful and fair.

FINDERS—KEEPERS

"Look! Oh, look, Alice!" Norman cried suddenly.

"What? Where?" Alice asked.

"Here," Norman answered as he stooped and picked up a tiny worn purse from the sidewalk.

Alice and Norman were on their way home from the missionary meeting. They had learned of the needs of children in far-away lands, and were anxious to help. Every member of the class had promised to earn all he could for the next meeting to be held the following month. So finding a purse was quite a wonderful event.

"Oh, what luck!" Alice exclaimed, her cheeks as red as her mother's roses. "Look inside."

Norman was greatly excited as he opened the tiny worn purse. But he was more excited when he saw what was in it.

"It's full of pennies!" he cried. "Oh, how many do you suppose there are? One, two, three, four—ten—fifteen!"

"You've got a grand start for the missionary work," Alice said.

"Finders are keepers," Norman declared. "Hope I don't find the owner."

But Norman was honest, and he asked every member of his class, and of all the children he knew whether any one of them had lost a tiny worn purse containing fifteen pennies. He could not find the owner.

"Tell you what," he said to Alice one day. "I'm going to use these pennies to earn more for the mission box. I'm not going to bury my talents the way the servant did in the Bible. I'm going to use my pennies and earn more."

"Can't I help, too?" asked Alice.

"Of course, you can," Norman answered. "You can help and we'll divide. How about a lemonade stand in this hot weather?"

With the fifteen cents Norman bought three lemons and some sugar. Alice trimmed the box that Norman used for a stand with bunting, and she lent her pretty silk umbrella. Mother furnished some fruit juices from her canning.

The fifteen cents grew to twenty-five cents. The quarter bought more lemons and sugar; and before the month was over Norman and Alice had earned a bright silver dollar. They placed it in the tiny worn purse on the afternoon that they started out to the missionary meeting.

Brother and sister had just closed the door behind them when they saw a strange little boy running up the path—a sturdy little boy with shining blue eyes.

"Are you the boy who found my purse?" he said.

"I found a purse," Norman answered slowly. "How am I to know it's yours, though?"

"It had my initials inside," the boy replied, "and—and fifteen cents I had earned running errands."

Norman opened the purse. Sure enough. In faded ink he saw, for the first time, the initials B. M.

"I'm Billy Morgan," the boy explained. "Please, may I have my purse and money? A boy in your Sunday School class told me about your finding the purse."

Norman's happy brown eyes grew very sad. He had worked hard to earn his money, and he did want to put that whole big silver dollar in the mission box. "Finders are keepers," he said.

"O Norman, you can't keep his money," Alice said.

"You certainly can't," Billy cried. "Give it to me, I say!"

"Well," said Norman, "I haven't your fifteen cents any more."

"Why not, I'd like to know?" Billy demanded. "Why not? Did you spend it?"

"Tell him about it, Norman," Alice begged.

Then Norman told Billy how he and Alice had earned the big silver dollar by using the fifteen pennies.

"I'm glad you found the pennies," Billy said when the story was over. "I'd have spent them for candy bars and popcorn. You keep the dollar the way it is. I'd go to the meeting with you if I had something to put in the offering for the far-away children."

"Part of this dollar is yours," Norman cried. "Come along. I think we'll be as pleased with a new member as with a new silver dollar."

And they were.—Juvenile Pleasure.

QUIETNESS

Quietness is not a music, but
It's part of music, too;
For when you're very, very still
Something sings to you.

Sometimes when all is quiet 'round
And I kneel for prayer,
The quietness whispers in my heart
To tell me God is near.

I love the ways of quietness
And hope I'll always be
The sort of person who can hear
When quiet speaks to me!

STRANGE

Seaman George Philips of Liverpool had a remarkable experience. Coming from South America he was leaning over the side of the ship when he noticed a floating bottle and proceeded to catch it up in a bucket.

On opening it he found a letter he himself had thrown into the sea, in the bottle, five years ago off the coast of Scotland.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NEWS

London Missionary Here to Confer

Church Leaders Planning for Great Christian Advance After War

New York, N. Y.—In preparation for a great Christian advance after the war, the Rev. M. A. C. Warren, General Secretary of the Church Missionary Society of London, is in the United States conferring with Church leaders in matters of long-time planning for the future. He also visited the Foreign Missions Conference meeting in Chicago and brought greetings from the Archbishops of Canterbury and York. He has had conversations with Presiding Bishop Tucker, Dr. James Thayer Addison, in charge of Overseas Missions, and other officers of the National Council at Church Missions House. During his stay on this side of the Atlantic he will visit Canada and discuss missionary problems with leaders of the Church of England in Canada. He hopes to be able to return to England some time in February.

Church Missionary Society, one of the chief missionary societies of the Church of England, is active in Africa, particularly tropical Africa, Egypt, Palestine and Persia, and in Free China. With the exception of Hongkong, Canton, and the greater part of the Diocese of Chekiang the Society's work is in free China, and has been subject to very little interruption.

Mr. Warren sees "the greatest missionary opportunity in the history of the Church" in some areas after the war, but sees also that in certain other areas, "the Church will face the most critical situation in its history".

Menacing to the Church, he believes, is the development of the social service State, taking complete control of every phase and part of human life. Thus many former Church prerogatives tend to be taken over by the State authorities. This situation is not present in a limited area, but to greater or less degree the tendency is manifest in every land.

Another difficult and vitally important problem of the times Mr. Warren regards as that of religious liberty. "The right of the Church to evangelize is widely challenged," he said. "In Moslem countries, in some countries where there is Roman Catholic control, in India, the right to evangelize is either challenged definitely or discouraged.

"With coming changes in missionary emphasis, with the challenge of a great trend toward Christianity in many countries, it is of the utmost importance that the Christians of America and Britain work in closest collaboration." Mr. Warren noted that he is the first official visitor from the Church of England since the Church in America inaugurated its Aid to British Missions, and said that in his opinion an exchange of visits of people in positions of responsibility in the Churches is bound to be necessary, profitable, and of great importance.

Mr. Warren sees a turning toward religions as a result of war. "More and more," he said, "people are coming to see that only Christian cooperation is capable of bearing the strains of the post-war setup. Political interests may clash, but Christians can interpret their respective countries to each other."

In all of the missionary enterprise, Mr. Warren believes we must think in terms of the shift in the center of interest and responsibility as touching the younger Churches. "More and more the Churches in countries where there are younger Churches must make the offer of service through the Church of the country to which the missionary goes. The supreme example, of course, is China, where the Church in the United States, the Church of England in Canada and the Church of England shared in the work and responsibilities of the Chinese Church, without interference or desire to control."

In the work of the Church Missionary Society, Mr. Warren says the present most difficult problem is shortage of personnel. Recruiting under wartime conditions is difficult, but, looking forward to the end of the war, Church Missionary Society is deliberately planning to recruit 600 new workers for overseas service after the war. Already more than 100 have been enlisted.

Support of missions is on the increase in Great Britain, Mr. Warren says. The reason, he believes to be twofold: first, a better understanding of missionary work, a greater appreciation of the importance of what is done; and, secondly, there is more money. Taxation is heavy, but there is literally nothing for people to buy. Necessities are rationed for the most part, and luxuries are not to be had anywhere at any price, so that the amounts being saved through war bonds and otherwise, is enormous, and in addition, people find it possible to give increasingly to missions.

All the Missionary Societies in England, Mr. Warren says, are deeply grateful for American Aid to British Missions. "You may not know," he said, "that this came at a most critical moment. In many fields it meant simply that there was no interruption of work which, otherwise, could not possibly have gone on. We can never be grateful enough."

There is a local advantage in the present trend toward missions, Mr. Warren believes. The missionary enterprise is part of a real spearhead of evangelistic enterprise in England itself. Telling the non-Christians of England of the achievements of the Faith in foreign fields is our strongest argument in favor of the Christian Church.

"We are thrilled with the possibilities of the future," Mr. Warren concluded.

Little Opportunity For Reading

Men on Overseas Duty Not All Broadened by Experiences

New York, N. Y.—Servicemen returning from overseas duty are likely to find themselves and their families mental strangers.

This is the opinion of Chaplain C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's, and for the duration chaplain of the USNR Midshipmen's School, New York City.

"Against the numbers of men whose horizon has been broadened by overseas duty," Chaplain Glenn explained in an interview, "there are countless more whose judgment of nations and people has been, and is being molded by purely personal and highly limited experiences. For instance, men who live month after month on a ship carrying material to our allies see the Lend-Lease as only a one-way agreement. Erroneously, though quite understandably, they conclude that the United States is shouldering the whole burden of supply and they form their opinion of what the peace settlement should be on this conclusion. Others base their ideas on their personal disapproval or approval of a handful of Germans or Japs with whom they have come into superficial contact.

"Despite the fine educational efforts made in behalf of the men in uniform, overseas duty gives them little opportunity to read newspapers, to listen to the radio or to talk with others than their own service-mates. Consequently their views on world affairs is confined to these pathetically narrow experiences and naturally, they accept them as universal truths. They return home veritable Rip Van Winkles to find their families with broad and up-to-date ideas which they neither understand nor find sympathetic."

The chaplains can do a great deal for the men in camps and overseas, declared Chaplain Glenn, whereas at home, the task is largely in the hands of the civilian clergy who can operate through church organizations or the USO.

"The USO conducts service wives' clubs," he continued, "and a great deal of good can start in these groups. The women need help in understanding their men, just as much as the men need help." The local ministers should address these women and teach them, in a practical way, one of the greatest aids in this problem—patience. And the time to do that is now—not when the problem is aggravated beyond remedy."

BISHOP THOMAS CELEBRATES 18TH ANN.

Porto Alegre, Brazil—The Rt. Rev. William M. M. Thomas commemorated the 18th anniversary of his consecration on Holy Innocents' Day, celebrating the Holy Communion in Ascension Church, Porto Alegre. The clergy of the city and members of the various congregations were present.

Clergy of the Diocese of Southern Brazil presented Bishop Thomas with a Pastoral Staff. The presentation was made by Suffragan Bishop Athalicio T. Pithan, who stressed the contribution made by Bishop Thomas during his episcopate to the development of the Church's work in Southern Brazil. He said that devotion and hard work were outstanding characteristics of Bishop Thomas' eighteen years of service as Bishop.

The Rev. Custis Fletcher, Jr., rector of the Ascension Church, then carried the crozier to Bishop Thomas, who accepted it as a symbol of his office and spoke of the significance of the gift as indicating the recognition on the part of the clergy of their loyalty to the office of Bishop.

Workers into the design of the Pastoral Staff is a piece of oak from one of the first beams laid across Westminster Abbey. This was given by Bishop Thomas. The arms of Bishop Kinsolving, first bishop of Southern Brazil, and of Bishop Thomas, his successor, are executed in gold and placed on either side of the historic piece of oak. The Staff was designed by Ammidon and Company of Baltimore, and the work was executed in Brazil on loro, one of the beautiful hard woods in which the country abounds.

REV. G. F. BURRILL APPOINTED TO FORWARD IN SERVICE

New York, N. Y.—The Rev. Gerald F. Burrill has accepted appointment by the Presiding Bishop to be assistant secretary of Forward in Service, and will take office February 1.

Mr. Burrill has been rector of St. Paul's Church, Bronx, New York City, since 1935, and for the past three years has been president of the Board of Religious Education of the Diocese of New York. He was born in Bangor, Maine, in 1906, and is a graduate of the University of Maine. In his undergraduate years, Mr. Burrill spent each summer in Church work. He conducted a religious survey on the southern end of Staten Island in 1928, and helped to organize a number of camps for Church boys.

His theological education was received at General Seminary. While in Seminary he was chaplain of Bear Mountain Park Camps, Seminarian in charge of the chapel at Greenwood Lake, N. Y., assistant in boy's work at the Fulton Street Mission House, Trinity Parish. His last year at Seminary, he was asked to take charge of All Saints' Church, Mariner's Harbor, Staten Island, N. Y. He was ordained priest in 1933. He received the degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology from General Seminary in 1933.

Mr. Burrill's work at All Saints' is regarded as outstanding. During the eight years of his rectorship, at St. Paul's the Bronz, it has been one of the most active parishes in the area. It has become a missionary-minded parish, and under Mr. Burrill's direction it has been taught to function as a missionary unit. Among boys and young men there has been founded an organization known as the Order of St. Stephen, built upon the idea of service for God and His Church. Forty young men have been active members of this group for five years.

As president of the diocesan department of education, Mr. Burrill has seen established the present system of adult religious education. Mr. Burrill has been elected deputy to the Provincial Synod and Provincial Deputy to the General Convention, and during the past year was elected Chairman for the Commission on Religious Education for the Second Province. He is president of the Churchman's Clericus of the Metropolitan area for the present year.

BISHOP SHERRILL TO SUCCEED BISHOP PERRY

In Charge of American Churches in Europe

New York—The Bishop of Rhode Island, the Rt. Rev. James DeWolf Perry, D. D., who has for the past six years been acting as the Presiding Bishop's deputy bishop in charge of the American Churches in Europe, has resigned this responsibility.

"I have, therefore, appointed the Bishop of Massachusetts, the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, D. D., to act as the Presiding Bishop's deputy as Bishop in charge of the American Churches in Europe," Bishop Tucker announces.

"In making this change I wish to express my grateful appreciation of the valuable services rendered by Bishop Perry in the past six years. Before his resignation Bishop Perry was of great help in suggesting plans for the future of the work of the Churches in Europe.

"I feel it is very fortunate that Bishop Sherrill has consented to undertake this responsibility. The fact that he is chairman of the Joint Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, together with his well-known administrative ability will enable him to be of great help in meeting the problems of the American Churches in Europe at a time like the present.

REPORT ON GIFT TO BRITISH MISSIONS

New York, N. Y.—A statement showing disposition of the £17,250 sent as Aid to British Missions in 1943, has been received by the Presiding Bishop from Canon J. McLeod Campbell, general secretary of the Church Assembly.

Canon Campbell says, "I think it is wonderful that the Church in the USA has sent us such a splendid gift. I was hearing only a few days ago of the far-reaching dislocations of Church life that wholesale movements of the munitions population have involved, and I can imagine how many calls, compulsory and voluntary are being made upon the pockets of men and women of good will. This makes us appreciate very deeply your continued generosity."

The distribution of the American gift was largely to specific areas of missionary work, such as Dornakal, India, South China, Egypt, the West Indies, and South Rhodesia. Gifts were made to eight of the English Missionary societies, including the S. P. C. K., J. & E. M., C. M. S., etc., and in addition, to the Missions to Seamen, the

CONGRATULATIONS AND THANKS PAYMENTS—102% NO FAILURES

New York—Two new records in the payments against pledges for the missionary work of the Church have been established. At the beginning of the year 1943 eighty-eight dioceses and districts in Continental United States and nine districts overseas filed with the National Council statements of the amounts they expected to contribute to the missionary program during the year. The books were kept open for about three weeks after January 1st to allow for the transmission of all receipts in the parishes through December. The final record shows that every one of these dioceses and districts met their Expectations in full. This is the first new record. Many made substantial overpayments, and the total collected from this source was $1,355,710.31 against total Expectations of $1,327,312, or a percentage collection of 102.1%. This is the second new record. One diocese did not file an Expectation, but gave $127,353.33, making a total of such gifts of $1,483,063.64.

At the beginning of the year the Council estimated that its receipts from this source would be $1,433,807. The actual receipts exceeded this figure by $49,256.64.

Due to this fine record of collections the budget for 1943 is balanced. At the beginning of the year the Council authorized for this purpose the use of available legacies and special gifts up to a total of $116,033. Considerably less than this amount will have to be used when the final balance is reached and the balance of these legacies will be available for other purposes.

The wide fluctuation in diocesan giving over the past twenty-five years is illustrated by the figures for certain typical years, which include the high and low records as follows:

|---|---|
| 1919 | $1,472,949 |
| 1926 | 3,028,983 |
| 1930 | 2,884,420 |
| 1935 | 1,355,643 |
| 1942 | 1,435,482 |
| 1943 | 1,483,063 |

To each and every one who has helped in making possible this fine record of payments for 1943 your National Council extends its heartfelt thanks.

Faithfully yours,
Lewis B. Franklin, Treasurer.

21 Jan., 1944.

TWO ARCHBISHOPS SEND MESSAGES

New York, N. Y.—Messages from the Archbishops of Canterbury and York were brought to the Foreign Missions Conference at its recent Jubilee meeting, by the Rev. M. A. C. Warren, General Secretary of the Church Missionary Society.

The Archbishop of Canterbury said:

"I believe that the future welfare of the world depends very largely upon the maintenance of happy relationships between our two countries and that a lead in this should be taken by the Christians on both sides of the Atlantic. If we can be united in the spread of the Gospel through the world and of effective Christian principles in our two nations we shall at once have supplied a nucleus of Anglo-American friendship and have secured that our cooperation is influenced by those principles which can alone make it fruitful for good to ourselves or to others. May every blessing go with you."

The message from the Archbishop of York said:

"Never has there been a time in the history of the world when the urgency of spreading the Gospel has been greater. At the Tambaram Conference I had the pleasure of meeting many representatives of North American Missions, and I was deeply impressed in hearing of their work in various parts of the world."

DIOCESE OF KENTUCKY

Louisville Conducting International Survey

Louisville, Ky.—The Interdenominational Survey of the Metropolitan Area of Louisville under the auspices of the Louisville Council of Churches is well under way, with Dr. H. Paul Douglass, of New York City, in charge of the work.

Offices have been established in Christ Church Cathedral House. About ten months ago the Council of Churches appointed one clerical representative from each denomination in Louisville and surrounding cities to form the Kentucky Committee on Camp and Defense Areas, at its first meeting the Ven. Harold J. Weaver, archdeacon of the Diocese of Kentucky was elected its secretary, and it was through his efforts and the chairman, the Rev. Lawrence A. Davis, of the Presbyterian Church, that this religious survey is being made of Metropolitan Louisville.

The data being compiled concerns population changes and trends, social strata, housing conditions, juvenile delinquency, church relationships, and many other factors of community life are being assembled and analyzed by Dr. Douglass.

Out of these studies and other facts and statistics concerning the Louisville area will come the final report carrying recommendations as to a future strategy ror Protestantism as it seeks to meet the challenge and responsibilities of the community in a post-war world.

The Episcopal Church in this area through its leadership has been instrumental in bringing about this survey, and has felt the need of such a survey particularly where their down-town Louisville churches are concerned.

The final report will be presented at an all day Institute to be held on January 31. Dr. Mark A. Dawber, of the Home Missions Council of New York City, and the Rev. Almon R. Pepper, of the Episcopal National Department of Christian Social Relations, will be the leaders at this Institute.

ANNUAL W. A. MEETING

Louisville—The Women of the Diocese of Kentucky held their annual meeting January 25 in Christ Church Cathedral, beginning at 10 A. M., with a Corporate Communion, celebrant the Rt. Rev. Charles Clingman.

At the afternoon session Mrs. Harold Woodward of New York City spoke, using as her theme, "The Work of the Women of Our Church." The Rev. James Morrison Wilson from the Missionary District of Shanghai, was the other speaker. Mr. Wilson has recently returned to his home in Louisville on the exchange ship "Gripsholm" and brought to the Diocese a bit of news from their fellow Christians in occupied China. His subject was "Is Christianity Dead in Occupied China?"

REGULAR SERVICES IN DIOCESAN INSTITUTIONS

Louisville—Regular church services have been established in two of our Diocesan Institutions in Louisville by the Rev. Ralph D. Bonacker, chaplain at the John N. Norton Memorial Infirmary and at the Church Home.

On Thursday evenings at 7:30 a service of evening prayer with sermon is held in Norton Chapel. The preachers at these services have been and will continue to be picked from the outstanding clergy of the community.

On Sunday evenings at 6:15 at the Church Home this service is of special interest because it is shared by the Young People's Service Leagues of the diocese. The preacher at these services is usually the rector of the church represented by its youth.

It is interesting to note the keen interest which is being taken in the services at the Church Home by the youth of the church. This institution has been in existence for over fifty years, and serves the aged and infirm men and women of our Church.

The Rhode Island Women's Committee for Washington Cathedral, is having a showing of a new series of the Cathedral on January 27 at the Central Congregational Church in Providence. The speaker is Mrs. Pierre Wilson, of Washington.

The Rhode Island Ministers' Union is sponsoring a series of six lectures on "Psychiatry and Pastoral Counseling," being held at the First Universalist Church in Providence. Prof. J. McV. Hunt, of Brown University; Dr. Temple Burling, of the Providence Child Guidance Clinic, and Dr. Raymond R. Willoughby, Research Superintendent of the R. I. Dept. of Social Welfare, are the lecturers.

---

One of the new Liberty ships built at South Portland, Maine, was named the "William Blackstone". This gentleman was the first clergyman of any Church to settle in Rhode Island, and he was an Episcopalian. He antedated Roger Williams by three years, but did only personal work, not starting any organization. The river and valley in Northern Rhode Island is named for him.

MRS. FIRESTONE TO GIVE SITE FOR NEW CHURCH

Akron, Ohio—Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone will give a site for a new St. Paul's Church in Akron, to be erected shortly after peace comes, according to announcement by the Rev. Walter F. Tunks, D. D., rector. Provision will be made on the site for a children's playground and parking area, as well as the church building.

St. Paul's congregation is raising money for a new parish house, but architects reported that there is insufficient space for this purpose on the church's present site, so the entire new project was proposed to fill the needs of the church's increasing congregation.

"THE JUNIOR SHEAF" MEANS OF BRINGING CLOSER TOGETHER

Fargo, N. D.—Realizing the need for some kind of church paper for her isolated children, Miss Alice Sweet, U. T. O. worker in the diocese of North Dakota, introduces "The Junior Sheaf." The diocesan monthly paper is "The North Dakota Sheaf." The new paper is mimeographed with clever marginal drawings. It has a prayer, mention of birthdays, jokes, games, and some good advice about studying Church school lessons.

Bishop Douglass H. Atwill says, "This paper gives one more happy means of bringing us very close together. We do want to feel very near to you and we want you to feel near to us. That is one of the satisfying things of our religion that, though you live in one place and I live in another and we seldom see each other, yet we can be very near in the family of the Church."

Bishop Bentley explains that "in other dioceses and districts there has been some confusion from time to time over the legal question as to just who the Bishop of So-in-so is, our own bishop contending for the title while a bishop of a Church 'not in communion with this Church' contends that he is the Bishop of So-in-so. To prevent any such confusion in Alaska, and to reserve the title for our own communion, I have thought it wise to take this step." In addition to the useful purpost which Bishop Bentley explains, the incorporated title is a safeguard in making legacies to the Church in Alaska. If the beneficiary is the Corporation Sole, "The Bishop of Alaska", there is little chance of difficulty in receiving the legacy.

RADIO TO BE USED BY FORWARD IN SERVICE

"Christian Doctrine of Man" Lenten Theme

New York, N. Y.—Indications point to the wide use of radio in discussion of The Christian Doctrine of Man during Lent. This is the emphasized topic for Forward in Service during the Lenten period, and it is introduced to radio listeners by a pre-Lent broadcast on the Episcopal Church of the Air, February 20, ten to ten-thirty A. M., E. W. T., by the Rev. Dr. C. Avery Mason, executive secretary for Forward in Service. The broadcast will be carried by a long list of stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Forward in Service recently suggested that radio could be of help in emphasizing its various study and activity themes, and already there has been a significant response. Bishop Oliver L. Loring, of Maine, writes that he believes "the alert clergy" will follow the suggestions received concerning Lenten emphasis on The Christian Doctrine of Man, and adds, "Occasionally I have an opportunity to address sections of the diocese through a radio station in Portland and one in Bangor. Probably my own assistance in this program will be necessarily rather a modest effort, but I believe in its importance."

An Archdeacon writes: "I shall be pleased to broadcast on the subject during the month of February. Rector of an Indiana parish explains that his morning services are broadcast by a local station, and says "I sfall be glad to cooperate as I can with the splendid idea of emphasizing The Christian Doctrine of Man."

From the Cathedral Church of St. Mark, Minneapolis, "We broadcast every Sunday morning and on each morning I have an opportunity to spread some of the information sent us by you."

From Atlanta, Georgia: "I shall certainly be glad to cooperate with the emphasis you are seeking to place on the Christian Doctrine of Man, and shall try to plan at least two sermons designed to further this Christian teaching. Our service is always broadcast over the radio."

A rector who conducts a weekly broadcast says, "You may be sure that I would like to present the subject," and asks if literature could be sent to requests from the listening audience, and compliments the Blue Network for generous cooperation. From Auburn, New York, comes assurance that the rector of St. Peter's will broadcast two Sundays in Lent.

Other assurances that radio broadcasts will tell of the Forward in Service theme, have come from Springfield, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; Burlington, Vermont; Wyoming, Ohio; Baltimore, Md.; Parkersburg, W. Va.; Watertown, South Dakota; Phoenix, Arizona, and other places.

CHAPLAIN BROADCASTS TO COAST GUARD UNITS

Washington, D. C.—A "circuit rider" naval chaplain who serves men and officers of United States Coast Guard units stationed on islands and coastal establishments near here has effectively solved the problem of how to provide divine services for his widely scattered congregation. Chaplain Frank R. Morton found it impossible to visit each unit for Divine Services so at the invitation of Radio Station WPRO, Providence, R. I., the Chaplain broadcasts services for all shore stations and boats each Sunday morning. He then conducts services in person for groups at the larger stations.

The hour of 8:45 to 9 A. M. was chosen as a most convenient time for his Coast Guard congregation and because it would not interfere with local church programs. A glee club and octette composed of Coast Guardsmen from the section furnish music for the broadcast and the organist is George Hart, Seaman, first class, USCG.

Chaplain Morton has met with ministers, priests, and rabbis in the section and has posted bulletins at each station advising time and place of church services within the immediate locale of each station.

During the week he travels from station to station with definite days scheduled for conferences and other activities of the chaplain.

FOREIGN

In the Chamber many Members await Mr. Speaker. As he enters with the Chaplain and advances to the Bar, he bows. The Members also bow to him. Tradition has it that the Speaker bows as to the altar which once stood in St. Stephen's Chapel, which later became the House of Commons. But in the way that we have, the religious observance has subtly changed to an action denoting respect for the House and the House for Mr. Speaker. Far from the Bar he advances to the Table, bows again, and Members respond in like fashion. All in deep silence.

Mr. Speaker moves to the foot of the Chair, the Chaplain close to him. The service begins.

God, be merciful unto us, and bless us; and show us the light of His countenance; and be merciful unto us;

That Thy way may be known upon earth. Thy saving health among all nations. . . .

So runs the prayer which is, in fact, Psalm 67. The Chaplain's voice is soft and sincere. He knows the magic of that Psalm and draws from it all the soul's desire of him who made it.

For a few minutes we are in church. The Chamber fits the occasion, with its oak-panelled fluted interior and high roof, from which hang many great chandeliers softly floodlighting the place. Here we are completely de-

Hugh Hooper, Hudson Falls, from whose parish Mr. Hay went into Orders, had the Litany, and epistoler and gospeler were the Rev. Francis F. E. Blake and Archdeacon Hastings. Mr. Hay will continue in his office as curate at the Cathedral.

DEATHS

Rev. Charles Winfred Douglas

The Rev. Charles Winfred Douglas, canon of St. John's Cathedral in Denver, Colorado, and widely known through the Church as a composer of religious music, died at Santa Rosa, Cal., late January 18, of a heart ailment. He was 77 years old.

Canon Douglas was born in Oswego, N. Y., and attended Syracuse University and St. Andrew's Divinity School in Syracuse. He studied church music abroad from 1903 to 1905, after a number of years as a church organist in Syracuse. In 1907 he became canon of St. Paul's Cathedral in Fond du Lac, Wis., remaining there until 1934 when he went to Denver.

The Church owes a tremendous debt to him as well as the Joint Commission on Revision of the Hymnal, of which he was musical editor. His indefatigable labors and extraordinary knowledge in great measure made possible the publication of the Hymnal of 1940, published last year.

He also edited many collections of church music, including "The Order of Matins," "Songs of the Church," "The St. Dunstan Psalter," and "The Monastic Diurnal."

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

JUST FOR TONIGHT

Oh, Father, who my prayer hath heard
And kept me since the morning's light,
Hear me now when again I pray—
Just for tonight.

For blessings countless as the sand
Showered upon me since the light;
I thank Thee and would ask for more—
Just for tonight.

Keep me, oh! keep me, Heavenly King,
And thus display Thy gracious might;
Under Thine own protecting wing—
Just for tonight.

Thro' hours of darkness, well I know,
I am not hidden from Thy sight;
But much I need Thy loving care—
Just for tonight.

From every hurtful thing defend,
And keep me safe till morning light;
Send angels to protect Thy child—
Just for tonight.

If in Thine All-wise Providence
My spirit wings its upward flight;
Let Heaven's portals open wide—
Just for tonight!

—Selected.

Do not think of one falsity as harmless, and another as slight, and another as unintended. Cast them all aside; they may be light and accidental, but they are an ugly soot from the smoke of the pit, for all that; and it is better that our hearts should be swept clean of them, without over care as to which is largest or blackest. —Ruskin.

If called like Abram's child to climb
The hill of Sacrifice,
Some angel may be there in time
Deliverance shall arise.
Or if some darker lot be good
Oh, teach us to endure
The sorrow, pain and solitude
That make the spirit pure.

—Sel.

Christmas bids us never to despair, no matter how dark the night. Something new and surprising will make its advent in our lives, and in the world, torn and tormented, setting our days to music. It is as we think, as we believe in our hearts, and act in our lives —a daring adventure of undiscourageable good will which, by the grace of God, cannot finally fail.

CHRISTMAS CHEER INDEED!

From Chaplain E. A. de Bordenavo, U. S. N., Navy 157, FPO, NYC, December 28, 1943.

To the Rev. P. F. Hall, 10 W. Linden Street, Alexandria, Virginia:

It was swell of you to send me a Christmas card and I certainly did appreciate it. Separation from one's family and friends is about the worst thing of all about this war, especially at Christmas time and to have them remember you makes up for a lot. Thanks.

Speaking of Christmas, we had about the best possible one here in Sicily. We got our sailors interested in having a party for the poor kids all around us, so they began donating their old clothes which we had made into kids clothes, then they donated part of their canteen rations, over 4500 boxes of cookies, 5000 bars of candy and other things too. Then Christmas afternoon we invited the kids into the Base. Over 2000 kids took us up on it and for a while I was sure some of them would be crushed in the mob that surged around Santa Claus fighting for their presents. But we had enough to go around and it is a debatable question as to whether the kids or the sailors enjoyed it most. In addition to our party here, we sent trucks with presents for kids in all the institutions in the city. Over three thousand kids were in the hospitals, etc., so all in all, the American sailors did a swell job of passing around Christmas cheer.

Our Christmas services were equally as good as the party. I held midnight service Christmas Eve at a beautiful church downtown, which was built by the Church of England. There was no electricity, so the whole Church was lighted by candles and was lovely. In spite of the blackout, the Church was filled by eleven-thirty, and by midnight soldiers and sailors were standing all the way up each aisle, all over the back, and even outside the doors! It was a magnificent service and it made us feel very close to you folks at home.

Another thing we did, we donated a pack of cigarettes to each man on every ship in the harbor, regardless of its nationality. When Santa Claus, riding in the Captain's gig, visited the flag ship of the Italian units, he was piped aboard with "ruffles and flourishes and given eight side boys—an honor formerly reserved for the King of Italy only. The ships in the harbor are still sending messages of thanks for the cigarettes.

So, we kept up the Christmas spirit—of GIVING—and it made the men pretty happy. Needless to say, it took a lot of work to get it organized, but it was worth it. And now it's HAPPY NEW YEAR TO YOU, from

E. A. deB., Chaplain.

WHAT IS MEANT BY CATHOLIC?

Mr. Editor:

In one of your issues I read your article "What is Meant by Catholic." After reading the article I was surprised to think that Bishop Conkling would utter statements, as you set them forth. Today I received a copy of "The New Start," December issue. In it I read just what the Bishop did say in his address and I see no reason for any Protestant to object. Remember he was speaking to Catholic clergy, and asked them to say a daily Mass. The Book of Common Prayer makes such provision, if one follows the rubrics as set forth in re Epistles and Gospels, and the Proper Prefaces. As to Catholics being evangelists, if you will state the statement as given by the Bishop no one could take objection to it. It was a pep talk to priests, some of whom perhaps were a little lazy and who rejoice in their beds as stated in Psalm 149, verse 5. My grandmother told us children "it's not the butter, but the way it is spread." The butter as used by the Bishop is good and sound, even if not sweet to the Southern Churchman. It's the way you spread it that puts the Bishop in the wrong light. In justice please print.

Canon Henry A. Link,
Rock Springs, Wyo.

THANK YOU

Mr. Editor:

First, I want to thank you for reminding me, among the engrossing cares of these war times, that General Lee's birthday today is one for which always to be thankful. I believe that nobody since St. Paul has set such an example. That the day is less generally recognized there is a great loss to this whole country.

May I ask for another copy of the Southern Churchman for January 15? Mine has more ground to cover than it can, for it is so valuable I want to give away one and keep one.

Your life-long reader,

Mrs. James F. Plummer.
Mobile, Ala., Jan. 19, 1944.

ORDINATION

Priest

The Rev. Holt Hutton Graham was advanced to the priesthood on January 27 in the chapel of the Church Missions House, New York, N. Y., with Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker officiating. Mr. Graham was presented by the Rev. Dr. George A. Wieland, director of the Home Department of the National Council, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Frederic C. Grant of Union Theological Seminary.

Mr. Graham was ordained deacon in Epiphany, Seattle, Wash., in 1943. This, his home parish, was formerly in charge of Dr. Wieland, who preached at the ordination to the diaconate. He is a graduate of the University of Washington, has his Master's degree from Columbia University, and his degree in Divinity from Union Seminary. He worked for two summers as assistant to the rector of Epiphany, Seattle, and was locum tenens there during September and October, 1943.

Four (academic) years were spent as a student chaplain under the Rev. Otis Rice at St. Luke's Hospital, New York City. Since the fall of 1941, Mr. Graham has been assistant to the Chaplain at Columbia University, one year with Chaplain Raymond C. Knov, and two years with the Rev. Stephen F. Bayne, Jr.

At present Mr. Graham is assistant to the chaplain at Columbia and will continue in that work as assistant to the Rev. Otis Rice who will be locum

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

IN A MEETING of men the other evening the phrase "quiet time" was discussed and several of the men gave their concept of the phrase, what it meant to them. We have used that phrase often on "Haven". Perhaps a detailed examination of what we mean by it would be helpful. The substance of it all is contained in Isaiah 30:15: "For thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel; in returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." A quiet time is for the Christian who waits upon the Lord; it is a time of attentive listening to what God may be trying to say about a given situation or plan, about a purpose or conviction; either for self alone or for a unified group meeting together on an intimate basis of oneness in Christ. In quiet the words and noises, so deafening to the soul's ear, are stilled and we allow a full measure of time for the buzz and clamor to cease and for the still small voice of God to speak. Often a speaker with a loud voice makes us hear the sound but not the sense of it. But God in the quiet of our communion with Him. speaks so softly we must strain every part of ourselves to get the sound and the meaning of His words. We can give our undivided and earnest attention best in quiet. They that call upon the Lord must wait patiently, in quiet, to hear His voice. Only those who want to hear God's voice and to follow the plan and will which He enunciates will try to have a quiet time; for, in quiet, when we are for the moment alone with God in our thoughts, we inevitably see things more clearly, especially our own conduct and our attitudes of the past or of the moment. One who is afraid of the consequences of being alone with God and asking for His guidance will seek noise and loud company and a rapid pace. He feels he must escape from quiet, from thought concerning self. He wants to drown out any voice that would tell him to be different, to change his ways.

THE TIME FOR QUIET is whenever there is need for making wise decisions or for gaining strength to forestall temptation. But these are extra, fragment quiet times that must be preceded by an early, daily time apart in quiet for getting in tune with God's word and direction for the day. Only as we listen in quiet will we be able to hear what God is trying to say to us. The length of the quiet time depends upon the needs. One must remain shut up in his prayer closet until the blessing of sureness comes, and there is no confusion as to the right way for the day. Paul found his great and simple beliefs in quiet and held to them because he was sure of what God told him at every time of need. God was real because Christ was real. He learned in quiet that "through Christ we have access to a divine power which will do for us what we cannot do for ourselves." So we have quiet times because we know that in them comes God's help and that without God's help we would fail to reach the heights of the day's possible life from dawn on.

The World's Book in a World War

By HENRY ST. GEORGE TUCKER

THE BIBLE IS THE WORLD'S BOOK!

The Bible is the world's Book today as never before. The world war in which we are now engaged his lifted the ideals and principles of the Bible into a prominence never previously recognized. The great issues which are at stake in the present conflict are issues with which the Bible deals. We are struggling for democracy,—and democracy at its best is the product of that faith in the worth and dignity of man which the Bible inculcates. We are struggling for human freedom, and true freedom is inseparable from the conception of man, set forth in the Bible, as a being created by God, endowed by his Creator with "certain inalienable rights" which no earthly power may take away. We are struggling for world brotherhood,—and brotherhood of any deep and enduring character depends upon our conviction, nourished by the Bible, of the Fatherhood of God Who has made all mankind to be one family. In proportion as we really care for democracy, for freedom, for brotherhood, the Bible must be the great Book of the world.

The Bible is also the world's Book in the sense that it is the most universal volume of mankind. It has been translated into more different languages than any other book ever written throughout human history. Christians have long sung and that aspiration has now been literally fulfilled. At least part of the Bible has been printed in more than "a thousand tongues." The Bible in its entirety has appeared in 184 languages or dialects of the world: the New Testament in 414. Parts of the New Testament have been published in no fewer than 1058 languages. There is no other volume which can even remotely compare with the Bible as the Book which is in the hands of the men of all races and nations. It is estimated that nearly nine-tenths of all the people on the earth might now have the Pentecostal experience of "hearing in their own tongues the wonderful works of God." In this day when we are all learning to think in global terms, it is an asset of incalculable significance that the Book which has the global message is so nearly available on a global basis.

"O for a thousand tongues to sing
My great Redeemer's praise"—

THE PROGRAM of placing the Bible within the reach of every man on earth is still going on. Every month, on the average, some part of the Bible appears in a new language,—and this rate of progress has been maintained steadily for thirty years. At the present time the work of translating the Bible into native tongues is being pursued with special vigor in the Latin American countries and in Africa.

The Bible is not only being circulated on an unprecedented scale but is probably being read more widely than at any other period in the history of the world. One reason for this is that it is more extensively available to all the diverse peoples. Another reason is that a larger percentage of the population of the world is literate,—and therefore able to read the Bible,—than ever before. But there is still another and deeper reason,—namely, that in the tragic circumstances of our time people are turning to the Bible with new earnestness for light both on their own personal difficulties and on the problems of human life and destiny. They want to know, in the face of the world's chaos, whether our earthly existence has moral and spiritual meaning. They want to know, in the midst of untold suffering, whether everything is a blind enigma or whether their lives really "make sense." And it is in the Bible that their questions are most clearly answered. For in its pages they are not left to grope dimly for some vague clue to life's meaning; here they find that a Word of God has been vouchsafed to them in Christ which gives light and guidance and redemption. They discover what the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews meant when he spoke of "the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that have been made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain."

ONE OF THE MOST impressive of all evidences of the power of the Bible comes to us from the men in the armed forces. They are finding in it something which enables them to face the most terrible ordeals that life can bring. In a single week recently the American Bible Society received fifteen contributions, wholly unsolicited, from men in their country's service. They came from privates, from seamen, and officers of various ranks. Some of them came from across the Atlantic, others from across the Pacific. With each gift came a word of appreciation for what the Bible was meaning to them and of their desire that it should mean something of similar importance to their comrades in arms.

How dramatic is the story of that little group of men with Eddie Rickenbacker, cast adrift from a ruined plane, in a life-boat for weeks in the trackless wastes of the South Pacific! One of them, Johnny Bartek, had his New Testament with him. Every evening he read from it to his comrades. The words that they heard from it buoyed their spirits as nothing else could do. They came to feel that underneath them there were Everlasting Arms. Faith and hope were kept alive by that experience. As a result of this incident, and of others like it, more than 41,000 New Testaments in waterproof containers for the life-boats of ships at sea and the "crash kits" used by navy blimps and planes, have been supplied by the Bible Society with government approval.

It is also gratifying that the War Department is officially printing the Scriptures,—in Protestant, Catholic and Jewish editions,—for the men in the Army. Private organizations, particularly the American Bible Society, are supplying Bibles and Testaments to the chaplains of the Army and Navy, the Marine Corps, the Merchant Marine, the Coast Guard, the Seabees, the Wacs and the Waves.

People in civilian life are also reading the Bible in increasing numbers. A Gallup poll taken a year ago indicated that probably ten million men and women had begun to read the Bible since Pearl Harbor. The American Bible Society reports that in 1942 it distributed more copies of the Scriptures than in any other year of its long service of 127 years. The figure reached the surprising total of more than 8,230,000 copies.

Understanding the Book of Revelation

The Day of Armageddon

By WILLIAM R. MOODY

This is the fourth in a Series of Sermons on the Book of Revelation. Next week I shall bring this Series to a close.

LET US RUN OVER, briefly, some of the things we have discovered about this book. First, its structure! It is not like the other books that you know. It is as carefully and as intricately constructed as a piece of symphonic music. Indeed, it is much closer kin to music than to literature. It is a symphony in words.

When you listen to a symphony rendered by a great orchestra, it does not occur to you that you are listening to a very intricate and complicated exercise in arithmetic, yet so you are. Every symphony, and indeed every piece of music, is arranged on a strict mathematical pattern, and if you vary that pattern even a little bit, you change the music. Now, the Book of Revelation is built on an intricate mathematical pattern. Like a movement in a symphony it has a central theme; its theme is judgment, the judgment of God upon a sinful world; and a counter-theme, the bliss and rapturous happiness of the Redeemed. And out of the interplay of these two rises the great climax of the book, and the triumph of the Righteous. Theme and counter-theme repeat themselves in the book at regularly spaced and predictable intervals. The central theme of Judgment is basicly repeated seven times, (four times on an earthly level, and three grand cycles on the spiritual level) each time enlarged, enriched, heightened, as it moves toward the inevitable climax.

This means, of course, that the Book of Revelation is not a history book, and should not be used as if it were a history book.

The Book of Revelation is built upon a web of numbers, and these numbers are always symbols. Every time a number appears in the book it has the same symbolic meaning. There are other symbols in the book, too; for the man who wrote this book had a tremendous imagination, a prodigal imagination,—but it is the meaning of the numbers which gives us the real key to the book.

Let us run over, briefly, the meaning of some of the key-numbers.

THREE IS THE NUMBER for the "spiritual world"; four is the number for the "physical world"; the number six symbolizes man, humanity; seven means "all the diverse elements which make up a situation brought together into completeness"; the number ten is the number for power; and the number twelve signifies the True Israel of God, the Church of the Redeemed in Christ Jesus.

When a number is multiplied by ten it means power; but when a number is multiplied by one hundred (ten times ten),—a number which in this book always has an evil significance,—it means the highest peak of evil power. One thousand, however, is the number for Heavenly Power, and this number takes more and more importance as the book moves toward its climax.

When a number is multiplied by itself, it means not only the intensification of the effect of the thing, but the intensification of every element which goes to make up the thing itself.

The most significant number in the book until we reach the climax is the number seven, which means "completeness made up of many diverse elements drawn into one." The central theme of the book, which is judgment, is repeated seven times in measured cycles. The great cycles are themselves broken up into seven parts. Thus we have the central theme given to us as "seven times seven", indicating the absolute and final completeness with which God will judge this sinful world!

Now, of what is the number seven composed? What does it take to make a thing "complete"? The author of the Book of Revelation indicates this to us by the way in which he divides the number seven. When he breaks into a cycle of judgment, as he sometimes does, he always breaks that cycle into four and three, or three and four, depending upon whether it is viewed from man's angle or from God's. The number four, drawn from the "four corners of the earth", means "the physical world", and the number three means "the spiritual world", and these two, together, make "completeness".

Now, when you see that, you are in a position to see the tragedy of the number six, which is applied to man! You are more than your body, because you have a soul; and you are more than naked spirit, because you have a body. You are both of these together. And if you were all that God intended you to be, your number would be seven,—completeness! Perfection! But your number is not seven. When God totals us up, He finds not seven but six. Something is not there which should be there! Something which He entrusted to us at the beginning has been lost! And it is by the measure of that failure to come up to what we should be that we are judged.

THIS NUMBER, SIX, which stands for our failures, our sins, multiplies itself. Six becomes sixty, and sixty becomes six hundred,—and the crushing total of it is the number of the Beast, the prime Enemy of God, and the devourer of men,—six, and sixty, and six hundred!

Now you see, along with me, how this book is put together. It is written around a central theme and counter theme; the failure to live up to the perfection which God intended for man, and the dreadful, deadly power of that failure to curse human life, and to cast a blight upon the face of the living world; and along with that, fitting into it, integrating itself with it, the picture of what God did, and is still doing, to retrieve that failure, and to present a redeemed humanity before the throne of His mercy!

The Book of Revelation is the child of conflict,—the conflict between the Church and the world,—the Church which is the Fellowship of those whom God has saved through Jesus, and the world, which is the symbol of the sum-total of all the things in which mankind has failed, has disappointed God, and marred and marked life for destruction.

The conflict,—in so far as the writer of the Book of Revelation is concerned,—was very real. He was in the midst of it. Christians were under persecution. The writer, himself, had felt the power of the enemies of the Redeemed. The Church was in the catacombs. Every day the Christians were meeting the wild beasts in the arena, and the blood of the martyrs made red the manes of the lions.

But in the Book of Revelation the enemies of the Church are numbered three. This, in itself, is significant, for here, again, the number is a symbol. The number three signifies spiritual. It does not mean that there are only three enemies of the Church; it means that the enemies of the Church find their real power and terror in spiritual things. It signifies that though the enemies of Christ may kill the bodies of the martyr Christians in the arena, that is not reason to fear them. Their real menace is their ability to kill the souls of men and women, while leaving their bodies alive. To kill the body was nothing: to kill the soul was death.

I spoke last week of these great enemies,—and remember, they are the measure of our own failures;—the first is Satan, the great Red Dragon of Chapter Twelve, who represents the total spirit of evil in mankind; and the second is the tyranny of pagan materialism over the minds and hearts of men, best visualized, perhaps, in the pagan State, demanding loyalty that a true man can give only to God; and the third is the Traitor-Church,—not the true Church, but the apostate Church,—those in the Church, who, for safety, or for wealth, or for ease, or for power, have sold themselves to the pagan world. These three, who are the total measure of our sins, array themselves against Jesus, the perfect Man,—Jesus, who by His perfection has taken away humanity's reproach, the One whose number is SEVEN!

AND SO THE STAGE IS SET for the final battle,—ARMAGEDDON!

But before I speak of the final battle, and give you what I think is the true interpretation of it, I must speak of another matter, namely that great section of Revelation which deals with the vision of the Fall of Babylon,—Chapters Seventeen and Eighteen. This is one of the most striking, yet one of the most difficult sections of the book. And I have not time to deal with it adequately, yet cannot leave it out. You will just have to take it as I give it to you, with the assurance that I have good reason for my interpretation.

This passage describes a sinful woman, arrayed in the finery and jewels which she has bought with her shame, clothed in scarlet, and seated upon a scarlet-covered beast, and drunken with the blood of the Saints.

The story goes on to describe, in some of the most picturesque language in the book, the iniquity of this woman, and her greediness, and how she directs the savage scarlet beast in his deeds of tyranny and of terror for her own gain. And she, and the beast, and those under their sway, make war upon the true Church with savage and relentless power.

Many commentators think that the scarlet-clad woman on the blood-red Beast is Imperial Rome, with which the Christians had such a desperate quarrel. And the first reading of the account gives color to that interpretation,—but I believe that it is not the true interpretation. The vision has a broader scope.

HERE, IN ANOTHER CYCLE, the writer is bringing before us a heighfened picture of the second and third great Enemies of the true Church, which we have met before. The scarlet beast is the power of the pagan world-order, of which Imperial Rome was but one passing phase. And the Scarlet Woman was the Apostate and Traitor Church! Here we have a pattern which repeats itself throughout history, and which may be applied in any age. The Traitor-Church sells herself to the pagan world, making herself rich and fat, and decking herself with jewels, forsaking the true road, the hard road, to God's eternal glory, and selling herself out for a handful of earthly gain.

Then what happens, when the Apostate, who has forsaken the heavenly vision and has sold herself for earthly gain, reaches the peak of her reward for her betrayal? Suddenly, and without warning, the Beast to whom she has sold herself, turns upon her, and rends her limb from limb! This pattern fits your life, as an individual, just as well as the life of the whole Church, if you have deserted some noble vision for unworthy motives.

So Judas Iscariot, having received the coveted thirty pieces of silver for the betrayal of Jesus, is rent by guilty storms of remorse and goes out and hangs himself.

SO, JERUSALEM, the Holy City, denying her heritage, delivers her Messiah to the pagan Roman Governor to be crucified, and in less than forty years is herself crucified and destroyed by pagan Rome.

So the individual Christian, having denied the vows of his baptism, and having for selfish or greedy pleasure brought his Master again to the cross, is eaten up and enmonstered by his own guilty sins!

So, the stage is set! So we approach the great climax of the book, the final, the inevitable battle between good and evil, between righteousness and sin,—ARMAGEDDON!

All the lines in the book have been working up, and up to this moment. All the little threads, all the seemingly meaningless touches, draw together, and the pattern of them becomes clearer and clearer, as we approach Armageddon!

From the beginning of the book we have had theme and counter-theme, judgment and salvation opposite each other. The tension mounts, grows higher with each recurring cycle. The picture grows clearer, is limned, delineated, and the final clash between the Beast and his legions, and the Son of Man is inevitable!

THE TIME ARRIVES! We have had foreshadowings of it,—distant glimpses,—incomplete fragments,—rapidly drawn sketches: now the thing itself! The forces of evil, beguiled by the spirits of their own filthiness, have gathered themselves to the battlefield! There they are, the monster-hatreds, the cruelties, the tragic misunderstandings, the failings, the wickedness of mankind in horrid ranks, thirsting for the blood of the Righteous! Then, as by the impatient snatching of a giant hand, the heavens are ripped asunder, and the Conquerer appears! The Son of Man, and the Son of God!

Now, the strange thing about this battle is that there is no battle! He appears there in the sky, and His enemies are defeated! "Out of Zion hath God appeared in perfect beauty!" When He is lifted up there on high, He is already the Conquerer! This, my friends, is a description of the Crucifixion of Jesus! Calvary was Armageddon!

Calvary was Armageddon! This, the climax of the book, suddenly reveals it in our eyes! And the light of it runs down like a shower of gold into every line, and every word, and every symbol in the book! The Book of Revelation is a symphony of word and sound and color, woven around this central picture of the Crucifixion of our Lord! And the pattern of it is repeated down the ages! Every time we break the Bread of His Body, and pour out the Wine of His Sac-

Good Neighbors Cooperate

We publish in this issue a report by George P. Howard of the Committee of Cooperation on religious conditions in South America. It is an illuminating report. Surely every thinking Christian, Protestant or Roman Catholic, desires to see our relations with our South and Central American neighbors, improve. Where there is distrust and lack of confidence, a good neighbor policy has little chance of bearing fruit. Protestantism and Roman Catholicism have lived as neighbors in this country since its days of colonization. There have been violent periods of strife and misunderstanding. But the overall picture is a fairly happy one. Surely today, with a world torn by strife, no one desires to see the old frictions of bygone religious feuds resurrected.

However we do feel, and feel very strongly, that our State Department should safeguard with zealous care the rights of our Protestant missions in the South American countries, since they have been granted the right to work there, by the governments of those countries. The Roman Church is not aiding the build up of the good neighbor policy, when she attacks the very fine work being done by the Protestant missions. The Roman Church has prospered in this country under absolute freedom of worship. She stands to gain more in South America, by the recognition of this fact, than by a hard and intolerant attitude toward Protestanism.

Maybe under God's guidance both Roman Catholics and Protestants will learn something from their brethren on the Continent of Europe, who under the scourge of Nazism have learned to cooperate. It is the only way out.

The Spirit of a People

The siege of Leningrad has been lifted. The press flashes this bit of news across the world. There is a tremendous story back of that bit of news. If you wish to learn something of the Spirit of a people, we suggest that you get a copy of the "Siege of Leningrad by Boris Skomorovsky and E. G. Morris (E. P. Dutton & Co., publishers) and read what happened behind the ring of steel the Germans threw around Leningrad. You may be violently opposed to the Soviet philosophy of government. You may fear the power of the Soviets. But you will be thrilled by the valor of a people, who had the spirit to fight on, when everything pointed to hopeless defeat. They willed as a unit to win their way to victory.

There is a great lesson in the lifting of the siege of Leningrad. This people learned through the turmoil of battle to stand as a united people. As the writer says, "the Leningradsky were under no illusions as to the future. There was no feeling that the bitter time was over and normal life could begin, but with the breaking of the blockade there was a sudden surge of spirit and a certainty that the Fascists would be driven out of all Russia, just as they had been driven back in the Leningrad area. There was a deep knowledge that the free people of Leningrad had lighted a lamp to point the path of resistance to Fascism everywhere."

With that statement we agree. Christians profess to be free men in Christ. Christians can learn a great deal from the magnificent spirit of the besieged people of Leningrad. Cooperation; each person assuming his own share of the responsibility to fight the evil forces attacking; the carrying on of normal life activity, while the guns of the Satanic forces roar in the ears; a cheerfulness that could not be stamped out by the horror of indescribable scenes of death and destruction; and finally the will to win, which brought victory.

As Christians we must have the will to win Christ's victory. We must have the courage of our convictions that His way is the only way. We must learn what it means to cooperate with other groups in a real Christian spirit of a unified offensive, against the arrayed evil forces about us.

The spirit of a people who would not be defeated is the spirit of a people who have the will to win. Christians should have the will to win the kingdoms of this world for God and His Christ.

The Bishop-elect of South Carolina

Congratulations are in order both to the Diocese of South Carolina, and to the Rev. Thomas N. Carruthers, the recipient of the highest honor the Diocese could bestow—its new bishop-elect. We do not know at this writing whether Dr. Carruthers has accepted. It is our sincere hope that he will accept.

Tom Carruthers will bring to the episcopate rare talents of leadership, and spiritual gifts of wise counselling. It was our privilege to have served with him in the Diocese of Texas and sit with him in two General Conventions. We are confident that if he accepts, the people of the Diocese of South Carolina will be ably led by a fine spiritual leader and a capable administrator.

Are Protestant Missions an Obstacle to the Good Neighbor Policy?

By GEORGE P. HOWARD

Evangelist to Latin America working under the Committee of Cooperation in Latin America.

THIS WAS THE QUESTION I asked of leaders of thought in a recent trip through Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Peru, Bolivia, Colombia and Mexico. In hundreds of interviews I was able to discover that the best thought in Latin America ridicules any such idea. Dr. Casal Castel, a prominent Argentine educator and the leading Roman Catholic writer of that country, says in a written statement which he gave me: "I consider that the presence of Protestant missionaries and teachers who have come from the United States to my country, is the most effective expression of Good Neighborliness. It is the spiritual expression of American solidarity. When America shall have done away with all 'spiritual tariff walls' on that day the dream that we have had for the new world will have been fulfilled." He further adds that when we deprive others of their liberty, sooner or later we lose our own.

Dr. Ossorio y Gallardo, former ambassador from the Spanish Republic to Argentina, said to me: "As a Catholic I do not see that you as a Protestant have anything to do in South America. But as a liberal and as a man of democratic spirit, I shall fight to defend your right to preach your Gospel anywhere and everywhere." He said that only a small majority in Spain, and the same was true in most South American countries, were intelligent, sincere followers of the teachings of the Catholic Church. "All fascists in Argentina", he said, "are Catholic, and the fact that they fight freedom and democracy, proves clearly that they are the defenders of privilege rather than the followers of a faith."

Dr. Manuel Carlos Ferraz, President of the Supreme Court of the State of San Paulo, Brazil, said: "Protestantism has been a stimulus to Catholicism in my country. It has aroused that church from its sleep of centuries. When Catholicism was the State religion of Brazil and it had no competition, that church fell into a state of decadence."

Dr. Hugo Fernandez Artucio, a member of the Uruguayan House of Deputies, a prominent writer and discoverer of the Nazi net-work in Uruguay, said to me: "Protestant missionaries and teachers represent the spiritual America which Uruguayans love. . . The spirit of Catholic intolerance which is being reflected in the foreign policy of the United States at present, is very disturbing to us in Uruguay; we take it as a symptom of a dangerous leaning toward totalitarianism. There is evidently a clerical uprising in the world today and it would appear that it is gaining strength in the United States."

Dr. Ghioldi, writer, educator and editor of an important Buenos Aires daily, and a recent delegate from the Argentine Government to the United States to study educational problems, wrote to me as follows:

THE WORK ACCOMPLISHED by British and American missionaries has never created difficulties, nor stirred up trouble. Its very variety,—preaching, service in the interest of human welfare, a high type of recreational activity and sense of human solidarity,—all are looked upon with great sympathy by those of us who see in religion a force that tends to draw men together. As an educator, I cannot forget the valuable contribution which a Protestant educator made to the development of education in my country by introducing the Lancastarian method of teaching. The attitude of those who have questioned the value and legitimacy of Protestant missions reveals the fact that they are out of step with the times. Is not the world today struggling for religious freedom? Has not the world discovered with horror the consequences of a religious totalitarianism?"

"It were well for those who are over zealous in emphasizing the differences between Protestantism and Catholicism to remember that there is a common root which binds these two together. I refer to the Bible. In the presence of that book, jealousies and attitudes of intolerance ought to fade away."

I WILL SAY FURTHER: Many South Americans are alarmed at the policy of the United States which tends to reinforce the political power of the Catholic Church in South America, especially in those countries in which that church supports autocratic governments. The final result is the strengthening of dictatorship on our Continent."

"There is no hostility on my part toward Roman Catholics, but it must be remembered that in Latin America a priesthood predominates which has been trained in the tradition of Spain and Italy, which is very different from the Catholic tradition in other countries."

Ex-president Alessandri of Chile said to me in a personal letter: "I have no hesitation at all in declaring that as a result of a continuous and attentive observation of the work Protestantism realizes in my country, I give it my unstinted applause and recognize that it has always contributed to the progress of our country and the moral improvement of our people. Its schools, its philanthropic and social service activities, its propaganda and its teachings have always been inspired by the highest Christian principles and by the ethical doctrines of love and peace to all men."

Manuel Seoane, editor of Chile's most popular magazine, after a recent visit to the United States wrote a book with his impressions. He there remarks that he had noticed that the influence of the United States government was producing a return of Protestant missionaries from South America and encouraging the sending of Roman Catholic missionaries. "We resent", he said to me in a signed statement, "that an inquisitorial office established in any foreign office should decide whom we are to entertain as our guests and who should not enter our countries". Dr. Seoane is a Catholic with a sister who teaches in a Nun's school in this country.

Perhaps the attitude of the vast majority of Latin Americans could not be summed up better than by the statement of Dr. Luis Alberto Sanchez, a distinguished Peruvian publicist, who is at present lecturing at Michigan University, and who recently said:

FUNDAMENTALLY a believing people, though temporarily skeptical and consequently filled with uncertainty, Latin Americans need to find their way by looking up, by taking their bearings and examining different routes. My own experience has taught me that this slow and painful method, this wading through layers of patient routine, is the best way of getting at the essence of things. Let people from everywhere come to our countries; let them come each with his truth, his culture, his language, his religion. Here with us, they will be converted to what is ours in the measure to which what is ours is purified and amplified in contact with what is theirs. Our great weakness, I repeat, is that of living colonially and of being treated as colonials. We do not need liberators whose first word to us would be one learned in some foreign office, however generous or righteous that word might be. Let religious faith come to us without the trappings of monopoly and without the lubrication of imperial privilege. Faith is not created nor strengthened by external methods. It is an intimate process, an unsettling process, an eminently personal process. It is generated as the result of an irresistible necessity and it develops best in open spaces, in contact with other lives, other ideas, and above all, in contact with nature which though close to man is still so foreign to man."

"Let no government office, therefore, pretend to take us under its tutelage even in matters religious. Let them leave us free to determine at least our metaphysical destiny, since they have deprived us of the privilege of doing this in a physical sense. And may they believe us when we say that there are areas in individual and collective life where the worst prescription—is a prescription! And the problem we have been considering is a case in point."

THE WORLD'S BOOK IN A WORLD AT WAR

One of the interesting items in the story of their distribution has to do with the prison camps. Already over half a million copies, in thirty-four different languages, have been sent to these men, on both sides of the battle line, bringing comfort and hope to them in their dreary existence behind the barbed wire.

In most of the countries occupied by the Axis there is today a famine of Scriptures. In France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, Roumania, Italy, the printing of the Bible has almost entirely ceased,—due partly to the scarcity of paper, partly to the fact that Nazism is not concerned to encourage the circulation of the Bible. There is plenty of paper for printing "Mein Kampf", little or none for the Bible. The Scriptures in the European languages must be put at the disposal of the churches in these lands the moment the war is over. With shipments of food and medicine from America for weakened bodies must go also nourishment for impoverished spirits.

ANOTHER VAST GROUP for whom the Bible must be provided after the war is the Russian people. For nearly twenty years the Bible has not been printed in Russia. Will the new situation after the war afford an opportunity for the Bible in that great land? We cannot be sure, but there are grounds for hope. At least we can be prepared to take advantage of whatever opening may come. The American Bible Society is therefore today preparing plates for a new Russian Bible and is already printing parts of the Bible in the Russian tongue in an inexpensive form.

The peoples of Asia and Africa and the Islands of the Seas will also need our help in making the world's Book available to them. Think, for example, of China. There is good reason to believe that after the war China will present one of the greatest opportunities for Christian advance in many centuries. The "New Life Movement," which has been launched by those two great Christian statesmen, Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek, as the pattern on which they hope that the new China may be built, is chiefly based on the New Testament. What the Bible meant to the American colonies in laying the moral and spiritual foundations of our own nation three centuries ago, the Bible may now mean to China in its rebirth to which we all look forward. The 450,000,000 Chinese will doubtless rapidly become a literate people. If at the same time the Bible becomes a living force in Chinese society, there will be solid foundations for its future development. In that process, we who know what the Bible has meant to our own national life should rejoice to have a part.

In one of the dispatches from Cairo earlier this month, describing the momentous meeting of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, a little incident was reported which is a vivid symbol of what the Bible means. In a cablegram from one of the American correspondents it was stated that Chiang Kai-shek arose early every morning, during his crowded days of intense activity in Egypt, in order to devote a half hour to Bible reading and to prayer. This incident recalls another event in the life of the Generalissimo some years ago. When he was kidnapped in 1936 and held a prisoner in Shensi the one privilege that he asked of his captors was that of being permitted to have a Bible for his daily use. What a thrilling testimony to the source of power which this great Chinese Christian finds in the Bible! And what an example to all of us who desire that our own lives should touch the depths of spiritual power!

BOOK OF REVELATION

rifice upon the Holy Tables in our Churches, we remind ourselves, and reenact before our eyes, the story of His Triumph at Armageddon!

There, bringing Him to His Cross, was the corrupt and pagan State, arrogating to itself the powers and the loyalties which belong only to God; and there, betraying Him to the Roman Governor,—no,—forcing the Roman Governor's hand, was the High Priest of Israel, and the Jewish Sanhedrin,—the Apostate Church,—betraying its own Messiah for greed and jealous hatred! And,—God help us!,—there we stand, too, driving the nails into His hands, and the spear into His side by our sins!

There, there, on that battlefield, lifted high as if to split the heavens, there He is, upon the terrible cross,—the cross foreseen and accepted! And hanging there, between earth and Heaven, stained with His own precious Blood, He conquers them! He is the Conquering Jesus,—Victim and Victor,—Sacrifice and King!

MUSIC IN THE RELIGIOUS GROWTH OF CHILDREN, by Elizabeth Shields. Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tenn. 128 pages. $1.25.

This was primarily written to be used as a course for a group desiring to study and discuss the title topic. However it might well serve for a teacher of a Sunday School class, especially for children under twelve, or for use by parents who are sensitive to the use that can be made of music in the religious training of their children. The principles to be followed are amply illustrated, in many cases with the actual music printed in the book. Miss Shields, a Presbyterian, has been a pioneer in the religious education of young children. F. J. Warnicke.

Diocesan Conventions

MICHIGAN HOLDS 111TH ANNUAL MEETING

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 27—The Diocese of Michigan emerged from its One Hundred and Eleventh Annual Convention about an hour ago, and for sheer good humor and honest attempts to find common grounds of agreement, this Convention never was excelled. The official count has not yet been taken, but the great majority of the 120 parishes and missions were represented, and the auditorium of St. Paul's Cathedral fairly bulged with clergy and lay delegates.

Probably the most important action of the Convention was the approval of the request of the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Creighton, D. D., for a Coadjutor for the reason of extent of diocesan work. Application will at once be made to all Bishops and Standing Committees of the Church for their approval, and it is probable that a special Convention of the diocese will be called in May for the election.

The Executive Council of the diocese through the Rev. Irwin C. Johnson, vice-president, presented a report which included a greatly increased Missionary Extension budget amounting to $117,799, including $35,000 for the General Church. The Convention adopted this budget and also ratified the Diocesan Assessment of $24,078. The increased budget was made possible because of the many increases in pledges from the parishes and missions, impetus for which was provided by the Diocesan Department of Promotion in an intensive program of education throughout the Convocations in the diocese last fall.

Changes in Canons

Changes in the Canons included the addition of a new section in the Canon, "Of the Vestry," providing for the limitation and control of parish indebtedness; the lowering of the age of voters in parish meetings from 21 to 18; and a new Canon, "Of Mariners' Church of Detroit and the Detroit Episcopal City Mission", which will make possible the revamping and re-organization of this important work on a more solid and business-like basis.

Five Organized Missions, having incorporated as parishes during the past year, sought admisson to union with the Convention and were accepted: St. Cyprian's, Detroit, organized 1920; St. Mark's, Detroit, organized 1928; St. John's, Plymouth, organized 1912; St. Hilda's, River Rouge, organized 1897; and St. John's, Wayne, organized 1901. In order to become parishes, these missions relinquished financial aid from the diocese. Four of these new parishes begin their corporate life debt-free, having been assisted in varying degree by the diocese to do so, and one of the four, St. Mark's, completed the payment of the indebtedness through a Gift Bond Drive.

The committee on the Bishop Page Memorial, provided for at the last Convention, presented a report which was received with interest, but the Convention could not agree on the project proposed so the committee was continued and is seeking advice as to projects in which the people of the Diocese would be interested.

Another matter referred to the next Convention is a plan for "internship" of clergy coming out of Seminaries, in order that their preparation for the Ministry may be more complete.

The annual Convention Dinner was held at Huyler's "Concourse" in the Fisher Building in Detroit. The capacity of this dining room is normally 500, and plans were originally made to accept that number of reservations and then stop. However, immediately the announcement was made that the speaker was to be Hon. the Rev. John D. Bodger, Diocesan Chaplain to the Bishop of New Guinea and sub-dean of the Cathedral there, requests for tickets came in by the dozens and it was necessary to close reservations early in the morning two full days before the Convention. Scores were unable to gain admission, although the "Concourse" authorities managed to stretch their capacity to the 600 mark.

An address was also made at the dinner by Prof. Philip B. Sullivan, formerly of St. Joseph's Church, Detroit, who was for many years an instructor in St. John's University, Shanghai, and who was recently repatriated and returned to this country on the "Gripsholm".

W. A. Convention

Concurrently with the Convention was held the 12th Annual Convention of the Woman's Aux., which met in joint session with the Convention at the opening service in St. Paul's Cathedral on January 27 to hear the annual address of Bishop Creighton.

The women then adjourned to the Central Y. W. C. A. for their own program. The special speaker that afternoon was Mrs. Charles E. Griffith, of the Diocese of Newark, a past member of the National Executive Board, and program chairman for the Triennial Meeting last October in Cleveland.

Sessions of both Conventions continue through Thursday morning, those of the Women taking the form of panel discussions under the supervision of Mrs. A. DeLong Thomas, of Dearborn, on the following subjects: College Work, Rural Work, Women in Industry, Educational Problems, Problems of Juvenile Delinquency, and Race Relations.

160TH CONVENTION MEETS IN MARYLAND

Baltimore, Md.—A warm, spring-like day greeted the members of the 160th annual Convention of the Diocese of Maryland. Usually a snow or sleet storm is on the weather man's calendar, but 1944 was different and a temperature of 70 in January, for Maryland, is quite unique.

In his address to the Convention, Bishop Powell stressed the importance of training our youth of today to be leaders of tomorrow. "When one looks at the world picture and sees what men will do as a result of their training, notably demonstrated in the action of Nazi youth, there can be no question in any fair mind as to the surpassing importance of right training of our children. The public system give little, if any, place to religious training. We are seeing the results . . . If our children do not know, we must not blame the system but only ourselves for not having thought the problem through . . . Recently, a notable example of the realization of the need for religious instruction has been set by one of the great preparatory schools of this Nation-McDonough. The able and far-seeing statesman-educator who presides over its destiny has set aside a definite period each week for religious instruction and has asked the Churches in this area to be responsible for the training of their own children."

Miss Janet Ward, new principal of Hannah More Academy, and Dr. Vernon Brown Kellett, new Headmaster of St. James School—Maryland's diocesan schools for girls and boys, were introduced to the Convention and both made excellent reports on the progress of the schools.

At the close of the Convention session, the annual meeting of the Corporation for the Relief of Widows and Children of the Clergy of the P. E. Church in Maryland was held and the Rev. William O. Smith, Jr., D. D., was elected Vice-President and Agent to fill the vacancy created by the recent death of the Rev. Benjamin B. Lovett, D. D.

LOUISIANA HOLDS 106TH CONVENTION

Large Attendance, Spirit of Harmony

New Orleans, La.—The 106th annual convention of the Diocese of Louisiana held at Christ Church Cathedral, Jan. 26-27, was noteworthy for the large attendance and for the spirit of harmony and enthusiasm displayed in its willingness to keep step with the enlarged program of the National Church. Bishop Jackson presided at all meetings, with Bishop Morris, retired, present. Financial reports showed that every parish and mission in the diocese had paid both its convention assessment and program expectancy in full. Convention adopted a budget of $51,275 for 1944, $17,810 of which is for the Convention Fund and $33,465 the program budget, out of which $10,000 is to go to the National Council. The grant to the National Council was increased, and including the gift of $1,000 from the Auxiliary, Louisiana will give $11,000 in 1944 compared to $9,000 in 1943. The new constitution passed its final reading and is now in force. Convention approved a long range program for greater support of Church institutions, and will cooperate in raising funds for a new building at All Saints', Vicksburg, for a new building at the Gaudet School in New Orleans, for a site for new Negro work in Baton Rouge, and for other objectives. A special committee was appointed by Bishop Jackson, all laymen to cooperate with the presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work. Plans were approved for recognition of the anniversary of the Rt. Rev. Leonidas M. Polk, first bishop of the diocese, and Lieutenant-General in the Confederate Army.

Noted as one of the great military leaders of the Confederacy, and known as the "Fighting Bishop," Bishop Polk was killed in battle during the Atlanta campaign in 1864, and buried in St. Paul's Churchyard, Augusta, Georgia, as it was then impossible to bring his remains to Louisiana. Plans provide for suitable markers on the public highway in Lafourche Parish, La., near his old home, long since destroyed by fire; a dignified if modest monument to be erected in St. John's Churchyard, Thibodaux, Louisiana, his home Church and of which he was a communicant, and the publishing of a book, now in course of preparation, telling of his notable contribution to both Church and State. Further plans contemplate the bringing of his remains and those of Mrs. Polk from Georgia, provided the consent of the many parties at interest can be obtained, including the heirs and the vestry of St. Paul's. Preliminary consents have already been obtained, since evidence exists that the interment in Augusta was considered as temporary and necessary because of the battling Armies between Georgia and Louisiana at the time, and that it should exist only until Louisiana could claim its own. Reinterment is to be made in the Cathedral in New Orleans, with appropriate and dignified ceremony. It is hoped that all these things can be done during the current year.

DIOCESE OF DALLAS

Dallas, Tex.—The 49th Annual Convention of the Diocees of Dallas met at Christ Church, January 27th. The Bishop's address was a powerful call to wider service in the Kingdom of God, and urged escape from the thraldom of minimum quotas. "A great new opportunity is being offered the church in this area for expansion, due to war plants and the huge number of men in military establishments. We must take advantage of this." Pleasing factors in the address were the report of much larger numbers of persons confirmed during the year, the large decrease of parochial debts, and the freedom of a number of parishes from encumbrances.

A budget allowing for additional missionary work in the diocese was adopted. Much interest was shown in the report of the Army and Navy Commission, and gratifying reports were heard of the work of the church in parishes where there are Army Camps in the vicinity. One unique ministry is that of caring for the housing and church interests of families visiting wounded and sick men in Ashburn Military Hospital in McKinney, Texas. Church people have provided fitting accompaniments for several weddings of patients in addition to other kindnesses. At Mineral Wells a great work is being done for men who are taken to this camp from civilian life and pass through a hard period of adjustment.

A motion calling for a one-day convention was carried unanimously and will go into effect next year provided the Woman's Auxiliary concurs.

A number of new clergy were welcomed into the diocesan family.

BRO. OF ST. ANDREW APPOINTS NEW FIELD DIRECTOR

Washington, D. C.—The Brotherhood of St. Andrew announces the appointment of William Ross Baley, Jr., of St. James, Langhorne, Pa., as Field Secretary. Mr. Baley is particularly well qualified for this position having been director of a Senior Chapter of the Brotherhood and counsellor of a Junior Chapter, as well as having served as an officer of the Pennsylvania Diocesan Assembly. As a member of the Extension Committee of the Assembly he has had much experience in the organization of new chapters.

He is a vestryman and lay reader, and has served as Field Commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America. This past summer he cooperated with the Rev. Waldo D. Parker in holding services at Camp Jamaica, Tullytown, Pa., where were encamped some 300 Jamaicans brought to Pennsylvania as farm workers. He is married and has three children.

Mr. Baley is now visiting active Brotherhood groups in the Army Camps, as well as civilian chapters along the East Coast.

BISHOP-ELECT DUN'S CONSECRATION ARRANGED

Washington, D. C.—The consecration of Dr. Angus Dun as bishop of Washington will take place in the Washington Cathedral April 19, at 10 A. M. The Archbishop of York is expected to be present. Bishop Sherrill will preach the sermon.

LAST DEBT OF HOLY CROSS CHURCH IS PAID

Sanford, Fla.—Holy Cross Church entered the New Year completely free of all indebtedness, the Rev. Frank Pulley stated today. He announced in the parish bulletin for Christmas Eve that a further contribution to the Chase Memorial Trust Fund on December 23 had removed the last indebtedness of $4,460 which was in the form of a mortgage on the Rectory.

The announcement recalled that during 1942 the debt of $10,550 on the Church had been cleared. Within less than two years a total of $15,010 indebtedness has been removed. The congregation raised slightly less than one-third of this, and the larger part consisted of contributions to the Memorial Trust Fund, in memory of Sydney O. Chase and Mrs. Laura D. Chase, given by their sons, Messrs. Randall Chase, Sydney O. Chase, Jr., and Franklin W. Chase. Included in the gifts for the removal of the church debt last year was a substantial sum also from Joshua C. Chase of Winter Park.

At the Annual Parish Meeting on January 12, the Rectory mortgage was burned. Bishop William H. Moreland, formerly Bishop of California, was the principal speaker.

ANNUAL MEETING

Bishops Tsu and Roberts Led Conference and W. A. Annual Meeting

Boston, Mass.—Heroism of the Christians in Free and Occupied China were presented by Bishop Y. Y. Tsu of Kwei Yang and Yunnan and Bishop William Payne Roberts of Shanghai when the 24th annual meeting of the Massachusetts Church Service League on January 12 drew a large attendance of men, women and young people for all-day sessions. After the opening service of Holy Communion in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, Bishop Tsu led a conference for clergy and laymen in the Cathedral Undercroft. The women of the diocese will hold their annual Woman's Auxiliary meeting in New England Mutual Hall with Bishop W. Blair Roberts of South Dakota as the speaker. Bishop Tsu and Bishop Roberts of Shanghai addressed the mass meeting in New England Mutual Hall at 2 P. M., and Bishop Tsu spoke again in the youth rally in the Cathedral Undercroft in the evening.

Business is always subordinated to the missionary objectives of these meetings and the necessary reports and elections were brief at the afternoon session. The Men's and Women's Divisions reported through their leaders: Dr. Frederick W. Holmes and Miss Elise G. Dexter. Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill presided at all meetings except for the women. The enthusiasm of the annual Church Service League meeting is perhaps peculiar to Massachusetts where it promotes one of the most constructive occasions for clergy and laity in the entire twelvemonth.

DIO. OF LOUISIANA REPORTS GROWTH

New Orleans, La.—In reporting growth and progress in the Diocese of Louisiana, Bishop John Long Jackson revealed the fact that there were 524 persons confirmed and received during 1943. Of these 257 were children, 242 adults, and 25 were received from the Roman Catholic Church. Included in the total are 36 men in the armed services who were presented by camp chaplains and clergy of the diocese.

Bishop Jackson rejoices also in the fact that "Nearly every church in the diocese is meeting both its privilege of sharing in the support of our diocesan and national missionary work and its duty in paying the Convention assessment."

New Orleans, La.—Trinity Record, monthly magazine of Trinity Church, New Orleans, completed its 50th year of continuous publication with its issue of November, 1943. Volume forty-nine closed with that issue, finishing an uninterrupted half century of publication. Warren Kearny, secretary of the Standing Committee of the diocese, and member of the National Council, has been the editor since the first number published in November, 1895.

Speaking of the lack of rapid transportation in much of China, and the large amount of pedestrian traffic, the Rev. Newton Chiang, now in the United States, remarked, "In China we have patience—travel slowly—enjoy life."

ARRIVES IN LIBERIA

New York, N. Y.—The Rev. Charles R. Matlock has arrived safely in Liberia, a cable from Bishop Leopold Kroll informs the National Council. Mr. Matlock had a long journey by air and water, and is now ready to take up his work. He is the second white priest in the entire district, and his work is expected to be of the greatest value in aiding both the Bishop and the Rev. Packard L. Okie in their many responsibilities.

Dean Pardue Consecrated

Pittsburgh, Pa.—In the presence of a dozen bishops, many other Church dignataries and a congregation that packed Trinity Cathedral, Dean Austin Pardue was consecrated the fourth bishop of Pittsburgh on St. Paul's Day. Bishop Alexander Mann, retired bishop of Pittsburgh, and Bishop Frank A. McElwain, retired bishop of Minnesota, presented Dr. Pardue for consecration. The Presiding Bishop was chief consecrator. Witnessing the ceremony from pews reserved for them in the front of the Cathedral were the new bishop's wife, their two children, and his mother, Mrs. Harry A. Pardue, of Chicago.

Trinity's auditorium, seating 1,500, was filled before time for the service to begin. Many stood throughout the ceremony, and many more turned away. The bishop-elect was attended by the Rev. Dr. Harold K. Bowen, of Evanston, Ill., and the Rev. Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving, rector of Calvary, Pittsburgh. The Epistle was read by Bishop Arthur R. McKinstry of Delaware, taking the place of Bishop Frederick G. Budlong of Connecticut, former rector of the Church of the Ascension, Pittsburgh, who was unable to be present. The Gospel was read by Bishop Benjamin F. P. Ivins of Milwaukee. The sermon was preached by Suffragen Bishop Granville G. Bennett of Rhode Island, who took as his text a sentence from the Consecration Service: "Be to the flock of Christ a shepherd, not a wolf; feed them, devour them not."

Co-consecrators with the Presiding Bishop were Bishop Cameron J. Davis of Western New York, and Bishop Howard Brinker of Nebraska. Bishop Davis was almost prevented from taking his part in the service by the press of the overflow crowd. Arriving late, Bishop Davis was unable to force his way through the crowds which blocked both entrances to the Cathedral. It was only after policemen on duty learned of his identity that he was able to gain entrance.

Also taking part in the service were Bishops Keeler of Minnesota, E. Pinckney Wroth, Harrisburg, Beverley D. Tucker, Ohio. In the procession were Bishop Benjamin, Russian Orthodox Church, Bishop Malcahanez, Greek Orthodox Church; Bishop John Z. Jasinski, Polish National Church; Rabbi Benjamin Lichter and Rabbi Herman Hailperin, Jewish congregations, as well as representatives of the Church Federation and the various other Churches of Pittsburgh and vicinity.

Following the consecration a luncheon was given in Bishop Pardue's honor in the William Penn Hotel. Present were those who had been in the procession.

Bishop Pardue, former dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo, was preceded by three other bishops in the Pittsburgh diocese, all of them consecrated on January 25, the Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul.

MID-WINTER REUNION OF ASSOCIATE ALUMNI: G. T. S.

New York, N. Y.—A large number of alumni of the General Theological Seminary assembled in Chelsea Square on January 19. for the annual mid-winter reunion Two lectures were given in the afternoon in Seabury Auditorium, the first by the Rev. Dr. Marshall Bowyer Stewart on "The interaction of Liturgy and Dogma", and the second by the Rev. Dr. Donald Fraser Forrester on "The Word of the Lord and the World to Come." Tea was served after the lectures.

The chapel was filled at six o'clock for Evensong. At 6:30 the alumni dinner was held in Hoffman Hall. The speakers were the Very Rev. Dr. Hughell E. W. Fosbroke, dean of the Seminary; the Rev. Lt. Col. Harry Lee Virden, assistant to the Chief of Chaplains in the Army of the United States, and the Rev. Hollis Smith, who returned recently from China on the Gripsholm after two years in a Japanese prison camp.

BISHOP STRIDER HOLDS MISSION

Richmond, Va.—A very successful Preaching Mission has just been concluded in Richmond January 23-28. It was conducted by the Rt. Rev. R. E. L. Strider, bishop of WeWst Virginia. His theme for the night services was Christian Worship and for the morning, at 11 A. M., Thoughts on Personal Religion and celebration of the Holy Communion each morning. All Episcopal churches of the city cooperated, the different choirs furnishing the music. Attendance throughout the mission was good, and all who heard Bishop Strider felt that a real opportunity and privilege had been afforded them.

STUDENTS SEND CHRISTMAS OFFERING

New York, N. Y.—The Student Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary at the Episcopal Student Center, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, took a special offering at Christmas to be sent to the National Council designated specifically for Church work in China.

The remittance has just reached the Treasurer of National Council, and will be used as designated.

REV. THOMAS N. CARRUTHERS ELECTED BISHOP OF SOUTH CAROLINA

The Rev. Thomas Neely Carruthers,, D. D., rector of Christ Church, Nashville, Tenn., was elected 10th Bishop of South Carolina on the third ballot at a special convention meeting in St. John's Church, Florence, S. C., on January 18th.

The Rev. Mr. Carruthers has been rector of Christ Church, Nashville, Tenn., since 1938. Forty-three years old, he was born in Collierville, Tenn., the son of Thomas Neely Carruthers and Linnie Louise Hunter Carruthers. He was educated in the schools of Collierville, attended the University of the South from which he received the B. A. degree in 1921, the B. D. in 1929, and the D. D. degree in 1940. He also holds the M. A. degree from Princeton University. Bishop Maxon of Tennessee ordained him deacon in 1925 and in 1926 the late Bishop Gailor ordained him to the priesthood.

Former restorships include St. Peter's Church, Columbia, Tenn., and Trinity Church, Houston, Tex.

Six Missionaries Appointed

To Take Work Outside Continental United States

New York.—Announcement of the appointment of six new missionaries for work outside of continental United States is made by the Overseas Department of the National Council. All have accepted their appointments and will go to their fields at designated times.

The Rev. George F. Packard, rector of Epiphany, Baltimore, will go to the Panama Canal Zone. He will probably work at Christ Church, Colon, and looks forward in the future, to starting work in Colombia, which is within the Missionary District of the Panama Canal Zone. He hopes to be able to fly to his field the latter part of February. He is 32 years old, ordained to the diaconate in 1937 and to the priesthood a year later, and prior to accepting the call to Epiphany in 1938, he had been a diocesan missionary in Garrett County, Maryland. He is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University and the Virginia Seminary.

The Rev. John M. Balcom, rector of Epiphany, Walpole, Mass., will work at Fort Yukon, Alaska, and it is believed that he can get to his field in the very near future. He is 25 years old, a graduate of Massachusetts State College and the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, and has worked in Alaska as a volunteer during a summer vacation.

The Rev. Ralph K. Webster is appointed for work in the Missionary District of Puerto Rico, and expects to reach the field during June or July. At present he is at Christ School, Arden, N. C., teaching and studying administration in the agricultural school. He is 25 years old, graduate of Hobart and the General Seminary, with special study at Cornell along the lines of agriculture. He was ordained deacon and priest in 1943, and was curate at Christ Church, Corning, N. Y., before going to Arden.

Benjamin F. Axelroad, Jr., has volunteered for service in Southern Brazil following his graduation from the Virginia Seminary, and his ordination, which is expected to take place next June. Due to transportation difficulties it is not possible to set a date for his arrival in the field. He is 22 years old, was acolyte and lay reader at his home parish, Holy Cross, Miami, Florida, and has done student work while in Seminary at Epiphany, Washington, under the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin. He is a graduate of the University of Miami.

The Rev. Edward Mason Turner, who was ordained deacon last May, will go to Alaska upon completion of his studies at Nashotah House during this year. Mr. Turner's home is in Alaska and he is eager to return for work in that field. He is 25 years old, attended High School at Anchorage and Carroll College.

A sixth missionary appointment is that of Mr. Denis Smith, a former Church Army Chaplain who has served as a lay evangelist in Hawaii, and later studied in England looking toward ordination and further service in Hawaii as a missionary priest. He has been engaged in religious work since 1930, and his return to Hawaii will be governed by transportation facilities. The intention is to have him report for work as soon as he can reach the Islands. He is a native of Yorkshire, England, 31 years old, educated at St. Martin's Boy's School, Dover, Pettit's Commercial College, Dover, the Church Army Training College, London, and Brotherhood of St. Paul, Barton, England.

THE REV. C. O. FARRAR
An Appreciation

Newton, Mass.—When the Rev. Charles O. Farrar leaves to take his new post at St. John's, Jacksonville, Florida, after the turn of the year, his going will be a loss not only to the Parish of St. Paul, in Newton Highlands, but to the Diocese of Massachusetts as well.

As a former vestryman and warden for twelve years, I have always had the deepest respect for Mr. Farrar's churchmanship and the dignity and inspiration of the church services. But looking back over these years of close association, I am impressed anew with the breadth of his influence and the record of his accomplishment both in the parish and the community during a period of nearly twenty years.

His Children's Corner program may be remembered by those who read of it in The Church Militant several years ago, but how many know of the Boys' Club he inaugurated? Starting with a small group who had no organized activity, this work developed into a city-wide athletic association of football and baseball teams, with Mr. Farrar as the guest of honor at a municipal banquet at the season's end. We are all well acquainted with the standard technique of the Every Member Canvass, but is it so well known that the United Canvass, in which churches of all denominations participate on canvass day, originated in Newton under Mr. Farrar's direction, the idea spreading to many other sections of the country?

His organizing of the Newton Hospital, his service on the city's Board of Old Age Assistance, and Committee of Service to Newton Servicemen, his active participation in the local group of Players, started during the depression, are a few examples of Mr. Farrar's versatility.

In any undertaking Mr. Farrar sets his sights high, and although he has sometimes faced indifference or active opposition, his standards were never lowered.

Whether his friends and parishioners call him the Rector, the Dominie, the Padre, Reverend, Charles, Father Farrar, or Uncle Charlie, they will think of him often in his new parish with love and affection.

Ennesy Leonard.

BISHOP COADJUTOR OF PUERTO RICO CONSECRATED

Santurce, P. R.—At an impressive service in Spanish and English, Charles Francis Boynton was consecrated Bishop Coadjutor of the Church in Puerto Rico, at St. John's Cathedral, Santurce, January 2. The sermon by the Rt. Rev. Wallace J. Gardner, New Jersey, was in English. At the close of the sermon, Bishop Gardner emphasized the duties and the pitfalls of the office of Bishop of the Church. "Be a father to your clergy," Bishop Gardner said. "Remember always that you are the center and the ONE to whom all your flock may turn when they need help." Dr. Gardner mentioned that he had known the Bishop-elect over many years, and that their lives and the lives of their families had crossed so often that they were almost as one family.

Bishop Charles B. Colmore was designated by the Presiding Bishop to serve as chief Consecrator. Co-consecrators were the Rt. Rev. Benjamin F. P. Ivins, Milwaukee. Bishop Gardner, and Bishop Spence Burton, of the English Diocese of Nassau. Attending Presbyters were the Rev. Messrs. John Levo, Frederiksted, St. Croix, Virgin Islands, and Lorenzo Alvarez, Mayaguez.

At the close of the service, Bishop Boynton, wearing cope and mitre and holding his Pastoral Staff, blessed the congregation. The a cappella choir of St. Andrew's Mission, Mayaguez, sang the Missa Marialis setting to the Eucharist, as well as several anthems during the service.

Other officials at the ceremony were: the Rev. Canon Bruce Reddish, Chaplain to the Consecrator; the Rev. Reus Garcia, reader of the Litany; tne Rev. Villafane, Deputy Registrar; the Rev.

The Presiding Bishop's Book for Lent, 1944

THIS CREATED WORLD

By Theodore Parker Ferris

This stimulating book for the Easter season is based on the following propositions: 1. How a man behaves depends to a large degree on what he believes. 2. Christianity is, among other things, basic information about life and the world. 3. The Church must continually revise its information on the basis of its present experience. 4. It is urgent that men "make sense" of their world. From these the author shows what Christianity, the Church and the individual can do toward making the world "make sense." It is admirably suitable for group discussion among young people and adults. $1.50

PRAYERS OF THE SPIRIT

By JOHN WALLACE SUTER

One hundred prayers for personal or corporate devotion, arranged under ten topical headings for the handy use of the minister or laymen who wants a pocket-sized book of new prayers appropriate for these times will find his need supplied in this book. Dr. Suter is editor of The Book of English Collects and Custodian of the Book of Common Prayer. $1.00

THE ALTAR AND THE WORLD

By BERNARD IDDINGS BELL

In this book on worship Dr. Bell shows how the Liturgy of the Christian Church can lead men into a fellowship whose members in their daily lives creatively approach the problem of a world in chaos. There are fourteen chapter headings, including The Liturgy, The Offertory, The Great Intercession, The Sanctus and The Thanksgiving. $1.50

LT. COMDR. SWEPSON EARLE

"The passing" of LT. COMDR. SWEPSON EARLE, November 15, 1943, has saddened many hearts. Grant him, O Lord, eternal rest and let Light perpetual shine upon him. Swepson Earle, son of the late William Brundidge Earle of Queen Anne's County, Maryland, inherited much from Virginia. His mother was Louisa Stubbs from Norfolk, a girl of seventeen when the Civil War began, who spent her youthful years working for the South. Simon Stubbs, Swepson's grandfather, was Mayor of Norfolk during the war. Lt. Comdr. Earle when a boy attended the Church School, and a member of the choir St. Paul's, Centreville, Maryland. At that time the late Rev. James A. Mitchell was the beloved rector. Swepson Earle was the author two books, of which "The Chesapeake Bay Country," is the better known.

Ward DeBeck, Master of Ceremonies; the Canons John Swinson, Julio Garrett and Aristides Villafane, readers of the testimonials; the Rev. Messrs. Hubert Pigott, J. Pastor Ruiz, Lauro Pauza, Ramon Cortez, and Ramon Quinones, bearers of the Episcopal vestments and instruments; Chaplain E. R. Shannon, Lieutenant U. S. N. R., and Mr. George Kretzinger, flag bearers; the

The Pectoral Cross presented to the new bishop coadjutor was the gift of Bishop Colmore, and was one presented to Bishop Colmore at his consecration 30 years ago.

The Episcopal Ring and the Pastoral Staff were the gifts of his friends and family. Most of the vestments were made by hand by his wife in preparation for the ceremony.

A reception for the new Bishop and his family was held at the Guild Hall of the Cathedral Sunday afternoon and the visiting Bishops were also on hand to meet the guests.

DEAN BODGER SPEAKS AT MISSIONARY MEETING

Albany, N. Y.—The Rev. John Dewhurst Bodger, missionary from New Guinea, visited Albany on January 14 and spoke to a large gathering of people, representing not only our own Church but many other non-Roman churches of the Albany area. Although there was little time to plan for his stop in Albany, Archdeacon Hastings and his committee informed all rectors and pastors, and the response was unusual, with an enthusiastic and impressive missionary meeting resulting. The service was held in the Cathedral of All Saints and the great edifice was filled with sympathetic listeners.

DEATHS

Rev. William Edward Callendar

The Rev. William Edward Callendar, retired, died when being taken to a Norfolk Hospital, on January 26.

A son of the late John Robert and Marion Kerr Callendar, Chaplain Callendar was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, December 10, 1865. He attended school at Huntley House, Birckenhead, England, and from there went to Liverpool College.

In 1896, Chaplain Callendar, who was engaged in the cotton business, made a business trip to the United States from England. He decided to remain in this country and in a few years married Miss Estelle Hudgins, daughter of Captain and Mrs. W E. Hudgins of Norfolk. Having been interested in Church work while in Liverpool, he decided to enter the Ministry and in 1902 was ordained to the diaconate by Bishop Cheshire of North Carolina. Bishop Capers of South Carolina ordained him to the priesthood in 1904. In South Carolina he was rector of Christ Church, Florence, acting Chaplain of the Coast Artillery, U. S. A., at Fort Moultrie and Chaplain of the Naval Reserve.

In 1915 Chaplain Callendar became Rector of St. Peter's, Norfolk, and again in 1930. He retired from the active ministry in 1934.

Commissioned a Captain in the 111th Field Artillery, he was retired as Major in 1931.

Among his many activities in Norfolk, Chaplain Callendar was his work as Chaplain to the United States Public Health Hospital and the Norfolk Welfare Center. He was a member of many civic organizations.

In addition to his wife Chaplain Callendar is survived by two married daughters, six grandchildren, and a sister in Scotland.

The funeral was held Friday, November 28, in old St. Paul's Church, Norfolk, with the Rev. Moultrie Guerry, the Rev. Geo. P. Gunn, and Bishop Brown conducting the service.

The Seminaries of the Church Need Your Support

St. Paul says, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach, except they be sent?

The task of the seminaries of the Church is to help the right men to respond to this challenge.

The Presiding Bishop has appointed January twenty-third as Theological Education Sunday, asking the clergy to put before their people the needs of the seminaries of the Church where men are prepared for the ministry.

PLANNING CONFERENCE BROUGHT TOGETHER 500 STUDENTS

Wooster, Ohio—The Planning Conference on the World Mission of the Church, sponsored by the Commission on University Work of the Council of Church Boards of Education, of which the Rev. Dr. Alden Drew Kelley is chairman, the National Intercollegiate Christian Council, the Student Christian Movement of Canada and the Student Volunteer Movement, brought 500 students to the College of Wooster, December 28-January 3. Students attending represented Church student movements; and student Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. in the United States, the Student Christian Movement in Canada, and the Student Christian Movement in Mexico. In addition to these, representatives from other countries attended.

Dr. Alden D. Kelley explains that the Episcopal Church is one of the sponsoring agencies and that 12 undergraduates were present as official Episcopal Church representatives. Also that two seminarians and some foreign students, as well as representatives from Canada, were parts of the Episcopal-Anglican group. The Episcopal-Anglican group held a corporate Communion, with Dr. Kelley as Celebrant, and the Rev. V. S. Sathyianadhan, Anglican priest of Ceylon, assisting. From Canada, the Rev. Canon L. A. Dixon, general secretary of the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada, attended and participated in the Conference. From the National Council, Dr. Kelley, the Rev. A. Ervine Swift and Miss Ellen Gammack, attended.

The conference was intended to present to students the work of the Church overseas and at home, and types of vacation open to young men and women, together with consideration of Christian answers to world problems, and the place of the individual in the program of a pioneering Church.

New York, N. Y.—The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief benefits by a gift from the Girls' Friendly Society, which is explained as the result of an appeal for funds for the English Girls' Friendly Society three years ago. Small gifts have been received by the Society from time to time. During the year 1943, the Society accumulated $27, and it was decided to give this money to the Presiding Bishop's Fund, earmarked for British Missions.

A CORPORAL'S GIFT

New York, N. Y.—Chaplain Edward H. Harrison, Grace Church, Gainesville, Ga., and now with the 302nd Infantry, sent a remittance to the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, given to him by Corporal T. J. McGurl, of Pottsville, Pa.

Corporal McGurl received a money order from his parents as a Christmas gift. He endorsed it and gave it to the Chaplain to be sent to the Presiding Bishop.

LETTERS

FOR BROADCAST

Mr. Editor:

I enclose a copy of a letter recently received from a Chaplain. It emphasizes precisely the point that this Commission would like to have broadcast throughout the Church as a very vital matter.

It is only right to say that I am sending the material to other Church papers also, hoping that all of them may publish at least the most informing and necessary portions of it.

Henry B. Washburn, Secy.,
The Army and Navy Commission.

A Chaplain writes:

I am disturbed because I know we are not doing all we might to provide the ministrations of the Church to Episcopalians in the service. Even the friendly greeting and casual conversation with the Episcopal chaplain which should be the minimum contact is largely frustrated because neither the chaplain nor the parishioner knows of the other's presence on the Post.

The card check-up system has never worked too well. Only a dribble of cards comes in to me here, although there must be numbers of Episcopalians passing through this Post as well as permanently stationed here.

Some of the permanent personnel I have already tracked down; but it is heartbreaking to see the utter failure of our attempts to seek out the Episcopalians among the recruits, who are here for only eight or nine weeks (too short a time for the average diocesan machinery to get their names to me anyway).

In the Navy and Marine Corps the problem is aggravated by the insistence of the Department that men conform to one of the three categories, Protestant, Catholic, or Hebrew.

Last evening I talked with a man who had been on this Post longer than I, who had been longing for Confirmation instruction (which he had started at home and been unable to complete), who had no idea there was an Episcopal chaplain or that we had had a Confirmation in December at which two recruits were confirmed, who did not know there was a weekly Prayer Book service half a block from his place of work (he had been going to the general Protestant service exclusively), and whose brother had died two weeks ago!

This sounds exaggerated, but it is not. Unhappily, the same thing happens to numerous others all the time. It was a check-up card which finally brought us together last night—but how tardily!

The card check-up system is, at best, too slow for a temporary station like this. Yet it is only while men are in training on larger posts that, they are likely to find an Episcopal chaplain on the staff. In smaller, combat or other units, there is also much more chance of a man's coming in contact with the chaplain sooner or later. It is not uncommon, though, to hear men say: "I have been in the service for a year, and have never seen a chaplain." (This usually means they have never gone to church, for a chaplain may always be at least seen at Divine service almost anywhere.)

But the best method of all is still to have the men make themselves known.

Both these methods of "keeping the Church with the men in service" depends for success on the home rector. If he is determined that no person shall go into the service from his cure without promising to find out immediately whether there is an Episcopal chaplain on his post, and look him up; and if he will write immediately to as soon as he knows the man's complete and accurate address, the trick will be turned. Without that determination, the slow machinery of the card check-up system simply will not avail except in a very few cases.

"Episcopal Chaplain,

In the important work of Keeping the Church With Them, the Commission has been eminently successful, in both its work with chaplains and its assistance to the lay personnel of the armed forces. But the War Cross and Prayer Book, the Identification Cards (of which I have had just one presented to me in six months of duty) and all the literature—are not enough. Epecially in the Naval Service, hundreds of men are slipping through our fingers because we cannot know who they are unless they speak or someone tells us of them.

Can you, by some dynamite, blast our brother clergy of the parishes and missions into an awareness of this pathetic condition? Can you show them that by their easy neglect men are missing the life of the Church which might mean so much to them (and to the Church after the war)? They want to be baptized and Confirmed; they want to receive the Holy Communion; they want, perhaps, even to talk with someone who appreciates the Prayer Book and may know their rector or their bishop.

They are here. I have no way of finding them. Can you ask—beg, implore, if, strangely, that is necessary—their rectors to make them promise, before they come, to look me up? I know I speak for every Episcopal chaplain of the Naval service who is stationed ashore, in anything larger than a bath tub!

ON JEWISH RESCUE AND PALESTINE

Mr. Editor:

Thank you for your letter of January 24, relating to the Memorandum on Jewish Rescue and Palestine. This memorandum was prepared by our Committee on the basis of a study of a number of magazine articles on the subject and on speeches made in Congress. There is absolutely no question concerning the authenticity of every statement contained in the memorandum. If you are interested in having some literature on the subject, I believe I would be able to obtain it for you. You might be interested to write to Congressman Emanuel Celler, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., for copies of his speeches on the subject over the past six months. You might also write to Dr. Stephen S. Wise, 40 West 68th Street, New York City, who is a noted authority. You might also check with Rev. Reinhold Niebuhr, 49 Claremont Avenue, New York City, who is the head of the Union Theological Seminary and also well-informed on the question covered in the memorandum. I am enclosing two additional copies of the memorandum which you may want to use in writing to these gentlemen. I also wish to thank you for reprinting the memorandum in the Southern Churchman. (Issue of 8 Jan., 1944.)

I should add that the Committees of Correspondence are purely a voluntary, non-political organization designed to give expression to the unorganized mass of citizens who constitute the real backbone of the country on the great issues of the day. We believe it is a practical method of preserving democracy in action. I am enclosing a pamphlet which explains the work of the Committees.

With all good wishes,

Committees of Correspondence,
Harvey T. Mann, Chairman.

New York City.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

SOMETHING STRONG within me makes me tell how the phrase, "There is more than one way to skin a cat", worked a spiritual miracle. It happened when a member of my parish refused a simple request to do a necessary job. I had tried over a period of years to get this particular job done well, without much success. My first reaction to the refusal was one of "What's the use?" I felt beaten and was just about to give up. But fortunately for my own spirit's sake, God forced a thought into the seething blankness of my mind. It was the phrase I have just mentioned, "There is more than one way to skin a cat." How did I know it was God speaking? Because with it my frustration disappeared, my discouragement vanished, my feeling for the person cleared, and the wheels of my creative self began to move toward the solution of the problem. The phrase was not Biblical, but the magic of God's peace came over me through it and it opened the way for several right answers which had been forgotten or which had never occurred before. I was thus saved from feeling sorry for myself, blaming a failure on another, and considering myself a martyr to the cause.

We hate to be licked and we hate for anyone to best us, but the truth of the whole matter seems to be: we really defeat ourselves by closing up and not asking God to come in, not to console us but to lift us up to a place beyond our pride and feeling where we can see to straighten out our crooked thoughts, and to find alternate paths that lead to the same goal we felt was forever blocked to us. A great deal of our human misery would be saved if before we cry "Woe is me", we would give God a chance to reveal what He will unto us. We may not always be able to work things out according to our plan. We may have to change our way of thinking. But if we are flexible, God will open our eyes to see a way which is usually even better than the way we planned. It was so in my case, in this and many other instances. The way things work out, even though contrary to our carefully laid plots and plans, is often God's way which we finally acknowledge and accept. Our reactions often lead others to depths of sin we could have spared them by giving God a chance to suggest control, and direct our thoughts, our attitudes, our actions.

THERE IS an old proverb that I often think of in connection with this business of being stymied along any line. It goes like this, "When you reach the end of your rope, tie a knot and hang on." The Christian, of course, hangs on until God opens the way to the next move, thanking God he has at last reached the end of his rope so that at last he is willing to look for God's rope to grab and hang on to. It is miraculous how fear and uncertainty go when we bring God into the picture and in quietness wait patiently for a revelation of what He wants and expects us to do next. He will always show the way.

"They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength; They shall put forth wings like eagles, They shall run and not be weary; They shall walk and not faint." (Isaiah 40:31).

Almost every day brings a trial of the sort I have just described, and the only way to keep from blowing up and hurting self and others is to hang on 'til light comes, or as one of the lessons indicated in the mythological story of Jacob wrestling with the angel, don't give up your praying 'til a blessing comes.

Understanding the Book of Revelation

The City of the Redeemed

By WILLIAM R. MOODY

ON MY FIRST VISIT to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem a friendly priest of the Greek Church, seeing that I was also a priest and a stranger, led me to a point exactly half-way between Calvary, where our Lord was crucified, and the Holy Sepulchre where His body lay after the crucifixion, and where He rose again from the dead. Both spots are now covered by the great Church of the Holy Sepulchre. There, half-way between the two, he pointed to a marker set in the floor. "This," he said, "is the center of the world!"

That,—as I took pains to point out last week,—is the exact point of view of the man who wrote the Book of Revelation. For him that point halfway between the place of the crucifixion and the garden of the Resurrection is the center of the world. And the exact moment when the Lord Jesus was lifted up upon the cross is the focal point of human history.

That gives us the key to the Book of Revelation. This book,—which is the peak and crown of symbolistic writing, at least in our literary tradition,—is a symphony of thought and picture, sound and color, woven around this central, final act, in which God and Darkness clash, and in which Darkness is defeated. Calvary is Armageddon!

The moment of Calvary is the moment of Judgment, and the moment of Triumph,—judgment because man's failure to live up to the perfection which God intended for humanity has now crucified the best in human life; triumph because the power of God has made of the cross the gateway to Resurrection.

Jesus said, from the height of that sacrifice, "It is finished!" God's judgment upon man and all man's works is now complete; and our salvation is finally and completely won for us, if we will ascend the cross with Jesus.

The Book of Revelation comes thus to its climax, and everything else in the Book happens simultaneously,—all in one moment! But since it is humanly impossible to say more than one thing at a time, these things are reported to us as if they followed one another. It is of extreme importance to bear this in mind in making the interpretations which follow. Everything else happens at once, the moment Christ is lifted upon the cross on Calvary. He goes up on his cross, and at once the guilty world is judged; at once Satan is bound, and death and hell are destroyed; and the line of division is run right down through humanity from one end of it to the other dividing the good from the bad, the saved from the lost. And at once the Holy City descends from God out of Heaven to take the place of the earthly Jerusalem which has now been judged and rejected.

I should like to spend the rest of my time with you talking about that new Jerusalem, which is not a picture of the Heaven to which we will go after this life, but is a highly idealized description of the Christian Church, the Fellowship of the Redeemed in Jesus. I should like to do that, but I cannot, for I must first give you an interpretation of the binding of Satan, and of that passage on which so much modern heresy has been based,—and ancient heresy, too,—the passage concerning the millennium. I must do this, not only because no consideration of the Book of Revelation would be complete without it, but because it is impossible to understand the meaning of the Holy City without a prior understanding of the binding of Satan.

HERE IS THE PASSAGE, in Chapter Twenty; and remember that this takes place immediately after Armageddon, which, as we have seen, is Calvary, the Lord's Crucifixion.

"And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the Dragon, that old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season. And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the Word of God, and which had not worshipped the Beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years. And when the thousand years shall be expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth".

Now, follow this carefully. It is by no means easy: but it is nevertheless the heart of the interpretation of this Book. (And to the original difficult cryptic symbolism of the book itself we have an added difficulty in the translation in the Authorized Version. Since the translators misunderstood the meaning of this passage, their misunderstanding colored their translation.) Immediately upon the crucifixion of Christ, Satan is bound with a great chain, and is cast into the bottomless pit, and a seal is set upon the abyss into which he has been cast, for a thousand years.

The sealed abyss is the grave. But what of the "thousand years"? Now remember, in this book numbers are never digits, they are always symbols: therefore this cannot mean, and does not mean, a space of a thousand years, but something else of which the thousand years is the symbol. But we already know that the number one thousand symbolizes "the Heavenly Power"; therefore the "thousand years" means "forever, as far as the Heavenly Power reaches".

This interpretation is strengthened when we know that the number "one thousand", which means "the Heavenly Power", multiplied by "twelve", which means "the True Israel of God", becomes the measure of the outer walls of the Holy City. Satan can never, from the moment of Calvary, have any power within the True Israel of God. Satan,—who is the measure of our human failures,—is for the True Israel, dead and buried forever!

BUT,—outside the reach of the Heavenly Power, Satan is not bound, he is free! Where in the universe is there a spot outside the reach of God's power? Only one place in the universe,—that is, in the soul of the evil and unrepentant man! There is the Kingdom of Satan!

That old Serpent, the Devil and Satan, who is the total measure of evil in man, is, for the Faithful Church, bound and sealed in the bottomless pit by Heavenly Power forever; but he is risen up for the guilty world, whose evil heart is the one region in the universe beyond the limits of the power of God!

When the guilty world brought Jesus to His cross, they,—the people in that guilty world,—themselves drew the line through which from henceforth unrepentant guilt can never pass. After His resurrection the Risen Jesus ignored them. He came back into the world that had crucified Him, not to confound His enemies, but to strengthen His friends. He appeared not to the High Priest, and not to Pilate, but to Mary Magdalene, and to Simon Peter, and to the others who had followed Him and needed Him. He was dead to His enemies, and they were dead to Him! They never saw Him again, except as reflected in the faces of those who believed on Him; and whenever they saw that reflection there, they sought to repeat the pattern of Calvary,—they killed His saints as they had killed Him. They followed them, as they had followed Him, right up to the door of the tomb. And the tomb was for them an impassable barrier, a wall impenetrable. And when at length they entered its gloomy portal for themselves, there was nothing beyond it for them but the silence. But to the followers of Jesus its portal was but an incident on the road to the City of Light.

NOW WE COME to the question of the "two resurrections", and of the "thousand year reign with Christ". Follow me carefully!

We already know the interpretation of the "thousand years". It means "the extent of the Heavenly Power". We already know that this takes place not at the end of the ages, but at the moment when Christ is lifted on the cross on Calvary. So we have, not two resurrections separated by a space of a thousand years, but two resurrections which occur simultaneously, separated by "the extent of the Heavenly Power", and one of them is within the Heavenly Power, and the other is outside of it!

Now for the interpretation of the words, "beheaded for the witness of Jesus", which is used to describe those who shall have a part in the first resurrection,—the "resurrection unto life". This is a technical word, referring to the preparation of the Lamb for the sacrifice in the Jewish Temple in Jerusalem, and therefore should be read, not "beheaded", but "prepared to be offered up as a sacrifice for the witness of Jesus". This means that, in the view of the writer of this book, every Christian who is in earnest about his Christianity is prepared to be offered up as a sacrifice for the witness of Jesus whenever that becomes necessary. By profession of faith every Christian has made his choice to ascend the cross with Jesus, and, by that token, is a martyr with his martyred Lord.

THERE IS NO MIDDLE ground between good and evil on Calvary. In the world at large there is a middle ground. Most of us are half-Christian and half-pagan. But when the Christian comes face to face with the cross of Christ, that middle-ground fades away. There is the cross of Jesus, and He is there upon it,—and there are those who have brought Him there; and even the bystanders partake of the guilt of Calvary because they do nothing to stop it! There, on Calvary, the truth of the words of Jesus become tremendously clear, "He that is not with Me is against Me; and he that gathereth not with Me, scattereth!"

There were the Disciples, while Jesus was on the Cross, some standing afar off, some not even there, having run away, leaving Him to suffer alone. But by running away from Calvary they did not escape Calvary. Calvary,—which is Armageddon,—followed them, and found them, with its terrible judgment, and they could no longer stay half-Christian and half-pagan and have inner peace. They had to choose. The blow of Calvary fell through the souls of those men and women like a sharp blade falling. It cut a line of judgment right through the heart of their living. It was no longer possible for them to live on both sides of that line, as they had lived before, and have inner peace.

How could they stand there and watch Jesus crucified, and say nothing? His crucifixion became their crucifixion, because they loved Him, and while He was being crucified they said nothing against that deed! And one by one they realized that they must ascend the cross with Him! They could not remain silent about that crucifixion,—but to speak meant that they, too, would one day be crucified!

Sometime in your life you will face such a choice. Sometime in your life you may be a witness to a crucifixion. Some good thing will be put on the cross before your eyes, and the choice will be yours to speak out, and be crucified yourself, or to keep silence, and to join the crucifiers. Then you will know what those Disciples faced when Jesus was crucified!

They could not stop the crucifixion, but they could ascend the cross with Jesus. There was no middle ground on Calvary; and there is none today! That is what the Book of Revelation means when it says "those who are prepared to be offered up as a sacrifice for the witness of Jesus" are martyrs, and they are partakers in the "first resurrection". Every believer, having taken up his cross,—his own cross,—and having thus identified himself with the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, gains the right to pass unscathed through death, and to eat of the hidden manna, and of the tree of Life which is in the Paradise of God.

BUT THERE IS another resurrection, not unto life, but unto death eternal! "The rest of the dead lived not within the sweep of the thousand years",—that is, "within the sweep of the Heavenly Power". Like Satan, who deceived them, they are ruled out of the City of the Redeemed. They ruled themselves out. They are dead, as Satan is dead, to Christ. They live only to wickedness, and they will endure only so long as wickedness itself endures. When Heaven's Power is at length all-filling, they will be gone forever. This is the second death!

At the moment when Christ ascended the Cross, Satan was bound; and humanity was judged, and divided between Good and Evil, between Light and Darkness; and that line of division ran like a thunderclap back to the creation, and down to the very end of the ages! And at that moment the Holy City comes down from God out of Heaven to take the place of unfaithful Jerusalem, which has been judged and cast out!

There is the Beast, still raging and filling the earth with blood,—even the blood of the Saints. And there is the false-prophet, under the sign of Judas, betraying Christ for selfish gain. Neither of these is aware of the descent of the Holy City. And there is Satan, full of lies and deceitfulness, preparing a trap for the Faithful, and a tomb for Jesus. All this was going

A Christian Society

By the REV. H. G. G. HERKLOTS, M. A.

Read at the Cheltenham Conference of the Liberal Evangelical Movement, England

THAT THERE SHOULD BE a Christian society in the world, in nations, and cities and villages, however these different units may be defined, is surely God's will, but were there such a society, Christianity itself would be understood as something far greater and deeper than anything we now know. There has been no time in history when God's will has been perfectly obeyed, when it has not been continually thwarted by men's pride and selfishness. There is no golden age in the past. Nevertheless, there have been times when the Christian ideal of life, as interpreted by the Church, has set the tone for society and dominated its code of behaviour. That is something which we have lost and which it would be a great advantage to regain. As M. Julien Benda has put it: "It may be said that, thanks to the 'clerks' (understood in the mediaeval sense of 'all those who speak to the world in a transcendental manner') humanity did evil for two thousand years, but honored good. This contradiction was an honor to the human species, and formed the rift whereby civilization slipped into the world." The closing of that rift, the denial of that contradiction, has been the most shocking thing in the modern age: the realization that for many people today (and seemingly for whole societies) what we have regarded as evil is set up as good, and our good condemned as evil. This clash of values cannot be resolved by war. The only way in which it can really be resolved is by conversion.

THE MAN of the middle ages—so different from ourselves—knew where he was. He had a fixed station in life. Knight, king and emperor, priest, bishop and pope; these had their fixed stations too; and so also, in his view, had God. He was not confused with misty language about getting into tune with the Infinite. All was concrete, definite, reliable. The blessed Virgin and the saints, angels, archangels and the whole company of heaven were close at hand. His cathedrals, which for us are usually shrouded in a "dim, religious light," were palaces of shining color, and used, indeed, for as many purposes that we should call secular as sacred. They were the law courts, the picture galleries, the labor exchanges and the theatres of their days, dominating men's lives as much by their utility as by their magnificence. Nowadays we might plan to build a church near to the market place where men congregate, but in the middle ages "the market place grows up beside the church because it is there that the citizens most frequently assemble." The man of the middle ages could not escape the influence of the Church, for it was all pervading. Nor would it have occurred to him to try to do so.

YET THE MEDIAEVAL synthesis failed, and to it we cannot return. As the Bishop of Southwell put it in The Relevance of Christianity: "The avowed aim of the Protestant reformers was to set religion free from the cloister, to deliver it from its monastic exclusiveness, to establish Christian faith and piety, as the inspiration of the home and the market-place. But in fact the results of the reforming movement have worked in almost the opposite sense. The tendency ever since the Reformation, both in the Roman and reformed churches, has been to think of religion in isolation, as a self-sufficient and self-sustaining activity. . . ." This attitude has been regarded as quite natural by those who are outside the Church, who have come to regard the worship of God as the practice of a rather curious, but on the whole estimable hobby. The change from the middle ages is reflected in the quite admirable White Paper on Educational Reconstruction, which asserts: "the State, concerned though it is to ensure a sound religious basis for all education, cannot take on itself the full responsibility for fostering the teaching of formularies distinctive of particular denominations designed to attach children to particular worshipping communities." To which The Catholic Times makes the not unnatural comment that this is "one of the greatest paradoxes in the religious history of our country." The paper quotes the sentence, and adds: "And yet there is a religion 'by law established' which is part of the Realm, whose head is His Majesty the King, whose bishops sit in the House of Lords. This religion, supported by the country, cannot be sponsored by the State of which it is part." That statement bears thinking about. The point for us to realize is that there cannot be in the England of today a merely Anglican society. If it is to be Christian it must be much more (not much less) than that. And this is understood by those who are outside the Church.

FROM THE MEDIAEVAL point of view, a church which could no longer impose its will upon nations and men had ceased to be a church at all, and become only what the modern world calls "a voluntary society"; one whose energies have been spent in fighting a campaign of sorry rearguard actions as one after another of the spheres in which it had not only been dominant, but of which it had also largely been the creator—education, hospital service, the provision of poor relief, the leisure time activities of youth—were successfully invaded by the heavily armed forces of the State. Moreover it was not one such society but many competing ones, so that civil conflict completed the defeat which exterior assault had begun. A social historian of our day uses terms similar to those of the Mendelian classification to describe the declining power of the Church in city life:

"In Rome before Constantine the Christian Church was a mutation; within the city one would scarcely be aware of its presence. In the mediaeval city the Church was a dominant; no part of life could fail to record its existence and its influence. In the great seventeenth century capitals, the Church had become a recessive; still an imposing visible presence, but no longer a unifying and dynamic social force. In the metropolis today the Church is a survival; its power rests upon numbers, wealth, material organization, not upon its capacity to give its stamp to the daily activities of men; it claims much, but except by repetition and rote, it contributes little to the spiritual life of the city."

THERE IS, OF COURSE, an answer to this view of the Church as a survival only. Around the world the primitive Church has come into being once more; it is there as it was in the days before Constan-

By Gordon B. Hancock

(Editor's Note: In keeping with the spirit of Race Relations Sunday, we asked Dr. Gordon B. Hancock of Virginia Union University to write an editorial for us. Dr. Hancock is one of the outstanding Negro leaders in the South. We are sure that our readers will appreciate the fine spirit of this message. As Christians we must work untiringly for better race relations.)

WHILE discussion is an essential preliminary to constructive policies in the field of social planning, unless it is followed by decisive action it becomes merely a sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. There is greater danger that the current talk on race relations may deteriorate into platitudinous generalities devoid of point or policy.

With the possible exception of the current war, race relations is doubtless the most discussed subject of current times. There is pressing need that something be done about these much discussed race relations. The cynics who are disparaging interracialism on the ground that the interracialist begins and ends in belabored and often beclouded discussions which are not only too often devoid of results, but ofttimes devoid of sincerity, may have some point to their contention, however reluctant we may be to admit it.

The "Doing Spirit"

Some years ago I addressed a group of students in a certain white college and at the conclusion of the address and discussion period of quite two hours, one of the students arose and asked what could be done about the situation we were discussing so enthusiastically. I replied that there were not set formula for alleviating conditions, but that if any group had the "doing spirit" they could find a hundred things to do and a hundred ways to do it. The doing spirit was the prime requisite for constructive action.

Those young white men went away and in two weeks I received a letter asking if securing a Negro high school in their county would not be a fine project. I forthwith replied in the affirmative. Within three months these young white men had secured a high school for Negroes that the older whites and Negroes had been "discussing" for quite 10 years.

Miss Florence Stubbs is a teacher of sociology in State Teachers College at Farmville, Va. She is a native of South Carolina and comes of one of its finest families, and fine South Carolina families are really and truly fine. Without blast of trumpets or fanfare Miss Stubbs organized a course in race relations 10 years ago that has left a great impression on the student body of this great college.

With thoroughness totally devoid of the crusade type of approach, Miss Stubbs has gone about the matter of educating hundreds of young white women in interracial understanding.

Foggy Misunderstanding Cleared

Year in and year out Miss Stubbs invites Negro speakers to appear before her classes with the result her students have developed the highest respect for Negro personality. Their exposure to contacts with Negroes of the educated type have cleared much of their foggy misunderstanding of the possibilities of Negro worth and citizenship.

These hundreds of young white women are going to be the wives and mothers of the rulers of the South and nation tomorrow. For them to carry into their lives the broader humane conceptions generated in the classes at Farmville is going to be a blessing to this nation. Miss Stubbs was not "falling in line" when she ventured to organize classes in race relations; she was pioneering in a field where too many overcautious whites dared not enter.

To Bless Whites As Well

Miss Stubbs sees clearly as more and more Southern ers must see that what she does for race relations is not merely a beneficence to the Negro race; but in her work she herself a patriot is rendering the highest service to her country and her beloved South by generating understanding that will bless the whites no less than the Negroes.

tine, in many parts of Asia and Africa, and in many parts of Europe. Here are new mutations from which new life is springing. And there are spheres of life in England today where the influence of the Church is there, as a new thing, a mutation. For the most part this has been in fields where the churches are prepared to work together, and demonstrate to the country a unity which was not previously suspected to exist. Moreover it is well always to remind ourselves that the Church is not the ecclesiastical organization alone, that the greatest things she does are often those for which she obtains the least credit. Not long ago I heard the Archbishop of Canterbury declare that the greatest thing done by the Church in our country in the years between the wars was to reform the English penal code. The effect of Christian laymen, drawing their inspiration and power from the Church, is still very great. And I believe that at the moment it is increasing. And it is also being realized that the freedom of the Church is the greatest safeguard of the freedom of other voluntary associations.

Nevertheless it is, I believe, true to say, that during the past fifty years the influence of the Church (I do not say the influence of Christianity) upon the masses of our people has grown steadily less; that ours has become far less obviously a Christian society, far more obviously a neutral, negative, or semi-pagan one. In matters of honesty and of sexual morality there are very many who, doing evil, no longer honor good. The old forces which played upon the lives of our fellow countrymen were those of the home, the church, and the school. The influence of the school has remained and is likely to increase. The influence of the church is confined to a minority. Is not the effective influence of the home confined to a minority also? Perhaps not, if what we are told by those who censor the letters of members of the forces is true and who find a very strong home interest running all through them. But you probably know the parody of "Mother Machree" which runs:

"I bless the clean clinic that weighed me with care,
And the Nursery School lady who tooth-combed my hair,
And all the Youth Movements so toil-worn for me.
But my Mother? . . . God bless her . . . she never sees me!"

WHEN CHURCH AND HOME were still dominant in men's lives, most of the competitive influences simply did not exist. Even the great influence of the press is a comparatively modern thing. William Cobbett, writing of his boyhood (1763-1782) as the child of a farm laborer, could write:

"As to politics, we were like the rest of the country people in England; that is to say, we neither knew nor thought anything about the matter. The shouts of victory or the murmur at a defeat would now and then break in upon our tranquillity for a moment; but I do not remember having seen a newspaper in the house, and most certainly that privation did not render us less free, happy, or industrious."

And this at a time when Britain was losing her American colonies! In 1905, before the development of the newspaper to what it has become today, and the creation of an even more potent manufacturer of public opinion in the radio, Dr. Holland Rose could detect in the coming of the war of 1870 the entry of the press into the realm of war making:

"The story of the Franco-German dispute is one of national jealousy carefully fanned for four years by newspaper editors and popular speakers until a spark sufficed to set Western Europe in a blaze. The spark was the Hohenzollern candidature, which would have fallen harmless had not the tinder been prepared since Konniggratz by journalists at Paris and Berlin. The resulting conflagration may justly be described as partly due to national friction and partly to the supposed interests of the Napoleonic dynasty, but also to the heat engendered by a sensational Press.

"It is well that one of the chief dangers to the peace of the modern world should be clearly recognized. The centralization of governments and of population may have its advantages; but over against them we must set grave drawbacks; among those of a political kind the worst are the growth of nervousness and excitability, and the craving for sensation—qualities which undoubtedly tend to embitter national jealousies at all times, and in the last case to drive weak dynasties or cabinets on to war. Certainly Bismark's clever shifts to bring about a rupture in 1870 would have failed had not the atmosphere at Paris and Berlin been charged with electricity." Nowadays our masters know more about that electricity, and are able to turn it on almost at will.

But not quite. Despite the influence of the press, the cinema, the radio, the omni-present benevolent civil servant, and the school, there is a certain sales-resistance which is part, I believe, of our Christian inheritance. Such discrimination is to be both encouraged and educated. In the matter of the papers we read, the films we see, the wireless programmes to which we listen, the teaching that is given in schools, and the gifts that we accept from the state's bounty, it is an urgent task of the Church to teach us to refuse the evil and to choose the good. As Sir Richard Livingstone has said, "this generation might be called 'The Age without Standards'." There is very much that we could learn if we began, as a Church, to put into practice the watchword of the Roman Catholic Jocists: "See. Judge. Act." In whole realms of life we have been content to see, but only through muddy spectacles, rarely to judge, and more rarely still to act upon an individual or corporate judgment. There is needed a spirit of attack upon the evil places of our national life by those who start from Christian presuppositions and are maintained by the worship of God.

AT THE SAME TIME, we see our country passing from a sem-chaotic to a much more planned society. A plan involves a planner; a tremendous amount depends upon the dominant ideas, very much even sometimes upon the caprice, of those who make new plans for our society, and who administer those plans when made. Who is to plan the planners? That is the crucial issue of our society. And it is an issue which the Church must face. As Dr. Karl Mannheim has put it:

"In the past it was not quite impossible to say: 'As long as I am a fairly good Christian in my private life, in my personal relationships, I need not worry too much about the social and political order in which I live.' This attitude will become entirely impracticable in a society in the stage of planning, because there the organization of the framework of society to a large extent determines what is possible in private relationships. If society is planned not for freedom but on totalitarian lines, complete withdrawal into the parochial and personal world is virtually impossible. Thus the social organization becomes more than ever a matter of personal conscience. One cannot be a good Christian in a society where the basic rules are against the spirit of Christianity."

I believe that, as this is increasingly realized, the Church's strategy must be to bring her influence to bear at those many points where men's lives are moulded and directed by outside authority; to support this authority when it is right, to resist it, by courteous argument and, if necessary, by courageous firmness, when it is wrong. To do this, the Church must educate her own members—and her own leaders—to understand the issues that are at stake; and she must "educate our masters," that is to say, the bureaucrats who plan and mould our lives. Very much attention has rightly been given to religious education in elementary schools. The place where attention needs now to be given is to the presentation of Christianity to those in secondary schools and universities, from whose ranks will be drawn the teachers in the elementary schools, but more than that the planners and administrators of tomorrow. Here we have been weak. Here there is the opportunity for us to be much stronger. And through this kind of influence there might be created a strong minority in this country who were determined to take Christianity seriously, bringing its insights and its power to bear upon every corner of our complex social life. Because there are few things so compelling as people with a purpose, such a minority, at the heart of the nation's life, might really set the tone for our society and be recognized by those who are without as indeed the salt of the earth.

AT THIS POINT the key word seems to be family. The family itself is intended to be a Christian society in miniature. Within the family the instinct of sex, which unrestrained can make havoc of our national life, is directed along its proper creative channels. The Church itself is also intended to be a family; no Christian propaganda is really effective which is not supported by the convincing evidence of a new way of life experienced together by men and women of very different type, age and background. Finally, the family spirit learned within the Church must go out into a wider world, to interpenetrate official life and the general life of the community.

I draw a certain encouragement from the preface to Mr. Bertrand Russell's book, Freedom and Organization, 1814-1914. "This book," he writes,

"is an attempt to trace the main causes of political change during the hundred years from 1814 to 1914. These causes appear to me to have been of three kinds: economic technique, political theory, and important individuals. I do not believe that any one of these three can be ignored, or wholly explained away as an effect of causes of other kinds."

In the next hundred years political changes will come from the same causes. Economic technique—that is still largely unpredictable. No one could have seen that Whitney's invention of the cotton gin would have transformed the economy of the southern states in America, riveting slavery to them, and bringing on an inevitable conflict with the northern states, whose economy and interests were different. But it is necessary, on the local scale, on the national scale, and on the international scale, that there should be a constant Christian watchfulness of economic development, looking out for the places where it depresses or depersonalizes men, and calling out for a planned redress of these evils. Political theory will change. If Christians understood it better, they might be the people who changed it, bringing to bear upon it that understanding of man which is given to those who accept the revelation of God in the Man Jesus Christ. Important individuals? They are also unpredictable. But the Church itself is called to be as an individual in the world; to be to the world as the living Body of Christ. If, in every place in our country, there were a group of people, however small, in whom others could feel that the spirit of Christ was alive and active, the effect upon the country and upon the world would be immeasurable. I believe that the message of the Oxford Conference of 1937 has increasing significance for our day:

"The first duty of the Church, and its greatest service to the world, is that it be in very deed the Church—confessing the true faith, committed to the fulfilment of the will of Christ, its own Lord, and united in Him in a fellowship of love and service."

An aware and wise, a charitable and a heroic Christianity; that is what we need. But above all, Christianity. For it is beliefs which change societies. Without the living Spirit of Christ we are but men with ideas, trying to re-arrange society when it needs above all things to be re-born. Dr. Karl Mannheim, challenging Christianity from the outside, has said:

"Of course, this complete penetration of life by religion will only occur if those who represent Christian tradition are once more able to go back to the genuine sources of religious experience and do not think that the habitual and institutional forms of religion will suffice for the reconstruction of man and society. Only if the rebirth of religion both in terms of a popular movement and of regenerated leadership, coincides with the forthcoming social transformation can it happen that the new democratic order of this country will be Christian."

IF WE DO NOT RETURN to those springs of life and vitality, whose fault will it be? Ours alone. For we know that those springs are still there; we know the path that leads to them; it is only our footsteps which flag upon the way. Ours is a day of opportunity when, in the words of an act of thanksgiving we used to use at Cromer, there is a sense—perhaps not quite so invigorating as we used to think it—"that all things are being made new, and that it is given to us to make traditions as well as to uphold them." To make far more than traditions, I believe; under God, to make a new world. Yet nothing could be worse than a sham Christian society, in which the Faith was brought in just "for the sake of morale." That is not an unreal danger. What if Constantine were converted and the Church did not know what to do with him? Times of crisis demand above all things men of God: without men of God you can have no approach to a Christian society. The opportunity is specially that of the Church of England—not of a Church of England turned in upon itself in a new access of devout "good churchmanship," but of a Church outward turned towards the world, and giving a lead to all other Churches in our land. If our Church were really alive, and really courteous to the members of other denominations, and really patient in endeavoring to understand the new problems and new specialisms of today, her chance would be a very great one. (This courtesy indeed is needed. I am constrained to repeat a story told by a Director of Education of an Anglican clergyman who complained that, in the place to which his school children were evacuated, the Roman Catholic priest spoke to him just as himself would speak to a Dissenting minister!) Such a Church is needed now; such a Church will be needed even more in the days of peace-making and of rebuilding, when an inflamed and angry nationalism might well put back the day of international reconciliation for half a century. Are we the men for such a task? No, we are not. But Christ is adequate for this and every task; in a new loyalty to Him we can find life and courage and grace sufficient for all of difficulty and perplexity that lies ahead.

UNDERSTANDING REVELATION

on around the cross of Christ on Calvary, just as it is going on today, and just as it will be going on tomorrow:

BUT ALL THIS HAS BEEN JUDGED OF GOD, AND CAST OUT! ITS END IS CERTAIN! ITS DESTRUCTION HAS BEEN SEALED! OUR SALVATION HAS BEEN WON!

"If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him; only if we deny Him, will He deny us!"

And at the moment when the guilty world is judged, the Holy City descends from God out of Heaven! Only the Redeemed can see it; yet it is the one stronghold against whose gates the powers of Hell cannot prevail!

It is unnecessary for me to say to you, now, that the picture of the Holy City is entirely symbolic. It is not the picture of a place, but of a People, a Communion, a Fellowship! This is clearly shown in the symbolism of the numbers,—which plays such a large part in the book,—and which comes to a glorious climax in this description of the City of Light, the Rainbow City, the City of the Redeemed! Sufficient to say, now, that in the book every number which has an evil significance, and every number which signifies judgment, has been ruled out, and the description is made up of numbers which mean "Man dowered as never before with God's Spirit", and "enlarged with Heavenly Powers".

Even the number which signified the perfection which the Creator meant for humanity,—the number Seven,—has disappeared, and has been superseded by the number Twelve, which signifies God's True Israel. The number Seven was made up of Four, symbolizing the physical world, plus Three, symbolizing the spiritual world. And only one ever reached it,—namely Christ. But the greater perfection, which through Christ, is now open to the Redeemed, is not four plus three, but four multiplied by three,—a three-fold gift of God's spirit flows in upon the True Israel, the Holy Fellowship which has inherited redemption through the Sacrifice of the Death of Christ, and has been washed in His most Precious Blood!

The Holy City is the Fellowship of the Redeemed in all ages, the Saints, the Martyrs, the company innumerable of those who have put their trust in Him! And we have our place there, too, through hope and faith, beside the flowing waters, and underneath the trees whose fruit is Life, and whose leaves are for the Healing of the Nations! Amen.

QUESTIONNAIRE OF 1943

Did I pray for a New Year of Peace?

Did I pray for hearts that we might rejoice in His work?

Did I pray that our ambitions might be for things worthwhile?

What did Christ think of us in 1943?

What did He think of our excuses?

What did He think of our misspent opportunities?

What did He think of our insincerity and disloyalty?

What did He think of our influence?

What did He think of our prayer life?

What did He think of considering anything more than His work?

We can all trust Jesus, but can He trust us?

Let each one of us in 1944 answer faithfully to the question, does He have faith in me?

The Lord made a covenant with us in Horeb.

Let us renew it in 1944. The Trinity of the New Year is God, Man, Happiness.

Let us resolve to start where we stand and endeavor to win by our work His highest praise. Then we will seek to bring every child of God back to Him and our 1944 will indeed be a Happy New Year.

Lord, lay some soul upon my heart,
And give me grace to do my part;
That some soul may be brought to Thee,
Through me.

O, Happy New Year, when this Happy New Year in time shall end, let it be said, I've played the friend, have lived and loved and labored here, and made of it A Happy Year.

Lucy Powell Moltz.

BOOK NOTES

By F. J. Warnecke

RENDER UNTO CAESAR. Lewis Publishing Company, New York City. 223 pages. $2.

The unnamed editors of this book had an interesting idea—to compile a selection of sermons on war preached here in America during our four major wars. So there are sermons from the American Revolution, the War Between the States—though we of the south might wonder why the selections are all from the Northern point of view!—the first World War of 1917 and the present war. On the whole, it's not a bad selection. Episcopalians will be interested to note sermons by Dr. B. I. Bell, Arthur Lee Kinsolving, and Dean Austin Pardue, newly elected Bishop of Pittsburgh.

CHOOSE YE THIS DAY, by Elmer G. Homrighausen. Westminster Press, Philadelphia, Pa.. 152 pages. $1.50.

This is a grand statement of the place of evangelism in the Christian faith and in the Christian Church. It approaches its subject with a dignity of intention and a regard for thoughtful Christian theology that is not often found in books dealing with this topic. We Episcopalians need to have evangelism emphasized for us! This book grew out of a need felt by the Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches for a clear statement of the basic issues involved in Christian evangelism. Dr. Homrighausen has succeeded admirably in his purpose. There is an especially interesting chapter dealing with the modern objections to evangelism by educators, sociologists, psychologists and also by some theological schools. Here Dr. Homrighauen meets the objections of the modern liberals, typified by Dr. Charles Morrison, and of the neo-orthodox group typified by Dr. Niebuhr. Dr. Homrighausen is professor of Christian Education at Princeton Seminary.

REFUGEES WHO WROTE SCRIPTURE, by Roy L. Smith. Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tenn.. 64 pages. 25c.

This is the fourth in the "Know Your Bible" series. It covers the books of Kings, Samuel, Joshua, Judges, Ezekiel and Second Isaiah. It is well up to the high standard of the first three books in this series published last fall. We know of no better presentation of the Old Testament for lay use than this. Though they are written in popular, non-technical language they are both scholarly and reverent. We await the remainder of this series with much interest.

Post-War Problems Threaten Social Work

Rev. Charles Sheerin Elected National President

New York, N. Y.—A tidal wave of postwar social problems threatens the whole area of social work, and especially the field in which Church Mission of Help is active, according to numerous speakers attending the annual meeting of that case-work society held in New York at 281 Fourth Avenue, February 1-4. Added to the familiar maladjustments and difficulties of adolescence and youth will come many results of current abnormal situations and relationships. To quote only one of many sources of future trouble that were mentioned from various parts of the country, a marriage license clerk in a large city reports that every hour of the day brings at least one man asking for a license to marry a girl whose name he cannot at the moment remember.

Church Mission of Help, already faced with more opportunities than it can meet, is endeavoring to extend its work, increase its staff, and at the same time uphold its high standards. Staff or board members from fourteen of the seventeen dioceses in which the society is organized reported a greatly increased demand for help in meeting acute problems due to current abnormal conditions in family and community. The seventeen dioceses which have CMH branches, it was pointed out, include more than half the communicants of the Church.

The program included a discussion led by Mrs. Kendall Emerson of New York on maintaining standards of work during war and recruiting staff for the future. Methods of publicity and finance were presented by Mrs. Ralph Barrow, of Boston. Dr. Walter W. Pettit, director of the New York School of Social Work, led a lively discussion on the relation of CMH to community agencies, and Dr. Margaret Mahler, Viennese phychiatrist, lectured on psychology of the adolescent.

Nearly 9,000 individuals have had some service in the past year from Church Mission of Help, according to the report of the national executive, Miss Edith F. Balmford. More than 4,000 young people have had long-time counsel and care. Of the total number, 98.3 per cent were native-born Americans; more than 85 per cent were white.

"Anxieties and emotional strains of war time and the moving of a great many families and individuals because of military and industrial activity have had their effect on the makeup of families and communities," Miss Balmford states. "Social agencies are confronted with tasks which have many new surface aspects in the Church Mission of Help. Our major responsibility is for young people who are meeting the problem of adolescence and youth. The largest number of those coming to us are between 16 and 21, though many branches of the Society give 14 as their lower age limit, and some branches have given up stating any lower age limit. In working with the younger adolescents we are recognizing the importance of giving help early and the fact that superficially young people are growing up very fast under the wartime pressures."

A warm tribute to the work of the Rev. Dr. Don Frank Fenn, rector of the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Baltimore, was adopted with a rising vote in appreciation of his work as national president of CMH. The Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of Epiphany Church, Washington, D. C., was elected to succeed him. Other officers are: Mrs. Kendall Emerson, New York, and Mrs. Bradford Locke, Princeton, N. J., reelected first and second vice-presidents; Walter W. Pettit, Ph. D., director of the New York School of Social Work, newly elected third vice-president, and Mr. Lewis R. Conklin, New York, reelected treasurer.

MINISTERING TO JAPANESE-AMERICANS

Hunt, Idaho—The newly established Church of the Holy Apostles, the congregation of which is made up of Episcopal Church people from Alaska, Washington, Oregon and California, is ministering effectively to the Japanese-American people of the Minidoka Relocation Center, as evidenced by a report just made public.

Comparing favorably with many a parish, Holy Apostles has had in a year, 37 baptisms, of which 34 were adults; 54 Confirmations, and 38 "Boys in the Service" are reported. Services in both English and Japanese have been held regularly, and the Rev. Gennosuki Shoji, the Rev. Joseph Kitagawa and Deaconess S. Margaret Peppers, have done much visiting, teaching and pastoral ministry.

In the center are organizations for older men, older women, for English-speaking wives, and there is a Girls' Club, Daughters of the King, Choir and Acolyte Guild. The Minidoka Churchman is published weekly and there is a library of 400 volumes.

During the past year the Center was visited by Bishops Frank A. Rhea, of Idaho; C. S. Reifsnider, in charge of Japanese-American work; S. Arthur Huston, of Olympia; William P. Remington, Eastern Oregon; Benjamin D. Dagwell, Oregon.

OVERSEAS APPOINTMENT

New York, N. Y.—Appointment of Miss Ruth G. Clark, of Westfield, N. J., for missionary service in Puerto Rico is announced by the Overseas Department of the National Council. Her work will be at St. Andrew's Mission, Mayaguez, and she expects to start for the field upon completion of special studies, which should be some time during next summer.

Miss Clark is a member of St. Paul's Church, Westfield, and is a graduate of Mount Holyoke College, with post-graduate work at Columbia University. She has taught French and Spanish in Peekskill High School, New York State, and in high schools at Freehold, N. J., and South Orange, N. J. She has been active in work with Girl Scouts, the Girls' Friendly Society, and is a member of the Diocesan Board of the Woman's Auxiliary and of the New Jersey Board of the Consumer's League.

Planning Archbishop's Visit

Schedule Shaping for Engagements of Archbishop of York in This Country

New York, N. Y.—Plans for the visit to this country of the Archbishop of York, the Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Cyril Forster Garbett, D. D., are maturing so that the Presiding Bishop finds it possible to issue a fairly definite schedule at this time.

If transportation materializes as expected, the Archbishop will speak at the Cathedral in Washington on April 16, and will be present at the Consecration of Bishop-elect Angus Dun in Washington, April 19. He will speak in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, on April 23, at 11 A. M. and again at 8 P. M. On the 24th he will meet with the National Council's Committee on Cooperation with the Church of England, and on the 25th he will attend the meeting of the National Council.

The New York Church Club, with other organizations, is planning a dinner for April 26, and on the 27th, Archbishop Garbett will discuss various interdenominational matters with the International Missionary Conference.

Archbishop Garbett will visit Chicago about April 29 and will leave for Canada May 1.

A Chapel at Grace House—After the War

Roanoke, Va.—There's an especially interesting mission near St. Paul in Wise County, Virginia, known as Grace House on the Mountain. It is under the care of the Rev. Alexander D. Juhan of Norton and Deaconess Anne Newman and Miss Thelma Erickson are the efficient resident missionaries.

At the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese in November, 1941, Bishop Phillips explained the need for a chapel at Grace House and its probable cost. The project was immediately adopted as the "Diocesan Special" of the Auxiliary for the next two years and Mrs. Gordon H. Baker, of Roanoke, was appointed "Chairman of the Grace House Chapel Fund" or, in other words, receiver of contributions.

With the enthusiastic cooperation of the various officers and branches of the Auxiliary, Mrs. Baker has been quite successful and by the end of 1943 her statement read like this:

|---|---|
| From forty-nine Branches... | $1,193.30 |
| Individual Gifts ..... | 488.00 |
| Special Offerings ..... | 276.94 |
| Budget 1941-42 ..... | 30.00 |
| Interest on Savings Account.. | 24.70 |
| Total Received to Date.... | $2,012.94 |

This is a little beyond the goal originally fixed for the fund but occasional gifts are still coming in and are most gladly received, since the chapel as planned would be far from elaborate and every additional contribution will improve it just that much.

Since she had completed the work for which she was appointed, Mrs. Baker at the end of December turned the fund over to the treasurer of the Diocese for safe keeping until the chapel can be erected at as early a time as possible after the war, when such things as "priorities" will no longer hinder its construction.

YOUNG COLORED CHURCHMAN MAKING A FINE RECORD

Martinsville, Va.—One of the youngest congregations in the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia is St. Paul's Mission at Martinsville, under the care of the Rev. Charles L. Somers, of Lynchburg, who is in charge of the four colored missions in the diocese. They have no church building yet, but are accumulating a fund for the erection of a church.

The treasurer of St. Paul's is Mrs. Mary E. McDaniel, a school teacher. She and her husband, Charles McDaniel, have a son who is a good soldier and an interested Churchman, and this story is about that son.

Armour G. McDaniel was born at Martinsville and is now twenty-eight years of age. After high school at Martinsville, he attended Virginia State College at Petersburg, Virginia, where he graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science. Following this he was a teacher and Boy Scout leader at Martinsville.

In the Army he was assigned to the Air Forces and received his training at Tuskeegee Institute in Alabama. He won his wings and is now a First Lieutenant. At present his parents do not know just where he is, as his squadron left for overseas duty before the Christmas holidays. Before he left the States he was serving as an assistant operations officer.

Armour McDaniel was confirmed in Martinsville on December 7, 1941. He has pledged five hundred dollars to the Church Building Fund and authorized his mother to make the payment for him whenever the sum is needed.

This young man is serving well his country and his Church in time of war, and it is our hope he may be spared to come back and serve at home with equal zeal when peace returns.

PRAYS FOR BLESSING ON U. S. FOR GENEROSITY

New York, N. Y.—A check from the Church in the United States in the amount of £4,725, 15s 6d is acknowledged by Bishop John Dauglish, secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts (SPG). Writing to Dr. James Thayer Addison, he says, "On behalf of the SPG I ask you to accept our very great gratitude for the gift, which, in the shape of a cheque from our Central Board of Finance, has reached us today.

"That you should have been able and willing to do this in the middle of a terrible war is amazing and I pray that the generosity of the Church in the United States may bring to her a great blessing.

"You will, I think, like to know that we have been able, on account of your gift, to do something more to help the Church of the Province of the West Indies."

Clericus Joins Laymen's Club

Members Join in a Dinner at Cathedral. B. E. Hutchinson Speaker

Detroit, Michigan—Clergy and laymen of the Diocese of Michigan are beginning to get better acquainted with each other these days through the medium of the new Episcopal Laymen's Club of Michigan, of which Mr. John C. Spaulding, chancellor of the diocese, is president.

When the Laymen's Club planned its January meeting, it was found that the date coincided with the monthly meeting of the Detroit Clericus, a time-honored institution in the diocese. The Clericus has met at 11:00 in the morning for so many years that nobody can remember any other meeting time.

However, with the brashness of youth, the Episcopal Laymen's Club of Michigan approached the Clericus with a big idea: why not postpone the Clericus meeting until 5:30 P. M. on January 17, and let the members join with the Laymen's Club in a dinner at St. Paul's Cathedral! The Laymen's Club had asked Mr. B. E. Hutchinson, vice-president of the Chrysler Corporation, to be the speaker, and maybe the clergy would like to hear him.

The clery would, and did. Nearly 200 clergymen and laymen were present at the dinner, and heard Mr. Hutchinson give his ideas on the post-war world. They also listened with a good deal of interest when he said that he had been confirmed but recently, and the reason for his seeking Confirmation was because he had come to see the value of the Church under the present world conditions.

The Episcopal Laymen's Club has key men in nearly all the parishes in the Detroit area, and a meeting of these key men is planned, with the directors and chairmen of committees, for February 17. The vigor and purposefulness of these key men is well typified by one of their number who brought 23 men to the January 17 meeting, and announced that he had plans for bringing in another 21 applications for membership.

WARE CHURCH ANNUAL MEETING

Parish Free From Debt

Gloucester, Va.—Approximately a hundred persons attended the annual parish meeting and dinner of Ware Church, held January 17, 1944.

Ware Parish is one of the oldest in the country, founded circa 1650. The present church building (which is the second) dates back to 1690. The Rev. Reginald Wells Eastman is the present rector.

The highlight of the meeting was the presentation of the cancelled rectory mortgage by Mr. George E. Cary, junior warden, and one of the trustees. This leaves the parish free from debt.

Mr. W. Fleet Taliaferro, senior warden and treasurer, reported that there was $1,178.25 in the William Byrd Lee Memorial Parish House Fund. The late Rev. William Byrd Lee was rector of the church for forty years, and was the son of Colonel Richard Henry Lee and Evelyn Byrd Page Lee.

Mrs. Lee, his widow, lives on in Gloucester at "Leeland". She is ninety years old, but continues active in parish life and a source of inspiration to all.

The congregation unanimously passed a resolution asking the vestry to include yearly in the budget for the Memorial Fund a figure equivalent to the principal previously paid yearly on the mortgage.

Mr. Eastman stressed the point that now is the time to build up the fund. He suggested the gift of war bonds as one of the ways of doing it.

Ware has a fine record as a missionary-minded church. It not only pledges generously to the program of the church, but also gives a substantial yearly bonus to the diocese.

Mr. R. H. Cochrane, of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, has a record of service to the Church which is almost unique. Fifty years ago he was elected to the vestry of the parish, but he could not be installed for several months, until attaining the age of 21. The anniversary was duly marked in the parish in January. Mr. Cochrane has served as vestryman, junior and senior warden, as nearly continuously as diocesan canon permits—for Christ Church must have a rotating vestry. Mr. Cochrane has also been attending diocesan conventions as delegate from Christ Church for at least forty years. A bank president, he has been for many years the

Priests

The Rev. Lawrence W. Pearson, missionary-in-charge of St. Paul's Church, Brighton, and St. Stephen's, Hamburg, was ordained to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Creighton, D. D., bishop of Michigan, on Sunday morning, January 30, in St. Andrew's Church, Ann Arbor.

The preacher at the service was the Rev. Henry Lewis, D. D., rector of the host parish. Mr. Pearson was presented by the Rev. Gordon Matthews, executive secretary of the Diocese of Michigan and chairman of the Diocesan Board of Examining Chaplains. The Rev. Robert Muir, assistant minister in St. Andrew's Parish, read the Litany; the Rev. Robert W. Bell, of St. Jude's Church, Fenton, the Epistle; and the Rev. Donald W. Crawford, of St. Christopher's Church, Detroit, the Gospel.

Mr. Pearson is a graduate of Hobart College, and has also received an M. A. degree from the University of Michigan, and has done special work at the Pennsylvania State College. He read English History at Exeter College, Oxford, England, for one year, taught four years at the Brent School in the Philippine Islands, and two years at the American School in Tokyo, Japan, having charge of the choir there also. He studied for the ministry in Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn. Mr. Pearson took charge of the churches in Brighton and Hamburg immediately following his ordination to the diaconate by Bishop Creighton on July 18, 1943, in All Saints' Church, Pontiac.

ST. JOHN'S IN THE MOUNTAINS LOSES A FRIEND

Mrs. Arthur J. Smith died on December 3, 1943, at Hamilton, New York.

Mrs. Smith, as Alice E. Bragg, was born October 5, 1854, at Unadilla, New York. She was married to Mr. Smith December 1, 1875, and they made their home in Hamilton. A son, the late Dr. Arthur Whipple Smith, was professor of mathematics in Colgate University in Hamilton. Another son, Mr. Warren Smith, has residences in Chicago and Ripon, Wisconsin, and a daughter lives in California.

The news of the passing of Mrs. Smith, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years, brings memories of a most exceptional woman to those who are familiar with the mission known as St. John's-in-the-Mountains in Franklin County, in the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia.

In 1921 Miss Ora Harrison, then and now the Missionary in Charge at St. John's, about ten miles from the nearest railroad station at Ferrum, wrote a story about her work for the "Spirit of Missions". The story attracted the attention of Mrs. Smith, and, after correspondence with Miss Harrison, she came down for a visit. Thereafter for several years Mrs. Smith was a part of the life of St. John's and she spent a good deal of time there, becoming intensely interested in the work and manifesting that interest in every possible way.

On her visits she would rent from somebody in the neighborhood a mule that she called "Daisy". Although when she first came to St. John's she had reached the age of sixty-seven years, she would ride Daisy for miles around, getting acquainted with the people and finding ways to help them and the mission.

She enlisted much financial assistance from various friends in the North. One contributed largely to the salary of a teacher in the school then being conducted at St. John's. Another paid for the boring of a well at the mission. Another paid the cost of a long course of treatment in Baltimore for a boy who was severely burned. Others contributed to a fund for the building of a chapel.

Mrs. Smith had a close friend in Chicago and Rockville, Illinois, who was a woman physician, Dr. E. Franc Morrill. Through Mrs. Smith's influence Dr. Morrill became interested in St. John's and, though not an Episcopalian, spent some two years at the mission at her own expense as a volunteer physician, subject to call day or night like any other doctor and giving her skill and time to the relief of the mountain people. And in other ways she contributed to the welfare of St. John's and the people to whom it ministers.

Mrs. Smith was a splendid woman and that first contact of hers with St. John's-in-the-Mountains proved to be one of the greatest blessings in the history of the mission. Few people have demonstrated more effectively the value of a real Christian enthusiasm for the missionary work of the Church, and she will long be remembered with sincere affection and gratitude by those who were so fortunate as to be associated with her in Southwestern Virginia.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

"The richest truths of the Bible are not found by one who is easily tired."

There is a great deal of unmapped country within us.

—George Eliot.

As the wise men from the East brought their gifts of frankincense, gold and myrrh to the cradle of the Christ, so all the realms of human wisdom, East and West, will some day bring their treasures to the foot of His throne. —Selected.

"It is every man's privilege to come under the direct personal guidance of his God."

One feels, in reading the Sermon on the Mount, very much as he feels amid the Alps—a sense of solemnity, power, calmness, repose, strength, majestic peace, eternal assurance. Only a trifling mind can escape it.

—Herbert Parrish.

Men advance life's frontiers, conquer life's temptations, lay the foundations of life's noblest buildings, win the prizes of freedom, not by a jaunty, easy-going stroll, but by prolonged effort. Not without cost are life's prizes won, and the wisest among us will see that part of the prize is the very conflict itself and the stern virtues it compels. —F. T. Lord.

"Happy is the man who knows the joys of Christ's companionship. For him there are the joys of the open road. He travels with the best of all Guides on his way to the Eternal City."

The inscription on the Cross was written in letters of Greek and Latin and Hebrew, and the three tongues made the same proclamation, that Christ was King. The one language represented the culture of Greece. Another represented the power of the world empire of Rome. The third represented the sacred records and the faith of the Hebrew race. In the three realms represented there—the realms of culture, of power and of faith—our Christ is to be the King forevermore.

—D. A. Hayes.

The historic Jesus, with the challenge of His life and ideals, with the inspiring and redeeming power of His Spirit, has been too strong for all obstacles. The Roman Catholic, with priest and penance and mass, the Quaker without sacrament or clergy, have alike felt and shown His power. Beneath all differences men have been held by His mastery of conscience, His way of life. His revelation of God.

—Dr. H. F. Rall.

His Kingdom was not of this world; it came not with observation; it was of the truth and within us. No plan for the betterment of mankind which does not make perfection of character the primary aim is likely to be of permanent good. —Selected.

One thing only caused deep pain—they could no longer see their blue and white flag waving, bringing peace to their souls.

Then the bishops, pointing to the blue sky of Greece and the white light of day, used to say to them regularly:

"Behold our flag, children! The Creator Himself has given it to us, and no conqueror has power to lower it. From the early morning when God causes the day to dawn until night falls, look all the time at the blue color of the sky and sea and the white light of the day, and you will have our flag always before you."

THE CHRISTIAN LIGHT IN THE WORLD DARKNESS

London—A joint gathering for members of the International Christian Fellowships was held in London on December 11th under the auspices of the British Council of Churches.

An address was given by Dr. Hugh Martin on "The Christian light in the world darkness." Dr. Martin said that the gathering represented in miniature what he felt was the real hope of the world, viz., the growing sense of a Christian fellowship transcending national frontiers.

He said that the Christian light was shining in the darkness of today with added splendor. Likening this light to a five-pointed star, Dr. Martin said that there were five ways in which the Christian Church seemed to him to be shining in a new way, especially in the present darkness of the European continent.

First, he said, there was the fact that the Christian Church was standing out as the champion for the rights of man as such. It was not only for Christian institutions, but for Jews, for children, for the oppressed everywhere that Christians were bravely giving their witness.

Then there was the fact of a new sense of Church loyalty in the European countries. The mere fact that so many other institutions had gone down before Hitler's tyranny emphasized the truth that the Churches had held together and that Church members were showing a deepening loyalty. Christians had found that they could not stand as isolated individuals, but must stand together as members of a corporate body.

Thirdly, Dr. Martin stressed the new drawing together between Christians of different historical traditions. Not only had Protestant bodies of different kinds found a new basis of cooperation, but Roman Catholics and Protestants had found that they, too, had much in common and could cooperate when confronted with the new paganism. There were, of course, many differences between Roman Catholics and Protestants, but these did not prevent important acts of joint witness.

Fourthly, there was, the speaker said, something in the nature of a spiritual awakening going through the Churches of Europe. Churches which had appeared to be in a rut had been stimulated into new spiritual efforts and vitality. They would have much to give to us all in the post-war period.

Lastly, said Dr. Martin, the witness of the Church shone out in the darkness because of the attitude Christians were taking to their enemies. As an example, Dr. Martin quoted a statement recently issued by Christian leaders in Norway concerning the post-war treatment of criminals. This statement concluded: "The Church desires settlement—not laxity; justice—not revenge; reconciliation—not hatred." Christians were faced with two dangers. They might either give way to an easy sentimentalism or to bitter hatred. He would not say which was the greater danger of the two. It was easy to be forgiving when wrongs had been committed against others rather than ourselves. But the Church had a duty to stand for something more than mere revenge. It was the messenger of reconciliation and must work steadily for an ultimate reconciliation of all men in Christ.

SWISS PASTOR TELLS OF HIS IMPRISONMENT BY GESTAPO

It is only recently that it has been known that Pastor de Pury, of the canton of Neuenburg, who has been in prison in Lyons for a few months, has been released. At the time, the news had to be contradicted. But now it can be announced that Paster de Pury has already returned to Switzerland.

Journal de Geneve for December 7th writes: "Roland de Pury, the Swiss clergyman in Lyons, who was imprisoned by the Gestapo for 150 days, gave as the motive for his arrest that he was considered a participant in French resistance. Among his parishioners in Lyons was a woman belonging to the French bourgeoisie, Madame Albrecht, who worked on a clandestine paper for the French resistance. Madame Albrecht, who was imprisoned, fell ill. De Pury visited her, as was his duty. Then she escaped, and soon after wrote to de Pury in order to ask him for news concerning a mutual friend. De Pury answered her letter immediately. Later, Madame Albrecht was again arrested, and de Pury's letter was discovered. Though the letter was unimportant, it was sufficient to make him suspected. He was arrested and examined three times, and accused of being a paid official of the resistance. During the 150 days he spent in a cell, he learnt that Madame Albrecht had been accused of high treason, and had been executed."

A Neuchatel paper, Feuille d' Avis (December 7th), also carried an interesting article on the subject:

"Pastor Roland de Pury, during a public lecture, told of his experiences during the five months of his captivity in France. The physical aspect of suffering is nothing compared with its moral aspect. Let us imagine a cell, five metres square and completely bare, and a man living in it for months without a book, paper or pencil, without any work and without news. He is deprived of any human presence from outside, and prevented from speaking with other human beings. The prisoner does not know what will happen to him, and anything can happen; a sentence of death, execution, deportation or an air raid. The prisoner's moral torture is boundless. A Swiss captain, with whom de Pury crossed the Swiss frontier, awaited his death sentence and execution for 26 months.

"The tragedy of modern captivity reduces itself to a fight between hope and despair. Despair is a diabolical companion, which one cannot get rid of. Throughout the day and night, the prisoner is defenceless in the hands of men who have no account to render to anybody, and he fights with his remaining strength without hope of ever defeating his despair."

MANY SUMMER CONFERENCES SUSPENDED THIS YEAR

New York, N. Y.—War conditions may make Summer Conferences more difficult, but they are not giving up in despair. On the contrary, nearly 100 conferences, summer schools, and other forms of organization for combined study and recreation, have been announced by dioceses and provinces throughout the Church.

Some have decided not to operate this year, others have not yet decided, but the stalwart hundred are on record, and getting their plans in order.

The Wellesley Conference will not be held this year, the Peninsula Summer School a joint effort of the dioceses of Delaware and Easton; the Blue Grass Conference, Kentucky and Lexington; and the Sewanee Conferences; also West Michigan Summer Conference; and the conferences of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Southwest Texas, and Oregon, will not be held this year. Difficulties of transportation, of food supply, and of personnel are the reasons some conferences are suspended. The ones being held announce frankly that food may not be up to previous standards, but that programs will be top notch, and that there is every reason to expect a large enrollment, and a profitable season.

By J. W. KENNEDY

THERE ARE TWO great forces at work among us. We call the one centripetal and the other centrifugal. The one means "proceeding or directed toward the center"; the other "proceeding or flying away from the center". These two forces are usually vying with each other. For example, as the world revolves the centripetal force tends to hold it together while the centrifugal force tends to break it asunder. These forces express vividly the integrating force of Christianity, holding man together around the center of Christ; and the disintegrating force of evil that would tear him away from this center. The whirl of each day's life contains both of these forces, the one trying to hold us to our central purpose of sanity and goodness, the other trying to make us fly off into space, out of control, heading nowhere, confused, lost. How does this power of Christ hold us together, how can we keep Him at the center, how can we keep the star of His presence under our finger tip? That is the question each one of us asks at one time or another. The question usually comes when this terrific force of evil has a good hold upon us and is pulling us fast away from all we have known and desired as good, and we feel we cannot hold on any longer. Then we cry for aid and want desperately some powerful anchor to hold us to the deepest concepts we have known and believed—even though not always practiced before.

There is something in man that makes him hold tenaciously to the highest until the break comes and then he loses contact and doesn't care; and it requires as much labor and as many persons to gather up the pieces and reassemble them as it did to put Humpty Dumpty back together again. But even all the king's horses and all the king's men cannot put him back together again unless he willingly accepts Christ as the center of his spiritual universe and is willing to be hitched to Him and His way as the axis and the orbit of life's range and rotation. We can keep Christ at the center only by keeping our thoughts centered on Him and tallying every concept and activity with the core of truth we have dedicated ourselves to follow. Paul expressed it well: "For I am determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified." (I Corinthians 2:2). This is how He holds us together: "by obeying His commands".

Samuel Longfellow's poem, used as Hymn 377 in The Hymnal, expresses the metho of keeping Jesus at the center, of practicing His presence, of making good the practical expression of the phrase "I need Thee every hour". The opening words are:

"I look to Thee in every need,
And never look in vain;"

and the closing ones

"Thou leadest me by unsought ways,
And turn'st my mourning into praise.

Amen."

COLLECT FOR ASH-WEDNESDAY

(February 23)

Almighty and everlasting God, Who hatest nothing that Thou hast made, and dost forgive the sins of all those who are penitent; create and make in us new and contrite hearts, that we, worthily lamenting our sins and acknowledging our wretchedness, may obtain of Thee, the God of all mercy, perfect remission and forgiveness; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

COLLECT FOR QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY

O Lord, Who hast taught us that all our doings without charity are nothing worth; send Thy Holy Ghost, and pour into our hearts that most excellent gift of all virtues, without which whatsoever liveth is counted dead before Thee. Grant this for Thine own Son Jesus Christ's sake. Amen.

The Manifestation of the Sons of God

By FREDERICK W. NEVE

I want to preface this article with an account of what has happened since I wrote my article which appeared in the December 4th issue of this paper, entitled, "When the Son of Man Cometh." I had been ill for some time, and had written that article because I had the subject of faith very much on my mind. I had felt for a long time that we Christians were losing an immense amount of spiritual power by our failure to recognize the vast resources placed at our disposal by God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. This loss of power has been due to the fact that we did not really believe Christ's promises, especially St. John 14:12.

The Loss of Power

It was because of this that I began to pray to be made a thousandfold more useful. And early in 1920, I started the Order of the Thousandfold, which received a good deal of encouragement at the time by the National Council, the Bishops' Crusade, and by Bishop Hobson, in his use of the prayer on quite a number of occasions during the first few years of the Forward Movement. It was also spread by the Christian Herald through its wide circulation throughout the world, and by individual members, too numerous to mention, several of whom had a large part in its spread in its early days. In my recent article in the Southern Churchman, I was desirous of making a new start with a still stronger emphasis on the thousandfold idea, and I appealed to others to join me in this advance. On the Sunday week following the issue of the paper, I was sitting in my library trying to think out another article on the same subject, with an expansion of what I had already stated.

A Wonderful Vision

Then something happened, the room was filled with a glorious light, which seemed to surround me, from the center of which, right before my eyes, appeared points of light. I was facing a wall covered with books, with no possibility of any light from it, and behind me the windows were half covered by blinds and just a small spot of sunlight on the floor, so that it was impossible for it to have come from anywhere outside. I was not asleep because I was thinking intently about the article which I had in mind. I have been thinking since then of why this vision was given to me, and it seems to me that it was intended to encourage me to go forward and emphasize still more fully the vital importance of taking Christ at His word, and believing that what He promised will really come to pass. For if Christianity is to become a really regenerating force in human life, it is only the power of Christ Himself who can make it so. And since He expressly says that we Christians are to be the channels through which His power is to be manifested by becoming a transforming influence in human life, we must yield ourselves up to Him, in order that we may become the means by which this transformation is to take place.

A New Creation

We are all looking forward to a New World when this war is over. A world in which, we hope and pray, that war may never visit this earth again. Already plans are being made for the creation of a new order in which the whole world will be united in a brotherhood of nations living together in peace and friendship. But if this ideal is to be attained something more will be necessary than mere statesmanship, however wise and sincere that may be. For we must remember that this is God's world which He created for a certain definite purpose, and also placed man in it to help in working out that same divine purpose. What is more, He sent His Son into the world to reveal to mankind what His divine purpose is, both by His teaching and His life and death for the salvation of mankind. Moreover, He founded a Church to carry on His work after He was gone, under His guidance and with the help of His power working with and through her members. It is, therefore, clear that the power and presence of Christ are essential to the creation of the world order which will conform to the purpose of God in creating man and this world in which he lives.

The Ideal of the Church

Now, St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Ephesians, throws light upon what Christ's Church was created by Him to do, as may be seen from the following:—"He gave some apostles; and some prophets; and some evangelists; and some pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." This, then, should be the end towards which the Church of God is ever striving, namely to manifest Christ to the world by reproducing His Image in the lives and characters of all those who profess to be His followers.

CHRIST MUST BE KING

Thou must be King; the whole world waits
Thy passing through the Golden Gates,
To visit this poor earth again,
In love and majesty to reign.

Thou must be King; the tide of war
Must ebb and turn to flood no more;
Our sons shall find in paths of peace
The nobler things of life increase.

Thou must be King; Thy gentle sway
Shall win men to Thy perfect way;
The brightest visions of the seers
Shall blossom in the coming years.

The joy of childhood's innocence
Shall last unmarred by man's offence;
And life shall, day by day, unfold
With thoughts of pearl and deeds of gold.

Thou must be King; but if Thy will Withholds Thy glorious coming still,
Then by Thy mighty Spirit reign
'Til earth be Paradise again.

He Never Missed the Mark

A Lenten Meditation

By ETHEL CUTLER

SOMEWHERE in the shadowy distances of a million years ago, our ancient forebears started their long career of tool making. Like Shiva of the Hindu pantheon they began to create and to destroy. For unnumbered ages they went on building up and tearing down. A scant five thousand years ago King Khati of Egypt made record of an astonishing new discovery:

God knows the dispositions of men,
The disposition of him that is right of heart
Is more acceptable than the ox of the worker of iniquity.

Who of all mankind first started to explore that world of inner values? Who first pushed aside as inadequate for man's achieving those things which eyes can see and ears can hear and hands can handle—seeking, ever seeking a new and untried way of life? From the hour of that "gray dawn of conscience" such a little while ago, men have been plunged into the unending struggle between outer authority and inner values, sometimes with only slight awareness of the conflict, sometimes dramatized anew in blood and sweat and tears. Once again the hour of choice is upon us. Lent draws near. "I have set before you this day life and death. Therefore choose life."

HIS PAPYRUS ROLL spread before him the young scribe began to copy with painstaking care the words of a preacher on a memorable First Day of the week. He had been one of a little group of Christians who had broken bread together and had passed from hand to hand the cup of blessing. They had remembered Jesus. They were one with Him, their bodies strengthened by the daily bread, His body; their consecration renewed by the outpoured blood of the vine, His blood that had been shed, a continual memorial of His passion till His coming again.

They were simple people, those followers of the Way, and life in the Roman Empire was unutterably complex. They were tested every hour of every day. All too often they missed the mark. But as they gazed upon the despised Cross of Golgotha, as each First Day they held in glad remembrance the unbelievable fact that there was kindled in their hearts such a blazing fire of devotion that when they fell, they struggled up again. The old way of life could never satisfy them. They had changed their minds. By the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ they no longer lived as of old. He lived in them.

"Death could not hold Him, and so He arose,"..

The young scribe made record very simply on the roll of the Sayings of Jesus, of that testing in the wilderness of Judea, before ever he began to tell his friends "The Kingdom of God is at hand. Change your minds. Trust everything to the Good News." It had been to all of them glad tidings of great joy. By word and deed they must pass along the new splendor of life. Even as he wrote the scribe saw again the pictures which the preacher had sketched so vividly.

I.

Crowds and crowds and crowds of people from the great houses in Jericho and Jerusalem and from the little houses in Galilee of the Gentiles had gathered about a Voice in the wilderness. Multitudes had been baptized in the brown swirling waters of the Jordan. And when He came and was baptized of John, a white dove circled high, hovering above His head, wings outstretched. He heard in His heart the words "My Son, beloved." John had brought terror to the hearts of his hearers. They had been shaken by the words of the ancient Messenger. They had beheld the Lord God as a consuming fire devouring the stubble of the empty fields of their lives. But He heard the haunting words from the Roll of the Prophet Isaiah, "O Lord, Thou art our Father."

"My Son, beloved."

"Father."

II.

The crowds faded from His vision. He did not hear them speak of thunder. He strode off across the plains. He climbed the barren wastes of the wilderness of Judea. He saw, unseeing, the little lizards dart across the rocks. In the night watches He heard, unheeding, the roar of the mountain lion and the still fiercer mountain bear. He sat unmoved as a serpent slipped among the boulders. The moon waxed and waned and waxed again. "Forty days" the scribe wrote upon the papyrus roll.

"My Son, beloved."

"Father."

Was it true? And if it was . . .

He was hungry. There at His feet were flat brown stones. They might have been the small brown loaves that His Mother had baked in the oven at Nazareth. How often He had watched her as she carried on her head the grass from the nearby hills for fuel, "the grass which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven."

"IF Thou art a son of God. . ." Why not command that the stones become bread? What father would withold bread from his hungry child? "If He asked for bread, would He give him a stone?" There in the wilderness He lived the history of a million years. There He knew from His own experience what King Khati had recorded long before his Hebrew forebears wrote "Man shall not live by bread alone."

III.

"IF Thou art a son of God . . ." The tumbled rocks, the lizards and the lichens vanished. He sat again at the feet of the Rabbi in the synagogue at Nazareth. He heard again as from the lips of the Rabbi an oft told tale:

"On the day of the Lord, when the waiting worshippers have come up the hill of Zion to pray as their fathers did, the priest will stand on the east balcony of the Temple, far above their heads, and beside him. Another—God's Anointed. At the moment when the first faint rim of the sun appears above the blue hills of Moab, across the valley, the priest will lift the conch shell to his lips, and sound the call to prayer, even as it has been of old. Then will Messiah hurl Himself to the stone paved court below, unhurt. Then shall all men know that He is indeed the Christ. Has not the ancient Psalmist sung,

He shall give His angels charge over Thee;
And they shall bear Thee up in their hands,
Lest haply Thou dash Thy foot against a stone.

"My Son, beloved."

"Father."

That story which had entranced Him all His boyhood, that story which had become vivid and real when first as a lad of twelve He gazed upon that eastern balcony of the temple, took its rightful place in His thinking. He was a man now. He had put away childish things. As the Son of His Father He could not make trial of God. No special privilege ever belongs to the sons of men. Who grabs aught from his brother man has not yet grown to man's estate. There are no messengers of God to protect some of us at the expense of the rest of us. For all time, even to eternity, He repudiated the ancient and honorable idea of the chosen people, who by virtue of that choice had special rights and privileges. One privilege only He accorded to His friends, "To whom much is given, of him shall much be required."

IV.

He climbed to the highest peak of the wilderness. The whole world lay at His feet. He could hear the voice of the Rabbi of Nazareth reading from the roll of the prophet Isaiah that glorious dream,—all nations from farthest east to farthest west, all the nations of the earth streaming up the hill of Zion. They would come to worship the Lord God in the Temple courts. With proud ascendency the Jewish men were wont to climb the steps up to the court of the men of God. On either side of those steps stood a tablet bearing the words, "Let no woman or proselyte pass beyond this point on pain of death." As a lad He had gone with Joseph up those steps of privilege and left Mary down below. But Joseph had not loved his brothers whose names have come down to us better than the little sisters of the forgotten names. "If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children (boys and girls alike) how much more your Heavenly Father."

But if by one little compromise He could make all nations do His will! Oh, to be the righteous ruler of all the nations of the earth, bread for all, privilege for all, power for Himself, God's Son. . .

"My Son, beloved."

"Father."

There in the wilderness of Judea among the wild beasts that growled through His spirit, He never once missed the mark. He routed them all. He was mature. He made the great transition from death to life. No crabbed hand of the past could hold Him. No beckoning will o' the wisp could lure Him. No testing, however severe, could turn Him from the strait and narrow way. "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, Him only."

WE APPROACH OUR LENT, the Lent of our heart's testing. The voice of the Lord Christ sounds adown the ages, "Follow Me." It was no wish of ours and no desiring that there should be laid upon us this overwhelming responsibility. We must help to feed the nations of the world with the bread of blessing. We must renounce all special privilege, all selfseeking, all prestige. Not in Jerusalem nor in Samaria shall we compel men to worship. Are we mature enough to share in the creation of a just and durable peace? Not even insisting that it shall be our formula of peace? The wilderness of Judea leads to the cross crowned summit of Golgotha, and only after that to the glorious dawn of the First Day of the week. In the far flung future there shall indeed be peace. Are we great enough and simple enough to help in the building of that peace?

1944 RED CROSS WAR FUND

WHEN BOMBS FALL there is no time to send help half way around the world. When a badly wounded fighting man needs a transfusion, it is too late to begin looking for a blood donor or find a nurse to care for him. When a lonely soldier learns of trouble at home, he needs help—immediately.

The American Red Cross provides that help wherever and whenever the need arises. A continuous procession of blood donors must be maintained, nurses must be recruited for the Army and Navy, trained Red Cross workers and supplies must be sent to camps, hospitals and foreign theaters of operation the world over.

When a train crash leaves scores injured, when flood engulfs a town, when epidemic strikes, delay may cost lives. Red Cross disaster relief and medical supplies, held in readiness for such emergencies, plus trained workers to rescue and assist victims and help in their rehabilitation, will prevent delay and thus save many lives.

To fulfill its many obligations to the armed forces and our people, the American Red Cross needs your help. During 1944 it must supply some 5,000,000 blood donations. Each month 2,500 nurses must be recruited for the Army and Navy. Red Cross field directors and other trained personnel must be stationed at military and naval posts and hospitals to help our fighting men and their families when personal trouble brews, a task in which the Red Cross chapter on the home front ably does its share.

AT HOME the Red Cross must continue to maintain a state of alert. Disasters must be met as they occur. Nurse's aides and first aiders must be trained and other educational projects continued. Food parcels for distribution to prisoners of war must be packed, surgical dressings made and the thousand and one details of administering a far-flung, busy organization must be attended.

All activities of the American Red Cross are financed by voluntary gifts and contributions. During March, designated by President Roosevelt as Red Cross Month, the American Red Cross must raise its 1944 War Fund of unprecedented size to meet unprecedented needs. Your contribution will assure maintenance of all Red Cross services and thus indirectly help save many a life. Let's give!

SWISS SLEIGHS

painted, usually adorned the front end of the sleigh bench, while another striking figure was enthroned high up on the bow.

A still more luxurious type of sleigh consisted of a form of coach seating one or two persons. Here the passengers occupied the back of the vehicle in beautifully upholstered, arm-chair-like seats. All the glory of wood sculpture was concentrated in the forepart of the sleigh, where either a fierce lion, a horse, a bull, a deer, a dog, a fantastic griffin, or even a pair of graceful dolphins held sway.

These vehicles de luxe were used for festive sleigh riding parties, such as the still existing "Schlittedas" in the Engadine, where ancient costumes worn by most participants add a colorful touch to an already captivating picture.

The Heroism of the Greek Orthodox Church

News of Church conditions in the Balkans is scanty and infrequent. Some months ago, however, the Metropolitan of Carystia, Panteleimon, escaped to the Middle East. He gave an interview to the Cairo representative of the New York Greek paper, The National Herald, in which the heroic part played by the Orthodox Church in Greece is revealed. The following is a translation from the paper and includes the bulk of the article:

The unexpected subjection of our nation to Germany, and to Italy in subjugated Albania, has created a new world of obligations and new methods to meet them. The Church retained its organization and again prepared to take up its heavy mission. The tempest had destroyed almost everything, but the Church firmly rooted, spread wide its branches to take under its benevolent shade the persecuted people of Greece.

It was fortunate that in these cruel circumstances the Archiepiscopal Throne of Greece should be occupied by Archbishop Damascenos, a man gigantic in soul and stature, to whom the eyes of all the enslaved Greeks are turned. This great Primate, endowed with physical power, sympathy, a good appearance, good judgment, integrity, remarkable intelligence, diplomatic skill and intense patriotism, is just the person to occupy this thorny throne. He is the true type of Greek Archbishop who succeeds in imposing himself even on the conquerors, who, with a real admiration for his capabilities and the inexplicable awe which he inspires, accept his interventions. These frequently result in protecting and alleviating the unhappy people of Greece.

Help to British Soldiers

While these efforts continue and their immediate results move to tears those who can follow them, the attention of the Greek Church is also directed to those of our English Allies who have succeeded in escaping capture.

All these sought the aid of the enslaved Greeks. Splendid, inconceivable were the scenes which took place in this drama all over Greece. The houses of the Greeks, their villages and towns, everything that could shelter our persecuted Allies, opened wide their gates to receive and protect them lovingly. This occurred during the terrible time when thousands of Greeks were dropping dead in the streets from hunger. And yet those whom our people protected were never deprived of their means of sustenance. This love and protection were frequently repaid with persecutions, tortures, martyrdoms and shootings.

The clergy of the Orthodox Church of Greece with unshakable faith in the sacredness of the struggle and in the national traditions which are a holy but heavy inheritance for them, today hold the whole of enslaved Greece in their strong hands. The gigantic Archbishop Damascenos is henceforward the "Father" of all the enslaved children of the Church. The eyes of all of them are turned to him. With his immense stature he confronts the conquerors, and he protects the people with all the dignity of his office and character as a Greek. He has succeeded in saving the lives of thousands who were condemned to death.

Social Work of the Church

Before the Red Cross began its saving work, the Church held things together with its excellent organization of Christian solidarity. It carried on canteens, clinics, help for the children and care for the prisoners, and so the Church with its love relieved much suffering.

I remember one moment when it was no longer possible to continue to care for the families of those who had been seized as hostages, taken prisoners, or shot. The Archbishop sought leave officially to start a public collection for these families. The conquerors refused point-blank to give leave. Then the Archbishop went in person and protested decisively: "You have no right to deny to the Church her duty of caring for the innocent families of men whom you have tortured and shot for your own reasons."

He spoke so resolutely that they were afraid, and gave their consent. The Church lights a holy flame which kindles the hearts of the Greeks. And not only do these succeed in keeping Greece undefiled in their bosoms, but they offer resistance to the enemy, and show clearly that the Greek soul can never be enslaved.

THE STORY OF CRETE

The priests are carrying on the struggle in cruelly-tortured Crete. On the free mountain tops with our heroic insurgents, the Metropolitan of Kozane, Joachim, is a true father and spiritual leader.

Only when this dreadful calamity has passed, and the world is at peace again, will be made manifest the inestimable contribution which the Church has made to the struggle which our Allies are carrying on against the barbarians.

It is not easy to describe the terrible things, the persecutions which the ministers of the Church in Greece have to confront every day.

In much-tormented Crete whole hecatombs of priests and monks have been sacrificed by the barbaric conquerors. And the same thing is happening all over Greece.

Somewhere in camp as military chaplain to a Greek battalion, is Nikolis Neonakis. A short time ago he came from Crete, his martyred native land. I think he ought to be called to give his own testimony as to what the Germans did. They killed his whole family. They shot his aged father after cruelly torturing him. When they had succeeded in seizing the priest himself, they threw him into a tiny prison about a metre high. They kept him crouched in there for 28 days, without food, water, covering or a seat, not allowing him to go out from this dreadful cage even for necessary purposes. (All the time he lived on a piece of soap which he happened to have with him.) He cannot get over it even today.

Again in martyred Crete, just when the Archimandrite Photios Theosakis, the head priest at the Cathedral in Herakleion, had put on his vestments, and was burying a young soldier whom the Germans had shot that day, a detachment of Germans burst into the church and seized him. They pulled off his sacred vestments, his cassock and even his underclothing, leaving him quite naked, as he came out of his mother's womb, and dragged him out of the Church. With him they dragged four old Cretans, laymen, whom they had also stripped naked. For three days the Germans marched them naked through the streets, beating them incessantly. Then they took them to the place where they were to die, made them open the pits and then shot them and buried them while their bodies were yet

Swiss Sleighs Add to Joy of Living

By DR. E. BRINER

IN THE SWISS alpine regions sleighs have since the earliest days been as necessary a means of transportation as hand-carts and wagons. A sturdy type of sleigh is used by lumbermen in winter to carry newly cut wood from the mountain forests down into the valleys. A lighter type vehicle serves alpine peasants in summer to take the fragrant hay over steep slopes into their barns. In Swiss winter resorts the hotel porters make extensive use of typical farmers sleds to carry the luggage of guests to and from the station. The very sight of an accumulation of these ancient vehicles is intriguing, especially if it happens to be in one of the ultra modern resorts.

Aside of its display of old-time sleighs and carriages the Heimat Museum at Davos contains a heavy and extra long bobsleigh made of iron, such as used to be customary for big international bobsleigh races. Due to the remarkable development of ski-ing in recent decades, sleighing events which formerly were the main feature of the Swiss winter season have lost some of their importance. Today the imposing ski-jumping platforms arouse the admiration of spectators as much as the daring curves of a bobsleigh or toboggan run did thirty years ago.

But although the triumphs of the sleigh have nowadays been somewhat obscured by the far-sweeping popularity of the ski, the youth of Switzerland still enjoys its sleigh rides. In olden times festive excursions by sleigh were the chief distraction in winter, both of well-to-do city dwellers and farmers.

It must have been a jolly sight to watch a whole caravan of horse-drawn sleighs, with merrily tinkling bells, swiftly gliding through the wintry landscape from one village to the other. Rare specimens of the artistic sleighs used on those occasions are still to be seen in old Engadine homes, in the Grisons, and above all in historical museums of Swiss cities.

OLD-TIME SLEIGH-RIDING parties have even found a place in Swiss literature. The distinguished Gottfried Keller, for instance, described such an outing in his novel "Kleider machen Leute". Incidentally, this book happens to be one of the best in Keller's splendid series of novels, "Die Leute von Seldwyla". At that time each single sleigh bore the name of the house in which its owner lived. These names were displayed on the tall and slender forward part of the vehicle by means of woodcarved and painted figures.

The Spalen Gate at Basle, Switzerland

In the 18th century an artistically adorned sleigh was an essential possession of every better class Swiss home. Today some of these masterpieces are contained in the Swiss National Museum at Zurich, in the Historical Museums of Basle and Berne, and in other historical collections.

One type of these sleighs features a high and narrow bench, built lengthwise with adequate foot-rests, and accommodating from two to four persons. An ornamental figure, carved in wood, and richly gilt and

THE HAND OF GOD

He saith unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other (v. 5).

Praise God! Praise God! Give me my tools again!
Oh, let me grasp a hammer and a saw!
Bring me a nail and any piece of wood.
Come see me shut my hand and open it,
And watch my nimble fingers twirl a ring.
I am a man again, a man for work,
A man for earning bread and clothes and home;
A man, and not a useless hold-the-hand;
A man, no more a bandaged cumberer.

Oh! blessed Sabbath of all Sabbath days!
And did you hear them muttering at Him?
And did you see them looking sour at me?
They'll cast me from the synagogue, perchance,
But let them: I've a hand, a hand, a hand!
And, dear wife, to think He goes about
So quietly, and does such things as this,
Making poor half-men whole, in hand and foot,
In eye and ear and witless maniac mind,
To get such praise as that! Well, here's a hand,
A strong, true hand that now is wholly His,
To work or fight for Him, or what He will;
For He has been the hand of God to me.

—From Amos R. Wells, in The Sunday School Times.

HOW GREAT-GREAT-GRANDMOTHER COOKED

Before the days of the gas and electric stoves, and back of them the old comfortable coal range, what method of cooking was available in the good old days when Great-grandmother and Great-great-grandmother were young?

If you were able to see into her kitchen, you would not find much that we use now. First, you would see a broad open fireplace, often taking up at least one-half of the side of the room. A crane, with its projecting arms, would hang over the fire, and hanging from its hooks would be a kettle and a pot, ready for boiling.

The well-to-do had a large brick oven built into the fireplace, while those of more moderate means used the bake-kettle, with its iron lid and tin reflector. A trivet, or three-legged cast-iron stool, stood in one corner of the hearth, waiting to be placed directly over the coals to support the teapot and the family spider. There was also the tin reflector and the waffle iron, that looked like a pair of indented shovels turned together, with long handles enabling the cook to stand at a safe distance from the fire while turning it from side to side. A large stout hook hung from the center of the fireplace, completing Great-great-grandmother's cooking utensils.

With these few simple tools of her trade, Great-great-grandmother supplied the wants of her family, and no small family it was either. Not only in those days were there large families of children, but also very few families were without dependents—a maiden aunt, a bachelor uncle, an orphaned cousin.

The brick oven was not used for everyday baking. For that the bake-kettle, a round, flat-bottomed, cast-iron vessel, with short legs, an iron top and a handle in the center was used. In the bake-kettle such things as the Northern "johnnycake" and the Southern "corn pone" and similar things were baked, the mixture being poured into the bake-kettle, the cover put on and the kettle buried in the coals to give the required heat for baking.

When the brick oven was used—two or three times a week—the family baking was done. The oven was heated by having a fire built in it. When it was sufficiently hot, the coals were removed, the ashes raked out, and into it went the great loaves of bread, the enormous pies and loaves of cake; the oven was shut up and they were left to bake. When done, everything was taken out with a long-handled shovel kept for the purpose—a crude way to cook perhaps, but those healthy men, women, girls and boys with their busy, hard-working lives, not only had good appetites, but also had no indigestion. They would not have known how a person could get enough to eat cooking on our modern stoves, and they would have called our present-day appetites "finicky." Things have changed since that day.

Great-great-grandmother used her tin reflector to bake small things, such as biscuits, etc. This reflector consisted of two sheets of tin, the lower one slanting upward from the fire, with two long legs in the back to keep it in place, and the other sheet slanting upward toward the first, with its two legs also. The ends were closed, and a grate coming out from the point of convergence made a resting place for the pans of biscuits. The open side was placed in front of the glowing fire and the biscuits, enveloped by the reflected heat, were in time cooked. How do you suppose they tasted?

Meat or fowl was also cooked in the fireplace. They were fastened to the hook in the center, a dripping pan was placed beneath them and, from time to time, the meat was turned until it was thoroughly roasted.

When we see what Great-great-grandmother had to cook with, is it any wonder that "baking day" literally lasted all day, or that maiden or widowed relatives were welcome to help, as they always did, when they came to visit or to live?—Girlhood Days.

GOD MAKE ME PURE

God who touchest earth with beauty,
Make my heart anew.
With Thy Spirit recreate me,
Pure, and strong, and true.

Like Thy springs and running waters,
Make me crystal pure;
Like Thy rocks of towering grandeur,
Make me strong and sure.

Like Thy dancing waves in sunlight,
Make me glad and free;
Like the straightness of the pine trees
Let me upright be.

Like the arching of the heavens
Lift my thoughts above;
Turn my dreams to noble action—
Ministries of love.

God who touchest earth with beauty,
Make my heart anew.
Keep me ever by Thy Spirit
Pure, and strong, and true.

I WONDER

I wonder—I wonder
If anyone knows
On a cloudy day
Where the sunshine goes.
I've been told it chooses
The queerest of places—
The hearts of good children—
And shines on their faces;
On their lips it lingers
A loving smile,
In their eyes it dances
All the while.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NEWS

National Council February Meeting

Reports of Dioceses Heard With Gritification at Annual Meeting

New York—The National Council which held its annual meeting at the Church Missions House, February 8-10, heard with deep gratification the reports of dioceses and districts as to what they expect to pay on their missionary quotas as assigned for 1944. Dr. Lewis B. Franklin reported that 75 dioceses and districts may be counted on to pay 100%. Some others report that they are laying plans to raise the difference.

The 1944 budget was finally balanced at $2,503,062, which is $112,320 less than the budget approved by General Convention. A number of budget items were deferred until dioceses which have not met their quotas find means to raise the additional amounts. Among the deferred items are work in Colombia, part of the item for European Churches, part of the item for work in defense areas, part of the fund to aid British Missions, and the $50,000 item placed in the budget by General Convention for new work in all fields with special emphasis on China.

Council authorized the Department of Promotion to proceed with its plan to develop an organization for field work, which had been explained by Mr. Robert D. Jordan, new Director. It authorized also an additional field worker in the Division of Christian Education.

Deputation to Visit England

Presiding Bishop Tucker announced that he was not ready to make any statement on the General Convention proposal to send a deputation to visit Orthodox leaders in Russia, but that he has appointed a deputation of three to make such a visit to leaders of the Church of England. He hopes it may be possible for them to go in the early summer. The deputation will consist of Bishops Henry W. Hobson, G. Ashton Oldham, and the Rev. Dr. H. W. B. Donegan.

The Council's Division of College work continues to aid Japanese-American students, Dr. Alden D. Kelley reported. Eighty-three Japanese-American members of the Episcopal Church are now in schools and colleges. The Division, Dr. Kelley said, works with the National Student Relocation Council, and helps the students with scholarships, aid in getting jobs, boarding and rooming places, etc.

The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief received and disbursed $127,755.80 in 1943 as against $39,000 in 1942.

Council re-elected the Rev. Dr. Franklin J. Clark as secretary. He has held this office in the Council and in the old Board of Missions since 1911, and in the entire period has not missed a meeting.

Bishop Tucker introduced Mr. Robert D. Jordan, Promotion Director, to the Council, and announced the appointment of the Rev. Gerald F. Burrill as assistant to Dr. C. Avery Mason, executive for Forward in Service. He announced also the forthcoming visit to this country of the Archbishop of York, who is expected to attend the April meeting of National Council.

The Rev. M. A. C. Warren, general secretary of the Church Missionary Society of the Church of England, brought to the Council the gratitude and appreciation of all the British Missionary Societies for the aid extended to British Missions in the last three years. He spoke optimistically of the future and sees a great development in missionary work immediately after the war.

Financial Report

The financial report on 1943 was highly favorable. In February Treasurer Lewis B. Franklin said, Council appropriated $116,033 from legacies and special gifts, to be used to the extent necessary to balance the 1943 budget. He now estimates that no more than $2,000 of these items will be used, and that it is entirely possible that none of them will be needed. Receipts from dioceses and districts were $49,241.64 greater than estimated. All dioceses and districts paid their expectations in full, and some overpaid, with the result that collections were 102.1%. It was possible to reduce the old deficit by $140,751.71 during 1943. Aid to British Missions in 1943 was reported as $95,038.46, of which about half was paid through the budget, and the other half through special gifts.

Appointment

Appointment of Miss Helen B. Turnbull was announced. She is to be assistant secretary in the Division of College work on a part time basis, and also is to be director of Windham House, the national graduate training center in New York City. She will take office April 1. Previously she has been Associate Secretary for College work in the Province of New England.

The National Youth Commission will hold a meeting at Racine, Wis., April 21-24, the Rev. Frederick H. Arterton, executive of the Division of Youth, told the National Council, speaking of the growing importance of the Commission's work, and its development of an all-year program for young people of the Church.

Council spent a half day in executive session, discussing a survey of American Indian work in North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota. The survey was made by Bishop Goodrich R. Fenner, of Kansas; Dr. Niles Carpenter, Buffalo, and Dr. G. E. E. Lindquist, of the Home Missions Council. Recommendations made by the surveyors were approved by the Council, including changes in the Catechist-Helper situation, better educated Indian clergy; improved salaries for Indian clergy; revival of such special schools as Kah-O-Sed and Ashley House; sending promising and well-trained Indians to standard theological seminaries; filling of vacancies in the staff of women workers in the Indian field at certain designated centers; other details of administration, and continued study of organization.

ARCHBISHOP OF YORK'S VISIT

To Preach at St. John's Cathedral

New York—Announcement was made from Bishop Manning's office that the Most Rev. and Right Hon. Cyril Forster Garbett, Lord Archbishop of York and Primate of England, will make a visit to the United States in April. He comes as a representative of the Church of England to visit the Episcopal Church in the United States.

He will spend one week in New York, during which he will preach at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Sunday morning, April 23.

On the evening of the same day, at 8 P. M., he will address a mass meeting in the Cathedral on the subject "The True Foundations of a Just and Durable Peace." The plans for this service are being made in conjunction with the World Council of Churches, the International Missionary Council, the Federal Council of Churches, and the Greater New York Federation of Churches. Ministers of all Churches will be invited to join in the Procession and to take their places in the Great Choir.

The Archbishop's visit to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine will be in the nature of a return of the visit Bishop Manning made to York Cathedral in 1927, when the Bishop preached at the 1300th anniversary of the Foundation of York Cathedral, and carried a message from New York to Old York.

Among other activities of the Archbishop in New York will be a visit and sermon at the General Theological Seminary on Monday, April 24, at 6 P. M. He will be given a dinner by the Church Club of New York on Wednesday, April 26. Among other guests at the dinner, in addition to Bishop Manning, will be the Presiding Bishop and the neighboring Bishops of the Second Province.

Archbishop Garbett has been much in the public eye recently on account of his visit in Moscow to the Russian Orthodox Church immediately following its recognition by the Soviet Government. Previous to becoming Archbishop of York, he was successively Bishop of Southwark and then Bishop of Winchester, where it was his custom to visit his rural parishes on foot, walking from one to another accompanied by his chaplain. He is much interested in social conditions, especially housing projects. Among the books of which he is the author are: "The Church and Modern Problems", "The Challenge of the Slums", and "A Call to Christians."

God can use us and use us wondrously even after failure. That habit that has beaten us for many a year will yield to the power of Christ. The mess into which we slipped so gradually can be solved by the love and the power of the Saviour. He gives us that fresh start and the ability to keep going. And we become fishers of men as we proclaim that glad fact. It is the great ministry which He left for every Christian.—Canadian Churchman.

Funds Voted By Board

Woman's Auxiliary National Executive Board Meeting, February 4-7, Extends Help in Many Directions

New York—One of the first effects of war in the Orient was to postpone building a little house for Miss Elsie Sharpe, of the Philippines staff in the Mountain Province. To provide this house, $2,000 had been voted from the United Thank Offering given in 1937, and when it lapsed, unused, the Woman's Auxiliary national executive board voted to use it toward a building needed in Brazil unless Brazil found the money elsewhere. The money was found elsewhere and the $2,000 was released again. It was reappropriated by the board, at its meeting in New York Feb. 4-7, this time for India, $1,500 toward a hostel for the diocesan girls' high school at Bezwada, in Bishop V. S. Azariah's diocese of Dornakal, and $500 toward the building fund of the Missionary Medical College at Vellore, an institution supported jointly by several American and English missionary societies.

The United Thank Offering extended its helpful influence in other directions through action of the board. On recommendation of the United Thank Offering committee, Miss Alpha Nash, of Sarasota, Fla., chairman, $5,000 was voted from the Offering's discretionary item for Bishop Y. Y. Tsu, for work in China. To help in supplying Christian literature in mission fields overseas, $500 was voted to the Foreign Missions Conference Committee on World Literacy and Christian Literature, and $250 for the International Missionary Council's similar committee for Christian literature in Africa. Appalachian School in Penland, Western North Carolina, will be helped in much needed repairs. Deaconess Margaret Peppers will receive some assistance toward expense of travel in her work of maintaining the close contact of the Church with the Japanese-Americans now confined in the Idaho relocation center.

Through the personnel committee, Miss Adelaide T. Case, Cambridge, Mass., chairman, three new appointments were recommended to the National Council. Scholarships to enable a number of present or future Church workers to do graduate study included two at the New York School of Social Work, one to prepare at St. Margaret's House, Berkeley, Calif., for service overseas, one or more for the Church Mission of Help, and one or more for summer work camps in the Northwest. The committee is urging that dioceses appoint personnel committees, and is taking up with diocesan officers the various functions which would be most useful for such committees to adopt.

A newly named committee of the board is the resource committee, Mrs. George E. Judson, of San Antonio, chairman (replacing the former leadership committee). Its function is "to discover and develop resources and leaders."

From the Emery Fund, established for the benefit of women missionaries retired or on furlough, the finance committee, Mrs. George McP. Batte, Berkeley, Calif., chairman, voted gifts of $25 or $50 to six missionaries, and from the legacy income account provided for assistance to a missionary who is seriously ill (Miss Mona Cannell, formerly of Japan) and sent $100 to the Rev. John D. Bodger, of New Guinea, who had addressed the board.

The Rev. M. A. C. Warren, general secretary of the Church Missionary Society of England, also spoke to the board. Mr. Robert D. Jordan, new executive of the National Council's promotion department, was introduced. Among many diocesan officers who visited the board meeting, Miss Lynette Giesecke, of Houston, was presented as a kind of exhibit to show what a diocese might do for one of its workers. The Texas diocesan Woman's Auxiliary has sent Miss Giesecke, its religious education secretary, on leave at half salary for six months' graduate study at Windham House, New York, to be followed by a month's holiday.

Mrs. Fannie P. Gross, a field secretary on the Auxiliary's national staff, goes on leave for six months and will be working at the Harlem Y. W. C. A. in New York.

With a number of diocesan reports not yet received, the total value of supply work done last year is reported as $155,000 which, in spite of all distracting circumstances and abnormal conditions, is within $4,000 of the previous year's total.

The next board meeting is to be in New York April 21-24.

CHURCH COLLEGE WORKERS CONFER

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—A conference of the Church College Workers of the Fourth Province is announced by Provincial Chairman of the Commission for College Work, the Rev. William Turner. The conference is being held in Tuscaloosa February 15 through February 18. The general topic is "The Church and the Colleges", and the leaders are the Rev. Dr. Alden Drew Kelley, national secretary for College Work, Chaplain Thorpe Bauer, Coordinator of Religious Work among the Army Air Force Trainees in the colleges within the Gulf Coast Command, and Mr. Turner, who is rector of Holy Trinity Church in West Palm Beach, Florida.

The conference is made up of clergy and lay people who are doing the Church's work with students and servicemen in the colleges and universities of the southeast. Its aim, Mr. Turner says, is to "encourage greater fellowship among the workers, to promote a general sharing of gains and problems, and to aid each other in meeting common needs, so that the work of the Christ through His Church in the colleges and universities may go forward refreshed, renewed and rededicated."

Headquarters for the sessions are at the Foster House, the Episcopal Student Center of the University of Alabama. Conference directors are: the Rev. Joseph Ditchburn, of Louisiana State University; the Rev. Charles Douglass, of the University of Alabama, and the Rev. James Stirling, of the University of Florida.

Consents to Bishop Coajutor

Bishop Creighton Asks Names of Eligible Clergymen Be Sent Standing Committee

Detroit, Mich.—Following the announcement of the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Creighton, D. D., bishop of Michigan, at the Convention of the diocese on January 26, that he was giving consent to the election of a Bishop Coadjutor for the reason of extension of diocesan work, and the granting of approval by the Diocesan Convention, a further announcement was made that he had asked the Standing Committee of the diocese, plus others to be added at their discretion, to act as a committee to receive nominations. The Standing Committee, through its Secretary, has written to the clergy of the diocese and to the lay delegates to Convention as follows:

"The Bishop has asked the Standing Committee to inquire into the names and qualifications of possible nominees to be presented at the Special Convention to be held for the election of a Bishop Coadjutor.

"Will you please announce to your vestry and congregation that the committee will be glad to receive and consider the names of any eligible clergyman whom any member of the Church may recommend.

"As it is anticipated that the Special Convention may be held in the month of May, it is requested that recommendations be made promptly in order that the Committee may complete its investigation and submit its report in time for ample consideration by the delegates."

Parish Debt Completely Liquidated

Detroit—A "Victory Party" was held in St. Mark's Church on the evening of Wednesday, February 2, marking the complete liquidation of the parish indebtedness by means of a Gift Bond Drive. St. Mark's had incorporated as a parish during the year, and the previous Wednesday had been admitted into union with the Diocesan Convention. The Mission is located in a good outlying section of Detroit, and its growth, since its establishment in 1928, has been steady and gratifying.

The indebtedness was the result of the acquisition of property and building, in which the Mission had been assisted by the diocese. Payments had been made over a period of years, but when parish status seemed imminent, a concerted effort was made to clear off all indebtedness so that the corporate parish existence might be entered into with a clean slate. Under the leadership of the Rev. Edward L. Williams, rector, and Mr. D. J. Loveless, chairman of the Mortgage Committee, a drive was launched for the purchase of War Bonds, which the diocese had agreed to accept at face value in payment of the property indebtedness. The entire amount was raised, and has been turned over to the Diocese.

UNITED CANVASS MADE GRATIFYING PROGRESS

Detroit, Mich.—The United Church Canvass, promoted in Detroit for the first time this year, "made gratifying progress and should be continued next year", Mr. Harold Thompson, chairman, reported to the December meeting of the Board of Directors of the Detroit Council of Churches. Mr. Thompson is a member of the Executive Council and Department of Religious Education of the Diocese of Michigan.

Although the Detroit Council of Churches did not sponsor the United Church Canvass, it initiated the movement for Detroit's participation in the nationwide inter-faith appeal for church attendance and support, and cooperated in the selection of Mr. Thompson as chairman. The sponsoring committee was composed of well-known laymen. A liaison committee headed by the Ven. Leonard P. Hagger, archdeacon of the Diocese of Michigan, solicited participation in the appeal by churches and synagogues.

Mr. Thompson reported that the sponsoring committee, using business advertising and promotion methods to "sell" religion to Detroiters of all faiths, placed United Church Canvass posters on 107 billboards throughout the metropolitan area, sponsored six 15-minute radio programs, secured 40 full-page advertisements in daily and community newspapers, and routed trailers and a movie "short" through all of the motion picture theaters during the period of the campaign and the preliminary build-up.

"It is impossible to determine just how effective such a campaign of promotion is, but spot checks proved that the man on the street definitely was impressed, and ministers we have interviewed who availed themselves of the impact of the promotion all reported a considerable increase in attendance during the period of the United Church Canvass," Mr. Thompson reported.

From checks that have been made, a 25% participation in the United Church Canvass by the Protestant and Jewish congregations of the city was indicated, he said, and 154 congregations contributed towards the support of the sponsoring committee's program of promotion. When it is considered that in Detroit there are more than 800 separate congregations, many of them the only one of its kind in the city, and many others composed of representatives of little known sects, it is felt that a 25% participation in a United Church Canvass was very good indeed.

The sponsoring committee received a total of $2,956, and expects to be able to leave a balance of $250 for next year's committee, Mr. Thompson reported. He recommended that the policy of having the sponsoring committee composed of laymen and business men be continued next year, asserting that "it is much more effective to have a group of business men selling the idea of loyalty to the church of one's choice than to have it done by a group of ministers."

Following his report, the directors of the Detroit Council of Churches unanimously adopted the following resolution of appreciation for the work of Mr. Thompson and the sponsoring committee:

"Resolved, That the Board of Directors hereby express their proffered thanks to Harold Thompson for the time, effort and consecrated thought given without stint to making the United Church Canvass a dignified and effective appeal to the public to support the church of their choice."

101ST COUNCIL DIOCESE OF FLORIDA

Jacksonville, Fla.—"More in '44" was the slogan presented to the 101st Diocesan Council of the Diocese of Florida by the Rt. Rev. Frank A. Juhan, D. D., in his annual address.

"Nothing less than a willingness to give ourselves will be sufficient to stop the forces of Satan, assuage the sufferings of millions, and liberate mankind," he said. "For all of which I am profoundly thankful.

"But we must do more in '44. Let that be our slogan. We knew that those leaders of nations that have frantically adopted the policy of achieving victory by wholesale destruction of their neighbors, their lives, possessions, traditions, and opportunities—cannot succeed. For behind those ideas and ideals, which Hitler and Hirohito are seeking to suppress, there is the might and power of God.

"This is not the first time in history that the Christian ideals have been challenged by the forces of paganism and barbarism. We cannot believe that those ideals, which have come to us through the teachings of Christ, which have been the chief formative element in the development of the nations of the Old and New World, will be forever destroyed. We must remember the words of Christ, 'The gates of hell shall not prevail against My Church.'

"But it is not enough to defeat, brethren, what we are fighting against. Even more important, I tell you, is the safeguarding and strengthening what we are fighting for; so that when the war is over peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established in the world for all generations.

"To help bring this about is the supreme task of the Christian Church. Let us not forget for Christian standards of conduct rest upon Christian belief. One will not survive without the other. The Beatitudes cannot live if the Apostles' Creed is forgotten, and, in a day of moral decadence and delinquency among both old and young, we will do well to dust off the Ten Commandments.

"So, let us hold fast to the Faith. The Church today must not be tempted and led astray from preaching in no uncertain voice its ancient message—and that message is that what Christ did for the world, He did as God, knowing all the weakness of earth and humans, and pouring upon it all the strength of God and heaven."

The Diocesan Council met January 26 to 28 at St. Mark's Church, Ortega, Jacksonville, and at the same time the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held. There was a record attendance of the laity at the sessions.

The treasurer, Mr. R. L. Yockey, reported increases in giving for the Assessment Budget of about $1,000, and for the Church's Program Budget of over $3,000. Pledges for the 1944 Budgets were adequate to balance the proposed budgets, without any reductions.

This Council marked the completion of 20 years of service by Mr. Yockey as Diocesan Treasurer, and recognition of his splendid work was given at the Diocesan banquet through the gift of a gold diocesan seal.

Bishop Dandridge, coadjutor of Tennessee, was the speaker at the opening service. Others on the program included Bishop Tsu of China, the Rev. John B. Walthour, chaplain at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, and the Rev. James Stirling, student chaplain at the University of Florida.

Elections included: the Hon. Bayard Shields, chancellor; Mr. Herbert Lamson, registrar; Mr. Frank J. White, actuary; Mr. R. A. Yockey, treasurer.

CALIFORNIA CONVENTION HAS WOMEN DELEGATES

San Francisco—With women delegates, one each from every parish and mission, the 94th annual convention met on February 1-2 under the chairmanship of the Rt. Rev. Karl Morgan Block.

One of the chief issues was the method of voting. Because the preferential ballot has been under criticism, a proposal was made to use a "modified straight" ballot. Under the leadership of the Rev. Russell Staines, chairman of the election committee, a highly successful use of the preferential ballot led to a refusal to change the canons.

Among the various resolutions introduced, the one which caused the chief discussion was a statement that "this Convention believes that many American-born Japanese are loyal." In a vote by Orders, this was defeated. The clergy, however, voted 28-1 in favor of the resolution, and only a reactionary lay vote, 35-28, caused its defeat. If a vote by Orders had not been called for, the motion would have passed 56-36. Later in convention, a milder resolution not referring to the Japanese was passed unanimously: "that this Convention urges all members of the Episcopal Church in this Diocese to combat all racial prejudice at all times."

The chief speakers at the joint session were Deaconess Julia Clark, recently returned from China, who told many of her experiences there, and Dr. Blanche Carrier, in charge of week-day religious education for the Northern California Council of Churches.

Pledges to the General Church Program showed an increase of over 20%, with some parishes and missions raising their pledges by 100% and more. The pledge of the diocese to the National Council was raised from $18,000 to $23,000.

The House of Churchwomen, established many years ago by Bishop William Ford Nichols, was abolished, as women took seats in the Convention for the first time.

Alabama Holds 113th Annual Meeting

Birmingham—Progress in debt reduction in the diocese, in increasing the diocesan budget, in religious education, and in diocesan institutions was reported by the Rt. Rev. C. C. J. Carpenter in his address to the 113th convention of the Diocese of Alabama, January 26, in the Church of the Advent.

Constitutional and canonical changes were adopted whereby two women, nominated by the diocesan Woman's Auxiliary, may be elected to the Executive Council. The Bishop's salary and diocesan stipends to missionary clergy were increased by 15%, as was the pledge to National Council. One organized mission, St. John's, Robertsdale, was admitted to Convention.

The attention of the women of the Diocese of Alabama was focussed on the future by the special speakers at the 54th annual meeting of the diocesan Woman's Auxiliary in Christ Church, Tuscaloosa, January 12 and 13. Miss Mary E. King, Atlanta, Ga., provincial president, spoke about "Church Women Looking at the Post-War World," and the Rev. E. G. Mullen, formerly of the Philippines, now in Florence, Alabama, talked about the future of missions in the Orient. Mrs. Frank J. Inge, president, made the keynote address on "God's Gift and Our Task." The Rt. Rev. C. C. J. Carpenter, stressing the need for evangelism, also reported progress in diocesan work.

BEQUESTS LEFT TO CHURCH AND SCHOOL

Baltimore Md.—By the will of the late Helen A. Linthicum, widow of Congressman J. Charles Linthicum, $5,000 was left to Saint Paul's Church. She directed that a group of jewels in her possession should be sold and the proceeds given to form the nucleus of a fund for the erection of a chapel at Saint Paul's Boy's School. She further left a trust fund, a part of the income from which is to provide scholarships at this school. Her friend and rector for many years, Dr. Kinsolving, was left a legacy of $3,000.

BISHOP OF JERUSALEM GRATEFUL

For Past Help

New York, N. Y.—From Jerusalem comes the statement to the National Council that the new Bishop in Jerusalem, the Rt. Rev. W. H. Stewart, "is deeply grateful for all that has been done in the past and for the steadily growing response on Good Fridays to the Good Friday Offering appeal." Quoting the Bishop, the Rev. Canon Charles T. Bridgeman says, "It forms one of the solid bulwarks of the diocesan finance. It is particularly noteworthy that in these years of war, with so many other demands for aid made upon the American public, they have remembered the importance of the Church's work and especially that here in the Holy Land where so many world problems find their repercussions and the need for forthright Christian witness is so much the greater. The diocesan schools are larger and better than ever before, despite difficulties of staff, the hospitals are continuing their great work, and the pastoral and evangelistic work. though crippled by lack of foreign staff, have been more than maintaining themselves. One of the great services is with the troops of various English-speaking nations who come to the Holy Land and find in the services of the Church, which they attend in great numbers, the familiar note of home which helps keep up their spirits and steadies them in times of difficulty."

BISHOP PARDUE CONFIRMS FIRST CLASS

Wilkinsburg, Pa.—The Rt. Rev. Dr. Austin Pardue, the new Bishop of Pittsburgh, confirmed his first Class, at St. Stephen's Church, on Sunday morning, January 30. The Church was well filled, and the message, with the candidates specifically in mind, was a profoundly impressive one. The rector, the Rev. Dr. William Porkess, stated that the Class numbered twenty-six, and it was also the twenty-sixth Class, presented during the present rectorship. The sum-total of these Classes numbered eight hundred and five. The special offering, taken on Sunday morning, devoted to the Bishop's Discretionary Fund, proved to be the largest in the history of the parish.

clergy placement and salaries. Increased financial support was recommended for St. Mary's School and St. Elizabeth's School. The Home Missions Council is to be requested to prepare a simple pamphlet explaining Peyote and the cult of Peyotism.

Reporting progress, the Rev. B. W. Harris, secretary for Negro work, told Council that a difficult situation is arising through the enlistment of Negro clergy in the armed forces. At present there are 15 in the service, and there are at least 25 vacant missions. There are 18 men in theological seminary, ten of them at the Bishop Payne Divinity School, and plans are developing for adequate training of women workers in the Negro field.

Council adjourned at noon Thursday, February 10.

DEATHS

MRS. ALICE ASHTON FITZHUGH

In the passing of MRS. ALICE ASHTON FITZHUGH, wife of the late John B. Fitzhugh, at her home "Clarence," King George County, Va., January 30, 1944, her family, her friends, her church, and the community have suffered an irreparable loss.

Mrs. Fitzhugh, the eldest of six children, was a daughter of the late Lewis Alexander Ashton of "Waterloo," and Mary Barnes Hooe Ashton of "Barnesfield," King George County, Va. At the age of fourteen she was left motherless, assuming the cares and responsibilities of her father's household, together with the rearing of an infant brother—all of which duties she lovingly and efficiently discharged. She was always foremost in serving her church and her wise counsel was sought and valued. As long as health permitted she was supervisor of the St. Paul's cemetery, and tended alike with loving care all who rested there.

Funeral services were conducted by her rector, the Rev. Floyd Cartwright, in old St. Paul's, the church of her ancestors, and there in the churchyard she was laid to rest. The floral tributes were numerous—a testimony of the love and respect in which she was held.

She kept the faith and now wears a crown of righteousness.

She is survived by six children: Mrs. Frank Churchill, Dahlgren, Va., Mrs. Jack Gray, Richmond, Va., Mrs. Robert Barrows, Messrs. Henry and John Fitzhugh, Owens, Va., and Mr. Stuart A. Fitzhugh, Washington, D. C. Also surviving her is one brother, Mr. Lewis Alexander Ashton, Sr., of King George County, Va.

Now the laborer's task is o'er;
Now the battle day is past;
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the voyager at last.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping.

William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va. Chaplain Lee Archer Belford, formerly at St. Andrew's Church, Douglas, Georgia, and Chaplain Holt Fairfield Butt, III, since 1937 Chaplain of the United States Military Academy at West Point, were the Episcopal members of a class of seventeen.

DEATHS

Rev. Arthur Chilton Powell, D. D.

The Rev. Arthur Chilton Powell, D. D., one of the original Trustees of the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Baltimore, and Rector Emeritus of Grace and St. Peter's Church, died on February 6, 1944, in the Church Home and Hospital. He was taken to the hospital on January 26, suffering from chronic bronchitis.

Dr. Powell was born on July 22, 1854, in Dayton, Ohio, the son of John Powell, an English merchant who came to this country, and Mrs. Sarah Latham Powell.

He was educated in the public schools of Dayton and graduated from Amherst College in 1876. He studied theology at Prince Theological Seminary and the Philadelphia Divinity School, from which he graduated in 1879. He was ordained in Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia, in June, 1879, and in 1882 became Rector of St. John's Church, York, Pa. From York he came to Grace Church, Baltimore, where he remained as an active Rector for 25 years. While there he organized the Church Mission to the Deaf.

Just prior to his retirement as active rector, Grace Church merged with St. Peter's, forming the congregation known as Grace and St. Peter's Church.

After his resignation from Grace and St. Peter's Church, he became rector of St. Mary's Church, Hampden, from 1914 to 1929. He served many years as President of the Board of the Church Home and Infirmary (now known as the Church Home and Hospital).

Surviving is one son, Paul R. Powell, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted in the Cathedral by the Rt. Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., assisted by the Rev. Harold N. Arrowsmith and the Rev. Charles A. Hensel. Burial was in Druid Ridge Cemetery, Baltimore.

The Presiding Bishop's Book for Lent, 1944

THIS CREATED WORLD

By Theodore Parker Ferris

This stimulating book for the Easter season is based on the following propositions: 1. How a man behaves depends to a large degree on what he believes. 2. Christianity is, among other things, basic information about life and the world. 3. The Church must continually revise its information on the basis of its present experience. 4. It is urgent that men "make sense" of their world. From these the author shows what Christianity, the Church and the individual can do toward making the world "make sense." It is admirably suitable for group discussion among young people and adults.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

"No man is free who cannot command himself."

Beware of any philosophy which does not lead to right living.
—H. W. Ferrin.

Most of the tasks we postpone for months could be done in half an hour if we'd buckle to 'em.

Nothing evil is so seemingly beneath us but we have need to guard against it. —Wesley.

The capacity for knowing God enlarges as we are brought by Him into circumstances which oblige us to exercise faith. So when difficulties beset our path, let us thank God that He is taking trouble with us, and lean hard upon Him. —Selected.

"Guard thy thoughts; for what thou thinkest thou hast already begun to do."

"Lord Jesus, make Thyself to me
A living bright reality;
More present to faith's vision keen
Than any earthly object seen;
More dear, more intimately nigh
Than e'en the fairest earthly tie."

"The more we see a thing, the less it affects us—the more we believe a thing, the more it affects us."

Do not excuse thyself by saying, "Life is short." Christ's life was short; yet He finished the work He was given to do. —Selected.

"Men may judge us by the success of our efforts; but God by our efforts themselves."

The night is long and pain weighs heavily,
But God will hold His world above despair.
Look to the east, where up the lucid sky
The morning climbs; the day shall yet be fair!
—Celia Thaxter.

Goodness is love in action, love with its hand to the plow, love with the burden on its back, love following His footsteps who went about continually doing good. —J. Hamilton.

Sad will be the day for any man when he becomes satisfied with the life he is living, with the thoughts he is thinking and the deeds he is doing; when there is not beating at the doors of his soul a desire to do something greater which he knows he was meant to do because he is a child of God.
—Phillips Brooks.

From the Presiding Bishop's Lenten Message

If communion with the ever-present God enables us to perceive and know what things we ought to do and at the same time gives us grace and power faithfully to perform the same, was there ever a time when it was more needed? Are not our present calamities and strifes largely the result of trying to live our lives in unawareness of His presence? God has not only restored the opportunity which we misused in the past, but out of the calamity of war He is leading us on to the possibility of a great advance in the fulfillment of His loving purpose. That possibility can be converted into a reality only by those who both understand His will and who through communion with Him are adequately guided and empowered for its performance.

Lent is the season when we are invited to increase our awareness of God's presence and to devote more time to communion with Him. It is a period set aside for the practice of the Presence of God.

CO-OPERATIVE CHRISTIAN WORK IN WORCESTERSHIRE FACTORIES

A remarkable war-time story of new links between Church and people comes from the Diocese of Worcester, where under the leadership of the Bishop, churches of varying denominations have co-operatively made contact with factories and other centres of public life.

It began with the Day of Prayer on September 3, 1942, before which the Bishop of Worcester, Dr. Wilson Cash, met one hundred men at a Rotary lunch. He suggested to them that the Church would like to come to the people by entering the factories on the day of National Prayer. "You are beating at an open door," they replied; "we have waited for this for years." As a result a letter from the Bishop to factory managers was put in the hands of the clergy, who made their own contacts with factories on the strength of the letter. As a result, hundreds of meetings were held throughout the country on the first week day of National Prayer.

The next big step was the organization of carol services in the factories at Christmas. These proved immensely popular. In some cases robed choirs were taken into the factories; in others the work people themselves joined in community singing of Christmas carols.

As Good Friday, 1943, approached, the Bishop was asked by various factories whether services could be arranged in the factories on that day. He cancelled his own engagements and took instead short services in six different factories; most of them were attended by thronging congregations, and the services were frequently relayed throughout the whole factory premises. In all, fifteen services were held on that Good Friday, and at the conclusion there was a mass service conducted co-operatively in the Baxter Memorial Church at Kidderminster. For this occasion Richard Baxter's chair was brought from the Parish Church and set up in the Congregational Church as a sign of fellowship.

When September 3rd came round again there were once more a large number of factory services, and on this occasion contact with the people was widened by a large number of services held in public houses. Those making use of the bars were in most cases very ready to join in simple prayers for their friends at the front.

Harvest Festival services were asked for, not only in public houses, but especially in a large busmen's shelter. The busmen, most of whom had allotments of their own, requested the clergy to arrange a Harvest Festival for them on their own club premises, which were duly decorated by them for the occasion.

Contact with the cinemas has led to further opportunities for Christian witness as a result of new contacts gained. One large cinema which has a crowded children's matinee each Saturday, has asked for a short service to be conducted for the children weekly. This is being done.

In some factories, the services have become regular events, and in one of them there is a fortnightly service for the day and night shifts respectively. A clergyman goes into the factory and conducts a service at 1 A. M. for the night shift.

One factory has been so impressed by the work of the clergy that it has put aside a generous sum of money to secure the permanent services of a chaplain on its premises. The money provided covers a good part of a chaplain's stipend. Before taking over the work the chaplain appointed spent some time as an ordinary worker in the factory. He thus assured himself of the opportunity and the welcome which awaited him before embarking on his new work.

CHRISTMAS ABOARD A DESTROYER

Letter to Chief of Navy Chaplains

The story of how one Commanding Officer of a ship helped make Christmas a memorable occasion for his officers and men was described recently when the skipper wrote the Chief of Navy Chaplains to thank him for sending copies of "A Christmas Service" to his vessel. The booklet, designed to furnish a suggested religious Christmas service for smaller ships and units without Chaplains, was mimeographed and copies were given to all hands.

The officer wrote in his letter of January 4, 1944:

"Having no Chaplain aboard this destroyer, as Commanding Officer I took upon myself the authority to lead the service. In doing this I did not mean to be presumptuous, but was acting primarily in accordance with the duties of the commanding officer as laid down in U. S. Navy Regulations and because of my heartfelt conviction that everyone aboard should be given the opportunity to renew his faith during this Christmas Service.

"I wish you might have been with us that morning, for the Service was very moving and beautiful in its spirit and simplicity, and I felt that everyone of us who participated was greatly inspired by it. Despite our being at sea, undergoing a strenuous schedule of operations, the attendance was so great that our forward messing compartment was filled to overflowing! Unfortunately, there were some men who had to be turned away because of lack of space.

"Following this Service and the mass singing of Christmas Carols, the division officers assembled their divisions and presented every man aboard with a Christmas gift, purchased from the Welfare Fund of the ship. A survey of the individual tastes of every man on the ship had been made in order to make the gifts as appropriate as possible, and the officers themselves spent hours in wrapping and marking the gifts to ensure a really festive occasion. Apparently all gifts were a great surprise to the men and I know they were deeply appreciative and grateful and they felt that they weren't forgotten. As one seaman second class expressed it, 'The older fellows told me that Christmas Day in the Navy was the saddest day of the year. Gee! it really was like Christmas aboard ship today—church, presents, and a dinner as good as you could get at home!'

"The Executive Officer had informed all hands that I would be delighted to see any member of the crew who would care to come up to the bridge that afternoon after their Christmas Dinner. As a result, over half of the ship's company came up to see me, and I was deeply touched by the warmth of their Christmas greetings and their expressions of loyalty and devotion.

"As you can see, my Christmas was a very wonderful one and a very full one. I have never before felt so unmistakably the true meaning of the significance of Christmas. Surely the spirit of good will was abroad and aboard that day."

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

IF THEY DON'T COME BACK" is the title of a book and the terribly real thought of those whose loved ones are scattered far and wide in unknown places. No matter how much faith we have, this thought comes at times. I recommend the reading of this book by H. Ayde Prichard before the phrase becomes "They won't come back." Some word or thought in the book may stay with you sufficiently firm to buffer the shock in yellow. When the blow strikes, about all we can do for awhile is pour out as much love as our own dumb sorrow will permit into the numb and bleeding heart of the one who feels all is gone, nothing is left, life has become powder and dust. As the days go by, however, and a bit of the first anguish has settled into a steady hurt, mind is more susceptible to reason and begins to be hungry for whatever will help to make sense out of something which seems so futile and useless. This book may be read then with profit, and certain wise words from pastor or friend are then also desired and needed. God has made us to stand strong even under repeated blows and has given unto us the power to use experience, even though we are never able to understand it completely.

No matter who we are or how well prepared we are, those little yellow slips of sorrow plough deep and hurt long. And yet, as time lends perspective and we get a few things well established and clear, we bear the travail of our loss and the hurt sinks not out of sight or sense or mind, but to the regions where it no longer blinds us and holds us in unyielding darkness. The Christian is much better equipped to deal with such situations than anyone else, for at least the Christian has it straight that God had nothing to do with the tragedy, that what happened was the direst result of a horribly wrong choice by one or more who either knew not or cared not for the right way, the best way for all earth's people. Such moments of all but irreparable loss give us new light on the evil in man which leads eventually to the fiendish culmination of a world wrapped in flaming death. They also keep another truth close—love is never lost nor the one we love. He is where God is and in many known senses of that thought we are there also. The way we look at things has a lot to do with whether bitterness sets in or greater understanding and closeness to the mystery of God's peace.

THERE ARE two types of those who meet tragic sorrow face to face. One of them accepts it and buries it without much trace of outward emotion. This type does not as a rule want to talk about it, does not want sympathy. The stoic, the vein of iron, shows up. Their sorrow is a private thing and yet in spite of their reserve it carries scars a yard long where no one can see, and keeps out thoughts and words which might comfort much longer than the second type. This second type is usually wrought up emotionally, is hysterical for awhile, moans and speaks fragments of first thoughts to those who are near at hand, oblivious to all save the loss and the pain, the emptiness, the bleakness of the long lasting future. Over and over the feeling comes, "this is the end: even though I live, life is over." Words are not much good at this point, rather loving, silent, controlled-nearness.

Those to whom war comes as a personal sacrifice can be made more sensitive to the needs of others, more acutely aware of the little things which must be done by all who would be peacemakers—one example is the pushing along as fast as possible toward the solution of race relations. Such persons, touched by the fire, will become crusaders against every last cause of war,

Proud of Whose Boys . . . . ?

By Richard A. Zinn,

Director of Public Relations, Institute for American Democracy, Inc.

TOO MANY PEOPLE today are prone to form opinions and ideas about their neighbors because of the names they bear. Too many people today shrink when they hear that the new neighbor has a foreign sounding name. Too many people today are prone to do themselves, their community and their country a distinct disservice by spreading malicious gossip and slander about neighbors who do not have the same kind of a name as they have simply because they have failed to understand the fact that our names have nothing at all to do with our beliefs in the democratic way of living.

And so today there are Americans fighting for us on all the fronts of the world who are bound together with one common ideal and one common purpose—but whose patriotism far transcends any sly innuendoes against the name they happen to bear; the church to which they go, or the country from which they or their parents have come. We are all tremendously proud of the way in which our men in the service are conducting themselves in their fight to protect our country and our ideals.

But of whose boys are we proud? In any front line dispatch, you may find such names as Schultz, Bianchi, Cohen, Smith and dozens of others. Are all these boys OUR boys? The Nazi would claim that Schultz is of German origin and therefore he can't be American. The Fascists could not understnd how a man named Bianchi could fight for the United States. Many bigots would rule out Cohen immediately—just because his name is Cohen. In other words—a man by the name of Smith might be the only "real American" from our enemies' viewpoint.

But it is only if we ourselves understand America—if we ourselves understand that what we all have together is bigger than the sound of a name—bigger even than the fact that Schultz may be a Protestant, Bianchi a Catholic or Cohen a Jew—and Smith of any race or faith—that we can do our part in pulling together and in demonstrating to the world our undying fealty to our country and its future. Anyone who encourages antagonisms because of a different name—a different faith—or a different country or origin—is trying to sabotage our war effort, by dividing us from our neighbors and boring from within to cause disruption and havoc.

Let us do our part and give such people the lie!

A BROTHERHOOD WEEK MESSAGE

From Presiding Bishop H. St. George Tucker

IN THESE CRITICAL DAYS of war for the survival of humanity, it is fitting that we stop to recall the words of the Scripture.

"Now, there are many members," says the Scripture, "but one body. And whether one member suffereth, all the members suffer with it; or one member is honored, all the members rejoice with it."

The belief that all men and women are children of one Heavenly Father has been a part of our Christian heritage through the centuries. The inherent rights to life, liberty and the freedom to pursue the satisfactions of life are rooted in that Christian conviction. The denial of these rights by our enemies is the major reason for the world-wide struggle being waged by the United Nations today.

We, the United Nations, will win this war. We may, however, forfeit the peace—unless we weave into the very fabric of our thoughts and life that abiding respect for all free peoples which is a central characteristic of Christian teaching. We must not, like our enemies, commit the sin of contempt for our fellow man.

Happily, the American people are generally united in two resolutions: to win the war as quickly as possible, and to see that victory shall lead to a cooperative world order—an order in which all men shall be free. The road to this peace and freedom is not the path of injustice and prejudice—that path leads to revolutions and to recurrent wars.

We, as Christians, must and can achieve redeeming attitudes, methods of common understanding, ways of friendly living, and convictions of spiritual unity. As Christians, we must pursue these visions with realism, sacrifice and valor. By man-to-man personal contact with all men of goodwill, of whatever race or creed; by learning to work together for the good of all; in the peace that is to come as in the war that we now fight side by side—we must demonstrate the deep desire for peace and good will and the universal brotherhood of man, which we so ardently profess.

RED CROSS SUNDAY

February 27

RED CROSS SUNDAY will be observed in the nation's churches February 27, following similar observance of Red Cross Sabbath in synagogues and temples February 25-26. Answering a plea from Norman H. Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, religious leaders will set the spiritual tone of the 1944 Red Cross War Fund appeal "in line with those ideals of freedom, justice and mercy for which the churches have always stood."

Appreciative of the work of the Red Cross, ministers who have witnessed its humanitarian services to our armed forces at home and overseas will invite the continued support of their congregations in volunteer services as well as in financial support.

Chairman Davis in his letter to the clergy said:

"We are deeply grateful for the loyalty with which the church people of America have always supported the American Red Cross. In wartime they know that wherever their boys go, the Red Cross is at their side. They know too that the Red Cross is the embodiment of human mercy.

"This year February 27 is being observed by our chapters as Red Cross Sunday. We are hopeful that churches universally will wish to make plans for this occasion. Red Cross Sunday will afford you an opportunity to inspire your people to continue to support

The Way of Struggle

By NEVILL JOYNER

To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set with my Father in his throne.

THERE IS STRUGGLE in life from tottering infancy to tottering age. We do not expect the proponents of fads in child rearing, which would eliminate discipline,—sometimes called modern education—to agree. He would have us believe when the infant puts off swaddling clothes it puts on wings and ever after there is nothing to do but sail. The faddist comes and goes. Truth is eternal. It was here before we came. It will be here after we are gone. He has missed much who never had anything to overcome. He who has had to face difficulties has been fortunate, not unfortunate, and the greater the difficulty the greater the blessing. He who is faced with many difficulties and is overcoming them is not an object of pity. We may be jealous of him or envy him. We cannot pity him. His is the victory and the great reward, reward here and now.

The faddist may without purpose or intention call our attention to a few mistakes. This much is to his credit. It were better therefore if a faddist were so labelled, because as a philosopher he is a poor guide—worse than none at all. For the faddist to call his stuff science is ludicrous. The scientist himself needs the philosopher. However pure the intention of the scientist he may lead us on the rocks unless there is the philosopher to guide, and the greater the scientific achievement the greater the tragedy. Of this there is today abundant evidence.

THE MANNER IN WHICH we have met trials and obstacles in the past will be the measure of our capacity to meet them in the future. If we have failed in the past, we may have less assurance of emerging victorious from a future disaster. There may have come with the last defeat, however, an invincible resolution. He is two times blessed who makes it, blessed in the making, blessed in the white hope it holds. And the gleam of this hope will be brighter according as the tears of repentance—tears shed or unshed—have been bitter. Repentance has its place. Is he not doomed who cannot feel it? He is wise who will allow repentance to take its course and bear its fruit.

Life without struggle? its physical struggle? its mental struggle? its soul struggle? He who would believe so, were either born blind or suffered blindness through some mental tragedy. The athlete who in his sleep can hear the plaudits of the multitude, the scholar weary with midnight oil, the sinner struggling toward sainthood will tell us there is increasing struggle as the goal appears farther away.

To recognize the truth is not to shed tears. It is not to be in despair about approaching years. Rather it is to rejoice because struggle means strength and victory means joy. An obstacle to overcome is an opportunity. He is blessed whose pathway is steep and rugged. To travel downward on a smooth road requires no effort. And because there is no effort there is no victory and no joy at the end of the downward trail.

THE MEMORY OF SOME defeat is not a pleasant one. Maybe it was a lack of love or a lack of faith or greed or some absorbing vain ambition, failure to fight it out in one's own life that led to defeat. The memory of being vanquished is not a happy one. It is remorse. Remorse is never sweet, always bitter. There are ambitions holy and unholy. The unholy is impatient of delay, prefers high gear and high speed, is happy to accept the prize but unwilling to pay the price. To the unholy, glamour makes a strong appeal. Not so with the holy. The mind is not on the glamour but the heart is on the prize. The element of time does not intrude. The rough and narrow way, which is always steep, may have terror for him who looks on. Not so with him who is on the trail. Progress may be slow, is always difficult, but there is resilience at every step because hope inspires. Blood stains along the way count for little for they are marks to show others the way. Dark? Yes, very dark but often enough and always at the right time there is a gleam of light from the goal shining all down the way. Burden heavy? Sometimes increasingly so but with every increase there is additional strength not one's own. With every steep ascent overcome there is more strength for another and a steeper climb. Opportunities for greater service and greater sacrifice are welcomed, not despised. Whatever the sacrifice of suffering and toil, of weariness and watchfulness, of personal comfort and worldly ambition, the prize is worth a million times the price. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with My Father in His throne. However dark the hour of trial there is the inward illumination of the prize. It is miraculous but no surprise that men and women are able "to drink of the cup He drank of". They are doing it in these present days.

The worn traveller will say it was only by miracle he was able to do this and that, only by miracle he did not fall here and there and there. Miracles in these days? Yet in these days but not for the gaze of the curious crowd. They are inward miracles in the lives of travellers on the way, many unknown, many humble and obscure. They are the world's true inspiration. This inspiration has been the greatest at the time of greatest need. It has been so since the Nazarene led the way. It is an old throng and a large one, and gets larger as the years come and go. This is the hope of the world. This is the world's assurance. Surely he who would have us believe that the way of struggle is not the better way, the more holy way, the wiser way, the necessary way, is not familiar with the life and teachings of the Lowly Nazarene.

In the Darkness With a Voice

By FLORENCE SELDEN PEPLE

THOUGH WHAT I AM about to relate occurred as long ago as 1910, and though I have never thought of it since without a stirring of heart, it comes back to my mind today with even deeper significance. It happened during the winter when Dr. Bliss Perry of Harvard was exchange professor at the Sorbonne in Paris.

It was my great good fortune to attend Dr. Perry's lectures in the largest hall of the University where, tall and straight, he at once made a definite impression upon his hearers, because he preferred his own habit of standing as he talked to that of the French professors who always seat themselves at a table. Besides this, he was clean shaven, facing that large audience, not a man of whom was without a mustache, goatee, fringe, round fuzzy beard, or big square, black growth of hair so dense that only eyes gleamed through. French men and women of all classes were there: Italians and Greeks with finely chiseled features, ascetic monks and priests, lawyers, doctors, swarthy Syrians, Japanese, Russians, representatives from many nations holding odd looking hats, or muffled in romantic capes and clinging to shiny brief cases bulging with books. It was uniquely amusing to an American to see them smile as they commented upon the "Peculiarity of this foreigner from Harvard, who, in defiance of nature and the dignity of his position, would have no hair upon his chin, but stood unselfconscious like a boy of forty or forty-five!"

ONLY ONE MAN, perhaps, in that multitude took no note of Dr. Perry's distinctiveness, an elderly aristocratic Frenchman with thin silvery hair, and, of course, a beard. He always came in led by a lady, younger, gentle faced, yet also past her youth. Though he held his head proudly, his eyes toward the rostrum, I soon realized that he was blind, and, often, as unselfconscious as the lecturer himself, he nodded with a pleased smile or tapped together his shapely fingers, as if in affirmation while he sat there alone in the darkness with a voice. I grew to watch for him, feeling more satisfied when he was seated, yet sometimes shuddering inwardly as I wondered how it would seem to be plunged in eternal night.

As weeks passed and hundreds of busy pencils took notes upon the lives of our outstanding men and women, each of which seemed to be alive again, so humanly were they portrayed, I could feel all about me the hold Dr. Perry was gaining; and I was not surprised when a keenly intelligent looking French woman whispered to me: "What a philosopher is your compatriot! The Professor who came last year was brilliant, charming to every one, but this man—he is profound!"

As his subjects followed in carefully chosen sequence, it seemed that, in a baptism of beautifully enunciated English, a Young Nation was being born before us, a Baby Sister, in whom all these representatives of older nations might recognize the strange mixture of inheritance thrilling her blood; might see her amidst the startling happenings of a new world, leaping from her very cradle in her own defense, and feel, as each purposeful character rose and stood out with its guiding hand, that in bone and sinew she was growing steadily toward maturity, developing her soul, forming those deep elemental currents that must soon find expression in individual passion and romance. So clearly we could see how Cooper, Hawthorne and Irving were produced. Then arrived the moment for that great emotional heart throb, voiced by Edgar Allan Poe—that moment of life's blazing yet eternal youth, always to be the solace of its age.

Singularly enough this lecture fell upon an afternoon when the whole of Paris was plunged in a gloom symbolic of the luckless poet's fate. The disastrous flood of 1910 had almost reached its peak, and the Latin Quarter was suffering more than any other part of the city. Two small streams as mysterious as the tragic undercurrents in many of Poe's lines, long buried beneath the city, and so linked with the great sewers that Parisians had quite forgotten them, "Remembered not the dark tarn of Auber", were now startlingly reasserting themselves, spurting up in random cellars, loosening the very blocks of the pavements and floating them in long menacing arms through the winding streets. All the daily papers had issued warnings.

NOTHING, HOWEVER, seemed to quench the Frenchman's thirst for things intellectual, and up and down the sloping Boulevard St. Michel, which should have been called The Street of the Rush for Education, they still had been able to hurry to the Sorbonne in spite of an incessant down pour of rain heartening the rebellious streams to creep and creep.

On a Friday afternoon, in the great hall of the Sorbonne packed as usual, with the dirge-like hum of the rain on the roof, Dr. Perry gave an intensely interesting sketch of all the facts then known of Poe's eventful life, dwelt at length upon his methods, his perfect union of craftsmanship with theory, quoting here and there many exquisite lines. "To enjoy Poe to the fullest," his clear voice was suggesting, "yield to the lyric quality of his verse, give yourself up in conscious abandonment to his conscious effort to hypnotize you with sound," when suddenly all the lights of the huge dome above us went out! Simultaneously there must have come to every mind the same dread thought—the flood—in the streets—in the cellar, perhaps,—in the very court! The treacherous little rivers have overtaken us! And to each mind, too, as quickly must have leaped the terror of possible panic in that big stuffy hall with only three small exits. To each, I said, yet there was one, no doubt, who did not note the change—the gray haired, blind old aristocrat who sat serenely waiting for the voice of the lecturer to go on.

And, before any one could rise or stir, it did go on in a tone so calmly reassuring that the entire audience seemed to hold its breath. Briefly Dr. Perry explained that his lecture was almost done, and, as his subject for the following week was irrelevant, he was going to crave the indulgence of his hearers for a few more moments until he could round out what he did not wish to leave unsaid in regard to Poe. Warm applause followed, and then, for a brief space, all of us, like the silver haired old gentleman with the sensitive tapping fingers, knew what it meant to feel alone in the darkness with a voice!

"I must add, ladies and gentlemen," that tonic voice continued, and not without a touch of emotion, "that you people of France were the first to recognize

The Church in an Alien World

Habits of thought change slowly. We have been accustomed to measure our progress by standards set up in the 19th Century. Some of the trappings of those years cling closely to us. The mass of people fail to realize that we are living in an entirely different world. The world of the 19th Century was shattered by the first shell fired in 1914. That world has been continuedly battered by high explosives. High explosives not only of steel and powder, by ideas that are just as explosive. A new pattern of life is being drawn in the cauldron of our present bitter experience. As Christian people we hope and pray that the new pattern of life will be more in line with the example set by our Lord and Master Jesus Christ. It will not be, unless we bestir ourselves.

There is one patent fact that we must recognize, "our problem is to envisage the task of the Church in a largely alien world." This statement is made by the Archbishop of Canterbury in the current issue of Christianity and Crisis. The title of the article from which this statement is taken is "What Christians Stand for in the Secular World." The Archbishop states in his opening paragraphs:

"The distinction between the tasks of Church and of society, of Churchmen and citizens, is seldom clearly drawn; and the result is confusion and impotence. Either Christians try to act as Churchmen in the world, only to find that the world refuses to be ordered on principles proper to the Church; or else they look out for the secular policy most congenial to their Christian outlook, only to find that their Christianity is a dispensable adjunct of no practical importance.

"Church and State are different, though they may comprise the same people; and each has its own appropriate sphere and method. Churchman and citizen are words with a different connotation even when they denote the same person; and that person, the individual Christian, has to exercise both these different functions."

That poses our dilemma in cogent fashion. And most of us, the Archbishop continues, are living under the aegis of the nineteenth century "when men still assumed a Law of God as universally Supreme." As we suggested in the beginning that world has been completely swept away. Some vestiges of it remain but they are impotent. We still believe that the only way to make sense of this chaotic world is through the Christian interpretation. And at the center of the Christian interpretation is a Cross. That Cross was planted in an alien world. In a world that was not only indifferent but openly hostile.

Our world today in all its complacency is not one whit less indifferent than the world of the first Christian Century. There are forces, as we well know, in this world today that are openly hostile to any Christian approach. If we, as sincere Christians, are to break the bonds that so clearly proclaim the impotence of the Christian Church, we must first recognize that we face that task in a largely alien world. That is a hard picture. It will shatter some of our soft and quick assumptions.

We hope that many parish rectors will follow the suggestion made by Forward in Service, and either preach or hold forum discussions on the Christian Doctrine of Man. In the light of all that is happening about us, we had best search clearly and deeply our position as Christians in this largely alien world.

The season of Lent is at hand. Shallow pretence toward penitence is not going to be enough in the kind of world we are living in today. When the millions of men and women return, having seen more brutality in a couple of hours than most people even see in a lifetime, soft words and pat answers are not going to satisfy them. We, on the home front, should apply ourselves by close study and sincere prayerfulness, to turn them aside from the cynicism which they can so easily embrace. The answer we know—The Cross—is not only the symbol of the world's suffering, it is also the symbol of the world's guilt. It is likewise the reality of the way out.

A new pattern of life is being moulded. The Church, and we Christians as members of that Church, can, if we will, see that it conforms more closely than ever to the pattern of the Cross. Hard? Yes. But it is a challenge worth accepting.

An Enviable Record

The Church of the Incarnation, Dallas, Texas, the Rev. L. Valentine Lee is to be congratulated on the payment of its indebtedness in full. In 1923, under the rectorship of Chauncey E. Snowden, this parish began a new venture in faith. At that time it was a badly located downtown parish. A lot was purchased in a new and fast growing residential section, and on Christmas Eve, 1927, a new building representing an expenditure of $102,000, was used for the first time. The Rev. L. Valentine Lee came to the Incarnation as its rector in 1928. As he now expresses it, "Depression" shortly became his assistant. But with a fine spirit and a loyal group of laymen and lay women they weathered the storm. A very interesting fact is that the last $70,000 of indebtedness was liquidated by a great number of donors, as the highest individual gift was only $500. This represents real strength.

The Church of the Incarnation has a fine evangelical spirit. Only once has it failed to pay its missionary quota in full. It has stood for a liberal, missionary-minded approach. It has made and is making a fine contribution to the strength of our Church in the great Southwest. We salute the Rector, Vestry and Congregation of the Church of the Incarnation, Dallas, Texas.

BOOK NOTES

By the Faculty of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific. Edited by Randolph Crump Miller.

THE MAN OF ALASKA, PETER TRIMBLE ROWE, by Thomas Jenkins. Morehouse-Gorham Co., New York, $3.75.

It is difficult to recall a biography of a Churchman more eagerly awaited than the life of Bishop Rowe, himself one of the greatest assets of the missionary enterprise of the Protestant Episcopal Church. A whole generation of Church people nurtured from youth on tempting fragments of his missionary heroism has looked forward to the time when it could have the whole story of this rich and almost legendary life told in greater fulness and with the authority of a careful biographer. The Church cannot but be inspired and profited by the task which has now been so sympathetically completed by Bishop Jenkins, a sometime co-worker and lifelong friend. Bishop Jenkins spent a whole year after his retirement in gathering the materials and putting them in shape for publication. In writing a story which is spread over so many decades of active work and which contains such varied interests it was no easy task to preserve the chronological sequence and at the same time segregate for better understanding the many different types of work in which Bishop Rowe was interested. On the whole, however, the author has done a commendable job.

After a brief account of the Bishop's early life and his election to the Episcopate, due to the paucity of information, the record of the Bishop's great life work in Alaska is presented. Arriving at the scene of his future labors just before the Klondike gold rush days, the Bishop found himself swept along on this high tide of invasion into the very heart of his vast diocese, and into a ministry to these hardy, adventurous souls of a kind which still stirs the blood. Among this horde of rough and ready gold seekers none was hardier or more courageous than he. No one could outdistance him on the winter trails or excel him in guiding a home-made skiff through the tumbling rapids. No one did more to bring them spiritual comfort; and his great humanitarianism is witnessed by the string of hospitals which the Bishop built and subsidized with great effort, many of which exist to the present day. He was, however, equally solicitous for the natives, both Indians and Eskimos, and in addition to providing them with mission stations, schools and hospitals he was their ardent champion with the Federal authorities.

His indefatigable labors in this great empire to the north, in whose potentialities and future he had the greatest confidence, cover a period of nearly fifty years. It was hard slogging work and only a man of superb physical strength could have stood up under it. Away from home for months at a time, in perils on the trails, in perils on the rivers, in hunger and thirst, here was indeed one of the great missionaries of all time, another Paul, another Boniface, another Livingstone. All this the book graphically portrays. There is not a dull page in it. Frequently the narrative is interspersed with humor and anecdote; and some delightful sections are in the Bishop's own words, simple, direct, realistic, which take us to the heart of his gospel and give us insights into the childlike faith which led him to undertake a task from the dangers and hardships of which most of his generation would have quailed. This book, like the Bishop, will help make missionary history.

VICTORIOUS MOUNTAINEER: A MEMOIR OF HARRY PEIRCE NICHOLS, by W. Bertrand Stevens. Cloister Press, 1943. $1.00.

When the younger generation of Christians read about William Lawrence, Phillips Brooks, and now Harry Nichols, it seems that the giants of the Episcopal Church belonged to the past generation. Of course, this is not true, but it will take the perspective of a later generation to discover it.

Bishop Stevens has drawn a magnificent "profile" of "Uncle Harry". It is neither detailed biography nor fulsome appraisal, but by the judicious selection of anecdote and comment the author has provided a portrait of a man called "Breezy", "Uncle Harry", "Victorious Mountaineer" —a broad churchman of the evangelical tradition, who had a great influence on the younger men entering the ministry. Perhaps this is the most amazing thing about an outstanding man: that his friends among the younger clergy are the leaders of the new generation.

The book itself opens with a brief introduction by Frederick C. Grant, and there are seven chapters—his early years, his New England ministry, his parish in Minneapolis, his New York career, an evaluation of the man, characteristics (and eccentricities) of his preaching, and his insatiable appetite for mountain climbing. Throughout, one gains an insight into his capacity for friendship, his trusted leadership, his Christian devotion, and his open-minded broad church liberalism. One puts down this book feeling that he knows Harry Nichols, and that he knows Bishop Stevens better for having written about him.

HAVEN

from the inner selfishness and hate of peoples and races, to the deliberate rejection of God's way of justice, righteousness, truth and love.

The shock in yellow may blank things out for awhile, and those who receive them may want to escape into everlasting darkness, but God gave life to be lived, and when one life is cut off, the intensity of its living must be taken by another and as much of its brightness and usefulness saved as is possible for another person to take over. We who have loved ones taken should desire life fiercely; yearn for abundant life sufficient for two. There is no escape, and we would not want it even if there was, for God has created us with a tremendous capacity to rise from the ashes of our sorrow, and lift up our hearts to a new high of service. In such instances loss for the world is great but not half so great as one who dies without one who loves him to carry on and build upon his change from earth life to life beyond, a far better life. We can ever hold to the treasured moments of our love to sweeten what must be endured, and Christ, if we lean upon Him, will give us light like unto dawn.

IN THE DARKNESS WITH A VOICE

our great American poet, you have always done him higher honor than we ourselves. We are beginning to understand and appreciate that fact, but now, in this moment and under these strained circumstances, I wish to acknowledge and sincerely thank you for the highest tribute you have yet paid the memory of Edgar Allan Poe!"

A storm of applause followed, then with one accord several students rose to announce in cheerful tones that with matches they would light the audience to the corridors. So, chattering confidently, an unperturbed line filed slowly out to find a darkened court they dispersed, thinking, I am sure, less of danger to themselves or damage to the electric plant than of the tender music of a foreign poet and the fine presence of mind of another son of whom America might justly be proud.

Thirty-three years have passed since then. Two World Wars have engulfed Paris—all of France! Evil forces and factions have arisen from within like the hidden insidious little rivers, swelling the flood, blackening hope! Yet, through the tragic dark, two voices steadily have been calling—the firm, purposeful voice of a Mother Nation mingled with the defiant, ardent tones of that younger one so impressively pictured by Dr. Perry—"Wait," they cry in unison, "wait just a little longer! Through flood and fire and death our sons are coming to open wide the doors and stand lighting the way for you back to Freedom and to Peace!"

ALWAYS IN DEBT

"Oh, Mother, they have the nicest pencil tablets down at Malley's Drug Store! All the girls at school are getting them!" With this announcement my little niece, Betty Anne, came running into the room where her mother and I were sewing. "Couldn't I borrow ten cents on next week's allowance just this once, Mother? I want to get one of those tablets before they are all gone."

My sister-in-law looked sober. "You would have the money for that tablet now, Betty Anne, if you hadn't borrowed on your allowance last week," she said. There wasn't any money coming to you when your daddy gave the other children their allowances at the first of this week."

"I know it, Mother, but those are such pretty tablets. There's a paper doll on each cover. Jean's tablet had a baby doll with a dress and rompers and a little knitted cap and sweater. Couldn't I borrow the money just this once?"

"'Just this once,' Betty Anne?" her her mother repeated. "That was what you told me last week when you borrowed on your allowance to get a pencil box. Wouldn't you like to have your full allowance next week, just like Alice and Kenneth?"

"Yes, Mother, I would, but I know I won't want anything next week as much as I want that tablet right now!"

"That is exactly what you thought about the pencil box, Betty Anne. You and I are not going to let borrowing become a habit. I have no doubt there will still be some of those tablets at the drug store next week when Daddy gives you your allowance. You can buy one then if you want it."

With tears in her eyes, Betty Anne started from the room. Her mother called her back.

"Come here a minute, dear," Beatrice said, putting her arm around the disappointed little girl. "Do you remember the nice trip we took in our car summer before last? Would you rather have stayed at home?"

Betty Anne looked at her mother in astonishment. "Oh, no, Mother! We saw the mountains and the ocean, and we stopped to visit Aunt Lucia and she took us to the zoo and let me help her with the books in the children's library. Of course I liked our trip!" My little niece smiled at me as she mentioned my part in their good time.

"If your daddy were in the habit of borrowing money every month, we couldn't have had such a nice vacation," Beatrice explained. "Daddy would have had to pay bills instead of using the money to buy gasoline and pay for our meals and lodging on the trip. Daddy tries never to buy anything until he has the money to pay for it. In that way his salary belongs to him every month, instead of to somebody to whom he owes money. Don't you think that is a good plan, Betty Anne?"

The little girl looked thoughtful. "Yes, Mother. I'm glad we had enough money to go on our trip," she added. "I'd like to have my full allowance next week. I want to be like Daddy."

"That's fine, Betty Anne," her mother agreed.

"Sometimes it takes a great deal of fortitude to be a mother, Lucia," Beatrice said to me after Betty Anne had gone out to play, "but I don't want my children to grow up to be always in debt. The young couple living next door to us have bought so many things on credit that they have almost nothing left after paying the installments on their debts at the first of every month. They are worried about money all the time."

"I understand your decision, Beatrice," I hastened to assure her, "and I am sure that Betty Anne understands now."—Lucia Mallory in Nat. Kindergarten Asso. Release.

TOMMIE'S BAD DREAM

William Allen Ward

Once, long ago, there lived a little boy who was just five and liked mighty well to romp and play like most all boys and girls of his age like to play. But this little boy whose name was Tommie sometimes was very naughty and even acted so very badly that people in his block said, "Tommie is behaving just like a monkey".

It was late in the afternoon that Tommie lay down on the bed and closed his eyes. Then the first thing he knew he was walking along the street and older boys coming home from school pointed at him and said:

"Look at the monkey . . . all dressed up and walking down the street . . . better call the police."

"I've turned to a monkey," Tommie cried to himself. "I've been so ugly that they just turned me into a monkey!"

Before Tommie knew what was happening the man from the zoo came and Tommie was placed in a box and carried to the big zoo. A moment later and he was inside the monkey house in a cage all by himself.

"They have made a monkey out of me," Tommie cried.

People stared at him and monkeys in other cages glared at him. One of them grunted: "Don't you like being a monkey, Tommie? Well, then, why don't you stop acting like a monkey, and act like a boy?"

Then Tommie said to himself that he would never be so silly and foolish again. Even if he had been made into a monkey, he determined to act like a wise one at least. Then—

He heard people on the outside of the cage shout: "Why, you have a fine looking little boy in the monkey cage . . . let him out . . . let him out!"

The zoo keeper came running to investigate. He opened the cage and Tommie stepped out with a smile and said: "Thank you, sir."

It was then that Tommie awoke from his nap.

"Mama," he said, "I just had the oddest dream . . . Mama, do I look like a monkey?"

"My child, do you feel all right?" mother exclaimed. "Why, you must have been dreaming."

But in the days that followed when Tommie wanted to be ugly and behave like a monkey he remembered his dream and acted like the real fine boy he really was.

LEAP YEAR PLAINT

Reprinted from Southern Churchman, 1936

February has a day
More than other Februarys;
Winter seems to want to tsay,
Though it is no longer merry.
Snow was pleasant weeks ago;
Now I'm dreadful tired of snow!

Yet, although we'll have to wait
One day more, in frosts and freezes,
We shan't care that March is late
Once we're romping in his breezes.
Spring is coming! Happy hours,
Pussy-willows, jonquil flowers.

HIS PROMISE

God hath not promised
Skies always blue,
Flower-strewn pathways
All our lives through.
God hath not promised
Sun without rain,
Joy without sorrow
Peace without pain.

But God hath promised
Strength for the day,
Rest for the laborer
Light on the way;
Grace for the trial,
Help from above,
Unfailing sympathy,
Undying love.

Pleads for Worthy Lent

Bishop Oldham Emphasizes Prayer and Fasting in Observance of Lent

Albany, N. Y.—In a pastoral letter to his clergy, the Rt. Rev. G. Ashton Oldham pleads for a worthy observance of Lent, to be observed, he says, "in the presence of a disintegrating civilization, a bitterly attacked and hard-pressed Church, and an amount of human suffering and agony such as the world has never known."

Bishop Oldham calls upon people and clergy for devotion to prayer, fasting and almsgiving. The discipline of the latter two, he says, seem the only natural and appropriate thing. Bishop Oldham writes: "We cannot lightly accept the immunity that is ours in this favored land without loss to our souls and our self-respect. We should want to enter upon and share in some degree—though it can only be very slight—the sufferings and sorrows of our brethren in other lands, many of whom are undergoing martyrdom for their faith today." The Bishop reminds his people that fasting in a large part of the world today is no mere religious experience, but a stark necessity. "For our own souls' good," he says, "and as an evidence of brotherhood, we simply must deprive and discipline ourselves and so share in some worthy measure the affliction of mankind."

Emphasizing prayer, Bishop Oldham says this should be more natural and necessary. "With so many of our youth abroad and so many never coming back, it is strange that our Churches and altars are not more thronged with suppliants." He urges the clergy, in addition to extra services and preaching, to make room for special times of prayer and devotion. "We shall probably," he says, "never again have so many obvious and appealing reasons for helping our people along this path."

REV. C. L. TAYLOR ELECTED DEAN

Cambridge, Mass.—Announcement of the election of the Rev. Charles Lincoln Taylor, as dean of the Episcopal Theological School, was made by the Board of Trustees at the annual Alumni Dinner, February 16. The election took place at the Trustees' meeting, February 15.

The Dean-elect was born in Hartford, Conn., in 1901. He was ordained deacon in 1924 and priest in 1925. The eighteen years since his ordination have been spent in the Seminary, first as instructor in Old Testament, then as assistant professor and finally as professor.

In addition to his duties as a teacher, Dr. Taylor was for four years in charge of St. John's Chapel, Cambridge, with full pastoral duties. St. John's later united with Christ Church. For the past ten years he has been in charge of St. Gabriel's Church, Marion, Mass.

Dr. Taylor is regarded as one of the most popular members of the Seminary faculty, and his election is expected to be acclaimed enthusiastically by both students and faculty members.

He was married in 1924 to the former Hannah Chamberlain. They have seven children, five daughters and twin sons.

His college degrees include Williams B. A., Oxford B. A. and M. A., Harvard S. TM. and D. Th.

BIBLE SOCIETY POST-WAR PLANS UNDER WAY

New York, N. Y.—In a letter of acknowledgment of a gift of $1,000 from the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, the Rev. Gilbert Darlington, treasurer of the American Bible Society, said that publication of Bibles by the Society last year was the largest on record, totaling over twelve million copies of Bibles, Testaments and Portions.

If sufficient paper can be obtained, the Society hopes to equal last year's figure in 1944. Plans are under way to publish jointly with the British and Foreign Bible Society 130,000 Bibles and 250,000 New Testaments in Sweden, in addition to printings arranged for in Switzerland, in order to have supplies available for the occupied countries when the war is over.

REV. JOHN A. PINCKNEY ELECTED DIRECTOR KANUGA CONF.

Hendersonville, N. C.—At a meeting of the Board of Managers of Kanuga Lake Conferences last July, the resignation of the Rev. A. Rufus Morgan was accepted to take effect December 31, 1943. Mr. Morgan is devoting his full time to extensive missionary work in the Diocese of Western North Carolina. On December 2, 1943, the Board of Managers of Kanuga, upon recommendation of the executive committee, elected the Rev. John A. Pinckney as director of personnel of the Kanuga Conference. Mr. F. D. MacLean was at the same time elected treasurer. Mr. Pinckney has been director of the Young People's Conference at Kanuga for the past thirteen years. He now takes on this additional work with the Conferences. All communications in regard to the summer's program at Kanuga Lake should be addressed to Rev. John A. Pinckney, Box 308, Clemson, S. C.

Bishop Tsu Attends Convocation

Asheville, N. C.—Gracious, humorous and informative was the message brought by Bishop Tsu to the Convocation of Asheville, of the Diocese of Western North Carolina, meeting at All Souls, February 15-16.

In addition, the Rev. Richard R. Beasley, of St. John's, Knoxville, gave a series of thoughtful meditations. A well-rounded discussion took place on the possibility of using the property of the Valle Crucis School, now closed for the duration, as a training center for Church workers.

Built Without Missionary Help

Bishops of Dornakal Consecrate New Stone Church

Dornakal, India—In the presence of a congregation of 450 in the church and many more packed into the churchyard outside, the Rt. Rev. V. S. Azariah, bishop of Dornakal, with the Rt. Rev. Anthony Blacker Elliott, assistant bishop of Dornakal, consecrated a new stone church in Kothagudium in the Singareni Mission. The building is regarded as of special significance because it is the first church to be built in the diocese entirely without mission help. It was built from the gifts of people and commercial houses in India, an achievement especially remarkable in view of the fact that at the time there was serious threat of invasion by the Japanese, and at a time, also, when costs of building materials had trebled and some articles, nails, for example, had gone to ten times pre-war prices.

The stone for the new church was quarried from a hill near Kathagudium, and the teakwood used for rafters and chairs was from the jungle which surrounds the town. The bell was cast in India and was given in memory of a seaman of the Royal Navy who was killed in action. The reredos curtain was given by a Bombay artist and is made from a cloth of gold given to the artist by an Indian Maharajah.

The church will be used mostly by employees of the Singareni Collieries. Many of the colliery officials are Scottish, so the church was named St. Andrew's after the patron saint of Scotland.

People of all denominations and races contributed to funds for the building; a Madras architect gave his services without charge; the contractor made no charge, and others gave Bible, Prayer and Hymn Books, Cross, and Candlesticks.

OPEN-AIR CAROLS IN BETHLEHEM

An old Christmas custom was revived this year when the lifting of blackout regulations permitted an open-air carol service round a bonfire in Shepherds Fields, outside Bethlehem, on Christmas Eve, writes our Correspondent in Jerusalem. Hundreds of men and women from all the services made up the congregation and the singing was led by an R. A. F. male choir from Haifa. The service was conducted by the Rev. H. Key, Methodist chaplain. Bethlehem itself was filled throughout the night with troops from all the Allies, and British, American, Polish, Greek, and Yugoslav military police cooperated with Palestine police in handling the crowds. Nativity Square was lit up by an electrically illuminated cross.—The Times, London.

DIOCESE OF OHIO

Asks More Tolerance—More Recognition of Negro in War Role

Cleveland, O.—Resolutions calling for more tolerance toward Japanese-Americans and for more recognition of the part of the Negro in the war effort were passed by the 127th Annual Convention of the diocese at Trinity Cathedral February 1.

The resolution with regard to the Negroes' part in the war effort offered by Rev. George Brewin, rector of Grace Church, Toledo, requested that the Convention send a communication to the OWI asking that all posters showing people engaged in the war effort, whether in the armed forces or in industry, show 10 per cent of the people to be Negroes.

Another resolution calling for a more vigorous evangelism and the extension of the ministry of the Church into areas as yet unreached was adopted. Rev. Pembroke Reed, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Barberton, in offering the resolution, said: "I am more interested in apostolic success than apostolic succession."

Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, president of Kenyon College, reported that the arrangement between Bexley Hall and the Virginia Theological Seminary at Alexandria, whereby the students and some of the faculty of Bexley have moved to the Seminary at Alexandria, was a temporary one.

"The arrangement has been undertaken for the current academic year, and this spring it will be studied and either terminated or renewed," Dr. Chalmers said.

He added that the Bexley Development Fund was being continued with an expanded post-war Seminary program in view.

Bishop Beverley D. Tucker, in his annual address, announced that missionary giving in the diocese had increased by 23½ per cent over last year and that more money had been paid in for missionary work than was pledged.

In appointing a commission for work among Negroes, headed by Rev. John C. Davis, of St. Andrew's Church, Cleveland, Bishop Tucker said: "In my opinion there is no more important phase in our diocesan program at this time than the strengthening and extending of our Negro work."

Every parochial clergyman was present, with one exception, who was sick. In all, 96 clergy and 138 laymen attended.

One of the highlights of the Convention was the final report of the Committee on Arrangements for the General Convention for 1943 by Mr. Laurence H. Norton, General Chairman. The committee was commended by the Convention for its excellent work and was discharged of further responsibility. The balance in the Convention Entertainment Fund, amounting to $6,664.00, was turned over to the Trustees of the Diocese of Ohio for investment, the income to be used to defray the traveling expenses of Lay Deputies from the Diocese of Ohio to future General Conventions. This was done with the thought that many laymen who might be capable of representing the Diocese in General Convention might not be able to pay their own expenses to such a convention.

The Treasurer of the Diocese reported more money paid in to the Diocesan Treasurer for Mission work than was pledged by the parishes of the diocese. The diocese pledged $30,000 for the General Church in 1943, and paid $31,452.72. Diocese of Ohio has pledged $37,000 to the General Church for 1944.

At the close of his address, Bishop Tucker called for confidence in the leaders of the nation and for gratitude to the hosts of young men and women in the service of the nation.

"Above all," the Bishop concluded, "we reaffirm our faith in God as the only true giver of victory and declare our allegiance to the spirit and teaching of Jesus Christ as the only sure guide to a just and durable peace."

Venerable B. B. Comer Lile, archdeacon of the diocese, was elected secretary of the diocese to replace Chaplain Paul R. Savanack, now serving in the South Pacific.

SOUTH FLORIDA

Bishop Tsu Touring With Missionary Assemblies

Orlando, Fla.—The Rt. Rev. Y. Y. Tsu, of the missionary district of Yun-Kwei, in southwest free China, is a most welcome visitor in South Florida while making a tour with the Florida chain of Missionary Assemblies. Starting with Orlando, this group includes DeLand, Daytona Beach, Miami, Fort Lauderdale, the Palm Beaches, Fort Myers, Bradenton, Tampa, Lakeland, Winter Haven, St. Petersburg and Clearwater, giving two or three days to each place.

On January 30 Bishop Tsu preached in All Saints' Church, Winter Park and gave an excellent address, under the Assembly program in Orlando the following evening. Stressing Christian fellowship for all the world, he said that the Christian Church has been bringing Christians together, teaching through the centuries that all should become members of the one family of God. That the message of freedom for all peoples was given by our Lord at the beginning of His ministry, when He quoted the prophecy of Isaiah,—that He "was sent to preach the Gospel to the poor, to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised."

Bishop Tsu stated that the Burma Road starts at his see city, Kunming, and goes 650 miles west till it reaches the Burma border and a special part of the work of the Church there is in ministering to American boys in service, many of whom are known to him personally, and he has tried to contact their relatives in our country. Through some memorial gifts, he plans to make a chapel in St. John's Church, Kunming, as a memorial to the American allies. He gave three marked features of their national life under war conditions:—the building up of Democratic ideals,—the advancement of women, especially in social and educational lines, and the upsurge of youth, young men taking a leading part all over the nation. "The part that Christianity has played in the social reconstruction of China is tremendous, as is the progress achieved within recent years," he added.

Cathedral Parish Active for Men in Service

Orlando, Fla.—The Cathedral Parish has recently made substantial reduction of its building debt and is working to complete this during this year. This parish has active work for men in service who come to the large air base and military training schools located here. For over a year Dean Johnson has held a short special service for them each Sunday evening. Following this service a pleasant social hour is held in the Cathedral chapter house, with a committee of ladies who serve light refreshments and do all they can to welcome and entertain those in uniform. Keen interest is shown in the "songfest,"—the boys joining heartily in singing familiar songs, with one of the Cathedral ladies at the piano. An occasional informal dance is arranged on a week night, two of these enjoyed recently in the Cathedral School auditorium. Two organists, stationed here in Army service, who volunteered to play for the Sunday evening service are Lieutenant Reed Jerome, formerly organist in Trinity Church, Buffalo, who played regularly for several months until transferred elsewhere, and Captain Elbert Adams, organist of a Baptist church in Greenville, S. C., who took this organ duty when Lieutenant Jerome left and is continuing his skillful help.

The Cathedral choir sponsored raising funds to provide the new hymnal, costing about $500.00 for choir and pews, this expense met by special gifts.

Mission at Holy Cross

Sanford, Fla.—Rev. Roland F. Palmer, Superior of the Society of St. John the Evangelist in Bracebridge, Ontario, held a helpful preaching mission in Holy Cross Church the last week in January. Good attendance by both adults and children marked these services, with keen interest shown throughout the parish. Mr. Palmer is the author of "Good News", the Canadian book for Lent of last year. The rector of the parish, Rev. Frank E. Pulley, and his vestry have started a monthly parish news bulletin, "The Parish Messenger", in addition to their Sunday "Chimes". In the first issue (January) the purpose of this "Messenger" is given as being a means of contacting the entire membership once a month, including boys and girls in college and many members who are serving our country.

Marble Altar Dedicated

Miami—St. Stephen's Church, the Rev. Rex Wilkes rector, recently dedicated a marble Altar, made possible by several "thank-offering" gifts. The former Altar of concrete was left in place and covered with fitted pieces of white marble, adding greatly to the beauty of the Sanctuary.

Church Serving Group from Bahama

Bradenton—The Rev. Frank M. Brunton, rector of Christ Church, is holding services for a large group of Bahama Negroes who are camping near Palmetto, and many of these men belong to our Church. The manager of this camp has cooperated with this work, giving the use of a large room in a schoolhouse for these services. Evensong is held each Sunday, with over twenty-five attending, and Holy Communion is celebrated at 8:30 A. M. on two Sundays a month. These men have expressed deep appreciation of the work, some of them telling Mr. Brunton they had been in this country over a year, working in several states without seeing a priest of the Church or being invited to services.

The Men's Club of Mr. Brunton's parish sponsored a library last year for an isolated rural school in Gillette, collecting 750 books. A formal presentation of the library was made before school children, teachers, and local residents, and a wooden panel, carved by a local craftsman, gave the date of the occasion, with the name of the donor. The library has been used by the whole community, and the Men's Club has pledged to secure 750 additional books for it this year.

DIOCESE OF GEORGIA

Christ Church Noonday Lenten Services

Savannah, Ga.—As usual, historic Christ Church will have guest preachers for the noonday Lenten services. The Rev. David Cady Wright, D. D., rector, will preach the first half week.

February 29-March 3—The Rev. Randolph R. Claiborne, Church of the Nativity, Huntsville, Ala.

March 6-10—The Rev. George W. Shirley, St. Thomas' Church, Thomasville, Ga.

March 13-17—The Rev. J. Wilson Hunter, St. Andrew's Church, Louisville, Ky.

March 20-24—The Rev. William H. Marmion, St. Mary's-on-the-Highlands, Birmingham, Ala.

March 28-31—The Rev. Robert A. Magill, St. John's Church, Lynchburg, Va.

April 3-6—Bishop Barnwell.

Six-Day Teaching Mission

Savannah, Ga.—The Rev. Alan Whittemore, Superior of the Order of the Holy Cross, conducted a six-day teaching mission at St. Paul's Church, beginning February 6. The attendance at all the services was splendid, despite rain or threatening weather practically every day. Following the evening services such of the congregation as cared to, adjourned to the parish hall, where Mr. Whittemore talked informally on Prayer for about 15 or 20 minutes, after which coffee and doughnuts were served. There were two daily celebrations of the Holy Communion.

Executive Council Meets

Savannah, Ga.—At the meeting of the Executive Council of the diocese held January 25, a budget of $26,282.00 was approved. This being a small diocese in numbers and traveling difficult these days, instead of holding a two-day session, one for the departments and the other for the executive council, Bishop Barnwell called a meeting of the executive council, at which each department was represented and taken up, one by one, as the condition and needs of each was discussed by the whole group. It gave each member of the executive council an opportunity to hear first hand just what each department was doing, and to take part in formulating plans for the year. In his column, "The Bishop's Letter", published in the last issue of the diocesan paper, The Church in Georgia, Bishop Barnwell points out that the diocese has received the most liberal gifts in years. The diocesan assessments have been met by nearly all the parishes and missions and in a number of cases overpaid. But the Bishop stresses the need for clergy more particularly in the vacant missions.

RHODE ISLAND

W. A. Annual Meeting

Providence, R. I.—At the Church of the Epiphany on January 27, the diocesan branch of the Woman's Auxiliary met in annual meeting. The principal speaker was the Rev. Ernest H. Forster, a former Missionary in China, recently returned on the S. S. Gripsholm. The offering was devoted to Chinese relief. Election of officers took place. Prior to the meeting there was a Celebration of the Holy Communion, the Celebrant being the Rt. Rev. James DeWolf Perry, D. D., bishop of Rhode Island, assisted by the Rev. Francis B. Downes, rector of the Church of the Epiphany.

Narragansett Convocation

East Greenwich—The Narragansett Convocation, under the special sponsorship of the diocesan committee on Forward in Service, held a meeting for men at St. Luke's Church, the Rev. John Pickells, rector, on February 13. The meeting from 4 to 8 P. M., included a supper period. The general subject was "Christianizing Your Vocation." The discussions were led by the Rev. Canon Richard Lief, City Missionary in Providence, on the staff of the Cathedral of St. John, now in charge also of Christ Church, Providence. The four discussions were on the following subjects:—The Value of Fellowship; Reverence for Personality; The Meaning of Sacrifice; and The Power of Sacrifice. At the evening service the preacher was the suffragan-bishop of Rhode Island, the Rt. Rev. Granville Gaylord Bennett, D. D.

The Dean of the Narragansett Convocation, the Rev. Thom Williamson, rector of St. Peter's-by-the-Sea, Narragansett, has appointed the Rev. Leonard Fisher, rector of St. Paul's, Wickford, as Adult Advisor for Young People in the Convocation. The work is under the general direction of the Rev. W. G. Berndt, of Grace Church in Providence, who heads the Diocesan committee.

vention opened in St. Matthew's Church with a choral celebration of the Holy Communion, the Rt. Rev. Thomas Casady, bishop of Oklahoma, as Celebrant, assisted by the Very Rev. James Mills of St. Paul's Cathedral, Oklahoma City, and the Rev. Alvin S. Hock, of Stillwater.

The diocesan organization is working smoothly and efficiently the Bishop told the convention. However, he asked that its work might be facilitated by the creation of a diocesan board, a body known as "Bishop and Council", its members appointed to serve on committees. Duties of these committees shall be to formulate a church program and to deal with such matters as Christian Education, Christian Social Relations, Army and Navy Commission, Forward in Service, Diocesan Missions and Evangelism. One clergyman and one layman shall constitute the nucleus of each committee, these to select other members. The Bishop's recommendation was promptly adopted.

"Throughout the whole American Church ignorance of the Christian faith and life is appalling," said the Bishop, "thousands being confirmed each year without deep understanding of their professed faith and its significance. More thousands go through Sunday School lacking comprehension of the claim of Christ and His Church upon their lives." The Bishop then asked the convention to make a thorough survey of the Church's educational program and to ascertain what results it has achieved in each community.

Bishop Casady reported to the convention a gift of $11,000 to be used in the construction of a diocesan center. The gift made by Mr. E. J. Miller, of Oklahoma City, in honor of his wife creates the Anna H. Miller Memorial Foundation. If the Chapter will raise $10,000 Mr. Miller will match that with another and equal sum.

For the first time in the Church's history in Oklahoma, assessments for the fiscal year just past had been paid in full. A budget of $32,000 for 1944 was accepted without question.

At a diocesan dinner held in the Youngblood Hotel where covers were laid for 250 on the night of the nineteenth, Dr. Alexander Guerry, vice-chancellor of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee, made an address on democracy and education.

Highly commended by Bishop Casady was the work of the Woman's Auxiliary, its contribution steadily growing, having become all the more essential since many men have been withdrawn to enter the war services. The Auxiliary discussed plans for promoting a home for old people.

SOCIAL CLUB PROVIDED FOR SCHOOL BOYS AND GIRLS

Lufkin, Tex.—Bright orange writing paper headed, "The Panther Club, Lufkin, Texas, a social club for junior and high school boys and girls", makes a gay introduction to one of the gayest and busiest of young people's current activities. Foresight inspired the adult leaders of Lufkin, among whom was the Rev. Morris F. Elliott, rector of St. Cyprian's Church, to establish such a wholesome environment in their town that conditions leading to juvenile delinquency, they hope, will not develop.

With an advisory committee of men and women and a student committee of boys and girls, the Panther Club was organized "to provide for the young people of Lufkin a convenient and well equipped gathering place of their own, with an attractive atmosphere, where they could enjoy wholesome recreation of the right sort under friendly and sympathetic supervision, and where good conduct and cooperation would be expected of them in keeping with the generally accepted standards among the best type of American youth. . . . There are no posted regulations."

A student committee elected by the young people is in charge of dances, receptions and other activities, and has organized a group of junior hostesses to look after the snack bar and game equipment. Mothers of Lufkin provide a senior hostess group. The building used by the club is conveniently located in the downtown area adjacent to the movies and other meeting places of the young people. Facilities include pingpong tables, juke-box, radio, phonograph, checkers, dominos, darts and other small games, magazines, snack bar for soft drinks, candy, etc., refreshment booths and a large floor for dancing.

Operating expenses for one year were raised by subscription from interested citizens and business firms, who were most generous. No membership dues or other charges are paid by the young people except for soft drinks and the juke-box.

FELLOWSHIP OF OVERSEAS MISSIONARIES, ACTIVE AND RETIRED PLAN FOUR MEETINGS YEARLY

New York, N. Y.—"The Fellowship of Overseas Missionaries of the Episcopal Church in the U. S. A.," is the name of a newly formed organization, the objectives of which are to "serve as a clearing house for news of old friends and new; to enable the Mission family to bring comfort and cheer to those of our number who are isolated or infirm; and to present to the Church a united witness about the Church's mission fields, their needs; the needs of missionaries, active and retired; and above all, to be partners in prayer for the Church, the Church's Mission, for native friends and workers and for each other."

A group of active and retired missionaries have been meeting informally for the past two years. Now a permanent organization has been formed, planned to include all missionaries who have retired from the various Mission Dioceses Overseas, and all those active in the field abroad. The organizing group was made up of 42 such missionaries, and it is hoped that all persons who have formerly served in any of the Overseas dioceses, either under appointment or employed in the field shall communicate with the Fellowship. Communications should be addressed to the secretary, Mrs. John Wilson Wood, 402 West 20th Street, New York 11, N. Y.

The other officers of the Fellowship are: President, the Rt. Rev. S. Harrington Littell, retired bishop of Honolulu; Vice-President, Mrs. Gouverneur F. Mosher, wife of the late bishop of the Philippine Islands; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Wood, formerly of the diocese of Hankow; Executive Committee, the Rev. Dr. Arthur M. Sherman, formerly in China; Miss Etta McGrath, formerly in Japan; and Mrs. Grafton C. Burke, formerly in Alaska.

The Fellowship plans to hold four meetings a year; to supply news about missionaries, retired, resigned and active, and to issue a Newsletter at least twice a year.

BATTLE. CAPTAIN TURNER WESTRAY BATTLE, U. S. M. C., son of Mrs. Nell Gupton Battle and the late Judge Jacob Battle of Rocky Mount, North Carolina, grandson of Lavinia Bassett Battle and Captain Turner Westray Battle, C. S. A., of Cool Spring Plantation, Edgecomb County, North Carolina, father of Lt. (jg) Turner Westray Battle, now with the Atlantic Fleet. Captain Battle while on duty in the South Pacific several months ago received serious injuries incapacitating him from further active service. He was assigned as instructor in anti-aircraft artillery at Camp Le Jeune, New River, North Carolina, where he died on January 1, 1944. His funeral services were held on January 4, 1944, from the Church of the Good Shepherd in Rocky Mount, North Carolina. He was a member of this church with which his family had been associated from its foundation. He was interred in the old Battle burial ground at Cool Spring Plantation. He is survived by his mother, by his son and by his two sisters, Mrs. Frank S. Wilkinson of Rocky Mount, N. C., and Mrs. E. L. Eatman of Wrightsville Beach, N. C.

POSTWAR PLANNING COMMITTEE FORMED

Oakland, Calif.—A Postwar Planning Committee has been formed under authorization of Oakland City Council. It is working out a program which seeks to define and find solutions to problems of the transition period after the war; to provide employment for returning service men and others; to expand and develop opportunities for cultural and educational advancement and the spiritual welfare of the people; to seek the cooperation of all organizations and individual citizens in carrying out the program of the Committee.

A number of sub-committees have been set up, to undertake specific objectives of the program. The Rev. A. Donald Merrix, rector of St. Paul's Church, is head of the Social Welfare and Recreation Committee, which will endeavor to enlist the aid of Churches, schools, welfare agencies and civic organizations in the community plan.

PLANS ADOPTED FOR SELF-SUPPORT

Albuquerque, N. Mex.—Bishop James M. Stoney announces that the Missionary District of New Mexico and Southwest Texas has adopted definite plans looking toward self-support and achievement of diocesan status.

The plans are on a ten-year basis and include increase of local support on the part of aided congregations; increase in Church Program giving on the part of all parishes and missions, not merely to meet the increased quota to the National Council, but in order to build up a program in the District which will eventually take over the supplemental salaries necessary for the white field; and the raising of an endowment for partial support of the episcopate.

Bishop Stoney says that efforts are progressing satisfactorily, and that "the whole District is in a wholesome and developing condition."

ORDINATIONS

Deacons

Messrs. William Russell Daniel and William Shelby Walthall were ordained to the diaconate in St. James' Church, Leesburg, Florida, by the Rt. Rev. John D. Wing, D. D., bishop of South Florida, on Friday, February 11, 1944. The preacher was the Rev. Frank E. Pulley, rector of Holy Cross Church, Sanford.

Mr. Daniel was presented by the Rev. William L. Hargrave, of Fort Pierce, and Mr. Walthall by the Rev. F. Barnby Leach, of Tampa.

The Rev. Mr. Daniel has been assigned as curate in St. Andrew's Parish, Fort Pierce; and the Rev. Mr. Walthall as curate in St. Mary's Parish, Daytona Beach.

DEATHS

Rev. E. Bryan Andrews

The Rev. E. Bryan Andrews, rector of Grace Church, Willoughby, and St. Hubert's Chapel, Kirtland Hills, Ohio, died suddenly on Saturday, February 12, 1944. The burial office of the Church was conducted by the Rt. Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, bishop of the diocese, in Grace Church, Willoughby, on Tuesday, February 15. Interment was in Willoughby.

ENLIST IN WAR ON LIQUOR!

The Grand Army of Temperance proposes a national advance; a good start by 1950, and total extinction of the legalized liquor traffic by 1960! This can be done! It will take militant trained leadership. It will require working within each major political party for control of the party's machinery just as the liquor forces always seek that control. It will require local option elections, and educational effort with the masses of citizens.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

"Those who trust him wholly, find Him wholly true."

"The wealth of any cause is the self-dedication of those who serve it."

If we love and seek and serve what Jesus lived and died for, a greatness not of ourselves will lift the humblest deed to the level of the Divine.—Selected.

'Tis Heaven itself that points out an hereafter
And intimates eternity to man.
—Joseph Addison.

In Jesus' presence we feel as Peter, that we are in the presence of something ultimate and eternal; His condemnation and pardon, we feel are the condemnation and pardon of God; His grace is the grace of God. To doubt Him is to doubt God; if He be not the Light, there is no light. Surely the eternal God is here, in Him reconciling the world unto Himself.—Exchange.

Father, we look to Thee in all our sorrow;
Thou art the fountain whence our healing flows.
Dark though the night, joy cometh with the morrow;
Safely they rest who on Thy love repose.
—Selected.

He who knows others is learned, but he who knows himself is wise.—Chinese Saying.

Times of crisis come in the lives of both individuals and nations, when a little swerving to the left or to the right will mean either irretrievable defeat or ultimate triumph. It is for us resolutely to place our affairs in the hands of God, assured then that all things will work together for our good.—A. R. Palmer.

"Our forefathers may have been too sure of everything; it will be a good thing if we are sure of some things."

"We have been proceeding upon a false basis. We have conceived of the Christian life as an imitation of Christ. It is not an imitation of Christ. It is a participation of Christ."—F. H. Huegel.

Before we do anything else, and in everything else we do, our whole thinking must be inspired with love for the Lord our God. Otherwise, we cannot keep any of His commandments, as God counts keeping. Otherwise, we cannot do anything good, as God counts good.—Selected.

The request to "come" at any moment was a standing invitation all through Jesus' life. Come unto Me at My darkest hour, in My heaviest trial, on My busiest day, and I will give you rest. And when the very bloodhounds were gathering in the streets of Jerusalem to hunt Him down, did He not turn to the quaking group around Him and bequeath to them a last legacy—"My peace"?—Drummond.

God is too great to let us down, and too good to let us alone. He walks the uncharted pathways and encompasses the things of time with His timeless presence.—J. R. Sizoo.

Vol. 110—No. 9 4 MARCH 1944

Vested choir boys of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Baltimore, Md., sing to workers in great war industry plant. The plant is the American Hammered Piston Ring Division of Koppers Company. The boys made one trip through the plant in the afternoon, then ate fried chicken until the shift changed. In the early evening they made another round of the plant, singing hymns to busy war workers.

Latest C. P. C. Project

Mr. Editor:

The crew of the famous aircraft carrier, Shangri La, will read books sent through the Church Periodical Club when the huge ship sails. Thanks to the kindness of Dr. Douglas Freeman, Editor of the News Leader, and Lieutenant Commander Charles L. Kessler, 1,200 books and magazines were sent to the Navy Recruiting Station, Parcel Post Building, Richmond, Va., for outgoing Navy and Marine vessels.

When Lieutenant Commander Kessler went to the launching of the Shangri La he took the last installment of these books to the Norfolk Navy Yard and delivered them to Commander Henry Ben Hodgkins, Senior Chaplain, who said that the books would be placed on the Shangri La.

I hope that the donors will report the number each gave, and that all will carry on for the duration.

Suitable books are urgently needed at the Army and Navy Hospitals. They should be sent to Volunteer Special Services, 4 South Fifth Street, Richmond, Va. Only send what your own male relatives would enjoy reading.

Thank you.

ASK FOR MORE CHAPLAINS

Mr. Editor:

The Army, which has told the Commission that it would accept no chaplains whose papers were dated after November 22, 1943, is now asking for 20% more than its present quota of 300. The Navy, also contrary to the Commission's recent understanding, is taking our men at the rate of about three or four a month.

Clergy ready to serve may send their names to the Army and Navy Commission, 1 Joy Street, Boston, which will take immediate action. The names of candidates endorsed by the Commission will be sent to Army or Navy Headquarters. Although it is uncertain how quickly clergy may be called, candidates should be ready for immediate summons.

Army and Navy Commission of the Episcopal Church.

DIOCESAN SCHOOL IN SECOND TERM

Boston, Mass.—The Diocesan School started its second term on February 3 in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul with several of its courses so adapted to the needs of the day that notice of them "made the front page" in the local press. Chief among them, because opened by an address from the Rev. Dr. William J. Daly, supervisor of parochial schools in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese, was "The Churches today." Father Daly's dictum, "Though in creed we differ, shoulder to shoulder, we can work together toward the triumph of religion", will doubtless be echoed in spirit as, on successive Thursdays through March 23, representatives of the Baptist, Jewish, Unitarian, Presbyterian, Congregational, Methodist, and finally the Episcopal Church expound their beliefs and practice.

Outstanding also in a curriculum offering thirteen subjects divided between the sessions at 5:15, 6:40 and 7:45 P. M., is the Laboratory Class in Weekday Religious Education at which a class of pupils from the nearby Charlestown is taught by an expert teacher in the person of Miss Lillian B. Moeschler, teacher of weekday church schools in Boston and Salem under the Massachusetts Council of Churches.

"Community Life as Seen in the Bible", taught by the Rev. Ralph W. Decker, of the Boston University School of Theology, is given twice on each Thursday, so valuable is deemed the effort to find guiding principles for present-day social relationships in the problems of collective living which confronted the leaders in both Old and New Testament annals.

"Six Pillars of Peace", title of a course led by Miss Agnes Winter, former educational secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary in the Diocese of Maryland, aims to help members of the Church to consider and think wisely about post-war problems, as political, economic, and social aspects of conditions confronting us are considered in turn.

In addition to the course on "Re-Thinking Our Christian Faith", limited to twenty-five members and with a selective enrollment, there are courses in hymnology, leadership in recreation, pageantry and drama, Church History, on the Holy Communion, on young people and the understanding of children in their social environment.

A fee of fifty cents for registration opens the wealth of the Diocesan School to the student. Supper at a minimum charge is provided for those wishing it, an aid to fellowship as is the optional "hymn sing" at the close of the evening.

TREASURERS OF VARIOUS MISSION BOARDS TO MEET

New York, N. Y.—Treasurers of most of the Mission Boards of non-Roman Churches will meet at 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, on March 31, for an all-day consideration of their various problems. Mr. James E. Whitney, assistant treasurer of the National Council, will represent the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society and will speak on problems growing out of War Labor Board rulings on salary increases.

Other subjects to be discussed are plans for annuities, handling of legacies, travel, passports, income taxes of missionaries at home and overseas; old-age and survivors' insurance for employees of religious, charitable, educational organizations, care of investments and financing post-war mission work.

In addition to the various denominations represented, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, are participating in the conference.

U S O PROGRESS IN PAST YEAR

New York—Extension and improvement of religious services are among the most significant factors in U S O progress in the past year, according to Chester I. Barnard, president of the organization, in a speech at the third anniversary luncheon held at the Waldorf-Astoria February 4. New York State's Governor Thomas E. Dewey was guest speaker at the luncheon which was served to more than 1,200 people.

Mr. Barnard said that because of the enormous rate of growth of U S O, physical facilities and the recruiting of personnel were necessarily prime considerations in the beginning, but that now the religious provisions were going ahead "by leaps and bounds." Cooperation with chaplains and churches, and the increasing distribution of religious literature in clubs were specific factors in the general improvement in religious services, he said.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER

The first Friday in Lent, February 25, is being observed as World Day of Prayer throughout the Christian world on six continents. In America it is sponsored by the United Council of Churchwomen, which urges that in schools, factories, theatres and military camps, as well as in churches, there be special gatherings of women to pray for a better world.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

LET US TAKE the Garden scene with Adam and Eve, as told in the lovely narrative found in Genesis 2:7f and look to it for insight into great spiritual truth. The story is a psychological gem of knowledge concerning the moral workings of man's mind and illustrates the great truth of the Christian religion, freedom of choice.

"The Lord God took the man and put him in the garden of Eden to till it and look after it; and the Lord God laid this command upon the man: 'From any tree in the garden you are free to eat; but from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you must not eat; for the day that you eat of it you shall certainly die.'" This admonition was sufficient for Adam and Eve until the serpent came along—"Now the serpent was the most clever of all the wild beasts that the Lord God had made."

"'And so God has said that you are not to eat from any tree in the garden?' he said to the woman.

"'From the fruit of the trees in the garden we may eat,' the woman said to the serpent; 'it is only concerning the fruit of the tree which is in the middle of the garden that God has said, "You may not eat of it, nor touch it, lest you die."'"

"But the serpent said to the woman, 'you would not die at all; for God knows that the very day you eat of it, your eyes will be opened, and you will be like gods who know good from evil.'"

Well, they ate of the tree and did learn the difference between good and evil; and so primitive man explained the existence of evil in the world and why he must work for a living and why there were differences between husbands and wives and why women suffered pain in childbirth.

THE LESSONS from this story are not to be looked for in historical fact but in the religious significance of it. Those who have read The Screwtape Letters and have followed the technique of temptation will recognize the method of the serpent. His first job was to break down intellectual inhibitious and faith in God's commands as true and right. The moment doubt crept in and Adam and Eve's relationship with God was questioned, and when certain imputed motives were believed about God—that He was fearful lest man become as wise as He was—the safeguards of confidence and trust in God were broken and human curiosity and desire for infinity broke over into disobedience, deliberate disobedience. The results were terrible and led to banishment from the garden. In all this the gift of free choice is in evidence. God could have closed the mouth of the serpent or banished him from entrance into the garden—does the story not say God created the serpent also? But man was left to choose. God had given him all he could possibly desire, but one thing, and the moment a beguiling word is heard, the God who gave a garden becomes the God who withholds wisdom. The devil, in whatever form we imagine him, still works in the same way; he makes us question our belief and throws doubt upon our present mode of life to get us dissatisfied and suggestible to the thoughts he plants. God made a universe and built into it the laws which make it work. Man has discovered many of those laws and recorded them. They are available to all. The records of history attest to the life of man obedient or disobedient to those laws, and the good or bad results. God has never coerced man. But He still warns us, as the writer of this ancient creation story says He warned Adam and Eve—disobey My laws and you will certainly die. Man must suffer the consequences of his choices. Is it not a mystery that man still chooses what he hopes will be his own omnipotence rather than the garden where God has provided a sinless life? Ponder the many lessons of Adam and Eve and cease not until the wisdom of obedience shines like dawn.

THE SECOND SUNDAY IN LENT

Almighty God, who seest that we have no power of ourselves to help ourselves; Keep us both outwardly in our bodies, and inwardly in our souls; that we may be defended from all adversities which may happen to the body, and from all evil thoughts which may assault and hurt the soul; through Jesus Christ our Lord!

Chaplains and the War

By REV. WILLIAM C. KERNAN

A DOCUMENTED STATEMENT in the office of the Chief of Chaplains reports this story:

"March 2, 1943. The following incident was told by soldier survivors of the S. S. (deleted). Authenticity can be verified by soldier survivors, now in Greenland, concerning the heroic conduct of the four Chaplains aboard the sinking ship—Jewish, Catholic, Protestant. With utter disregard of self, having given away their life-jackets to four men without them, the Chaplains stood hand in hand praying to the God they served for the safety of those men who were leaving the stricken ship on all sides of them. This is the picture engraved on our minds and hearts as the S. S. (deleted) disappeared beneath the waves." In the companionship of death the adherents of three faiths joined hands and, with their hands, their hearts.

The Chaplains have demonstrated to the armed forces that they are translating verbal declarations of faith into tangible deeds of action. The soldiers and sailors have also demonstrated this fact in working together, living together, and fighting together.

Shall we here in the United States say that only on a battlefield people can be tolerant of each other? Shall we say that only in times of emergency we can forget our prejudices and hates? Shall we, at home, by our example in word and deed, create disunity because we are not face to face with the deadly fire of the enemy?

The Chaplains stand out as leaders of interfaith cooperation and understanding for Americans everywhere. Let us therefore put an end to all hate-breeding at home. Let us discourage the foul prejudice fanned by our fascist enemy, and by our more insidious enemy, the un-American American.

When we hear anyone attacked because he has a foreign-sounding name, because he is a Catholic, a Jew, or a Protestant, let us speak out against the attacker. Let us denounce all stories that are un-Christian and let us challenge all rumors that damage our united effort. And, finally, let us stamp out vicious attempts to divide Americans and thereby to undermine American unity. Let the world know, once and for all, that we are All Americans and that we stand together at home, as on the battlefront, for humanity and the freedom with which God has endowed all men.

Clayton High Wolf

A Notable Career Ends

By NEVILL JOYNER

THE NOTABLE AND WORTHY career of Clayton High Wolf, of Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, South Dakota, came to a close in Sioux Falls Hospital.

Some years back, when the pagan element was larger than now, there stood at the window of a little chapel down on Porcupine Creek in Pine Ridge a young man who looked on and listened. That was a great occasion. Doubtless the young man heard something. And having heard he heeded. Unlike some who turn from paganism to Christianity this young man never returned to pagan customs. To him the call was clear. Of this his life and labors bear abundant evidence.

In due course he was Helper, then Catechist. Having proved himself, he was made deacon. Surely no one could have served a more worthy diaconate. As a Priest of the Church, he was a workman who had no cause of shame.

Life was not always easy for him. Truly he had days of happiness, days of great joy. But every day was not so, and the road was not smooth all the way. There were, indeed, places very rough and very steep. It required a stout heart and clear faith to overcome the obstacles along the way. He did overcome. We may believe he thought many times of the great passage in the book of Revelation, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with My Father in His throne".

That young man who stood and looked in the chapel window and listened was Clayton High Wolf, a Dakota Indian.

To have fellowship with him was a high privilege. His loving and loyal friendship was a benediction. He was a witness from the first day until God called him from his earthly labors. Those labors will bear fruit in the lives of the Dakota people, who loved him and whom he loved and to whom he was steadfast friend and devoted priest. The memory of the life and labors of Clayton High Wolf will be for long years to come an inspiration to holy living.

Nevill Joyner.

THE EARLIEST GOSPEL, by Frederick C. Grant. Abingdon-Cokesbury. $2.50.

One of America's greatest Biblical scholars has given us a fine book on the "evangelic tradition at its point of crystallization in writing"—the Gospel according to Mark. Making full use of the tools of form criticism, Dr. Grant shows how the oral tradition developed from the preaching of the early Church. Salvation was coming in the near future, for God had raised Jesus from the dead, ushering in a new age. There was no need to write this down—and no time. Men were to be called to salvation, and this preaching consisted of three points: (1) the expectation of the coming judgment, with Christ as the judge, (2) the promise of salvation to those who repented and trusted in Him, and (3) some historic facts from the life of Jesus to provide evidence for the evangelical appeal. It was customary among the Jews to repeat the sayings of great men, and Jesus's sayings soon existed in Greek as well as Aramaic—still without being written down. During the great persecutions in Rome, Mark wrote down what he had heard; all he had to do was arrange and edit the oral tradition, explaining primarily why Jesus died. He wrote to convert Gentiles and not to tell the life of Jesus. There follows a careful analysis of the structure and content of the gospel. This is a scholarly approach which never loses sight of the objectives of Christian faith; it demonstrates the positive values of form criticism; and it is clearly written for the intelligent layman. R. C. Miller.

The Four Levels on Which Man Lives

By OSCAR F. GREEN

THE DESIRE for simplification and unity is most natural and proper and has advanced knowledge as perhaps no other single principle; but when we become obsessed by it, it blinds us to all manner of truth. There was a time when men believed that there were many gods. It was a great day for civilization when Isaiah proclaimed that there was but one. Likewise men once considered every event to be the result of a special act of God or some other personal force. Now we know that God acts through laws, and science is made possible. Today when we meet a new fact, we do not simply take it for granted; we try to understand it, that is we classify and catalogue it. Those of us who went to school thirty years ago were taught that there were seventy elements; but the present generation learns that there are nearer one hundred which are not to be thought of as ultimately distinct but rather as different conformations of a single electrical field.

This technique of classification and generalization has been so successful, no wonder many are led astray by it; and such is the case. Men want to explain everything by a single law, and in attempting the impossible overlook the most obvious facts. Therefore a method which has been a primary blessing has been turned into a curse. This passionate impulse to reduce everything to one type of reality Paul Elmer More has denominated "The Demon of the Absolute."

Nowhere do we get a clearer illustration of the working of this demon than in modern conceptions of human nature. Man lives on four planes or levels, is constituted of four elements, shall we say, is governed by four laws. Much of our trouble in religion and philosophy comes from our ignoring this patent fact. Think, will you, of man's fourfold nature.

FIRST OF ALL, man is a physical being, whose body is composed of chemical elements, carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and numerous others. As a physical being he is governed by the laws of chemistry and physics. There is no way to get around this. The salt in our bodies is the same salt to be found in the ocean. The hydrochloric acid of the stomach can be manufactured in any laboratory. If we step off a high building our bodies respond to the law of gravitation just as a stone or a chunk of mud would. The biblical writer was telling the truth, but not the whole truth, when he makes God say, "Dust thou art, and to dust thou shalt return."

Now to ignore our physical nature as some religious persons advise us to do would be folly. Our bodies must have food and can be stimulated or depressed by drugs. We never rid ourselves of the laws of chemistry and physics. That is probably one reason Jesus refused at the suggestion of Satan to throw Himself from the pinnacle of the temple. As a man of flesh and blood and bones it would have been senseless for Him to act though He were a disincarnate spirit.

But just because we are constituted of material elements and therefore are subject to the laws of mechanics, we must not conclude that we are machines. This is the error of the naturalists and the behaviorists, who say, for instance, that there is no freedom, because in a world of physical objects any given object responds only to a physical stimulus. For example, they maintain that thought is verbalization, a complex phenomenon in the throat where muscles and cartilage contract and expand to form words. The answer to this sort of argument is to point out the difference between a robot and a man. A robot is a tremendously ingenious machine. You can ask him how he feels, and, after the wheels have whirred for a few moments, he, or rather it, will reply, "I feel very well today, thank you!" Does that not prove that a man is a robot? No, because as often as you ask the robot the same question, he will give you the same answer. Ask a man how he feels, and he may give you the identical answer, but again he may start in to tell you about his operation. And if, when he has finished, you ask him the same question over, he will look at you wondering if you are deaf, or slightly unbalanced. Acting on the first supposition, he may repeat his answer. But if the third time you ask him the same question and he knows that you are not deaf, he will flee from you and telephone to your family to come and get you. It is the Demon of the Absolute that has got into some of our psychologists and men of science.

THE SECOND LEVEL on which man lives is the biological. We are closely akin to the Simians. Clarence Day has written a charming essay pointing out the similarities between us and the monkeys. He insists that if evolution had proceeded through some other branch of the kingdom of mammals, we should have been an entirely different sort of being. That is a diverting fantasy; but this much is clear; we have an animal nature. We have organs similar to those of the brutes, and the processes of reproduction and the assimilation of food are identical. Physicians are dependent on the lower animals in their studies of human diseases. They try out their concoctions on beasts because beasts respond very much as we do. Whether we like it or not we are at least cousins to the ox, the ass and the dog. Moreover, as nearly as we can determine, the lower animals have feelings not unlike our own, which gives some point to calling the organization which endeavors to protect the brute creation the humane society.

It is extremely important that we not overlook this side of our nature. To do so is to fail to understand ourselves, and to become needlessly cruel in handling our dumb friends.

But it does not follow since with part of our being we must obey the laws of biology that we are therefore one with the birds and the fishes and the Simians. This is what some naturalists, biologists, and psychologists have asserted. They are forced to recognize two levels of existence, the animate and the inanimate; but they refuse to go any further. Man, they say, is only an animal. It is the "only" that vitiates the statement. To be sure man is an animal—but with a difference. Thinkers through the ages have vied with one another in enumerating the distinguishing characteristics of the human species. Man is an animal that thinks, that laughs, that makes tools, that defies nature, that plans for the future, that prays, that rises superior to instinct, that has ideals. It would seem that these qualities would be sufficient to indicate that the human animal belongs to another order of being; but some profess not to see it. There are two factors which operate to produce this blindness. The one is the desire to get away from morality and high endeavor and sacrificial living; for if we are one with the monkeys, there is no reason why we should not behave like them and not concern ourselves with problems of human conduct. You just cannot imagine a monkey's blushing, or worrying because he had stolen a banana. The other factor is the Demon of the Absolute. Why insist on three or four categories when two will do. The only possible reason for insisting is that two will not do. If there happen to be four, we only make fools of ourselves by dogmatically declaring there are only two. Facts are very stubborn things.

THE THIRD LEVEL on which man lives is the human. He is able to reason using abstract concepts. He has perfected a system of writing and by the principles of logic can test the validity of his deductions. He has created various forms of art and science. He knows how to build bridges and airplanes, yes, and poison gas machines. Most wonderful of all he can look at himself objectively; he has what we call self-consciousness; he knows himself to be an independent center of thought and will and affection; in other words, he is a person.

It is well for us to see this, for then the term "natural" takes on a different connotation from what it has when applied to other animals. Our nature is different from theirs. To justify a subhuman action on the plea that we are animals becomes just as silly as it would be for us to wait for someone to pull us out of the way of a forest fire because we are dust, and dust never gets out of the way of a forest fire unless the winds blows it, or some other physical force disturbs it.

Once more it is not necessary to conclude, as the humanists do, that since we are men we are nothing more. Mr. Bertrand Russell and many others, who have a great fear of the supernatural, claim that man is the crown of creation, the highest thing that exists. The result of this kind of argument is to make man a kind of disillusioned and unpriestly Melchizedec, without father or mother, but unlike the biblical character, with no future or responsibility. Mr. Russell is a man of great faith. He believes that for some unknown reason, probably by blind chance, the evolutionary process has brought into existence the human race whose stay on this planet is, geologically speaking, to be very short, for in a few million years the race is to be blotted out, frozen to death. All our art, our science, our morality mean nothing. So the best we can do is to comfort one another until the end comes. As a mere matter of preference Mr. Russell has a certain code of ethics; but the code is no more permanent than he is. He hopes that his code makes him more comfortable, and contributes to the happiness of his fellows; but if his neighbor happens to be a gangster, by no logic is he able to condemn his depredations. All Mr. Russell can do is to trust that he has more influence than the gentleman from Chicago; for if he has not, the gangster may move in on him and take his wife and property. All goodness and truth and beauty are human creations, and a criminal may be just as good at free creation as an English professor of mathematics. Humanism's denial of anything higher than man looks as though it would simplify life; but far from it. It reduces us to pessimism which has no answers to the questions which we, as human beings, are most anxious to have answered. Beware of the Demon of the Absolute.

FINALLY, we live on a divine level: we are sons of God. "As we bear the image of the earthy, we also bear the image of the heavenly." The ancient story has it that God breathed life into man. It was not change or evolution (which is only a name for a process) that created us—but God.

The elements of the divine in us are just as distinctive as the elements of physical matter or animal organization. Think of them for a few moments. First there is conscience. We know that we ought to do what is right; and are ashamed when we have done what we believe to be wrong. Now conscience is not the creation of reason; in fact it often defies reason. It is innate. Then there is the impulse to worship and the exaltation that comes from true worship. One of the hardest things that the naturalists and the humanists have to explain is this natural instinct to bow before some higher power. If man is the ultimate product of the universe, it would seem that he ought to recognize himself for what he is—God incarnate; but not only crude and ignorant men spurn such a thought, but the loveliest, the wisest and the best of human kind have lifted up their hands in prayer. Moses, Buddha, Jesus, and even Confucius, who, although chiefly concerned with social values, recognized that there was a God and said that honor was due Him. Next the sense of values. It is only by a tour de force that men convince themselves that goodness, truth and beauty are only relative. The average man does not question that the Good Samaritan did right, and that the robbers did wrong; that there is some innate relationship between mathematics and geometry on the one hand and the physical universe on the other; that there is something eternally satisfying about an American beauty rose, the carvings of Phidias, and Lake Louise when the shadows of the setting sun play upon it. Finally, there is the conviction as to the preciousness of human love and the reasonableness of immortality. All these things speak of God and make us know that about human life there is something sacred. It is only perversity that makes us blind to these facts. Or perhaps it is the devil, who now and again garbs himself in the shining robes of the Demon of the Absolute.

But, as in the other cases, we must not concentrate upon our divine nature to the exclusion of the other levels on which we live. Occasionally persons do this, and because they have grasped that most essential aspect of our being, they call themselves by flattering names—mystics, spiritually minded souls, perfectionists, absolutists, and tell us that they have risen above the world, and left behind all hate and rancor and selfishness and animal desires. This is the worst of all sins—spiritual pride.

Why God has willed that we live on four levels no man can say; but the fact remains. We cannot be what God wants us to be if we try to live on one level. To the law of each level we must render due respect. This means a constant, and unending struggle for harmony. When the adjustment is not attained, the flesh warreth against the spirit, and our material limitations are a handicap. Psychologically it is just as well that most of the time we forget about the battle, for self-consciousness is another term for self-centeredness; but it is wisdom to know what the situation is, that we live in four kingdoms; but actually they are not rival kingdoms, for they all belong to God; they

The Christian Doctrine of Man

Forward in Service in its plan of action for 1943-1944, makes the suggestion that the parochial Schools of Christian Social Action be held during Lent. The Commission further suggests that parish rectors preach a series of sermons on the Christian Doctrine of Man the five Sundays in Lent. Adequate material, (adequate in the sense that it is suggestive) has been sent to all diocesan Forward in Service Chairmen, and through them is supposed to be passed on to individual clergymen. Knowing the individualistic tendencies of the clergy fairly well, we doubt if many of them will follow this suggestion. We think that is a pity. We believe that it would be extremely helpful both to the clergy and laity of this church if the emphasis of this church, in a connected way, was placed upon the Christian doctrine of man for this Lenten season.

Very wisely, Forward in Service has left the door open for a varied interpretation of the material given to the clergy. This is as it should be. But the important thing is that we should be perfectly clear in our belief in man's place in this chaotic universe. W. MacNeile Dixon in the Gifford Lectures of 1935-37, delivered under the title, The Human Situation, writes: "Briefly and broadly the issue is what it has always been and always will be, the age-long issue between naturalism and supernaturalism. In the end everything melts into the cosmic background. All enquiries lead to the one enquiry. The great debate circles round a few words—good and evil, the soul, immortality, God. Interesting, is it not, that religion, though never more discredited, still remains a matter of universal interest? As in the last war, there were engagements and encounters on many lands and many seas, which would in themselves have been senseless and unintelligible save in their relation to a single and central issue—the victory of Germany or the Allies, so in the mental world the various disputes and conflicts in many fields, which appear wholly remote from religion, are, in fact, closely related to a single foundamental issue. Dr. Dixon then states in simple, familiar language that fundamental issue—"What is man's chief end?"

Today, we would not accept without further inquiry the answer given in the Scottish Catechism. But as Christians, we would answer that man is made for fellowship with God and with his fellowman. If we believe this to be true, it is supremely important that we state it in terms understandable by modern man, and not only state it but act upon it.

To even the unthinking all problems are human problems. People are important. It is the relationship of individuals to individuals and groups of individuals to other groups of individuals that matters most. Is it not the preservation of some political, economic or social theory that matters? If a better political, social, or economic theory can be found that will bring the relationship of man to man into the realm of mutual helpfulness and respect, we should welcome it. It is men that count, and they count because in the Christian doctrine of God, man is a potential child of God.

There are two, among many problems, that confront us today, that give point to the importance of having a right view of man's place in the universe. On April first the doors of Palestine will be closed to Jewish immigration. The Balfour Declaration of twenty-five years ago is being repudiated.

The dignity of the sovereign powers of a great nation is more important than the haven that might be given to a harassed people. When cease firing sounds, the whole question of what to do with the people of Germany and Japan will be played up by the leaders. What will be our reaction as Christians? Will we be prepared to bring Christian influence to bear? On this latter point we recommend the reading of Louis Nizer's short book, "What to Do With Germany?" (Ziff-Davis Publishing Co.). We are not endorsing the plan set forth by Mr. Nizer. We are suggesting that it will give any sincere Christian food for thought. We cannot approach any of these problems intelligently unless we ground ourselves in the Christian doctrine of man.

It is our hope that many rectors will follow the suggestions of Forward in Service, and teach through open forum, class discussion, and the pulpit the Christian doctrine of man during this Lenten season.

The Red Cross

The Red Cross is known throughout the world. It is respected by all nations. As its slogan of a few years ago proclaimed—It is "the Greatest Mother of All."

There is no secular organization that enjoys the prestige of the American Red Cross. In times of peace, as well as in times of war, does its work for the benefit of mankind, regardless of race, color, or creed. One could write reams describing its varied services during the period of war. That is not our purpose in this brief editorial. We just wish to remind you that during the month of March, the American Red Cross is going to ask you to share in its work. We may not be able to give of our services, we all can share a bit of material possessions to send some one else to help on the far flung battlefronts. As an international agency we may often underrate the value of the Red Cross in building up better relationships, between the nations of the world, even in the midst of war.

BOOK NOTES

By the Faculty of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific. Edited by Randolph Crump Miller.

THE BEGINNING OF CHRISTIANITY, by Clarence Tucker Craig, Professor of New Testament, Oberlin Graduate School of Theology. Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, 1943. 366 pp. $2.75.

From its title, one might suppose this to be another history of primitive Christianity, like the monumental works of Weiss, Foakes-Jackson, and Lietzmann. Instead, it is a forceful and novel introduction to the writings of the New Testament. Professor Craig believes that the traditional type of introduction, with its almost exclusive emphasis on literary questions, is gravely inadequate. He, therefore, touches lightly on such matters, and in their place he stresses the religion and history of primitive Christianity, as these bear on the contents of the New Testament. The influence of Formgeschichte on the approach is evident.

To be sure, nearly everything in the book may be found elsewhere. Its supreme value lies in bringing scattered materials together in convenient, readable form; in showing how the New Testament writings are precipitates from the religious and historical events of Christianity's infancy; and in doing these in a way that is suitable for the beginning student. And the style is so clear, limpid, even pedestrian, that one wonders whether the author had graduates or undergraduate college students in mind as his chief readers.

A blurb on the jacket describes the book's "uncompromising scholarship," and it is, in fact, thoroughly scholarly and up-to-date in its presentation. Withal, a warm faith pulses through it. As examples of the fine combination of religious warmth with historical precision may be mentioned the discussions of the Kingdom (especially pp. 89f.), the Resurrection (134ff.) and the conversion of Paul (162ff.).

To this reviewer the book seems deficient in its discussion of the Jewish branch of primitive Christianity, though Professor Craig is by no means alone in this respect. He seems to say (p. 137) that we know Jewish Christianity almost exclusively through the book of Acts. In fact, however, the Tannaitic parts of the Talmud, one or two apocryphal gospels, Justin's Dialog with Trypho, and some other sources, are available. From them may be deduced a consistent and by no means scanty description of this important part of the Christian heritage.

The book contains a few misprints.

FROM VICTORY TO PEACE, by Paul Hutchinson. Willett, Clark. $1.50.

This is not just a book of religious assurances and Christian hopes; it is, rather, a combination of political realism and Christian idealism which could make possible a lasting peace. When the author wants to demonstrate the possibility of achieving a peace which includes Christian ideals, he uses secular statements concerning their possibility rather than quotations from ecclesiastical statesmen. But he is not blind to the problems facing democratic leadership to the lobbies of veterans and all the usual vested interests which will be seeking government handouts, to the complexities of a transition to peace-time industry and agriculture, and to the international agreements. The demands of the great conferences on a just and durable peace are carefully examined (and the full texts of six famous statements are included in the appendix). With the ideal of a world community held firmly in mind, the author faces the problems of power politics, imperialism, racial prejudice, hunger, armaments, and the treatment of enemies. "Practically every condition laid down by the Christian church as the price of a just and lasting peace has the agreement, the approval of men who live at the very center of 'practical' affairs." But it is the Church's duty to proclaim its prophetic insights even if the world will not listen, and man can respond if he will. This book is modern prophecy, endowed with wisdom, hope, and the realism which makes prophecy Christian. It may be too much to hope for its realization, but the Church must proclaim its Gospel and seek out hearers.

R. C. Miller.

BOYS AND GIRLS AT WORSHIP, by Marie Cole Powell. Harpers. $2.00.

This book provides abundant materials for worship, filled with imagination, variety, and depth of meaning for children aged 9-14. One may use the book almost as it stands for more informal types of worship, but the richness of the book lies in its great resources of stories, prayers, hymns, and poems which may be used in the framework of almost any type of service. The author has included many of her own stories as well as outstanding materials by others. It is all in good taste, rich in devotional power, and relates the Christian religion to the everyday life of boys and girls. Four indices make the book extremely usable as a resource volume. For Episcopalians who follow the Prayer Book and Hymnal, there are suggestions for hymns which may be found in the 1940 Hymnal which might otherwise remain unused; there are stories for the sermonette period or for class time; there are suggestions which might be incorporated by teachers who close their classes or units with services of worship; and there are suggested unison readings which might be used as part of almost any service.

THIS CREATED WORLD is the Presiding Bishop's book for Lent this year. It is written by the Rev. Theodore P. Ferris, rector of Trinity Church, Boston, and has a foreword by Bishop Tucker. It is published by Harper & Bros.; price, $1.50 for single copies, or $1.25 a copy when purchased in quantities of ten or more. The book is theological, without being beyond the capacity of lay readers. Its primary tenet is that if we are to save ourselves, we must devote ourselves to This Created World beyond ourselves. Religion must turn its face outward toward the world. The book presents a forward look, suggesting that the Church must spread planet-wide a new vision of God in Christ. Christian knowledge is essentially a fellowship, and missions are an inevitable aspect of the Gospel.

Russian Ally as we should. We recognize the fact that there are deep-seated prejudices in the minds of many people, as regard this ally, her future intents and purposes. These prejudices were reared in the period of the Revolution, and in the days of the solidifying by the Russians, of the gains of the revolution.

There were and there are many Christian people who are bitter in their denunciation of communism. It is an historic fact that the early leaders of the Russian Revolution were definitely anti-religious. We are no authority on Russia. We have to depend upon available authoritative sources. We do know that it is important that we inform ourselves on what is happening in Russia. The peace of the world will be affected in large measure by the good or bad relationship that will, after this war, exist between the people of the United States and the people of Russia.

We recommend the reading of the February issue of Survey Geographic by all thoughtful people. We suggest especially the article, "Spiritual Resurgence in Soviet Russia." This article will help us all to think straight in our approach from a Christian point of view to our great ally, Russia. May all of us do what we can to bring about a better understanding of Russia. It is important.

HOW "BLACKIE" FOUND A HOME

Blackie was a little black puppy except for his paws, which were white. His fur was like black satin and he had a little white star on his forehead. He had great big dark eyes and he was hardly seven weeks old. He was very unhappy. He ran here and there and could not find his home. He couldn't remember very much about his home, but he knew that he had been warm, that he had some little brothers and sisters to play with and that he always had plenty to eat. Now he was lonely and so hungry. He was lost.

It began to rain. Blackie ran up to a step and whined softly. A big man came to the door and said: "Shoo," so loud that Blackie hurried away and hid behind a bush. He was so frightened he didn't know what to do.

Then he saw a woman with a big basket. He smelled something good. He followed her about a block. Then he began a happy little bark. The woman turned, stamped her foot hard and said: "Doggy, go home!" She opened a gate and went in, shutting the gate very tight. Then she said again: "Go home."

Poor little Blackie! He felt so lonely when the gate clicked tight. If he could only find a good warm home. If somebody only wanted a little, lonely, lost doggy. As he stood waiting, two big dogs began to chase him. He was frightened and ran down an alley and hid behind a big box until the dogs ran away.

He was there quite a while. Then he heard some soft voices. He crept up to the street. Blackie saw a woman and a girl. They had kind faces. One had white hair. The other, golden brown hair. Maybe, they were kind, thought Blackie. Perhaps they wanted a little dog. Blackie crept up softly and followed them. He was so lonely and so hungry.

Suddenly, the girl turned and saw Blackie.

"Oh, Mother, look at the little stray dog. Why he's shivering."

"Poor little puppy," said the mother. "How lonesome he looks."

"Mother, I'm going to take him home and feed him."

The girl with the golden brown hair lifted Blackie carefully and carried him home.

Soon he was drinking some warm milk. It tasted so good that soon he felt himself getting sleepy. He curled up on a little rug and went right to sleep. Happy little Blackie!

After a time, he heard a telephone bell. The little girl was speaking:

"No, the little dog we found was black with a white star on its forehead and white feet. Sorry, hope you will find your dog."

Then Blackie heard another conversation over the telephone:

"Did you lose a black puppy?"

Blackie listened anxiously. He liked it here. He didn't want to go away.

"Oh, you say your puppy came home last night. We thought this little dog was the one mentioned in the lost column of the newspaper."

Blackie felt better when he heard no more talking over the phone.

For several days Blackie enjoyed his new home but he was always anxious when the telephone rang.

But, one day, he heard something that made his little heart beat happily.

"Daughter, it is two weeks now that we have had this little puppy. We have asked and telephoned and no one has claimed him. How about getting a license for him and calling him our own? He seems to belong to us."

"Oh, Mother, goody. I love him more every day. Perhaps, he was meant for us. Only, I feel sorry for the people who lost him. He is a darling puppy. I'm so happy!"

Little Blackie, stretched, then got up and turned around three times for joy. Soon he was curled up on his rug, fast asleep, without a care in the world. Now, Blackie had a home.—Charlotte Lehman, in Our Dumb Animals.

CARRYING THE POTATOES

The story is told of a poor man who plodded along toward home in an Irish town carrying a huge bag of potatoes. A stranger came along with a horse and wagon, and stopped the wagon and invited the man on foot to climb inside. This the poor man did, but when he sat down in the wagon he held the bag of potatoes in his arms. And when it was suggested that he should set it down, he said very warmly: "Sure, I don't like to trouble you too

Consecration of Dr. Kennedy

6TH BISHOP OF HONOLULU AS TOLD
By S. HARRINGTON LITTELL
Retired Bishop of Honolulu

I know our church people in Hawaii would have greatly liked to attend the consecration service of the new bishop at Colorado Springs. Those who have attended such a service know how moving an experience it is. The central spiritual act of the entire ceremony, the actual laying-on-of-hands by the bishops, conveys also to the worshippers in the congregation the gift and power of the Holy Spirit. On this occasion nine other bishops assisted the consecrator, our Presiding Bishop, the saintly and able leader, Henry St. George Tucker, in the act of consecration.

Grace Church, one of the stately religious buildings in Western America, where Dr. Kennedy has been rector for nearly seven years, was the fitting place for the consecration and was filled with friends, clerical and lay, from many dioceses in the Rocky Mountain area. Bishop Keeler, the preacher, covered a wide field in his sermon, including much about the eighty-two years of the church's work in the Hawaiian Islands.

His text was from the 13th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, verses 2-4. (The selection and sending of Barnabas and Saul as overseas missionaries.) He said: "In the realm of spiritual interests as well as in the secular affairs of men, history repeats itself." Comparing the circumstances of the choosing of Saul and Barnabas for missionary work in the ancient city of Antioch—third largest in the Roman Empire—with that of the calling of Bishop Kennedy and his brother missionaries, Bishop Keeler said: "There is a real relationship between ancient Antioch, Cleveland, (where Dr. Kennedy was elected a bishop), Colorado Springs, and Honolulu. That which concerned them in that scene in ancient Antioch is exactly our concern today. They were a group of Christian disciples concerned with an expanding church, with missionary adventure, and so are we." The force of the Holy Ghost, which descended upon the disciples of old, and followed their missions down through many centuries "was with us in Cleveland, when we separated our brother here for the work to which he has been called, and it is with us today, as, guided by it, we commission him for his work. It will be his in Honolulu." . . "We look at the mighty forces against which the first discoples hurled themselves—the spiritual torpor, the unutterable moral degradation to which they made their appeal, and we wonder both at their audacity and their faith. No hostility daunted them, no indifference discouraged them, no evil intrenched in high places deterred them. When men told them that the work they aimed to do was impossible, they simply refused to believe it. When men said the obstacles confronting them were insurmountable, they simply refused to see them." The bread cast upon the Pacific waters by missionaries decades ago are now paying dividends to the Church. In the Hawaiian Islands the task of the new bishop will be lessened by the fact that "the Episcopal Church has always encouraged ministering to every race, so that race problems, while they will present difficulties for many years to come, are not accentuated or side-stepped there."

Parishioners presented Bishop Kennedy with a pectoral cross, as well as with his episcopal vestments. He wore the beautiful amethyst ring engraved with the seal of the Church of the Hawaiian Islands which has been used by all the bishops there since Bishop Willis' time. They also presented Mrs. Kennedy with a set of luggage for her trip.

The offering was designated for use at Bishop Kennedy's disposal in Honolulu. While it was being given the choir sang "a capella," the superb Palestrina's "Like as the hart desireth the water brooks, even so longeth my soul after Thee, O God."

Representatives of the Army, as was fitting, attended the service. Dr. Kennedy has been Captain-Chaplain of the 11th Armored Division, his last appointment being in the Desert Tank Corps administered from Los Angeles.

Following the service, a Consecration Luncheon was served in the Antlers Hotel. A typical Hawaiian atmosphere was created chiefly through the efforts of Mrs. Menary, a frequent visitor to the Islands. The head table was decorated with poi bowls, articles made of tapa, coral, sea shells and glass ball net-floats. Until the time for the speeches, soft Hawaiian music, both instrumental and vocal, were offered by a good orchestra. "The Song of the Islands", "Little Grass Shack", "Aloha Oe" and other familiar songs, gave more than one of us a longing to be back in Hawaii Nei. Carnation leis, red for the bishop, white for Mrs. Kennedy, were laid on their shoulders, and small colored leis were given to the three boys. The menu was printed, half seriously, and half in fun, in mixed Hawaiian and English. The speeches were appropriate and cordial. The Counsel of Advice, the Governors of Iolani School, parishes and individuals throughout the Islands sent their messages of good-will and godspeed. Bishop Kempthorne of Suva, Fiji, also sent a message on behalf of our next door missionary dioceses. These greetings, in the form of cablegrams, were read by the Rev. Wai On Shim, Vicar of St. Elizabeth's Mission, Honolulu. Emphasis was given throughout the day to the presence of representatives of the Church in Hawaii, who, providentially, were able to be present and take part in the consecration ceremonies, the retired Bishop of Honolulu and the Chinese priest.

All that has been said about Mrs. Kennedy, her attractiveness, her ability, her accepted position in church and community as a charming leader, is all true. I was greatly impressed by her and am immensely happy that the Church in the Islands will have such a winning and capable and motherly bishop's wife as Mrs. Harry Sherbourne Kennedy. I am thankful to God beyond words for raising up such a man and bishop for our American Outpost in the Pacific.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR ADDRESSES ALBANY LAYMEN

Albany, N. Y.—At the annual Laymen's Corporate Communion breakfast on Washington's Birthday, held this year at St. Peter's Church, the Hon. Joe R. Hanley, Lieut. Governor, addressing over one hundred laymen from the local Churches, spoke on the importance of spiritual forces in the nation's life. Another speaker was Mr. Edw. W. Mitchell, of St. Paul's Church, Kinderhook, who recently represented the diocese at the conference of the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work. Mr. Mitchell is a farmer and regularly broadcasts on agricultural programs over WGY. He is also an active lay reader and emphasized the opportunities for lay service, especially during the war period with its shortage of clergy.

For several years laymen from a wider area have attended the Washington's Birthday Communion, but war restrictions on travel have limited the gathering to Churchmen from the Capital District. Bishop Oldham was the celebrant and the city clergy were in attendance.

CLERGY FIGHT ANTI-SEMITISM AMONG BOSTON JUVENILES

Boston, Mass.—A flurry of rowdyism, mainly among boys in their early teens with animus directed against Jews, caused a group of Episcopal clergy of the Diocese of Massachusetts to urge through local newspapers that Christians and Jews make efforts to form personal friendships with each other as the most effective way of cleansing hearts of prejudice and bridging the gap of ignorance that tends to form between groups. The Governor of Massachusetts has appointed a special committee to deal with the same problem, the Massachusetts Council of Churches has made a supporting pronouncement, and local editorials have lauded the efforts of the Roman Catholics, Protestants and Jews in cooperation with the authorities, toward assuring that the petty disturbances remain no more than petty through inter-faith action and enforcement of law.

SAMUEL G. WELLES ATTACHE AT EMBASSY IN LONDON

New York, N. Y.—Samuel G. Welles, former Religious Editor of "Time" Magazine, and more recently with the State Department in Washington, has arrived safely in England, according to a cable received by his mother, Mrs. Samuel G. Welles. Mr. Welles, always an enthusiastic Churchman, and always most cooperative in the handling of Episcopal Church news, has been sent to England by the State Department to be an attache at the American Embassy in Grosvenor Square, London.

Mr. Welles is the son of the late Canon Samuel G. Welles, for twenty years executive officer of the New Jersey diocesan department of Social Service, and Canon of Trinity Cathedral, Trenton. His brother is the Rev. Edward R. Welles, new dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo. He is thirty years old, graduate of Kent School and Princeton, with work as a Rhodes scholar at University College, Oxford, England. He has traveled widely through the British Isles, and on the Continent, including the Scandinavian countries, the Balkans, the Mediterranean and the Aegean areas.

REV. W. P. MORSE ARRIVES IN KUNMING

New York, N. Y.—A cable to the National Council's overseas department sent by Mr. Arthur J. Allen, mission treasurer in Kunming, states that the Rev. Walter P. Morse has safely arrived there and that his medical supplies were expected to arrive shortly. This will be welcome news both to Mr. Morse's friends and to the many people who assisted him in securing the medical supplies. He expects to go on to Hunan province.

The Rev. Quentin Huang, Mr. Allen adds, is recovering from a serious attack of typhus. Mr. Huang, formerly of Nanchang, has been on the mission staff since 1928 and in recent years has been carrying an extremely heavy burden of work in the new center at Kweiyang, free China.

HOW DOES THE PARSON SPEND HIS SPARE TIME?

Salisbury, Eng.—Slightly nettled by a "Young Thing's" question, "What do clergymen do during the week?" the rector of St. Martin's, Salisbury, replied: "My dear, you'd be surprised."

"You must visit everyone in the parish whether they have any use for you or your religion or not.

"You must have some sixth sense that tells you when any of your parishioners is ill, and must visit them at once without being sent for.

"You must answer all notes and letters by return post. You must be on the telephone, and be in when anyone rings up—otherwise they lose a penny.

"You must attend every meeting, support every charity, and throw yourself heart and soul into every social organization.

"You must be and do exactly what your predecessor was and did.

"And when you are not rushing around the parish you should be taking a service, preparing a sermon, hearing confessions, saying your Office, struggling with a stubborn boy, writing your magazine matter, choosing hymns, baptizing, marrying, burying, teaching in schools, trying to raise money—or even saying your prayers.

"In your spare time you might take a little recreation."

SHIP'S CAPTAIN IS ACTING CHAPLAIN

New York, N. Y.—A battalion somewhere in the Pacific, has no chaplain, according to an Episcopal Church headquarters officer, but, he says, the Captain has taken over the functions of a chaplain, with fine effectiveness. As an example, he quotes from a letter written by the Captain to the wife of a soldier reported missing, and probably dead: "We wish we could adequately express to you our feelings of sympathy. Knowing how deeply his absence has been felt by his comrades, we can appreciate how much more deeply he will be missed by his loved ones at home.

"Please keep your faith and hope that God is taking care of him. Although it is probable that he has paid the supreme sacrifice in the service of his country, we know of no one who was better prepared in all ways, mentally, morally and spiritually, to take his place in Heaven above."

"Could any Chaplain do better?" asked the Church official.

GIFT TO FREE CHINA

New York, N. Y.—"A friend gave me a crocheted bedspread which I succeeded in selling for $25," says a letter to the National Council from Miss Elizabeth Barber, Washington Grove, Md. Miss Barber is a constant giver to the missionary work of the Church and is particularly interested in the work being done by the Rev. Kimber H. K. Den in free China. The $25 will help that work.

HALF-CENTURY AND QUARTER-CENTURY CELEBRATIONS AT EMMANUEL CHURCH

Staunton—In June, 1893, a young clergyman named Robert Carter Jett was called from Beckford Parish in Shenandoah County, Virginia, to be the first rector of Emmanuel Church, in Staunton, just then being organized as a separate congregation within Augusta Parish.

The Rev. Mr. Jett remained at Em-

Liberty Ship, the Peter Trimble Rowe, has just been launched, with two Bishops of the Episcopal Church taking part in the ceremony. They were Bishops Karl M. Block, of California, and Benjamin D. Dagwell, of Oregon, who shared in honoring the famous pioneer Bishop of Alaska for whom the ship is named. Bishop Rowe was for 46 years the spiritual leader in Alaska's civil and religious life.

manuel twenty years, resigning in 1913 to found the Virginia Episcopal School at Lynchburg. On March 24, 1920, after having served as the first rector of that school, he was consecrated as the first bishop of the new Diocese of Southwestern Virginia.

In 1938 Bishop Jett retired from active service, that is, technically speaking. In actual fact he is one of the most active "retired" bishops that anybody knows, responding frequently to calls from bishops of neighboring dioceses for assistance in visitations, and finding numberless occasions to be useful and helpful.

As rector of Emmanuel, Staunton, "Mr. Jett", as he was and still is affectionately called by his parishioners there, was succeeded by the Rev. William G. McDowell, who served five years and was later Bishop of Alabama.

In 1918 the Rev. J. Lewis Gibbs became rector of Emmanuel Church. He is also Chaplain and Professor of Religious Education at Stuart Hall and Managing Editor of the diocesan paper, the Southwestern Episcopalian.

On January 22 and 23 the congregation of Emmanuel celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its establishment and the coming of "Mr. Jett" and the twenty-fifth year of the rectorship of Dr. Gibbs.

The Bishop was the principal speaker at the congregational dinner on Saturday evening, presided over by Mr. Herbert McK. Smith, one of the "charter members" of Emmanuel. Also the Bishop preached the sermon at the Sunday morning service.

On these occasions he recounted most interestingly the early and later history of Emmanuel and his happy associations with its membership and the other people of Staunton. He spoke, too, of his active part in the organization of other churches in Augusta County: St. Mary's at Basic (now dormant), St. John's at Waynesboro, Emmanuel Chapel at Verona and the Church of The Good Shepherd at Folly Mills.

At the dinner the congregation presented a token of their affection to Bishop Jett and a "handsome purse"—especially handsome on the inside—to the Rev. Doctor Gibbs.

THEY WRITE TO SERVICE MEN

Birmingham, Ala.—The Episcopal Diocese of Alabama, as a part of its service to men and women in the Nation's service, mails over 1,400 letters each month to Alabama Church people away from home. The letters, Bishop Charles C. J. Carpenter says, go all over the world, and certainly they are welcomed on every battle front.

CHURCH CENTER PROVIDES WHOLESOME RECREATION

Hays, Kans.—Mothers of high school students are organized as a group here to provide decent recreation for their boys and girls. Under leadership of the Rev. Douglas R. MacLaury, vicar of St. Andrew's and St. Michael's Episcopal Churches, a student center and a program including a wide variety of events has drawn more than 2,000 youngsters in its first ten weeks. With high school students for committees, mothers as friendly hostesses, a college faculty to teach dancing, and the inevitable juke box and coke machine, the student recreation center is not only doing much to prevent delinquency but is helping to build up wholesome relationships. The crowd has had to be divided into junior and senior groups as space is too limited to admit all who try to come. Confirmation classes and choir rehearsals are Episcopal Church events, but the center is open to all young people of the community.

TRINITY CHURCH DAMAGED BY FIRE

New Orleans, La.—Damage estimated at $1,000 was caused by a fire in Trinity Church on Sunday afternoon, February 13, as preparations were being made for the usual Sunday afternoon open house for service men. The fire resulted from a defective flue and was confined to the Coliseum Street wall of the Church building. Little damage was done to the pews and floors, and the handsome stained glass windows just above the location of the fire were, fortunately, undamaged. The loss was fully covered by insurance.

THE SOUTHWESTERN EPISCOPALIAN CHANGES POLICY

The Diocese of Southwestern Virginia has made a radical change in regard to its official organ, The Southwestern Episcopalian.

It was found that on the subscription basis heretofore used the paper was not reaching a sufficiently large proportion of the people in the Diocese, so the Council determined upon a new system of distribution.

Beginning with the issue of "January-February, 1944" the paper is being sent free to every family and detached individual in the diocese, but is published six times a year instead of monthly as in the past.

It is believed that this new plan will greatly increase the interest and information of the people of the diocese in the activities of the Church in Southwestern Virginia and the various mission fields.

The Rev. J. Lewis Gibbs, D. D., Staunton, Virginia, is Managing Editor.

LIBERIAN GOVERNMENT DRAFTS CLERGYMEN

New York, N. Y.—Two Liberian clergymen have been drafted by the Government, Bishop Leopold Kroll notifies the National Council, saying that the inauguration of the new President, His Excellency William S. V. Tubman, "is going to hit me pretty hard." The Rev. J. W. Pearson, of Cape Palmas, and the Rev. F. A. K. Russell, of Bassa, will take up their duties with the new Government administration almost immediately.

At the Inauguration of President Tubman, Bishop and Mrs. Kroll were honored guests, and sat on the platform at the ceremony, also attended the Presidential ball and a dinner given in honor of Admiral Grassford, U. S. N., who represented the President of the United States.

CHURCH IN AFRICA GRATEFUL FOR HELP

New York, N. Y.—The Universities Mission to Central Africa in acknowledging its share of the second installment of the 1943 Aid to British Missions expresses through the Rev. Canon G. W. Broomfield, D. D., its General Secretary, the deepest appreciation of the help of the Church in the United States.

"This is magnificent help once again," he says, "and our gratitude is beyond words. The money you have sent us during the difficult years of the war has enabled us to carry on our work in Africa without diminution for financial reasons since the beginning of 1940. Now, as the peace draws rapidly nearer, the Church in Africa is faced with greater responsibilities and opportunities for advancement than ever before. The Bishops of the four dioceses which this Mission supports are formulating post-war plans which will need much new money for their execution, and they will be vastly encouraged on learning of the continued generosity of the American Episcopal Church. On their behalf, as well as on that of the supporters of U. M. C. A. in this country, please accept this expression of deep and sincere thanks."

AMERICAN BUILDING FUND COMMISSION LOOKING FORWARD

New York, N. Y.—Like so many other agencies of the Church, the American Church Building Fund Commission is looking forward to opportunities after the war. A statement issued by the Board of Trustees says, "The almost complete cessation in the construction of church buildings, since priorities on building materials went into effect, has limited materially the original purpose of the Building Fund, i. e., aid in the erection of churches. However, under the secured extension of the scope of our work, the aid which has been given during the past year for the few small items for construction, has been supplemented with aid in repairs, improvements, and in the refinancing of mortgage indebtedness occasioned at the time of construction.

"The chief concern of the Commission at the present time is for future operations. In the immediate present we can only carry on along the lines of the past year. But there must be anticipated the more than probable influx of applications for assistance in construction work as soon as priorities on materials are lifted, and post-war building long delayed is brought before us. Already we have learned of a number of instances where sinking funds for this purpose are being built up in individual parishes. There are doubtless many others of which we have not heard. This probable demand, together with growing requests for the refinancing of Church debt of the type we can handle, convinces us that there is large need of an increase of our Permanent Fund to take care of inevitable applications."

In view of the facts stated, the Trustees are appealing for help in building up the Fund. Attention is called to the resolution of General Convention which recommended "that every church and mission make at least one offering each year for the advancement of the work of the American Church Building Fund Commission and the continuance of its beneficent activities."

CHURCH IN SOU. BRAZIL REPORTS GOOD YEAR

New York, N. Y.—A very successful year is reported for the Church in Southern Brazil by Bishop William M. M. Thomas, in a summary of 1943 sent to the Presiding Bishop.

Offerings for all purposes were 13% larger than in the preceding year, the Bishop says, and adds that in Rio the increase was 17%, in the Japanese work it was 32%, and in new work in Parana, 140%.

Both the Southern Cross and St. Margaret's Schools had good years, though the Bishop is troubled by a government regulation requiring playgrounds under cover at both schools, and a running track 60 meters long at St. Margaret's. The latter seems impossible as there is not room for it without purchasing additional land. "The government regulations require more than either school possesses in the way of equipment," Bishop Thomas says.

In spite of high cost of building, some progress has been made. St. Peter's Chapel at Sete Barras is nearing completion. This was made possible by the 1942 Youth Offering, the Mission Study Class of the Woman's Auxiliary in the Diocese of Pennsylvania, and the gift of land by a churchman. At Bilac a parish hall has been converted into a rectory. At Pereira Barreto a parish house has been built. In Sao Paulo St. John's parish house and rectory were completed. Three-fourths of the funds were given locally, and the remainder by the American Church Building Fund and a gift through the National Council. A country chapel has been built by a churchman and deeded to the Church. It is connected with the Church of the Redemption at Sao Gabriel. Finally the Bishop reports the opening last year of two small homes for aged women, both of which he believes will develop into important institutions.

FLIERS GO FOR BISHOP'S WAFFLES

New York, N. Y.—American fliers finding themselves in Kunming, China, are overjoyed to go to Bishop Y. Y. Tsu's house for breakfast. There Mrs. Tsu plies them with crisp brown waffles. Our united front has been brought vividly to my people," says the Bishop, now visiting in the United States, "by the presence of your magnificent airfighters. It is our good fortune to know a number of these young men. We have them in our home and in our Church. I have preached at their Sunday services and visited their Army hospital. It is my special joy that in this trip to America, I have been asked by some to carry personal messages to their families."

MEMORIAL FLAGS ON ALTAR

Buffalo, N. Y.—Members of St. John's Lutheran Church, Buffalo, were asked recently to present small American flags in memory of loved ones in the nation's service. The flags were placed on a small Memorial Altar, and were the center of attention at a special service held recently. The Church membership was asked to share in the service, first by presenting one of the small flags in memory of a loved one, and, second, by attending the service and urging their friends and relatives to come also, to join in prayers for those absent in the nation's service.

Nome, Alaska—A ski-going Chaplain hailing from the deep South is ministering to service men stationed in the icy Alaskan wilderness north of Nome. He is Chaplain Julius A. Pratt, formerly in charge of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, New Orleans, La.

Chaplain Pratt travels some 35 miles per week, either on skis or behind a dog team. He carries with him a portable altar, Bible, Prayer Book and change of warm clothes. Once, he relates, the thermometer dropped so low that his Communion wine froze solid.

FIRE LOSSES TO CHURCHES ARE LARGELY PREVENTABLE

New York, N. Y.—Causes of fires in church buildings has been the subject of a study by the Episcopal Church Properties Fire Insurance Company, over a period of thirteen years. The study showed that in the case of 164 fires, the cause was never known; 126 were caused by lightning; 103 by defective flues and sparks from chimneys; 53 from cigarettes, cigars and matches; 51 from defective electrical wiring; 47 from overheated or defective furnaces or stoves; 44 from altar candles or censers; 25 from trash and ashes; 25 from fireplaces or grate fires. Among the remaining causes, the report concludes, were "brush fires, blow torches, fire crackers, spontaneous combustion, explosion, vandalism, mice nibbling matches, and incendiarism. There were also 396 losses from windstorm and hail."

HOGS GROW FOR EDUCATION

Lawrenceville, Va.—One of the big crops at St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute is hogs. This school for Negroes, sponsored by the Episcopal Church, operates a highly successful farm. A. H. Turner, financial officer of the Institute says that hogs are money-makers in an almost unbelievable way. "In 90 days," he says, "we can make a 100 pound shoat weigh 300 pounds. We can do this at a cost of only $6.00 for food, so that shoat and food will cost $21.00. This hog will bring $42.00." At present the herd at St. Paul's numbers 800, from tiny piglings to mammoths of 800 pounds.

The Rev. John D. Bodger, Church of England missionary in New Guinea, is making a short visit in the United States and Canada. He has been in the heart of a battle area, and has led his mission-trained Christian natives in a wide variety of services to the Allied troops, these ranging from building landing strips for planes to finding and caring for wounded. He has a letter from General MacArthur expressing "deep appreciation" for the services performed in assisting the armed forces in Papua.

LT. ROBERT GORDON HOLLOWAY, U. S. A. A. F., of Fredericksburg, Virginia, one of five pilots flying a Fortress on routine training flight, was killed when his plane was destroyed by an explosion of unknown origin on September 5, 1943.

Lt. Holloway, grandson of Robert Gordon of "Santee", Caroline County, and E. May Dickinson, for many years prominent members of the church, was born at "Santee" on October 24, 1921. His paternal grandparents were Dr. Robert Green Holloway, who served in the Confederate Army, and Eliza Spindell Amiss, five of whose brothers served also in the Medical Corps of the Confederate Army.

He was married August 1, 1943, to Miss Frances Brookes Inglis of Fredericksburg.

Lt. Holloway is survived by his widow, his grandmother, Mrs. Gordon, his parents, Dr. J. Minor Holloway and Fanny Corbin Gordon, two brothers, J. Minor, Jr., and Forest Byrd Holloway who is serving with the Airborne Artillery at Camp Polk, La.

MONTGOMERY HOLDS CITY-WIDE MISSION

Montgomery, Ala.—A city-wide preaching mission, sponsored by the three parishes January 30 to February 4, was conducted by the Rev. Edward G. Mullen, formerly of the Missionary District of the Philippines, now rector of Trinity Church, Florence, Alabama. Well planned publicity by mail, in the newspapers and over the radio, preceded the mission. Expenses were provided for by contributions in advance, so that only one offering was taken, on the closing day, and the proceeds have been given to the youth work of the diocese.

Morning services were held in the Church of the Ascension, which is in the residential section of the city, and night services were held in downtown St. John's Church. As a result of the mission, confirmation classes are being held in the parishes. The Rev. William A. Thompson, then rector of the Church of the Holy Comforter, now of Philadelphia, was general chairman for the undertaking.

Precious Stones

A tribute in Winnsboro Blue Granite marks the height of memorial perfection for its durability and its beauty cannot be excelled.

The beautiful colors of Winnsboro Blue Granite come from the various crystals it contains, which are identical in substance to many of the finest of precious stones and jewels of the order of the amethyst and moonstone. When the surface of this granite,—which is a composite of these actual precious stone crystals,—is highly polished, all the scintillating beauty and color of these jewels become visible.

parish has made unusual growth under his care, with increase in every line of activity. He is on the diocesan board of Examining Chaplains and is chairman of the convention committee on constitution and canons. Mr. Brunton stated that he probably would not again take full charge of a parish, but for six months of summer would live in his Canadian home, taking part time duty in St. Bartholomew's Church, Toronto. The Rev. John E. Culmer, of St. Agnes' Parish, Miami, Fla., has been appointed by Bishop Wing as Archdeacon of Negro work in South Florida. He will have the supervision under the Bishop of all the colored clergy and congregations in the diocese, while continuing as rector of his Miami parish. He has spent his entire ministry in South Florida. When ordained by Bishop Mann in 1919, he was appointed to St. James' mission, Tampa, where he served until going to St. Agnes', Miami, in 1929, where there has been a remarkable advance under his charge. This mission became a parish by action of convention in 1943, when Rev. Mr. Culmer was elected a deputy to General Convention. There are now twenty congregations of colored people in South Florida, served by eight clergymen, a total membership of 4,721, of whim 3,678 have been confirmed, and the total value of colored churches, rectories, parish houses and schools is listed as $343,155.

Bishop Wing said: "The magnitude of our colored work in South Florida seems all the greater when comparison of statistics indicate it is numerically larger than the work reported in some of the continental missionary districts."

MARIA PENDLETON DUVAL

An Appreciation

The death of Miss Maria Pendleton Duval was a loss to family and friends. Her life of devotion to duty, her high ideals, her unusual capacity, her love of life, and of human beings, combined to make her a valuable figure in church and in state. For many years she was known as the successful principal of our church school in Staunton, Va., and as the founder of Saint Hilda's Hall in Charles Town, W. Va. Since she retired she has lived at her home, Oakhurst, University, Va. "Her death is the passing of a great woman."

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

Only on the basis of a Divine love that reaches down to the lowest sinner, to lift him up, can the complete love of God be understood.
—Dr. Geo. Mecklenburg.

"The best peace insurance in the world is the furthering of the Church and the extension of its mission."

If every man's internal care
Were written on his brow,
How many who our envy share
Would have our pity now!

Never hesitate to call upon God. Never doubt that He hears. Never doubt that in His own way He will deliver. If we call upon Him, He will always do far above all we can ask or think. —Dr. C. E. Macartney.

Great are the symbols of being, but that which is symboled is greater;
Vast the create and beheld, but vaster the inward Creator.
—R. Healf.

To the man who knows not to what port he sails, no wind is favorable.
—Seneca.

Once the whole Christian movement depended on a few men around a supper table in an upper room; but now a great heritage is ours, and millions of us have caught at least a little of His spirit and meaning, who sat that night at the table's head.
—Dr. H. E. Fosdick.

No eighteenth century doctrine about entangling foreign alliances will serve us now. We are entangled: for the duration, not of the war, but of mankind. —Dr. Paul Sherer.

Jesus announced that life is eternal, that life in God is independent of time and death. He taught that "he that knoweth the Father hath everlasting life." It was a new kind of immortality, an immortality of quality of life, an immortality disentangled from the term of our days and years. —Selected.

"Courage is fear that has said its prayers."

Only when we have found God is our humanity fulfilled.
—Rev. Gerald Vann.

Christ is often pictured as an impractical dreamer, an idealist ignorant of the cold realities of this work-a-day world. That is profoundly untrue. He was the most downright and practical realist the world has ever known. Nineteen centuries of human experience have proved that lives and institutions built on His teachings bear infinite fruit and that those built on an opposing philosophy prove ultimately self-defeating, and perish.
—Francis B. Sayre.

YOUR FATHER KNOWETH

It is not faith to trust when all is well.
In confidence to say, when clothed and fed,
And anxious mind at rest, "The Lord is good."
But when the days grow chill, the future dark,
And courage fails to meet the unknown years;
Then if the heart still says "The Lord is good,"
Resting, serene within the Father's arms,
O, that is Faith.

The Rebuilding of Coventry Cathedral

BOLD AND ADVENTUROUS PLANS

FROM THE SPIRITUAL ISSUES OF THE WAR

A remarkably bold and forward-looking plan for the rebuilding of Coventry Cathedral and its environs is announced by the Anglican and Free Church authorities concerned. It represents one of the most adventurous developments in the life of the British Churches in wartime.

As an essential part of the scheme but outside the Cathedral itself, there will be an interdenominational Christian Center, with its own chapel adjoining the Cathedral, and through this Center the Anglican and Free Church leaders will co-operate in joint work to serve the whole community.

The scheme has been approved by the Cathedral Council and by the Coventry Free Church Federal Council. The architect is Sir Giles Gilbert Scott, and the plan includes a church with a central altar. The existing tower and apse which have survived destruction will be incorporated in the scheme, some details of which are dependent on the agreement of the City Council to the sale of a small portion of the site which is at present the property of the city. It is not proposed to issue any formal appeal at present, or indeed until after the war.

Statement by the Bishop of Coventry

The following statement on the proposals is issued by the Bishop of Coventry:—

"Now that plans for the rebuilding of our Cathedral have begun to take shape I want to explain to the people of Coventry and its Diocese what these plans are, and why we have made them.

A People's Cathedral for the New Coventry

"This is what we propose:—

(i) To rebuild the Cathedral as the central church of the Diocese. The Cathedral itself will naturally belong to the Church of England, which will have the sole control of its services.

(ii) To build as an essential part of the Cathedral Scheme a Christian Center of service to the community.

(iii) To set up an Endowment Fund to staff both Cathedral and Christian Center.

(iv) The Free Churches to be invited to a full partnership in the Christian Center with a pooling of resources in its staff personnel.

(v) A special Chapel of Unity attached to the fabric of the Cathedral would connect the Cathedral itself with the Christian Center. This chapel, as a building and a place of worship, would belong to the Free Churches and the Anglicans together.

The Architect's Plan

"Sir Giles Scott's plan is the work of one of the great architects of England at the mature height of his power. He has designed the church round the central altar, in which the religious significance of the building lies. This is not a crank idea. It goes back to the very earliest days of the Christian Church, and it would make the Cathedral in its plan an expression of the best modern theology and ideas of Christian Liturgy of the present day.

"The altar is the symbol of the sacrifice of Christ for the world. Christians are drawn by that sacrifice to offer themselves to Christ and they kneel round the altar. But that altar is also a table where we break the bread and drink the wine with the risen Lord, as a communion or a fellowship of brothers and sisters for whom Christ died. The altar does not belong only to the Clergy; it belongs also to the people. Therefore, set it in the middle of a church and let the people gather round it.

"Our business then is to go out from there as a fellowship to witness to God's truth and give Christian service to others. That is the ideal we want this Cathedral to stand for. That is why, connected with the Cathedral in its worship, we want a Christian Center of service for the needs of Coventry and its diocese.

The Needs of Coventry

"Wave after wave of immigration over 20 years has almost overwhelmed the community sense of Coventry. War has brought into it a flood of strangers from the entire British Isles. The returning fighting man will hardly know its people. He does not know what place he may find in it. Coventry is a center of the war 'Blitz'; it is undoubtedly the symbol of a post-war 'Blitz.' The problem of transition back to peace will be overwhelming for this unformed community unless we can set up some center of Leadership. It is the Church's great chance.

"Eighty per cent of Coventry are without membership of Church or Chapel. They are unrooted even in the secular community of which they form a part. Yet Coventry has shown itself capable of great loyalty and common service. There is a friendliness to the Church. There are fine men and women and young people ready to follow a lead. If they could see the Cathedral standing for a new Christian Leadership in an attack on all the problems we have to face together, they could be brought into the circle of Christ's action in Coventry.

Action by Anglicans and Free Churchmen in Partnership

"We just cannot tackle this eighty per cent outside Christian Churches in isolation. The parochial clergy in Coventry are working superbly at their vital task of ministering to the people in their homes. But the life and work of the people very often lie outside the area of their parishes. The parish priest, catering in isolation for his immediate flock, is overweighted by the immediate task of carrying on. There is, too, the major problem that in all State-controlled social organizations—in education, hostels, youth clubs and community centers—no one Church can have the right of entry. I find on all sides a readiness to ask for cooperation from the Christian community. 'But,' people say, 'you Christians must get together on a united front. Schism, party first, group consciousness, individual selfishness, vested interests, race and class destroy our life and weaken this great city. The Christian Church exists to break down barriers. Let Christians find unity, and in that unity bring us the faith and leadership to find our unity.'

"That is the challenge; this is our response.

"At the Christian Center we shall provide for a Headquarters Staff of Anglican and Free Church men and women capable of detachment to tackle all these problems, to provide leadership and the linking up of workers, and to create a Christian public opinion and action beyond the bounds of the parish.

"Our scheme has been drawn up after consultation between Anglican and Free Church Leaders. It has already received the approval of the Cathedral Council and of the Coventry Free Church Federal Council, and each of these bodies has appointed representatives to collaborate in framing a constitution for the Christian Center.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

PRAYER GROUPS of one kind or another—religious fellowship groups, family devotional groups, indeed, wherever two or three gather together for the devout purpose of sharing in the glories to be revealed unto us by Christ, they find fresh enthusiasm at the start; but a lessening-of-interest process soon begins and ere long the group bogs down, gets in a rut, loses its pep and its purpose, and finally grows indifferent and breaks down. Why do these spiritual cells fail so often, when they are begun with the best of intentions and a real desire for such fellowship on the basis of living for Christ? Why do so many wonderful beginnings end so sadly, leaving the participants discouraged if not disillusioned, and why does the fresh start they made grow suddenly stale and unappetizing?

There are many reasons:

Leadership becomes self-centered instead of Christ centered.

Nothing seems to happen—usually because the wrong things are expected.

Meetings become wearisome and boring—the same old thing time after time.

No one seems to grow beyond his initial experience.

There is a slow starvation—hungers go unsatisfied—inner needs go unmet.

Discipline is ignored—the good hard labor of learning is refused.

One drops out, then two, and they make excuses until the whole thing is called off.

A great many of these groups fail because they reach a point where they do not know what to do next. They want to get across the bog to solid ground but they can find no stepping stones. Since spiritual cells are really the units with the greatest possible chance of Christian growth, we should make every effort to start them and keep them growing. Here are a few suggestions which have helped certain groups maintain themselves and multiply; and they can be used by individuals as well as groups.

Jesus said: "Where two or three are gathered together in My name there am I in the midst of them." The first prerequisite for any Christian cell, from the Alcoholics Anonymous to any single family; from Wednesday night prayer meetings in churches to friendly gatherings for religious discussions, is that Jesus Christ be ever consciously to the fore and never, never pushed aside. Only as we speak His name, invoke His presence, and desire to know Him will He keep coming to us as God's Holy Spirit. Where Christ is in the midst of them, thoughts and words become more like His thoughts and words and we strive to become more like God's sons in our conduct.

The second imperative is to learn the A. B. C.'s, for how else can we put together the words of our belief and make our witness intelligible? We must be able to speak in something more than unknown tongues and in vague generalities. One of the chief criticisms of Christian writing and speaking is that it tells of wonderful life, miraculous transformations, glorious experiences in prayer and the like, without getting down to explaining how they happened, how they got that way, how another might share in exact proportion to our understanding of the experience. Our witness often gives the wrong impression to Jesus' command to be "a cloud of witnesses" by being a clouded witness. Every group must learn about prayer, meditation, how to read the Bible, some very definite beliefs about God, Jesus, Holy Spirit, the universe, evil and

Shall Democracy Survive?

By F. M. HORSLEY, M. D.

IN THE PENDING settlement of world affairs, security and peace are the objectives and the end longed for. Brooks Atkinson states that, "Wise decisions harmonize with the fundamental truths of human nature. The basic questions that people are asking themselves today are moral ones. In the last analysis we are concerned with what is right and wrong . . .; for the moral code is not a system of etiquette, but the fundamental truths of humanity, wrung out of painful experience of mankind since civilization began, and founded on the faith that men can flourish on love and enlightenment.

If the democratic way of life were not based on a moral concept of human relations, it would not be worth preserving. If freedom were not creative, the vital force of the present and the future, it would not be worth the staggering price we pay to retain it. To look on democracy simply as a form of government, is to underestimate the fullness of life it nourishes. It is part of the moral wisdom of the ages.

Democracy in its conception of freedom and respect for individual rights derives its basic principles from Christianity itself and is built into a plan of life that no other government has.

Lfe in all its forms is a co-operative process. One is given physical and mental abilities, and there is a force by which these talents are developed, for the abilities we have must be used that they may be kept and expanded.

Life of a nation, as of an individual, is not a stagnant process, but through freedom of expansion is an ever growing force; when diverted from this road it perishes, or inhibited in its rightful action becomes atrophied and a distorted thing.

Medical and allied sciences speak of a vital force in man directed by a central intelligence and will and influenced by environment. There are swaying powers that spring from environment, heredity, and inhibitions of the subconscious world. There is an intangible or spiritual power that moulds our ends. In this complexity of life we often lose our way.

The natural and material are constantly uppermost in our minds, but far above these is spiritual power, which we cannot define. There is something called "morale"—the consciousness of truth in action, and an impelling power within that directs. There is a power of will in action, based upon inspiring truth, that causes one man to overcome all difficulties when many fail because of lack of this. We can not analyze these things, nor do we need to; but we know that these things exist and their working is controlled by certain laws.

We can make use of many scientific discoveries, though we may not understand the thoughts of the inventor. We can plant, cultivate, and reap fruits of nature though we may not understand the process working through sunshine and rain that brings results.

ONE THING WE do know concerning all functioning life is, that it cannot exist or operate on error, but only on truth pertaining to it. We know that which enters into an organism has to emit from it with change of form. Selfishness has no place with living beings. We know that all animate things are composed of many smaller units, which must have their free expression of vital force, cooperative in action with the whole organism, and this cooperative energy must be directed to one end.

Our responsibilities we cannot always select, but if shirked, we fail to reach the vistas of real life and cannot enter into the joys and usefulness of being.

Then take the lesson taught us by the Greatest of all Teachers in confirming the ancient law of Israel, as the essential guide of life, and we have the conceptions of a Democracy that will last. This law is: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself."

God is not dependent upon our love, but we on His. As the Spirit of Love and Originator of all that is good, the outlets of our lives from all their springs of expression must flow toward all good in life, as His creation, and center around the Great Spirit of Love, then power and joy will enter our being and freedom from mistakes fade. We shall give and it shall be given unto us the full measure of life.

If as a nation we can act upon these facts our Democracy will not fail.

It takes suffering, anguish, and pain to reveal to us truths of the greatest value. We have to undergo privations and danger, that our minds may be opened to facts that change the course of life.

Stories are brought us by travellers and writers of the heroic things our men are doing on the battle fronts, of dangers faced, hardships borne, and of courage supported by undaunted will. These things make us proud that they are our sons and citizens of America. They do not define in words what they are fighting for, but as they stick to the little pictures of those they love, long for any messages from home, as their thoughts and minds are fixed upon the land they left behind with memories of what is sweet in life to them; we know they are fighting, enduring suffering uncomplainingly, giving their lives if need be, that those they hold dear may live in freedom and peace. Have these not learned the lesson of that higher love, which is fulfilling the law, and clinging to their sense of duty, have shown us what is Democracy?

ON THE HOME FRONT, we, who are here, should keep the home fires burning; but as a nation we have not caught that vision; for as groups and individuals there are many spread throughout the land who cannot forego the possible chance of personal gain even if by it our country's cause is endangered and liberty for mankind hangs in the balance. Such individuals are callous to the sacrifice and suffering of others who fight that they might live. If such a spirit prevails throughout our land, the noble flower of our manhood shall have fought in vain and Democracy from America will perish.

Can we not as a nation rise above self to a sense of duty and humbly try to fulfill the law of sacrifice and love, that Democracy may live and extend the light of its blessing to all mankind? It is not what science can do. It is not what education can teach. Nor is it what human mind can devise that shall enable us to last and prosper. Such things will not bring to us peace and stop the wastage and destruction of war; but we must follow the way of the Prince of Peace if life is to be secure and reveal itself to us in its beauty

War, Colleges and Chaplains

A sermon preached in Harvard University Chapel, January 9, 1944

By LT. COMDR. LESLIE GLENN, CHAPLAIN, U. S. N. R.

WHEN OLD FRIENDS meet, it is pleasant to catch up with each other's thinking, to learn what the years have done, and how common problems look from a distance. Therefore, this morning I may be forgiven if I talk personally and try to make a report to you. Even those who don't know me may be interested in the impressions of one who spent ten happy years here, and has been for the past two years in a Midshipmen's School receiving college graduates.

If we could talk face to face you might ask me about three things: the war, the college graduates I have seen preparing to be officers in the Navy, and what about the Chaplaincy itself? At least I hope you would ask me about those three things because they are what I am going to talk about, and they have at least a slender thread of connection, as may appear.

I.

It would have to be late in the evening before I would talk face to face about the war as I am going to talk now. Earlier in the evening I would say that, of course, we are winning, that the sacrifice and heroism are heartbreaking and uplifting. (Think of the British Merchant Service; only one hundred men failed to volunteer when asked privately for the invasion landings which are coming in Europe, and most of these because of physical disability.)

But if one were to be philosophical about the war, this could be said at bottom; the war is a sample of the way we ought to live all the time. What baffles us so often is that, with all the horrors, and (for every one) the monotonous inconveniences, many people are more alive today than they ever were before.

I WAS IN the last war and later when I went into the ministry, I found my thinking colored for years by the war. The Christian life may not be a battle, but it feels like one. We remember the final absurdity of a certain kind of pacifism which suggested that some hymns were too militaristic, "Fight the Good Fight," "Onward Christian Soldiers," "The Son of God Goes Forth to War." William James' phrase "the moral equivalent of war" was often in our minds in the slack period between the wars. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, at the end of his life, still called himself "an old soldier." Seventy years after he returned to Harvard wounded in the Civil War, it was in his mind; and when he died, he left his fortune to the United States of America. War opens our eyes to the nature of society and the kind of living able to redeem society. Men get religious in war time, not because they are frightened, but because they are awake. The war is not the war against Germany and Japan. The real war is beyond time and space.

So war time is a "natural" for the Christian preacher. ("Natural" is a term used by the Stewards' mates, my colored boys. It is borrowed from a game they play, and means "exactly right".)

The virtues needed to win a war are the virtues needed to live nobly in peace. And we have to be careful when we rightly condemn war as a barbaric survival in civilization, not to condemn the virtues necessary to win a war or to keep the peace, or even to live well as private citizens.

This point is brought out by Lord Elton in December's Atlantic Monthly. "The Moral Revival in England", December, 1943. He reminds us that "For years fashionable war fiction presented the successful soldier as a butcher, a drunkard, or a Colonel Blimp. The war itself was at best 'an immense crop of murders.' 'Punctuality, regularity, discipline, industry are a set of slave virtues,' wrote one of our best known left-wing intellectuals. Family life became, for advanced persons, but one more prison house to be broken down. 'I am sure,' wrote Mr. Bertrand Russell, 'that University life would be better, both intellectually and morally, if most University students had temporary childless marriages.' 'There is no such thing as moral law,' said Professor John MacMurray, a popular philosopher of London University."

IF THESE VIRTUES are so necessary for war and peace, why are they despised in certain periods by the vocal few? Chiefly because of envy. Says Lord Elton, "Because of the antagonism of the intellectual, the Articulate, for the unvocal fighter.

"It is usual in wartime for the intellectuals to retire into the wings; for an intellectual is a person mature in intelligence but immature in character and experience, and it is no use making epigrams during an earthquake. That was the root of the trouble after the last war. All the debunkers were voicing the pent-up resentment of an intelligentsia which for four years had been compelled to surrender the center of the stage to its traditional butt—the strong silent man. Lytton Stracky began it with Emminent Victorians published in 1918."

IN UNIVERSITY CENTERS during the war and afterwards, the "intellectual" and the "strong silent man" will be together. In each one of us is some of both. We are all partly scholar and partly warrior. If we have more of one than the other, we must appreciate our opposite number. Above all, we must esteem afterwards the virtues our brothers are displaying now; courage, sacrifice, not answering criticism, taking the blame yourself, picking up cigarette butts! We must remember the large and the petty rules of behavior hammered into us by the military code and the nature of the emergency. "Jacob took the stone which he had used as a pillow and set it up for a pillar and poured oil on it and said this is the House of God." It was on that hard stone that the ladder was set up between heaven and earth.

II.

WHAT ABOUT the college graduates in this experience? I have seen them preparing to fight and I have seen them when they returned. That they have distinguished themselves in many fields we all know. What are they thinking about? is a larger question. Yet I see this answered in magazines and newspaper despatches and I don't see why the preacher can't try it. I am especially indebted to a conversation with one which summed up the impressions of many letters and conversations.

(a) He does not hate the Japanese. They have to be beaten, but he admires them. The one who plainly said this in so many words had been severely wounded that very first day at Pearl Harbor. And he said, "My gun crews almost cheered as the Japanese dive bombers came over with the blood coming out of their mouths, courageous, four thousand miles from home." He wanted to be sure that the Church wasn't preaching hate. As early as 1936, he had heard in sermons that totalitarianism must go, that the world cannot exist half slave and half free. But he had forgotten that the same pulpits also said it would be a civil war, that the Japanese and the Germans were our brothers. We are sinners dealing with sinners. Lincoln chose the text which applies "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

We remembered friends of ours (killed flying in Africa) who at Harvard used to take private flying lessons because they saw the war coming. And in those strange days of 1939 and 1940 they would say that they would just as soon be flying Messerschmidts. They called themselves pacifists as did many of the early volunteers. But they were simply using the wrong term. They did not mean doctrinaire pacifists who would never fight; they meant that they hated jingoism, the notion that we are all right and the enemy is all wrong. "Atrocity stories about the enemy make us mad," he said. We must be realistic, see them for what they are and see ourselves for what we are, and quietly resolve to beat them ("with malice toward none") because the false theories they hold would set civilization back a thousand years. And because what we hold dear is what they will hold dear when they have a chance to see it. And in fighting them, we are fighting for them.

NOW ALL THIS can be put in even more complicated terms. It is the heart of the Christian dilemma, and not easy to resolve. But it is what the thoughtful soldier is getting at when he says in simple terms "The Germans are all right" or "I hate war." He doesn't mean "I don't want to fight," he means "In the name of God, think your way through, you who have some time, about what is going to happen afterwards, so this doesn't have to go on and on, generation after generation."

My friend came out of Pearl Harbor with a profound admiration for the enlisted men. "The officers were my lifelong friends, but it was the blue jackets we will always remember." He thought people were more anxious to entertain officers than enlisted men and resented this not a little. He came out of the war a fierce democrat, with a small d. I think that is fair generalization about most. Again Lincoln's words come to mind, "A new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal." "That this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom", is a distinct possibility with the scrambling that is going on right now.

Then he said, and this phrase also illumined many other conversations, that he had had "the dross of suburbanism burnt out" of him, and this had given him a new hold on religion. He said, "I get tired of this sea-gull-on-a-raft religion. You pray and God saves you. That may happen or it may not. But when you see death and the heroism of ordinary people, you get sick of the idea of making money, moving from suburb to suburb, 'keeping up with the Joneses,' the country club dances Saturday nights, the whole selfish, narrow life of worldliness and snobbishness. And that purging gives a new hold on faith. God is providence, but He is also what Peter said of Jesus, the pioneer of our faith. He is the Captain of our salvation."

That's the chance Christianity has with thousands of men. In the war they've seen the war, the Holy War. Can the Church keep this crusade before them afterwards? Can the colleges keep this before them afterwards?

III

LASTLY I SHOULD LIKE to report on the Chaplaincy. You may have noticed that chaplains like the very name Chaplain. They prefer to be called that, and not by their rank. Strangers I meet on trains ask what it is like being a Chaplain. It is the same as that wide-spread, wistful curiosity about the ministry, only more intense. (The ministry is the greatest work in the world; the only question in people's minds is, whether it can be done.)

So for my own experience; I was an engineer, and no one in my family nor any I knew intimately was in the ministry. It was hard to determine whether there was anything definite that you did which entitled you to be set free from the work of the world. The Sons of Martha built bridges and greased connecting rods, and I suppose I have always been haunted by prosaic chores. Dean Sperry and I have discussed this; he says he often wishes he had been a surgeon. Of course it is not true, but I know what he means.

Well, I went into the Navy in 1938 because I wanted to be there. I did not care if my only duties were to referee prize fights and write the Captain's letters of condolence. "I had rather be a doorkeeper . . ." But, of course, the old question arose, is there anything that a man of God does that entitles him to be exempt from every other duty? Yeomen have to man machine guns and Steward's Mates have to pass ammunition. Chaplains, incidentally, are forbidden to pass the ammunition, and by express directive of the Navy Department, are to have nothing to do with recreation, morale, post office, library or athletics. In a sense, the Chaplain is the only passenger on a battleship. He is a good "control" for religious experimentation. Does he prove anything, apart from demonstrating that the Cross goes everywhere?

Part of the answer is that every ship wants one, and it is not because sea going men are superstitious. The Chaplain stands in a grim society for everything that gives meaning to the monotony and sacrifice. Men hold their religion vicariously, as Paul Elmore More said in writing about the round collars of Oxford, and the clergyman is an essential leaven in every society. Maybe the work is impossible, maybe nothing happens when chaplains are taken as passengers on ships, but the point is that men think something ought to happen. They hope something may happen.

Then, too, all life is telescoped in the Army and Navy, years are crowded into months, and deeper levels are reached than are possible in ordinary life. The Christian minister is overwhelmed with the greatness of his opportunity. "A great door and effectual is open." Out of war will come a great increase in candidates for the ministry, as there came out of the last war. Because men will have seen for themselves what an ordinary man can do in the enterprise of trying to represent God to his fellow men. Stephen Benet writes of the Chaplain of the Jamestown settlement in 1607:

Let us turn for a moment to another figure:

Who, of all of them, shines with a clear steadfast light,
Robert Hunt, the minister of God,
So ill when they lay at the Downes that no man thought
He would live the voyage, yet living because he must,
Being God's servant, to conciliate,
Appease, soften the hearts of angry men
And show the true, calm courage of the true priest

The Seeds of Isolationism

We have great affection for the sovereign State of South Carolina. After all we do live in that famous "other mountain of conceit." However, we were much perturbed by two news items in the press last week. The South Carolina Legislature passed two resolutions, which to our way of thinking, harmless in themselves, are frightfully discouraging, as a part of the total picture in these United States.

The first of these resolutions was a request that their (South Carolina's) Jimmie Byrnes be apointed a member of the Peace Commission. The basis for this request being that as the British Commonwealth of Nations, and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, were composed of a certain number of separate units, and would be so represented at the Peace Conference, therefore, South Carolina, as one of the sovereign states of these United States, should also be represented by a delegate. The absurdity of such a point of view is patently clear. We haven't enough divisions as it is. Let us make some more. The danger here is that this attitude is evidence of a budding isolationism. We do not trust our Allies. We will stand united with them in the war effort, but in the framing of the peace that is to follow, we wish to stand upon our own sovereign rights. May we pray earnestly that even our small statesmen may catch a larger vision of our sovereignty. The justification of our sovereignty is in its desire to contribute to the building of a world in which the Spirit of mutual helpfulness of nation to nation will prevail.

The second resolution has to do with a domestic problem, but a domestic problem that has world wide implications. This resolution deals with the race problem. The legislators of good old South Carolina, said they were tired of a group of Northern Agitators stirring up racial strife. They could handle their problem, and they wished it clearly understood they were for "White Supremacy" now and forever. Are we going to attempt to turn the clock back? Mr. Hitler tried it on the continent of Europe, and he is learning the painfulness of his mistake. The relationship between the races is not to be settled by the raving of demagogues. Our own internal race problems will not be settled by that puerile method. Surely the great international problems will not be settled in that way. The sovereign State of South Carolina will be represented in the Senate of these United States. We trust her representatives in that body will not be unduly influenced by these foolish pratings of their constituency back home. This country has a great destiny to meet after this war. We will have much to contribute to the welfare of minority groups everywhere. We know something about minority groups and their problems. We should not be afraid of losing any of the prestige that attaches to our sovereign independence, when we take our place at the peace table. Let us beware now of sowing tiny seeds that will bear the fruits of an outmoded isolationism.

Thanks Mr. Biddle!

As encouraging as the two items just mentioned are discouraging, is the statement made by our Attorney General, Mr. Francis Biddle, in the press this morning. Mr. Biddle said that he hoped that after the war our immigration laws would be liberalized. In fact he is quoted as going even further and saying that he hoped we would permit free immigration for at least a limited period after this war.

From the Christian approach this is cheering news. Economists tell us that we have not reached the limits of our capacity to provide for a larger population. Our birth rate is not increasing markedly. We have prospered through the energy of the emigrants who have come to our shores. We should again welcome competent healthy persons, whom we feel have a real contribution to make to the further development of our nation.

The Christian approach is Jesus' approach—"ye are all children of One Heavenly Father". We are dependent upon each other. As some said recently, "We have had our declaration of independence; is it not time that we made our declaration of inter-dependence!"

Thanks, Mr. Biddle, for giving us encouragement that there are those in high places, who feel this country should still welcome strangers to its shores.

Remember the Service Men at Easter

We pass this suggestion along for what it is worth. Great emphasis was placed upon remembering our men and women in service, at Christmas time. Secular pressure was more than evident. This was all well and good. But we all know that secularism has so covered the Christmas season with sentimental commercialism that often its real and deep significance is largely lost.

We suggest that Rectors use the Easter-tide to write a personal note to all members of their parishes in the armed forces. Easter is distinctively the Christian season of Hope. Many of those near and dear to us, are standing today in places of great danger. The Christian answer to their fears is the Resurrection! We believe that a note, an Easter Card from the Rector, would mean a great deal to a man facing the imminence of danger.

We like to think of Donald Hankey's last words to his troops, as reported by his sergeant. Just before they went over the top—Hankey said to his men—"If killed the Resurrection—if wounded Blightey (the hospital)."

Write to your service men during Easter-tide.

WAR, COLLEGES, AND CHAPLAINS

Through the hard winter and the starving time.
He will lose the few poor books of his scant library
In Jamestown fire—aye, all but the clothes on his back,
"Yet none did ever hear him repine of his loss,"
And those who rail
At others, call him still "Good Master Hunt".
For the rest complained. He did not. They marveled at him.
And we may marvel, too, and, marveling, praise.
Peace to your steadfast heart, Good Master Hunt,
And may the wild Virginia earth lie lightly
Upon the pure devotion of your name.

—Western Star, Stephen Benet.

LOOKING AHEAD again to after the war, it seems to me that there ought to be more chaplains in our universities and colleges. By Chaplains, I mean men who will attend mainly to religion. Of course it is done by Presidents, deans, teachers, but more must be free to give themselves chiefly to this thing. It is almost good to force some into the position of passengers so they may be held accountable in University society for this work alone.

If Professor Hocking's criticism is just, that students graduate "with wills prematurely grey and incapable of greatness, because they have never been searchingly exposed to what is noble, generous, and faith provoking," then places must be found in academic circles for men of faith and piety. And this without any changes in academic freedom or any questioning of the beliefs of scholars. Nothing must be taken away which has been bought at such great cost, but something may be added to make the truth live in hearts as well as minds.

If, as Walter Lippman says, "we have a rendezvous after the war, as a matter of high priority to attend to the reconstruction of American education", I venture this as one of the elements in that reconstruction, more Chaplains to students. There are, what we can only call men of God with every regiment, on every ship; there are men of God in every city and village across the country, there must be, in the simple sense of the term, men of God in every university.

Let us pray.

LORD, lift us out of private-mindedness, and give us public souls, to work for Thy Kingdom; by daily creating that atmosphere of a happy temper and generous heart which alone can bring the Great Peace. Through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

of joy and strength.

As we enter into this coming year of conflict throughout the world, perhaps the worst we have ever faced, when those we love may not return again from battle, or returning, through life may wear the scars of war, let us not forget the second front of greed and selfish aim whose seed is sown among our own countrymen, for this is the spirit we are fighting among our enemies.

May we pray to God for wisdom and strength to overcome by the guidance of His hand.

So may the Dayspring from on high visit us, "To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace."

CHRISTMAS AND PRAYER

By Ronald Fillmore,
P. F. C., Fort Bragg, N. C.

How burns the candle in the Temple places,
Bright with the glow that names the Holy Day?
Or does the flame sink low, and only traces Flicker where the fire once blazed away?

But care not, dear Madonna, no fickle light
Can tend to merit what the heart might say:
For from the wasted lands of strife, in flight
The wishes of the world shall fly your way!

'Tis Christmas, yet the symbols do not tarnish, dim.
No towering tree, a'flood with light may rise:
But we do hold this full great love of Him,
And light this Christmas with our eyes!

Let it be dull sand, or great and lonely Ocean—
Or distant towering peaks and ice and snow:
Distance does not lessen our Lord's devotion,
Or the priceless heritage that Christians know!

Once again the holly wreaths are bright . . . .
And cherished friends still play their joyous part.
Now, with full strength against War's might,
The spirit lives, and greets the lonely heart!

'Tis Christmas in the wide world wherever
Our dearest ones know it is the Holy Day—
And there is no power on earth can sever
Christmas from me as I kneel to pray!

HAVEN

the like. This takes time. It is a slow, continuous process. Miserable is the individual or group that expects God's heaven to open and jab them with forked lightening every time He would speak unto them. Keep wrestling with these fundamental tools of the spirit until they bless us and we can use them to find the way into God's presence and to unlock the door leading to the understanding of His will, and can interpret His commands and discern His voice. A. B. C.'s come first, then a vocabulary, ever enlarging.

When we are able to catch and give meaning from such words as repentance, forgiveness, love, grace, our, holy, faith and a thousand more—who shall name the end of our learning and growing?—we shall have arrived at the place beyond the point of failure.

The slogan of every cell that exists for Christ's sake is: Learn and apply; discover and use; hear and speak; see and tell; until the wideness of God's mercy washes the shores of every land and the two or three become earth's millions, and the glow inside my heart and yours never grows dim.

"Be strong and of good courage; be not affrighted, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

That is God's promise to all those who will seek Him diligently and never give up until at last they catch a glimpse of dawn.

BRIGHT MIRROR

I passed a gleaming mirror
  Ashining in the sun,
'Twas but a wayside puddle
  For dainty feet to shun;
But that small sheet of water
  Was deep as clouds are high,
For in its glinting surface
  Was seen God's vast blue sky.

I would that I could feel assured
  That people passing me
Could overlook my littleness
  And something greater see—
That my small life, with all its faults,
  Could show God's loving grace,
And to the passer-by reflect
  The beauty of His face.

WINDY MARCH

"Windy March is blowing! Windy March is blowing!" sang Sandy Jane as she skipped down the street to school.

Suddenly, she noticed Mr. Jones' paper was just about ready to blow off the porch. It took but a second to dash up the steps, pick up the paper, ring the doorbell and give it to Mr. Jones.

"Thank you, Sandy Jane!" said Mr. Jones. "Such a thoughtful little girl deserves something nice!" And he gave her a big red apple.

When Sandy Jane got to the corner, she met her friend, Ellen Hayes.

"Where did you get the big red apple?" asked Ellen.

"Mr. Jones gave it to me!" said Sandy Jane.

"No one ever gives me anything!" pouted Ellen. "I wonder why!"

But Sandy Jane didn't answer, because the wind was blowing loudly through the trees and she was singing, "Windy March is blowing! Windy March is blowing!"

Just then Sandy Jane noticed Mrs. Harding's partly hung-up washing. One of the sheets had been blown so hard the clothes-pins had fallen out and the sheet was almost ready to blow right off the line.

"Wait a minute until I tell Mrs. Harding her sheet is nearly blown off the line!" said Sandy Jane.

"Oh, come on!" answered Ellen. "What do you care if it does blow off? It isn't your sheet!"

But Sandy Jane was already calling down the open outside cellar way to Mrs. Harding, who was washing in the cellar.

"Oh, thank you for telling me, Sandy Jane," said Mrs. Harding as she came hurrying up the cellar steps. In another moment she had pinned the sheet securely to the line with the clothespins Sandy Jane picked up for her.

"Stop in tonight on your way home from school, Sandy Jane," said Mrs. Harding, smiling. "I am going to bake raisin cookies this afternoon, and you may have a half dozen to take home with you!"

"Oh, thank you, Mrs. Harding, I'll be sure to stop!" answered Sandy Jane as she started down the street with Ellen. Ellen looked at Sandy Jane and said wisely, "Now I know why some one is always giving you something nice, Sandy Jane!"

Sandy Jane laughed and shook her head.

"Windy March is blowing!" she sang.

IN MY LITTLE BOY'S POCKETS

By William Allen Ward

I found a marble
And a broken toy
In the tiny pocket
Of my little boy.

As he was sleeping
On his little bed
And dreams crept through
His noddy head.

I searched with care
His coveralls
And in his pockets
Were rubber balls. . . .

A Lincoln penny—
A piece of thread. . . .
A broken match
And a crust of bread.

Those pockets bulged
With trivial things,
But joy to him
Their possession brings.

So sleep, my son,
And keep your treasure. . . .
Such odd things
Bring you pleasure!

AT THE TABLE

"I wish I were Chinese," sighed Phyllis, as she looked at the silverware on the table.

Bob chanted, "Knives to the right of us, forks to the left of us. Yet, chopsticks would be simpler."

Aunt Pat smiled at them from the head of the table. "All we need do is to work from the outside of our plates in. Like the amount to spend on war stamps and bonds—we can figure it out for ourselves."

"When I was invited to Donna's, last night," Phyllis recalled, "I noticed that she left her napkin folded in half."

"Yes," agreed Aunt Pat, "a large dinner napkin can be left either in halves or in thirds."

When they began the main course, Bob said, "I've read that of our three table tools, the fork was the last one to be invented."

"That's true," nodded Aunt Pat. "Still, it is now our chief aid, and we use it instead of a spoon whenever we can, especially for vegetables, such as these peas."

"What about salads?" asked Phyllis. "Should I use my knife to cut this lettuce?"

Aunt Pat nodded. "Yes, since we know how rich green foods are in vitamins, we have all joined the clean-plate club."

Bob shrugged. "I'm afraid I'll never learn all the rules."

"The main things to remember," Aunt Pat summed up, "are to be quiet and leisurely, and to seem more interested in one another than in the food; that is, nice people do not eat, but dine."—B. J. C., in Junior Life.

A BILL—AND NO BILL!

Dr. Poritzky, dentist of Peekskill, New York, was with his wife watching swans and ducks being fed. They noticed one scrawny-looking duck. Throwing him bread crumbs, Dr. Poritzky was amazed to find that he had no upper bill, could not eat. The dentist found out the beak had been lost in a fight with a snapping turtle.

"I'll make him a new beak of plastic," declared the dentist. Park attendants gave consent. Dr. Poritzky went home with his patient under his arm. At the surgery, impressions were taken of the stub in wax and plaster. The stump of the bill was painted with silver nitrate, and the new beak of pink plastic fastened on with stainless steel wire.

The duck was amazed at his new adornment which was transparent and looked like the handle of a toothbrush. In his excitement he clicked his bills together like castanets. But his restored "quack" was what pleased him most of all. As for eating, he could now do it with gusto and began to fatten up.

Back at the lake, he is the center of attraction with his strange beak.—Ex.

Preparations Going Forward

The Consecration of the Bishop of Washington Will Be Attended by Distinguished Visitors—650 to March in Procession

Washington, D. C.—The Consecration of the Very Rev. Angus Dun as Bishop of Washington in succession to the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman on April 19, is arousing great interest, not only in the diocese but throughout the Church.

Announcement of the plans of the Committee in Charge make it apparent that approximately 650 persons will march in the procession. The Most. Rev. Cyril Foster Garbett, Archbishop of York and the Most Rev. Derwin T. Owen, Primate of all Canada are expected to head the list of distinguished ecclesiastical guests. Among the latter are expected to be bishops of the Orthodox Church, visiting bishops of other churches in communion with the Protestant Episcopal Church, representatives of clergy of other denominations, representatives of universities, deans of Seminaries, representatives of the National Council, trustees and faculty and students of the Episcopal Theological School of Cambridge, Mass., and the Virginia Theological Seminary. Representatives of diocesan institutions and organizations, in addition to the Bishops of our own Church, headed by the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, and the clergy of the diocese and other clergy.

On this occasion it is expected that the historical Cross of Abyssinia as well as the Jerusalem Cross will be carried in the procession, preceded by the Cathedral banners, flags of the various States, and the American flag in the place of honor.

In view of the large number participating in the procession concern has been evidenced by the churchmen of the diocese as to the arrangements for seating the church people who desire to see their bishop consecrated. Assurance has been made that the Committee in Charge will make a distribution of the tickets necessary for attendance to the parishes of the diocese on a percentage basis on the communicants of the parish.

U. T. O. PRESENTATION COMBINES WITH WASHINGTON BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Ogden, Utah—Celebrating Shrove Tuesday and Washington's Birthday on the same day this year presented an unique opportunity for a reverent as well as patriotic observance. Accordingly, the Woman's Council of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Ogden, and the Golden Spike Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution cooperated by combining the Annual Shrove Tuesday, United Thank Offering Presentation Tea of the former and the Annual Washington's Birthday Program of the latter.

The Daughters of the American Revolution under the chairmanship of Mrs. J. G. Falck, an active Churchwoman and past Regent of the Golden Spike Chapter, presented two colonial days' vocal selections: "Under the Weeping Willow's Shade" and "The Second Minuet", sung by Mrs. O. S. Daines, a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church. Mrs. Edna P. Wade, another Churchwoman, reviewed "The Settlement and Naming of Utah Counties" and the Rev. Darrell M. Farnham, pastor of the First Congregational Church, delivered an interesting and enlightening address on "George Washington, the Christian and Episcopalian". The program closed with the singing of the last verse of the National Anthem by all present.

On the Tea Table, which was beautifully decorated reposed a large size replica of a "Little Blue Box" inviting all to deposit the contents of their own little blue boxes and such other offerings as they wished. When the contents were counted they were a trifle short of an even hundred and that difference was made up by interested observers. Mrs. Otis Weeks, president of the Woman's Council, poured at the Tea Table and was assisted by officers of both the hostess groups. Additional contributions to the United Thank Offering are expected at the Sunday services and through the mail.

INCORRIGIBLE SOUTH INDIAN CHRISTIANS!

Palamcottah, S. India—The Bishop of Tinnevelly, the Rt. Rev. Stephen Charles Neill, was told by a British Colonel in charge of recruits that some of the South Indian men had asked for a Good Friday service. He gave them a barrack room, and they had a Three Hours Service of their own. Said the Bishop, "This seemed a very remarkable statement. What would 'British Other Ranks' do on Good Friday if given a barrack room and told to carry on. I suggested to the Colonel that I might go out with him on Sunday afternoon and investigate, and this was arranged. I found that the facts were as stated; one of the Telugu recruits is a lay reader of the Canadian Baptist Mission. He had gathered together all the Telugus and had given them a full service, with addresses on the Seven Words. We found about 130 men gathered to meet us in the barrack room. Of these a large number were Roman Catholics."

In comment, the Rev. M. A. C. Warren, General Secretary of Church Missionary Society said, "What incorrigible fellows those South Indian Christians are! Here we have a Baptist leading Roman Catholics in the Devotion of the Three Hours. The South India Church Union Scheme appears by comparison almost timid in its limited scope!"

Archbishop Accepts Invitation

The Rt. Hon. Cyril F. Garbett, Primate of England, Will Visit U. S. in Near Future

New York, N. Y.—The Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Cyril Forster Garbett, D. D., Archbishop of York, Primate of England and Metropolitan, has accepted the invitation of the Presiding Bishop to visit the United States in the near future, according to simultaneous announcement by Bishop Tucker, and British Information Service. It is not possible at this time to announce time of the Archbishop's arrival, but it is hoped that it may be shortly after Easter.

Bishop Tucker believes this personal visit will be of the utmost value in strengthening the friendly and cooperative relations existing between the Church of England and the Episcopal Church in the United States. The Archbishop will undoubtedly meet with the American half of the Anglo-American Committee of the National Council, and discussion will be had on post-war plans, particularly as they affect Overseas work in the various mission fields.

While on this side of the Atlantic, the Archbishop will visit also leaders of the Church of England in Canada.

U. S. O. RECREATIONAL CENTERS LOCATED IN CHURCHES

Washington, D. C.—At the invitation of two churches here, USO has set up recreational centers in their buildings. One is located in the Eastern Presbyterian Church, the other in the Ingram Memorial Congregational Church. These operations, started in the summer, are now in full swing and illustrate the ever-growing cooperation of the church groups.

The suggestion for these centers was presented by Rev. William Nesbit Vincent, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church, who, with the assistance of the Council of Social Agencies, had made a survey of neighborhood needs. It was found that, besides the number of servicemen stationed around Washington, there were approximately 9,000 young women war workers living within fourteen blocks of the two churches. These were strangers in the city and indicated a strong desire for organized recreational facilities.

USO supplied about two-thirds of the furnishings while friends of the community contributed the rest. Centers are equipped with games, sewing machines, cooking facilities, books and magazines and radios. Regular dances are held Friday evenings and on Tuesdays there are square dances. Miss Esther Conklin, USO director, is in charge of both operations.

Dean of Du Bose Resigns

Very Rev. Albert Richards Retired March 1 Due to Ill Health

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The resignation of the Very Rev. Albert G. Richards as Dean of the DuBose Memorial Church Training School, Monteagle, was announced by the Board of Trustees, meeting recently in Chattanooga. Dean Richards' resignation was due to ill health and will become effective March 1.

Dean Richards has been head of the DuBose School since 1930, and has served not only as administrator but also on the faculty of both the theological and academic departments, teaching the courses in theology, homiletics, and mathematics. During fourteen years he has missed only a few classes, but recent physical examination disclosed the need for him to become free from the responsibility of both administration and teaching. His plans after retirement are not yet definite. He states that he "has a book or two in his head"—"but whether I will ever get them onto paper I don't know". Previous to his election as dean of DuBose, Dr. Richards was rector of Emmanuel Church, Athens, Georgia, for 13 years. He was graduated from Hobart College and received his B. D. from General Theological Seminary in 1899. The University of Georgia awarded him a D. D. degree in 1920.

During the time in which he has been dean of the DuBose School, Dr. Richards' astute administrative policy and fund-raising ability, which have enabled this institution to weather the financial difficulties characterizing most theological schools during the past decade have been commented on frequently. In addition to administrative and teaching duties Dr. Richards was chaplain of the Church of the Holy Comforter, Monteagle, and was responsible for the farm operated in connection with the School.

The Rev. E. Dargan Butt, rector of the Winchester County Mission Field and instructor at the Theological School of the University of the South, has been elected by the Board of Trustees to succeed Dean Richards. The Rev. Mr. Butt has not yet accepted the appointment.

OFFICIAL ORDER TAKEN FOR DR. DUN'S CONSECRATION

New York, N. Y.—Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker has taken official Order for the consecration of the Very Rev. Angus Dun, D. D., S. T. D., bishop-elect of the Diocese of Washington.

The Consecration Service, as previously unofficially announced, will be held on April 19, 1944, at 10:00 A. M., at the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, Mount Saint Alban, Washington. Presiding Bishop Tucker will be Consecrator, with the Rt. Rev. Henry K. Sherrill, Bishop of Massachusetts, and the Rt. Rev. Y. Y. Tsu, Bishop of Kunming, in charge of Yun-Kwei District in Southwest China, as co-consecrators. Bishop Sherrill will be the Consecration preacher.

Bishop-Elect Dun will be presented for Consecration by the Rt. Rev. Henry W. Hobson, of Southern Ohio, and the Rt. Rev. Malcolm E. Peabody, bishop of Central New York. The Litany will be read by the Rt. Rev. W. Appleton Lawrence, of Western Massachusetts. Attending Presbyters will be the Rev. Charles L. Taylor, newly elected to succeed Bishop-Elect Dun as dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., and the Rev. John M. Burgess, chairman of the Department of Christian Social Relations of the Diocese of Southern Ohio and rector of the Church of St. Simon of Cyrene, Lockland, Ohio. The Rev. John H. Fitzgerald, Brooklyn, secretary of the House of Bishops, will be Registrar.

Distinguished visitors at the Consecration, who are expected to join in the laying on of hands are the Most Rev. Cyril Forster Garbett, Archbishop of York, and the Most Rev. Derwin T. Owen, Primate of All Canada.

FIRST CONFERENCE OF ITS KIND

Roanoke, Va.—Bishop Henry D. Phillips, of Southwestern Virginia, announces a conference of women mission workers with the clergy under whom they serve, for March 20 and 21, at St. John's Church, Wytheville, of which the Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey is rector.

The Bishop says, "I feel we can gain much by pooling our experiences and by working towards a policy that will be helpful in our missionary work."

Believed to be the first conference of its kind to be held anywhere in the Church, Bishop Phillips expects it to point the way to a continuous development of the diocesan missionary work. Leaders of the sessions, in addition to Bishop Phillips, will be Miss Ora Harrison, Miss Isabel Wagner, the Rev. Richard H. Lee, Miss Thelma Erickson, Deaconess Edith A. Booth, the Rev. G. William Beale, Deaconess Anne Newman. The Rev. Richard H. Lee, the Rev. G. William Beale, and Deaconess Margaret D. Binns are responsible for the program which will touch subjects as "What Should Our Life Be? Pitfalls and Temptations in Our Work Among People"; "Our Opportunity"; discussion of clothing boxes; mid-week activities, recreation, club, handicraft, etc. "Development of Church Life and Responsibility."

ARMY ASKING FOR MORE CHAPLAINS

Boston, Mass.—The Army, which had notified the Army and Navy Commission that it would accept no chaplains whose papers were dated after November 22, 1943, is now asking for 20 per cent more than its present quota of 300, according to a statement by Dr. Henry B. Washburn, Commission executive secretary. Dr. Washburn says further, that also contrary to the Commission's recent understanding, the Navy is taking our men at the rate of three or four a month.

Clergy ready to serve as Chaplains may send their names to the Army and Navy Commission, 1 Joy Street, Boston. The Commission will be sent on to Army and Navy headquarters promptly. Although it is uncertain how quickly clergy may be called, candidates should be ready for immediate summons, Dr. Washburn says.

Sermon in Modern Manner

Sound Movies Based on Life of St. Paul Shown in Sermon Period

Belvidere, N. J.—"One picture is worth a thousand words" is taken seriously by the Rev. A. Francis Allison, rector of the Warren County Associate Mission, which includes six New Jersey congregations. As a feature of the Lenten program, he is providing a weekly visual sermon based on the life of St. Paul. In commenting on this project, which was done also last year, the Rev. Mr. Allison stated, "These Visual Sermons are part of a real religious service. We are not running Sunday movies for the sake of movies, nor are we trying to compete with commercial movie houses. The film, which is a 16 mm. sound movie, can be called a sermon in the modern manner, for it is shown during the sermon period in a service of worship. The music, hymns, Psalms, Scripture Lessons and prayers are built around the theme of the picture. These pictures are a great aid in making real to both adults and children much of the life of the great Apostle and the early Church. The New Testament is read with greater interest and understanding after seeing these Visual Sermons."

A special educational feature is provision for an informal discussion of the visual sermon at the close of the service. No offering is taken during the service, but volunteer contributions are placed in the alms basin, which fully defray the rental of this professionally produced aid to the alert minister.

Visual aids are also used for the children's week-day Lenten services, theme of which is, "The Life of Our Lord", in which both colored slides and vivid stories are used in each service. A record and inducement for attendance is provided by an attractive card to which pictures are added each week. Special awards are given at Easter to all youth having perfect attendance at both week-day and Sunday sessions of the Church school and parish.

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR DEACONESSES TO REOPEN

New York, N. Y.—The Executive Committee of the National Conference of Deaconesses has announced a plan to reopen the New York Training School for Deaconesses next October. The Trustees of the School are said to have approved the plan and given consent to its operation.

St. Faith's House, 419 West 110th Street, New York City, where the school is located, has been one of the oldest and largest of the training schools for women and has sent our deaconesses and other women trained for Church work, wherever the Church has gone.

The school has been closed for the past two years. Deaconess Ruth Johnson is chairman of the Executive Committee and has been chosen unanimously to be the new head of the Training School.

EXPECTATIONS FOR 1944 ARE HIGHER

New York, N. Y.—Presiding Bishop Tucker has sent a letter to all bishops and other clergy, expressing his satisfaction at the Expectations for missionary giving in 1944. "In almost every case," Bishop Tucker says, "expectations for 1944 are higher than the actual giving for 1943. The totals of all expectations represent a great forward step and are larger than those of any recent year.

"Surely," the Presiding Bishop concludes, "this fine response is proof to all the world that the Church is willing to accept the challenge of the great task before it and that we, as individuals, are determined that the work of the Church shall go forward throughout the world."

With his letter, Bishop Tucker sent a complete statement of the 1944 expectations of all dioceses and missionary districts, showing a grand total of $1,869,364. Budget giving in 1943 reached a total of $1,483,043.

ST. PAUL'S, LAWRENCEVILLE, ACCREDITED COLLEGE

Lawrenceville, Va.—The State Board of Education of Virginia has notified St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute that it has been approved and accredited as a standard four-year college with authority to grant degrees in elementary teacher training, business administration, secretarial science, and home economics.

In his letter of notification to Principal J. Alvin Russell, Mr. Dabney S. Lancaster, superintendent of Public Instruction, said, "I wish to congratulate you upon the sound progress that has been made by the institution during your administration and I extend to you the best wishes of the State Board of Education for continued success."

BISHOP HARRY KENNEDY RECEIVES HONORARY DEGREE

Berkeley, Cal.—In a simple but impressive ceremony in the seminary chapel, the Rt. Rev. Harry Sherbourne Kennedy, Bishop of Honolulu, received the degree of Doctor of Divinity at the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, on Friday, February 18. The degree was conferred by Bishop Robert B. Gooden, president of the board of trustees; Dean Henry H. Shires presented the candidate. Other bishops present were Bishop Edward L. Parsons and Bishop William Lewis, of Nevada.

In the citation, Dean Shires said that Bishop Kennedy has spent all of his ministry in the West, "his early years being given to missionary work in Kansas and Colorado, and the later years up to the outbreak of the war devoted to parish work in Denver and Colorado Springs. . . . His outstanding service as a chaplain in the United States Army has been but recently terminated by his election to the Episcopate. . . . His ministry has been distinguished by qualities of great personal charm and an engaging friendliness born of a sincere love of people."

Bishop Kennedy is in San Francisco, awaiting transportation to his new missionary district of Hawaii.

Brotherhood of St. Andrew Breakfast

Mr. Justice Roberts Is Speaker After Corporate Communion on Washington's Birthday

Washington, D. C.—"How many labor unionists and their families are communicants in churches in Washington? How many of the business men and their families are closely knit in the church family in Washington today?" were two of the questions asked by Mr. Justice Roberts, speaker at the Brotherhood of St. Andrew breakfast at Epiphany Church, following the regular February 22nd Corporate Communion. Speaking to a capacity crowd, Mr. Justice Roberts pointed out that the Church—if it is to be strong and powerful and meet the new problems which we will be facing—must have represented in it every element in our community. He made a plea that the members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew seize the great opportunity confronting them to help in solving the problems facing our country and the world today, and which will arise in the future by bringing the spirit of Christ into men's lives, men in every class from the "economic royalist" to the meanest laborer.

In introducing Mr. Justice Roberts, the chairman of the meeting, Harrison Fiddesof, who served with the Justice on the Bishop's Nominating Committee in Washington, said that the speaker's work, both in his parish and in the diocese, was an inspiration to all laymen. Mr. Fiddesof said that it is well known that the position of Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court is an exacting one, requiring much both in time and effort, yet Mr. Justice Roberts is always willing to assume his share and more of laymen's work.

Celebrant at the eight o'clock service of Holy Communion was the Rt. Rev. George W. Davenport, retired bishop of Easton, and Bishop in residence in the Diocese of Washington since the death of Bishop Freeman. A telegram received from Bishop-Elect Dun to Mr. Fiddesof brought forth great applause. It read, "Am looking forward eagerly to meeting and working with you all after my arrival in Washington."

Justice Roberts began his talk by giving his estimation of Dean Dun, who will be consecrated Bishop of Washington on April 19. Speaking of the Diocese of Washington as having been without a leader, he spoke of Dean Dun "as a great spiritual leader, a great theologian . . . who is coming here to lead us, and I think the Diocese of Washington really looks forward to a tremendous spiritual resurgence. I think Dean Dun seriously appreciates the integration of the Diocese with the Cathedral that neither of them shall be neglected . . . and that he will be a great pastor to the Diocese . . . a great leader to our rectors and one who also understands the laymen's viewpoint."

The Corporate Communion and Breakfast was one of the most successful ever held in the diocese and was hailed as a beginning of greatly increased laymen's work.

LENTEN BROADCASTS ON MANY STATIONS

New York, N. Y.—Lenten broadcasts featuring the Forward in Service topic, The Doctrine of Man, will be made from many radio stations in all parts of the country, the Rev. Dr. C. Avery Mason, Forward in Service executive, reports. Dr. Mason says that he does not have complete information about broadcasting, but he knows definitely of broadcasting arrangements in thirty dioceses and missionary districts, with forty bishops and clergy taking part.

NEW MEMORIAL WINDOWS BEAUTIFY CHURCH OF GOOD SHEPHERD

Wichita Falls, Texas—The Church of the Good Shepherd has been recently beautified by the gifts of several new stained glass windows. A unique and pleasing tribute has been paid to the bishop of the diocese, the Rt. Rev. Harry T. Moore and to the rector the Rev. Claude A. Beesley, D. D., in the installation of one in their honor. The scene is the "Raising of Jairus' Daughter". The window is the gift of Mrs. W. H. Taylor, of Archer City. Among others are a "Mothers" window in the Baptistry given by the "Mothers" of the congregation and picturing Christ blessing little children. A "Nativity" window in the west wall of the Nave is in memory of John and Hannie Sammons. In memory of a former rector, the Rev. F. T. Datson, is another representing the Baptism of Jesus by John the Baptist. The dedication of these windows will take place on the visit of the Bishop the Sunday after Easter.

HIGHEST AWARD IN SCOUTING GOES TO RECTOR

Lubbock, Texas—The featured Boy Scout award for the year, the Silver Beaver, has been given to the Rev. John A. Winslow, rector of St. Paul's Church, Lubbock. The award was made at an annual meeting of the Boy Scout Council, by K. N. Clapp, who pointed out that Mr. Winslow's record includes 20 years of distinguished service in scouting, as a scout, scoutmaster, committeeman, and camp director. Mr. Winslow was praised for "his outstanding record of service to youth, and his fine civic record as Chairman of the Lubbock Youth Recreation Council".

The Silver Beaver is said to be the highest award in Scouting.

Personal Notes Of Interest

The Rev. O. H. G. Lloyd, of All Saints' Church, West Plains, in the Diocese of West Missouri, will become assistant minister of St. Paul's Church, Jackson, Mich. Mr. Lloyd will assist the Rev. Howard V. Harper in the work in Jackson County, consisting of St. Paul's Parish and a number of smaller stations.

DEATHS

Rev. Robert E. Randall

The Rev. Robert Edward Randall, retired priest of the Diocese of Michigan, died on February 15 at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Ernest Parrish, in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Mr. Randall was born in London, England, on December 15, 1870. He studied at Wycliffe College, Toronto, Ontario, and was ordained to the priesthood in 1913 by Bishop E. F. Robins, of Canada.

From 1912 to 1923 Mr. Randall served as Missionary-in-Charge of St. Luke's Church, Fort Vermilion, Peace River, Alberta, and in 1924 he was rector of Trinity Church, Marlin. He came to the Diocese of Michigan in 1925 as rector of St. Mark's Church, Marine City, and subsequently served as priest-in-charge of Emmanuel Church, Detroit. In 1930 he became Hospital Chaplain for the Detroit Episcopal City Mission, where he remained until his retirement in 1939.

Burial was at Vancouver, but it is planned, following the war, to remove the body to Marine City, Michigan, where Mrs. Randall and a son are buried.

Rev Antonio Machada de Fraga

Delayed word has just come from Brazil reporting the death of one of the earliest leaders of the Brazilian Episcopal Church. The Rev. Antonio Machada de Fraga was ordained September 1, 1893, in Brazil, by Bishop George W. Peterkin, of West Virginia, during the official visit made by the Bishop to Brazil six years before the Church there had its own first bishop, Lucien Lee Kinsolving. Mr. de Fraga, born in 867, was only five years younger than Bishop Kinsolving. As a young man he heard Christianity interpreted by the Episcopal Church's first missionaries, determined then to prepare for that ministry, and lived to see the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination. He worked in Montenegro, Rio de Sinos and Santa Rita, continuing to be active even after his retirement a few years ago. He presented more than six hundred persons for confirmation, an average of one a month the year round for fifty years.

REBUILDING OF COVENTRY

"In a Christian social attack Anglican and Free Churches in Coventry are already fully co-operative in will. Give that co-operation an instrument. Who is going to say it is wrong? The mass of the community will say it is entirely right.

Loyalty to the Anglican Church

"I write personally within the High Church tradition, of Hooker, Andrewes, Laud and the Catholic faith of the Prayer Book and of the Anglican Divines. The Cathedral is the central place of Anglican worship of the Diocese. Its worship centers on the Eucharist and it maintains the Anglican Liturgical traditions. At no point in this scheme do we go beyond our Anglican orders.

"Final forms of church unity are beyond our decisions. We want with the rest of the community for God's guidance and the authoritative action which does not lie with us as a diocese. Strong in our own position and recognizing our heritage, we can and should at the same time co-operate with fellow-Christians. This scheme provides for co-operation. Within that co-operation the Anglican Church keeps its integrity.

Appeal to Come Later

"The energies of our people are focussed now upon the single end of victory, but when the time is right we shall appeal to you to help us in our great task of rebuilding."

The Response of the Free Churches

The following statement is issued by the President of the Coventry Free Church Federal Council:—

"The initiative taken by the Bishop of Coventry and the Provost towards closer co-operation is heartily appreciated by the Free Churches of the city.

"For years we have experienced here a definite unity in Christ, and we know that the present gracious move is actuated by a pure and fervent desire for the extension of the Kingdom of God. The offer made is most gladly accepted by us. The Chapel of Unity will help to richer fellowship in Christ, while the Community Center for Christian Service will do much to widen and deepen the contribution of the Churches to the life of the people. The Coventry Free Church Federal Council, being informed by the Bishop and the Provost of the scheme, joyfully expressed general approval and appointed representatives to co-operate in working out details.

"We are confident that the publication of this great venture will thrill the hearts not only of Free Churchmen, so that they will confirm the approval of their representatives, but also of the people generally. Together we press on to make our city more nearly a city of God.

EARDLEY B. STRINGER,
President of the Coventry Free Church Federal Council."
2nd February, 1944.

Provost's Description of the New Cathedral

The Provost of Coventry, the Very Rev. R. T. Howard, has written a description of the new Cathedral for the people of Coventry. He explains that the old tower and spire remain, and that the western part of the old nave (burnt out, but with walls still standing) will enclose a cloister garden. The altar of the rebuilt Cathedral will stand near the chancel steps of the old, the old apse will remain, and the seating accommodation will be "right and left" from the altar, over which there will be a majestic lantern tower.

The Provost continues:

"The new Cathedral will seat 2,000 people comfortably. Wherever you sit you will feel at home and near to the center of worship. In this House of God the Church of England can again establish at the heart of the diocese and at the heart of the city its own special form of worship and make its own special contribution to the religion of the English people. But people of all denominations will feel, as ever, that it is their building, too, and will be completely welcome, as heretofore, at its services, small or great.

"What is the Cathedral for? Let the Prophet Ezekiel answer: 'Son of man, this is the place of my throne, where I will dwell in the midst for ever.' 'Blessed be the glory of the Lord from His house.'

The Cathedral Christian Center

"'From His house.' Go out from the Cathedral by one of the doors in the east wall, and you come into another enclosed green space, the Greater Cloister. On the left is the new Lady Chapel of the Church of England Cathedral. In front of you is an entirely new block of buildings—the Christian Center—comprising an assembly hall, smaller halls and rooms for meetings and conferences and discussions, all so greatly needed. The purpose of this Center is

NEW CHURCH AUTHORIZED

Austin, Tex.—A new church, to be known as The Church of the Good Shepherd, will be built in Austin, under the leadership of the Rev. Richard S. Martin, who resigned as rector of St. Paul's Church, Fayetteville, and student pastor at the University of Arkansas, to undertake the work.

Church services and Church School have been commenced in a chapel fitted out in a store building largely through the cooperation of St. David's and All Saints' Churches, and the Realty Company from which the space was obtained, diagonally across from the corner on Exposition Boulevard and Windsor Road, where land for the Church and Parish House has been purchased. This is in a new residential section where there is no other church of any kind.

A petition (signed at a meeting held despite a record seven inch snow) was presented to the Council of the Diocese of Texas in January, and organization as a Diocesan Mission was authorized. Bishop Quin has appointed Starr Kealhofer, warden; Edgar E. Wrege, secretary, and Frank W. Moore, treasurer. Women's and Men's groups have already met, and an active Church is in prospect.

"CHURCH'S YOUTH" THEME OF CONFERENCE

Atlanta, Ga.—The Association of Leaders in Christian Education in the Province of Sewanee and diocesan chairmen of Youth Work held a conference on "The Church's Youth in a Changing World" at All Saints' Church, Atlanta, February 1-3. The chairman of the Association, the Very Rev. Elwood L. Haines, presided.

The Rev. Frederick H. Arterton, executive secretary of the Division of Youth of the National Council, gave a splendid address on "The Challenge of the Times; A Frank Facing of the Situation That Confronts Us". Helpful workshops were held on "How Can Effective Youth Work Be Done in the Smaller Parishes and Missions", "How to Make Young People Sensitive to the Needs of the World Today and Especially in Communities in Which They Live" and "How to Make the Young People Feel They Are Really Important in the Life and Work of the Whole Church".

Miss Frances Young, editorial and leadership training secretary of the Department of Christian Education of the National Council gave an interesting talk on "Youth in Study and Action."

One of the important points brought out as a result of a symposium was "The Rule of Life Is the Heart of the Church's Youth Program". An inspiring panel on "Youth Developing a Prayer Life" was conducted by the Rev. James Stirling, of Florida. Mrs. E. L. Haines, the Rev. Lincoln A. Taylor, Miss Rosalie Wilson and the Very Rev. Harold Hoag served on the Panel.

At the business meeting of the Association the following persons were elected: The Very Rev. Elwood L. Haines, chairman; the Rev. C. R. Haden, vice-chairman; Miss Mary Pressley Walsh, secretary, and Mr. W. W. Davidson, treasurer, and the Rev. Van Garrett and Miss Ellen Correll, members of the Executive Committee.

The theme chosen for the 1945 meeting was "The Use of the Bible in Christian Education".

GIRLS' FRIENDLY OBSERVES 50TH ANN.

Detroit, Mich.—When the officers of the Girls' Friendly Society branch in Christ Church, Detroit, planned a special service to observe the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of their branch, they had no idea that it would turn into a gala occasion. However, nearly 300 attended the anniversary service on Sunday evening, February 20, and Miss Margaret Wilson, director of the branch for the past 20 years, is sure that at least 200 were present at the reception in the Neighborhood House, next to the Church, following the service.

The Rev. Francis B. Creamer, rector of Christ Church Parish, was the preacher at the anniversary service. The Rev. Robert S. Whitehead, vicar of the Parish Church, was in charge of the service, and the Rev. David S. Agnew, vicar of Trinity Chapel, St. Clair Shores (also a part of Christ Church Parish), assisted. A choir of 34 girls from the different groups, directed by Arthur H. J. Searle, provided the music. At the service a Chancel Prayer Book and two accompanying books were presented to the church by the Girls' Friendly Society.

The Christ Church Parish branch of the Girls' Friendly Society was organized on February 22, 1894, with Mrs. John Rumney as first president. At the present time there is a membership of 128, representing five different nationalities, and there are five associates.

A splendid offering, which will probably reach $300 by the time all checks are in, is to be given to the fund for the enlargement of the lovely small chapel at Holiday House, Pine Lake, the summer holiday spot owned by the Girls' Friendly Society of the Diocese of Michigan.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

"Not one unusual sin was involved in the crucifixion of Jesus."

Morality not backed and upheld by religious faith has never won for long the support of any considerable group of men.—H. H. Leavitt.

When power is not the servant of justice it is a curse to mankind. But when justice does not avail itself of the service of power it degenerates into anarchy. Our hope of an ordered peace lies in an organized power which knows itself to be the instrument of justice.—Reinhold Niebuhr.

Behind the technicalities of economic reconstruction and political device lies the truth that God is the creator of the world and the Father of all men; that He created men and nations for fellowship in His family, that His purpose is the supreme reality of human history and that policies which depart from that purpose must eventually lead to failure and disaster.—Dr. William Paton.

The Church is the only organism within a nation which by its very nature must be loyal to a God beyond the state, to humanity beyond the nation, to the Kingdom of God beyond any social order.—J. C. Bennett.

Life is a mysterious, baffling, often tragic enigma; and the Cross, which is an egima too, talks to our true estate—a huge, historic tragedy that yet takes in you and me, a revelation of man at his worst that yet awakens faith in man at his best, a crushing defeat of righteousness that is yet one of the greatest victories righteousness ever won, a supreme denial of God that yet has supremely revealed Him.—Dr. H. E. Fosdick.

William James, the philosopher, said once that his belief in personal immortality grew stronger as he grew older; and when asked why, he answered, "Because I am just getting fit to live."

The Church's task is to help men to believe in God, to whom men are dear—really to believe in God, and not simply in the idea of God. So to believe means that as we face suffering, cruelties, and injustice, our complacency is shattered, and we are moved, at whatever cost to ourselves, to mitigate and abolish all that prevents men from finding the abundant life it is God's will that they should enjoy.—Forward.

Let any class in society claim for itself privileges that are denied to others, and sooner or later it will wreck the social order, lose its leadership in some great crisis, and become subject to those it has oppressed until the next revolution causes another redistribution of privileges. History is full of great reversals; and . . . we cannot contemplate them without feeling that they embody an element of moral judgment.—W. M. Horton.

RED CROSS

Mr. Norman H. Davis, one of our Churchmen, who is Chairman of the American Red Cross, writes from Washington: "When so many of their loved ones are called on to give 'the last full measure of devotion,' the leadership, as well as the rank-and-file of the Churches, will wish to help the Red Cross accomplish its unprecedented task. We rely on you to set the tone of our whole enterprise in line with those ideals of freedom, justice, and mercy for which the Churches have always stood."

The Red Cross is the agency through which the Church can be the Good Samaritan.

This is not a Roll Call. This is a War Campaign.

CATHOLIC FOR EVERY TRUTH OF GOD, PROTESTANT AGAINST EVERY ERROR OF MAN

SMALL PARISHES HAVE EDUCATIONAL ADVANTAGES

Omaha, Nebraska—Instead of complaining about the handicaps under which the mission and small parish labors in its Christian education program, a group of religious leaders in the Sixth Province emerged from a recent two-day conference with the conclusion that the small parish and mission have distinct advantages in their educational opportunities. This finding is rooted in the increasingly accepted premise that since the Church is a family, the family of God, the ideal educational emphasis should be on the family pattern. When the Church school program is set apart as the primary religious education emphasis, as is the norm in the average large highly organized parish, the children are in part removed from "the family circle" of the Church.

Other conclusions reached by this provincial conference on Christian Education in Small Parishes and Missions, held in Trinity Cathedral, Omaha, emphasize that in our Christian education program, we should stop aping the public school, but should rebuild our work around the family ideal and pattern. Family life involves not only learning but working and having fellowship with one another. Christian education is a nurturing process, not simply a matter of teaching lessons. The instructional part is secondary; worship and fellowship are primary. It is in the intimacy and informality of the small congregation that we have a natural family pattern of relationships which provide the best opportunity for participating in the work, worship and fellowship of God's family, the Church.

Participating in the two-day study and discussion were bishops, priests, laymen and women workers from the nine jurisdictions of Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Iowa, South Dakota, North Dakota and Minnesota. Among the conference leaders were Rev. D. A. McGregor, Ph. D., and Miss Charlotte Tompkins, of the Division of Christian Education of the National Council.

Reports made on procedures now being followed in the educational program of the various dioceses and districts showed continual emphasis not only on correspondence work with isolated families, but a trend toward establishing Church schools in homes. During the past two months eight centers of this type have been organized in South Dakota. An outgrowth of this feature has been that books have been added to the traveling library which will be of special interest and guidance to parents in their leadership in these home Church schools. In Cody, Wyoming, the ministerial association has a chartered bus which each Sunday brings the children to church from the surrounding area.

Among the recommendations was the suggestion that Prayer Books, Bibles and Hymnals for children be in large type and that the diocesan departments of Christian education utilize more fully the rich resources available from the National Council Division of Christian Education, and pass these on to parish and mission groups.

USO POPULAR WITH NEGRO SERVICE MEN

Baltimore, Md.—More than 100,000 Negro service men have made use of the USO clubhouse here in the past year, according to Fred Johnson, club director. This number does not include the many family members and friends who also have been guests of the club.

Mr. Johnson attributes much of the popularity of the club to the fine cooperation it has received from the community which freely extends home hospitality to the men, and makes special plans for them on holidays. The churches, too, have been of invaluable assistance through the Religious Emphasis Committee. One of the most successful features of the committee's program is the Church Talent Group. Service men list their specialties at the club and these talents are then used at community rallies, church suppers and other forms of entertainment.

REV. A. C. MacINNES APPOINTED ARCHDEACON OF PALESTINE

New York, N. Y.—From Canon Charles T. Bridgeman, Episcopal representative in the Jerusalem and the East Mission and recently appointed Archdeacon of Syria and Lebanon, comes word that the new Bishop in Jeruaselm, the Rt. Rev. W. H. Stewart, has appointed the Rev. A. C. MacInnes, to be Archdeacon of Palestine and Transjordan. Archdeacon MacInnes has been secretary in Palestine of the Church Missionary Society and headmaster of Bishop Gobat School, Jerusalem. He is the eldest son of the late Bishop MacInnes, is married to the great-granddaughter of Bishop Gobat, the second Bishop, and is, Canon Bridgeman says, "well versed in Arabic and thoroughly qualified to carry on and intensify with more authority the work he has been doing as secretary of the CMS. Naturally he will relinquish as soon as possible his headmastership of Gobat School."

BISHOP TSU AND MEMBER OF SHANGHAI'S OLDEST MISSION MEET

Richmond, Va.—When the Rt. Rev. Y. Y. Tsu, assistant bishop for work in southwestern free China, was preaching recently in Richmond, Va., he went to call on Miss Mary Nelson, now 87 years old. Her father was the Rev. Robert Nelson, who went to China in 1851 and was in charge of Shanghai's oldest mission, the Church of Our Saviour. Miss Mary was born in Shanghai, in 1856. She returned to the United States more than sixty years ago but when Bishop Tsu greeted her in Chinese, she promptly replied in that language, using the Shanghai dialect of her day. Bishop Tsu's father succeeded Mr. Nelson as priest in charge of the mission, which has since become one of the strongest churches in the diocese.

Miss Nelson took Bishop Tsu to see a little country church built by her father on his return and named by him the Church of Our Saviour, after his Chinese mission. In 1929 this Virginia church had burned, and the Shanghai parish contributed $250 toward rebuilding its American namesake.

In 1937 the Shanghai church was badly damaged by bombs. The vestry sold the land and prepared to build a new church in a better location. When the new building was nearly finished, they lacked $2,000 to complete it, and this amount was sent by the National Council from funds given by the Diocese of Virginia for China Church relief.

MARY ALLEN VOLUNTEERS FOR SERVICE IN LIBERIA

New York, N. Y.—Mary DeHaven Allen, for the last 4½ years librarian at Virginia Theological Seminary, volunteered for missionary service, upon hearing of the emergency at the House of Bethany, Cape Mount, Liberia, and has been appointed by the National Council. She will leave for the field during next summer.

Miss Allen was born in Des Moines, Iowa, confirmed at Meridian, Conn., and her parish at present is Christ Church, Georgetown, Washington, D. C. She has a degree in music from the University of Pennsylvania, and a degree in science and a Master's degree from the Catholic University of America. Before coming to the Virginia Seminary, she tutored in high school and college.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

IN THESE DAYS of whirlwind and fire, the question, "But is there anything to this life beyond life?" is often asked, and yet more often it remains torment of thought; unasked, unanswered. Whenever the question comes my way, these words of John's Gospel upsurge unbidden and spill from my lips to act as guide to what can and must be said: "Jesus said, 'let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.'" (John 14:1f.) Is this an adequate answer to the question, "where do men go when earth life ends?" Or its inevitable twin question, "can those beyond and those left behind hold converse, keep in contact, bridge the darkness in between?" We can answer and know in part, sufficient to stay the wild fear of our hearts, enough to feed the aching void of loneliness.

Jesus helped men to understand the great mystery of death and beyond. That is why there is so much comfort—literally strength and courage—in the Christian religion; that is how we are able to live and die as men with hope, because we understand as far as we can and trust Him with the rest. Jesus said also, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." That is why Paul could cry out of the full depths of his heart, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" Surely no earthly distress or calamity, no matter how dreadful or severe, if we really love Him so much, self is forgotten in our desire to be one with Him. All pure love is identified with His love. That is why nothing can ever separate us from those we love unselfishly. I said separate, sever, destroy, end forever. "Nay," continues the inspired Paul, "in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature (thing), shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

JESUS SPOKE the opening words of the 14th chapter of John to His disciples and intimate friends at one of their last meetings. There were many things "He was most eager to impress upon His followers. He knew the paralyzing thought that was in their minds—that they would soon be left alone. He wanted them to know such an idea was a mistake. They would not be left friendless and helpless." He told them that even though they could not see Him or hold conversation with Him in the usual meaning of the word, that they would feel His presence and could hold to the promise of eventual reunion; and in the interim, to allow the Holy Spirit to strengthen and direct them through remembrance and daily contact in prayer—which is like a long white cord to Heaven (where God is), that we tug when we would speak across the rood lines and feel His near presence—the presence of His love and all whom we love.

THE FOURTH SUNDAY IN LENT

Grant, we beseech thee, Almighty God, that we, who for our evil deeds do worthily deserve to be punished, by the comfort of thy grace may mercifully be relieved; through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

---

We can say, because of Jesus, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," for they have begun the great adventure that leads to the very throne of God. Yes, and we can, if we only would, say "Blessed are the living who trust in the Lord," and hold to Him through difficulties, danger, and distress; for we can be sure that He is doing greater things than we can even desire or pray for with those in His loving care,

The Basic Principles of Order of the Thousandfold

By FREDERICK W. NEVE

I SHOULD LIKE to make clear the possibilities of The Order of the Thousandfold, as I have come to understand them.

1. First, the Order emphasizes the limitless extent of the divine resources made accessible and available to us as members of His Body by our Lord Himself.

2. That it was evidently His intention that we should use these resources for the furtherance of His cause and the building up of His Kingdom; for in conjunction with His command to His disciples to win the world for Him, He promised that His Presence and Power should be with them, which was the only guarantee of their success.

3. That His Presence and Power are as much present with us today as they were with them; and they, in like measure, serve as the only assured guarantee of the success of our work for Him.

4. That the all-important question in this connection is, not what we can do for Him, but what He can do through us. The first is extremely limited in its scope, whereas there is no limit to what He can accomplish through us; thus St. Paul, while admitting, "I can of mine own self do nothing," could also assert with assurance, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

5. To aim to be a thousandfold more useful, if it is our own undertaking, is a piece of exaggeration, but as applied to God's Power working through us "exceeding abundantly, above all that we ask or think," it is not an exaggeration but serves as a guidepost indicating the direction in which we should proceed. It would be too great a risk for God to entrust any measure of His Divine Power into our hands, but He can use us as the instruments by which He can bring His divine creative Power to bear upon the needs of the world.

6. Man, working through nature, has wrought mighty wonders and has outwardly transformed the world. God, working through man, can work greater wonders still, and can bring about a moral and spiritual transformation beside which the physical will be insignificant.

7. The prayer of the Order expresses the earnest desire that God would use us as channels through which His Power and Blessing may flow forth and become a creative and transforming influence in the world around us. The earnest and diligent use of this prayer can hardly fail to create the temper and disposition most favorable for the reception of the Spirit, resulting in a life of constantly increasing capacity for receiving and transmitting Spiritual Power, which is the highest form of power known to man; and the only power that can overcome the forces which are holding back the coming of the Kingdom, because it is not our power, but His.

THE ORDER emphasizes the fact that no matter what our material resources may be, as Christians, our spiritual resources are incalculable. St. Paul says of himself, "As poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things." Again, "All things are yours." And yet again, "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?"

We might have all the wealth of all the financial magnates of America laid at our feet and it would be but as the dust of the balance compared to the unsearchable riches which we share with Christ, unto whom all power is given in heaven and earth.

It is perfectly clear that Christ intended us to use these resources for the good of the world, even as He Himself had done, because He gave His disciples a commission which could not possibly be fulfilled except by drawing upon these spiritual resources. To send a handful of men and women out in the world to win it for Himself, men and women, who had no special qualifications for such a stupendous task, would have been entirely futile and hopeless. But he expressly bade them wait at Jerusalem until they were "endued with the Power from on High." The task was too great to be accomplished without drawing upon the Divine Power, but this Power was to be furnished them as their necessary equipment. They were to be filled, that is, to their utmost capacity, with the supernatural power which was to come from heaven itself.

WE STAND exactly where the disciples stood in the first days—the commission still holds good—the world still awaits our winning it for Him; His Kingdom has not yet come in its fulness. And on the other hand, the promises stand just as firmly as ever; the divine power is not exhausted, Christ Himself is still with us, and He looks to us to use His resources just as freely and just as successfully as did His first followers. Our work is to bring across from the spiritual world the power and blessing which this world so urgently needs and longs for.

It is like bringing the precious life-giving water from the mountains to the barren desert, transforming it from a barren waste into a garden of the Lord. The desert of this world may be made to blossom as the rose, if we Christians will allow ourselves to be made the channels through which the Living Waters of His Spirit can freely flow forth according to His promise, and bless and enrich humanity.

What has gone before may be summed up in a few words. The greatest need of the world is the true riches which are to be found only in the spiritual world and which can only be brought from that world to this by true Christians who are ready and willing to be used for that purpose by our Lord Himself, who has all the treasures of the spiritual world at His disposal and knows how best to apply them to the needs of the world, and how best to use us for that purpose.

The prayer of the Order expresses in the plainest and simplest manner our desire to be used by Christ in such a way as to manifest His Power in the world around us and bring about changes which we could not possibly bring about ourselves by our own power.

O Bride of Christ! beloved by Him,
Why are thine eyes of faith so dim?
Dost thou not know His mighty power
Is thine to use this very hour?

O Church of God! why dost thou deem
His promises an empty dream?
Shake off thine unbelief and be
His Angel to humanity.

F. W. Neve.

The Times and the Prophets

By EDWARD D. MYERS and W. C. HELMBOLD

IT WAS THE HEBREW PROPHETS of the eighth century before Christ who, with their profound spiritual insight, were the founders of that great world religion which we call Judaism and which became later the parent of two other world religions, Christianity and Mohammedanism. The teachings of the prophets may have considerable interest for us, not only because they founded the religion which was the parent of our own, but also because their teachings were a response to a social and historical situation which is very similar to that in which we now find ourselves. The prophets may thus be regarded, not as shadowy figures of a remote past, but as our own contemporaries in the very real sense that the circumstances under which they lived and taught are roughly the same as the conditions under which we are now living. If, then, we turn to the prophets as to contemporaries, their teaching may serve as a guide to us in our perplexities and their example as a beacon to a deeper religious faith.

Of the twenty-one civilizations, in Toynbee's brilliant analysis,* which have come into being since the dawn of history, all but one of them went through successive stages of growth and development until they were confronted by a social challenge which they were unable to meet. All but one, failing to devise a satisfactory response to this challenge, entered upon what may be called a "Time of Troubles". The sign of the Time of Troubles, and the fundamental cause of breakdown, is a loss of harmony between the component parts of the civilization and the consequent outbreak of internal discord. This discord reveals itself in a sharp two-fold division: between nations, on the one hand; and, on the other, between social classes within nations. Further, the division between nations gives rise to international wars on a crescendo scale which continue until the whole civilization has exhausted itself in suicidal warfare.

The one exception is our own Western Civilization. And it is an exception only in that it has not yet run the course of disintegration to its final dissolution. Like the twenty others, it has come into its Time of Troubles; it has responded to the challenge of nationalism by entering upon a career of militarism, on a scale and to a degree which has hitherto proved to be suicidal to all the twenty civilizations which have preceded it.

Furthermore, there is an extraordinary parallelism between the civilization in which the great prophets found themselves and this latter-day era in which we live and move and have our precarious being.

Woe to them that are at ease in Zion, and trust in the mountains of Samaria, which are named chief of the nations!

WHEN the Babylonic Civilization entered upon its Time of Troubles in the tenth century before Christ, it was divided into four important nations: Babylonia and Assyria and two less well-known nations called Elam and Urartu. There were also a number of small, unimportant states like Israel and Judah and Samaria and Damascus. The final victor in the internecine warfare which destroyed the Babylonic Civilization was the nation of Babylonia, but only after Assyria had exhausted itself through the malady of militarism. Assyria, during its extraordinary career, succeeded in subjugating not only a host of primitive societies to the east, but also the smaller states of its own society and, temporarily at least, two foreign civilizations, the Syriac and the Egyptian. During the whole period from about 750 to 597 B. C. Palestine had been constantly overrun by warring armies—Assyrian, Egyptian, Babylonian—and the small Palestinian states had all struggled to maintain a transient independence. In this effort they had sought, and sometimes successfully concluded, alliances with each of the great powers in turn against the others, they had submitted to whichever power was dominant at the moment and sought its favor by sending military and financial aid, and they had occasionally rebelled when they thought their chances of success were good.

At the same time, all the small nations, including Israel and Judah, were rent by divisions between social classes, the rich and the poor, employers and employees, capital and labor.

It was during this time and under these circumstances that the great prophets—Amos and Hosea, Micah and Isaiah—produced their teachings which were the beginning of Judaism. The writings of the prophets are full of the echoes of the two-fold division in the society in which they lived, and their teachings are manifestly responses to the challenge offered to them by the Time of Troubles in which they were living.

We may see how the times in which the prophets lived were similar to the times in which we are living by drawing a comparison, or a series of comparisons, between their age and our own. In the Babylonic Civilization of the eighth century B. C. the two-fold division of nation against nation and class divisions within and among the several nations was clear to all observers; in our own Western Civilization the same two-fold division is equally apparent. The Babylonic Civilization was engaged in international warfare on a crescendo scale throughout its whole geographical range; so is the Western. The Babylonic Civilization was articulated into four Great Powers and into a number of lesser States; the Western Civilization has been articulated into the Great Powers of Germany, England, France and the U. S. A., and a number of lesser states. In the earlier Civilization Assyria soon disposed of Elam and Urartu; in the present Civilization, Germany has disposed of France and Italy as effective independent Powers, the one by conquest, the other by absorption. In the earlier Civilization, Assyria formed an alliance with the alien Civilization of Egypt; in the latter, England and the U. S. A. have formed an alliance with the alien Civilization which is Russia, and Germany with the alien Power which is Japan. In the earlier Civilization the lesser States were trampled and overrun by Assyria, as Belgium and Holland and others have been by Germany; and some small states made alliances with Great Powers in the hope that they would be spared, as Finland with Germany. All the States of the Babylonic Civilization, both great and small, put their trust in foreign alliances, military equipment, and fortified towns, and in all of them there was an upsurging of the spirit of nationalism.

Even from this brief comparison it should be clear that the times of the prophets are, in a very real sense, philosophically contemporary with our own,—contemporary, or perhaps later than our own. For neither is it yet possible to determine the exact date of the beginning of our Western Time of Troubles, nor can we doubt that we are at this moment living in it.

*Toynbee, A. J., "A Study of History," London, 1935, 1939, Milford.

For the day of the Lord is at hand upon all nations: as thou hast done, so shall it be done to thee: thy reward shall return upon thine own head.

WE ARE NOW in a position to see that the prophets may, rightly and reasonably, be viewed not as shadowy figures of a remote past, but as men who were facing the same political and spiritual difficulties which beset our own times. And therefore the teachings of the prophets have for us a timeliness and vitality that we may not have hitherto suspected.

The social divisions and the evils resulting therefrom were the offences that most deeply impressed the prophet Amos and were the sins of which he took most account. As examples of this division between classes, Amos inveighs against the bribing of judges to render decisions in favor of the rich against the poor, against the unequal distribution of wealth, against the unscrupulousness of merchants who use their wealth and power to get still more wealth and more power from the oppressed poor. The divisions between nations also are reflected in the writings of Amos: the growth of the nationalistic spirit appeared to him as only a prelude to the downfall of the nation. He was convinced that merely to follow the forms of the traditional religion of his people was not enough. There must be a spiritual regeneration within the hearts of the people. He taught that God is the God Thus the essence of the teaching of Amos is that unless a nation be born again in spirit, it is doomed to inevitable destruction. Regeneration can not be found either in a cult or in a merely nationalistic religion, but only in obedience to the demands of the God of all of all men, not of one group or of one nation only. men. That is the only salvation: a moral and spiritual rebirth.

Hosea took up and carried on the teaching of Amos and insisted that international alliances, military equipment, fortified towns and the rest cannot be the means of salvation. That is to be found only in the practice of righteousness. True worship and true religion consist in mercy and love towards all men alike.

The prophet Micah was as uncompromising in his denunciation of social injustice as Amos had been and it is the chief, almost the only, sin that he denounces, so that he may be regarded as the protagonist of the democratic tendencies of the prophets. Isaiah taught chiefly that true religion and true worship consist in faith in one God and in the righteous life. True religion for all four of these prophets was to believe in God as universal and spiritual, and to have faith in love and mercy and righteousness as the essence of the worship of Him.

THE WORD RECORDED

From the first word of Genesis to the last word of Revelation, the 774,000-word Bible (King James version) can now be heard as well as read. Manhattan's American Foundation for the Blind, Inc., last week completed Talking Book records of the entire Bible.

The 169 recordings (129 of the Old Testament, 40 of the New), are played on a special slow-rotating phonograph. It takes half an hour to play one side of one record. Total time: 84½ hours.

Each of the 27 U. S. libraries which have departments for the blind will get complete sets of these records. Packed in stout cartons the records will be lent free (no postage required) to the blind, who can play them in their homes.

Chief recording problem was to find readers with a pleasing voice quality, an ability to hold an even reading pace. A few clergymen filled the bill, but most recordings were made by diction-expert stage and radio people.

Said the New York Sun's Columnist Dave Boone: "It would be fine if everybody, not only the blind, could benefit by the talking Bible, with the records made by painstaking speakers. The way the Gospel is rushed through and mumbled in too many churches, with no more expression than if the most moving passages were something on the back of a railroad ticket, is inexcusable."—Time, January 31, 1944.

"BREATHE ON ME, BREATH OF GOD!"

How often have we sung that beautiful hymn! How rarely have we experienced it!

Breathe on me, Breath of God,
Until my heart is pure,
Until with Thee I will one will,
To do or to endure.

Breathe on me, Breath of God,
Till I am wholly Thine,
Till all this earthly part of me
Glows with Thy fire Divine.

THE CLUE TO PASCAL, by Emile Cailliet. Westminster Press, Philadelphia, Pa. 187 pages. $2.

Blaise Pascal is a man little known to most of us today, in whom there has recently been a real revival of interest. He was a seventeenth century Roman Catholic scientist, philosopher and Christian mystic. This volume is a popular biography which provides an excellent introduction to Pascal and leads one to desire to know more. "The clue" to the understanding of Paschal, says Dr. Cailliet, is the great part which the Bible played in influencing his life and thought. "Never was a Roman Catholic nearer evangelical Protestantism nor farther away. In this supreme antinomy is summed up for us the secret of Pascal and of his anguish." Pascal was a living symbol of the evangelical note which goes back to St. Augustine and to St. Paul, and which Protestants sometimes overlook in the Roman Church. Dr. Cailliet teaches French Literature at the University of Pennsylvania. His biography of Pascal is movingly told. A fine introduction by Dr. John A. Mackay adds to the luster of this small volume.

Religion in the Armed Services

No one denies the valuable work being done by the Chaplains in all branches of our armed forces. We all know that the Army and Navy officially recognize the services and work of the Church. If this were not true, there would be no Chaplains. We believe it also to be true that the major denominations are supporting their chaplains in a more realistic way than ever before. We know this to be true of our own Church through the work of the Army and Navy Commission. This is all on the credit side.

There is another side to the picture. This side is very forcibly presented in an article in the March 6th issue of Christianity and Crisis. The article is too long to quote in full. There are some things in it that we believe have deep significance. The title of the article is "Foxhole Religion." The opening paragraph is as follows. (The author's name is withheld for obvious reasons.)

"High powered publicity departments of both the Army and Navy Chaplains Corps plus the well meaning reports of some zealous chaplains have given the people the impression there is a religious upsurge or 'revival' among the men in the armed services. There are numerous publications of statistics to verify this impression. However, carefully analyzed and broken down, these figures are not so impressive and certainly do not justify the term 'revival'."

The author then goes on to prove his statement. He shows there is a high interest at induction centers, in early stages of training, and at the front, particularly for new troops going into combat for the first time. Then he shows that though the army officially recognizes religion, the officers are notably absent from most divine services. In addition, it is after the excitement and the strain of battle that there is generally a reaction, and as one Roman Catholic Chaplain expressed it, "all the fervor induced by proximity to sudden and violent death is all too soon dissipated and God, whose benign Providence brought them back safely, is seemingly forgotten while men seek this and that indulgence."

Pity not the Chaplain who works under fire—he is as happy as can be—let your sympathy seek out the Chaplains who must contend with the religious apathy so prevalent where men have been removed from the dangers of the combat zone. The author of this article sums up by saying, "It is probably too much to expect the Army and Navy to be character building institutions. They do not exist for that purpose. But on the other hand they should not be character destroying institutions. This latter statement is made in view of the fact that very often the services condone excess of indulgence just back of combat areas. The excuse being men must give way to their pent up feelings and work off their excess energy." This is a serious charge.

Finally the writer says: "The answer to the prblem in the armed services is not clear. What is clear is that the complacent bubble inflated by talk of a religious 'revival' among the men must be punctured. The problem must be dealth with both within and without. There must be a new attitude on the part of those in authority. As the war enters its third year, with the end still not in view, the ties that bind men to home and church, to God and high endeavors, will grow weaker and weaker in face of the attitude expressed above. We cannot be satisfied with fox-hole religion. The obstacles are here. They have yet to be overcome."

We have not quoted at length from this very realistic article about religion in the armed services, for the purpose of alarming any one. Our purpose is to break our complacency; to inspire us to back our Chaplains to the last ditch, and to be more diligent on the home front in keeping in contact with the men from our parishes now in the armed services.

As "fox-hole" religion is not enough for soldiers, sailors and marines, so, too, it is not enough for us. Vital religion on the home front must be joined with vital religion on the battle front, if we are to meet the high purpose of our calling as convinced Christians.

Midway in Lent

This next Sunday marks the halfway post in the Lenten season. It would be an interesting thing to compile the attendance figures at all the Lenten services which have been held, not that mere church attendance is proof of aroused consciences; but at least they are indicative of interest in things religious.

In our own city, we have had reports from most rectors that there has been an increased attendance at the Lenten services. We would be very glad to hear from Rectors in cities in other sections of the country.

This third War Lent should make people think very earnestly upon the root causes of the evil that apparently is triumphant in our world today. They are not apt to think deeply unless the leaders inspire them to do it. Preaching sweet platitudes today is taboo. We do not need clever preaching. We need prophetic preaching.

Midway of Lent gives us the opportunity to check up, and to prepare ourselves to surge ahead with a burning conviction that we, weak as we are have the answer to the world's need. That answer is the Crucifixion and the Resurrection!

Analogies From the Fourth Gospel

The Vine and Its Branches

By HEWITT B. VINNEDGE

"I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman. Every branch in Me that beareth not fruit He taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, He purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit. . . . . Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in Me. I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in Me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without Me ye can do nothing. . . . . This is My commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you." (John 15:1-12, passim).

CHRIST IS THE VINE, which is preeminently the fruit-bearing plant. Unlike many others which produce valuable fruit, it has nothing of value except its fruit. It would seem, then, that we as branches of the vine which is Christ have no value except in the capacity we may have to bear fruit. Only as fruitful branches of our Lord do we have any spiritual value, any true worth in the eyes of God. The branch must abide in the vine, that is to say, remain in vital dependence upon it, if it is to meet the requirement of fruitfulness. So, apart from Christ we can do nothing. If the branch fails so to abide, then it loses the life-principle which is in the vine. But if we, as branches, meet the responsibility of abiding in Him, then His abiding in us is the assured result. We must keep firm this connection, by faith continually laying hold on Him and partaking of the preciousness of Christ, Who is our life.

"My Father is the Husbandman", or the Cultivator, or the Keeper of the vineyard. He tends all the branches in order to render them ever more fruitful. The fruit of the Spirit, says St. Paul, "is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, temperance" (Galatians 5:22, 23). These must show in the life of a branch, in its activities and in its character. These constitute the harmonious development in which every quality of the branch is blended with every other. And pervading all must be the greatest element in true fruitfulness—love, that seeks not its own well being, unselfish love of one another. So thought our Lord, when He commanded our love in order that we might remain fruitful.

"Every branch that beareth fruit, He purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit". Doubtless that is why persons that lead godly and holy lives are sometimes called upon to suffer. A good keeper of a vineyard will pay but scant attention to branches that seem to have no possibility of fruitfulness. He may cut them off; he may just neglect them, if they do not hamper the fruitfulness of others. But suppose a branch be fruitful; suppose it have potentiality of even greater fruitfulness. A good husbandman will give it great attention. He may prune it; he may treat it with searing fluids; he may spray it with noxious chemicals. But all this he will do in order that this good branch may be yet more fruitful. So is it often in the lives of godly Christian folk, who are fruitful branches of the Everlasting Vine. We have all seen such persons go through searing and bitter experiences, only to become richer spiritually and more fruitful in good works and faith and in the service of God.

THERE HAS NEVER been a time when this condition could not be observed; but perhaps the sadness and bereavement attendant upon war are making it still more apparent now. Friends and clergy of sufferers, in ways that may seem stumbling and inadequate, have sought to accompany the descent into the shadows and the rising again from those shadows. Let no one think that because of his sufferings God was punishing him. Sometimes, no doubt, a particular suffering can be traced directly to a particular wrong committed—sometimes but not often. Rather, let one have faith in the Eternal Keeper of the vineyard, in the wisdom of the Eternal Husbandman, Who is the Father. Let one have faith that as a good branch is made more fruitful by pruning, so is the human spirit.

Perhaps by self-denial, by greater love for one another, with such sacrifice as that might entail, we can do a small amount of pruning in our own lives, and so the better prepare our souls for the divine pruning. Perhaps we can thus make our lives more fruitful for others. And then, as we, the branches, submit in faith and hope to the pruning and purging of the Keeper of the Vineyard, we may lean the more heavily on the Everlasting Vine, and draw fresh strength from the Vine which is Christ. Abiding in Him, we shall feel His life-principle flowing steadily within us, to give us power and fruitfulness.

and will, if we let Him, keep near unto us and keep us near unto Him, until dark shadow has turned into the quest fulfilled: "They shall walk in the light."

At times "we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face"—when the perspective of time has given us sight again: "Now I know in part, but then I shall know even as also I am known." We must never lose Paul's trilogy of the eternal which summarizes why our hearts must not be troubled if we believe in the Father God revealed by Christ. "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

We can be sure that beyond the dark mystery of any now, love will endure and that the transition of love from Life Beyond can only strengthen and beautify it. We never lose what we love, and whatever of life or death that comes but transforms it and redeems it and makes it radiant of light like the sun.

If Jesus is the way, the truth, and the life, then the light for the way, the revelation of the truth and the answers to life and eternity are to be found in Him. In every moment of seemingly irreparable loss or sorrow's bitter sting we are driven to Him and He turns not away. "Come unto Me," He said; come stand with Him straight and tall against the strong wild wind and wait with Him for the dawn which will surely come.

SAMMY SQUIRREL SEES THE WORLD

Sammy Squirrel looked out at The World through The Hole in the hedge. It was wonderful, sunny, green, and inviting. Of course, part of its beauty was due to Mama Squirrel telling him never to go out there alone—just as if he couldn't find The Hole in the hedge that led back home!

Sammy looked back at The Maple Tree where Mama was busily digging around. Maybe she wouldn't mind if he crawled through the hedge and just looked at The World from the other side. He wouldn't go far, just through The Hole, and then, after he'd taken a long look at The World, he'd come right back. Mama Squirrel wouldn't even know the difference!

Sammy slid closer to the hedge and, almost before he knew it, was through The Hole and outside. Why, The World was even bigger than he thought! It was an ocean of green grass, with trees bigger than The Maple, and some wonderful, tall, yellow flowers that looked like marching soldiers.

Just a few jumps away, too, were some acorns like Mama buried for the winter, and he thought how proud and pleased she'd be if he brought them back to her. She'd know, then, that he wasn't a baby squirrel any more, but really old enough to go out into The World by himself.

Sammy ventured a step away. His little heart pounded in his breast, and he turned around again, but The Hole was still there. So he felt very brave, and leaped over the grass to where the acorns lay scattered on the ground. Why, there were hundreds of them—maybe millions, he bragged to himself! He picked one up and was about to carry it away in his mouth as he'd seen Mama Squirrel do, when he looked up suddenly and saw The Monster crouching ahead of him.

It was just a few steps away and making loud noises in its throat, while it moved its head from side to side. Sammy knew right away it was one of The Monsters Mama Squirrel had told him were the pets of the big animals called People who lived in the big house on the other side of the hedge. He wanted to turn and run, but couldn't move. The Monster took a leap toward him and crouched low again, big ears flapping, and a growl in its throat sounding louder and louder.

Sammy dropped the acorn and scampered across the grass toward The Hole, but when he got there, The Hole was gone! Yes, really gone, because he hadn't paid attention to the way he ran and had jumped in the wrong direction. With more time he could have dug under the hedge or squeezed through it, but The Monster was coming after him, and Sammy had no time to dig his way back to The Maple Tree!

He pawed the earth, ran everywhere, but no matter where he went, The Monster came after him. Sometimes he was so close, Sammy was afraid of being gobbled up, but he always managed to get away. Sammy's little heart was almost bursting, and he knew that pretty soon The Monster would catch up with him. And after that he'd never see the friendly old Maple Tree, or Mama and Papa Squirrel again! They'd wonder what had become of him and Mama Squirrel would tell all the other little squirrels Sammy had been carried away by The Monster because he had been disobedient and gone out into The World against her orders.

The Monster reached out for him with a big, furry paw, and then, suddenly, Sammy heard Mama Squirrel's voice calling him.

"Sammy Squirrel! Sammy Squirrel!" she cried. "Here I am by The Hole, run quickly!"

Sammy followed the sound of Mama's voice, but The Monster was still running after him. There was The Hole in the hedge, just as if it had always been there right in front of him! Mama Squirrel was there, too, jumping up and down as she called to him, and Sammy dragged himself through The Hole just as The Monster reached it behind him.

There on the other side was the friendly old Maple Tree and Mama Squirrel running toward it.

"Climb the tree, Sammy," she called back to him.

Sammy could hardly drag himself over there, but he managed to reach The Maple Tree, and once he touched the welcome bark, he wasn't afraid any more—at least not very much afraid, for this was Home, and he knew how to climb the tree behind Mama Squirrel.

High up on the branches, he looked down at The Monster trying to get to him. But the hedge was too high for The Monster to climb, and The Hole too small for it to crawl through, so Sammy was safe. Mama Squirrel was chattering at him, scolding him, now that the danger was past, but somehow Sammy didn't mind. It was nice and cozy up in The Maple Tree, and he didn't even care to go out into The World again. At least not until he knew more about it, and how to find his way back Home again!—Helen Williams in S. S. Times.

WHEN A SHEEP'S NOT A SHEEP

When is a sheep not a sheep? When it's dead; then it's mutton. So a pig is pork, a calf is veal, a steer is beef, a deer becomes venison, when they are on the table to eat.

Have you ever wondered why these names are changed when the animal is killed and used for food?

The reason is found in a great historical event which occurred nearly nine hundred years ago. In the year 1066 the Normans, led by William the Conqueror, conquered what is now England and became the rulers of the land. As they were French, the French language became the official language of the court and the ruling classes.

However, the common people, the Anglo-Saxons who were the original inhabitants, kept on using their own tongue. Many of them were servants of the conquerors. They had the care of the live animals which they called by the Saxon names such as ox, cow, pig, calf, sheep, deer and so on.

But when the animals were killed for food they were killed to be eaten by the French masters. Naturally the conquerors gave the meat the French names instead of the Saxon. So, while the Saxon servant who cared for his masters called a sheep a sheep, the Frenchman called it mouton. An ox was boeuf, and so on. The names have remained and that is why many of these animals are called by different names when they come to the table.—Our Dumb Animals.

BEAUTY

God must love beauty,
For behold the flowers, the trees,
The color of the bluebird's wing,
The rose of dawn,
The rainbow tints of sunset,
The swelling buds of spring.

God must love music,
For if we but listen, throughout
The realms of nature can be found,
In song of bird, in brooks,
In hum of insects,
Sweet harmony of sound

God showers upon the world
So much of beauty,
That we may from His gifts a lesson learn,
Not only that we should with joy accept it,
But give it in return.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NEWS

New Commission Holds Meeting

Joint Commission on Approaches to Unity Meets—Elects Bishop Strider Chairman

New York—The Joint Commission on Approaches to Unity held its first meeting in New York February 10-11, with all members present except Dean Sprouse. After it organized by electing Bishop Strider as chairman, Bishop Fenner as vice-chairman, Dean Zabriskie as secretary and Mr. Spaulding as assistant secretary, the Presiding Bishop and the President of the House of Deputies explained their understanding of the action of General Convention in continuing the Commission.

The Commission formally recorded its realization that only General Convention can commit the Protestant Episcopal Church and also its conviction that it was authorized to ask on behalf of General Convention the counsel of Lambeth Conference if the latter body should meet before next General Convention.

A letter was drawn up to be sent to the Commission of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., explaining the present status of negotiations. The Chairman was directed to keep in touch with them, associating with himself two other members of our Commission for such informal conversations as might seem advisable before a joint meeting of both Commissions.

Some time was devoted to considering both the Majority and Minority Reports submitted to General Convention by the former Commission. Sub-committees were appointed to study intensively some of the subjects at issue in these two reports and in all pending negotiations for unity.

Several members urged that unless there was developed throughout the membership of the Church an understanding of the importance of unity and a genuine will to achieve it, no plans or platforms would be of much significance. Professor Greene of Princeton was asked to study and report on how this may best be accomplished.

Before adjournment the Commission directed the Chairman to write to the former Chairman, Bishop Parsons, its affectionate greetings and its gratitude of his great contributions to the cause of Christian understanding and unity; and also to express its appreciation to Dr. Sargent for putting the parish house of St. Bartholomew's Church at its disposal for the meeting. The next sessions are to be held at the College of Preachers in Washington, September 11 to 13.

The membership of the Commission is as follows: Bishops Strider, Fenner, Gardner, Keeler, Oldham, Washburn, Drs. Barnes, Dun, Lewis, Sprouse, Wedel, Zabriskie, Messrs. Balthis, Foulkes, Greene, Guerry, Mitchell, Spaulding.

SEMINAR FOR SOCIAL WORKERS LENTEN FEATURE

Denver, Colo.—A seminar, "Just for Social Workers" is a feature of the Lenten program at St. John's Cathedral, Denver. The seminar runs four Wednesday evenings, and is sponsored by the Department of Christian Social Relations of the diocese of Colorado. The program is a meditation, followed by supper; then small groups are organized, with speakers to take up various problems of professional social workers. The seminar is directed by members of the Episcopal Church, but all interested social workers are invited.

Questions discussed include "Do we need religion?" "How to get inspiration in work vs. too much technique"; "The Gospels a textbook in casework technique"; "Relation of religious experience to emotional maturity"; "Where does the Church help or fail the social worker?"

THREE PARISHES WILL OBSERVE CENTENNIAL

New Orleans, La.—Centennial ceremonies are to be held this spring in three important Parishes in Louisiana: Annunciation, New Orleans, St. James', Baton Rouge, and St. James', Alexandria. All three were founded during the early days of the Episcopate of the Rt. Rev. Leonidas Polk, first bishop of the diocese, later General of the Confederacy. Each Parish has played an important part in the growth of the prosperous communities in which each exists, and each has always been active and loyal to the work of the diocese and of the national Church's program. All three Churches regularly meet their Convention Fund assessment in full, and also the full amount of their annual expectancy to the program. All three intend to observe appropriately the important part played in their early history by the great Bishop Polk, to whom all intend to pay pertinent recognition during their anniversary ceremonies.

CHAPLAIN E. R. CARTER LECTURES IN ENGLAND

From Headquarters, European Theater of Operations United States Army, comes the information that a considerable group of United States Army Chaplains have arrived in the United Kingdom, and have completed an orientation course given at an American headquarters in England.

The announcement states that "one of the highlights of the course was a lecture by Chaplain Edwin R. Carter, of Richmond, Va., "who has been in England for some time in liaison duty. Chaplain Carter spoke on American-British Relationships. He pointed out that the British can aid American soldiers greatly by taking them to English churches, thus giving the men in uniform something more than an Army chapel.

Only Episcopal Church Chaplain reported to have completed the course is Captain Walter Plumley, who before he entered military service, was rector of St. Mary's, Haddon Heights, N. J.

Young Churchmen Movement Launched

Diocese of Kentucky Holds Meeting—165 Young People Present—Elect Officers

Louisville, Ky.—The Young Churchmen Movement is launched in the Diocese of Kentucky under the leadership of the Rev. Canon S. Hughes Garvin, chairman of the Youth Division of the diocesan department of Christian Education. Early in January a meeting was held, at which over 165 young people were present and voted to adopt the new constitution, and the new Youth Commission elected officers for the ensuing year.

The Youth of the Louisville area held their first united Corporate Communion in the Cathedral on February 22, at which time over 175 were present; immediately following, breakfast was served in the Cathedral House, at which a short business session was held and greetings extended from the Bishop. At the breakfast was a large white cloth on which was written up and down the center in red these words, "To Know the Christ and to Make Him Known", and everyone who made his communion wrote on this cloth his name, and these names have been embroidered. The names of those men in the diocese who have given their lives in the service of their country will also be embroidered thereon with small crosses beside them.

As the Young Churchmen entered the Cathedral for the central Corporate Communion, they were handed a small card on which to write the name of a boy in the Service for whom they would like prayers to be said. These were collected during the service and dedicated at the altar.

At the same time throughout the diocese, at Henderson, Bowling Green, Owensboro, Hopkinsville, Hickman, and Paducah, Corporate Communions were being held for these Young Churchmen.

Bishop Clingman in his greeting said, "I am happy to know that the young people of the Diocese of Kentucky have agreed to be a part of the United Movement of the Church's Youth. The work of the Church will be stronger, and the voice of the Church will be clearer, if we concentrate our efforts in a spirit of unity. I trust that this effort towards unity on the part of our youth will point the way to similar united organization and action on the part of the women of the Church, and then on the part of the laymen."

140 CONFIRMED AT ST. MARTIN'S

New York, N. Y.—On Sunday evening, February 20, a class of 140 persons was presented to Bishop Gilbert by the rector of St. Martin's Church, the Rev. John H. Johnson, D. D. The Service marked the 16th anniversary of the organization of St. Martin's and during this period two thousand people have been confirmed in this parish.

Government Made No Selections

In Exchange of Prisoners from Japan—Swiss Representatives Were in Charge

Washington, D. C.—The Department of State is anxious to correct reports "that American passengers from the Philippine Islands who returned on the Gripsholm in the recent exchange of nationals with Japan were selected for repatriation by the Department of State. These reports are not true."

A State Department bulletin on this subject emphasizes that the recent exchange included for the most part civilians who were in Japan, Manchuria, China, Hong Kong and Indo-China. The Japanese Government contended that the provisions of the exchange arrangements were not applicable to Americans who were in the Philippines, Wake or Guam when those territories were occupied by the Japanese. Only after months of negotiations did the Japanese Government finally indicate that it would return to the United States in the second exchange a small number of civilians from the Philippines. "The Japanese Government exercised complete control over the departure of those desiring repatriation and actually refused to permit the repatriation of a number of Americans whose inclusion in the exchange Swiss representatives in charge of American interests endeavored to arrange on humanitarian grounds."

The Bulletin says further: "The Government of the United States recognizing that all American citizens have an equal right to consideration, did not select individual Americans for inclusion in the exchange or discriminate in any other way between individual Americans desiring repatriation."

In dealing with the Japanese, the Swiss representatives in charge of American interests desired that preference be given to those under close arrest; interned women and children; the seriously ill, and interned men with preference being given, other things being equal to married men long separated from their families in the United States. The Japanese Government did not permit these principles to be applied in the Philippine Islands and even in other areas it prevented their full application in respect to certain individuals.

The State Department reports that negotiations for a further repatriation continue, but there is little indication that this will be possible in the early future. "Relations and friends in the United States of American nationals still in Japanese custody," says the State Department, "may be assured that their Government will not relax its efforts to induce the Japanese Government to agree to the release for repatriation of all such Americans and to insure that all be given equal consideration in such arrangements as may be made for their repatriation. Meanwhile, the Government is persevering in its efforts to relieve the situation of American nationals still detained in Japan."

CAPTAIN LITTELL RECEIVES OFFICIAL COMMENDATION

New York, N. Y.—A commendation for "outstanding service and conduct in the battle zone of the South Pacific area" has been awarded Captain Edward M. Littell, Chaplain Corps, United States Army, according to an official dispatch from Lieutenant-General Millard F. Marmon's headquarters in the South Pacific.

Captain Littell, son of the Rt. Rev. S. Harrington Littell, former Bishop of Honolulu, returned to the United States to recuperate from malaria. The official commendation reads:

"For outstanding conduct in the South Pacific area during the period of November 9, 1942, to February 1, 1943. Attached to a medical battalion throughout combat operations, Chaplain Littell performed the functions of his office with devoted efficiency. At a forward clearing station he met all ambulances, was present at the continuous flow of surgical operations, volunteered for blood transfusions, and circulated through the wards day and night administering to the religious needs of his men.

"When temporarily relieved, he could be found making his way up the lines of evacuation, accompanying little squads, rendering first aid and bolstering morale among the first line troops while exposed to heavy hostile fire. Thus, through his courageous altruistic actions, Chaplain Littell contributed inestimably to the morale of the soldiers during the combat period."

Chaplain Littell was born in Hankow, China, and received his education at Kent School, Harvard, and General Theological Seminary. He has been in the service about a year and a half.

ARCHBISHOPS' VISITS ARE "FEW AND FAR BETWEEN"

"Archbishops are very busy people, and visits such as that which the Archbishop of York (Dr. Garbett) hopes to pay to the United States are necessarily few and far between." Thus comments the Press Bureau of the Church of England, adding the perhaps-not-recalled fact that Archbishop Garbett will not be the first English Archbishop to cross the Atlantic. That distinction, it appears, belongs to the late Archbishop Davidson, who went to America in 1904, at the invitation of the Presiding Bishop, to attend the General Convention at Boston. "During that visit, the Archbishop who was accompanied by his wife, was brought into contact not only with many of the leading men in American Church circles," the Bureau's statement continues, "but also with other leaders of public opinion in many walks of life, and to quote the words of Bishop Lawrence, of Machusetts, 'His coming did much to knit the Churches and the Nations'."

LENTEN SERVICES

Lenten noon-day services in Mobile are at Christ Church. Because of the crowded condition of the city, luncheon is served in the parish house in order that people may have time to attend. Speakers include: the Rev. William H. Marmion, Birmingham; the Rev. Hamilton West, Rugusta, Ga.; the Rev. John L. Jenkins, Selma, Ala., and the Rev. Edgar Neff, Montgomery, Ala.

Detroit Chooses Episcopalian

As Executive Director of Inter-Racial Planning Committee

Detroit, Mich.—Religious circles in Detroit have been buzzing happily lately over the appointment of Mr. Harold Thompson, a member of the Executive Council and of the Trustees of the Diocese of Michigan, as executive director for Mayor Edward Jeffries' interracial planning committee. The appointment, made with the full approval and hearty endorsement of the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Creighton, D. D., Bishop of Michigan, came as the result of a unanimous vote by the members of the committee in favor of Mr. Thompson as director.

Mr. Thompson has served for the past 15 years as public relations executive for the Detroit Trust Company, and has long been active in the work of the Diocese of Michigan. He is also president of the Pathfinders of America, an educational organization serving children of all races and creeds. He became well-known throughout all the churches of Detroit last fall as general chairman of the United Church Canvass, first of its kind held in the city.

One of the most important matters to be considered by the interracial planning committee will be adequate housing for Detroit's Negro population. Housing Commissioner Charles F. Edgecomb stated at a recent meeting of the committee, "Either we must adopt a policy of adequate expansion for Negro housing, or we must frankly admit there is no room for our Negro population in Detroit. The City Council has designated us to advise them on interracial relations. The Housing Commission is too small and not sufficiently representative to decide such a matter of policy. Between 40,000 and 50,000 Negroes are inadequately housed at present," he said. This situation has arisen as a result of the many thousands of Negroes who have migrated to Detroit in recent months to find work in the war plants and other industries.

Dr. Bruce H. Douglas, commissioner of health, pointed out that the inadequately housed Negroes constitute about a quarter of Detroit's Negro population.

In commenting on Mr. Thompson's appointment as executive director of the interracial planning committee, "The Detroit News" remarked editorially, "Harold Thompson, the Interracial Committee's choice, is a man of considerable ability, being public relations executive of the Detroit Trust Company, and his other activities speak of him as a man of good conscience and broad human sympathies. He is active in the affairs of the Episcopal Diocese and president of the Pathfinders. Mr. Thompson deserves appreciation of his willingness to devote himself to this hard and possibly thankless job. He also deserves, in the American tradition, the opportunity to tackle it with assurance, at least to begin with, of the good will of all concerned."

A HALF CENTURY IN THE PRIESTHOOD

Phoenix, Ariz.—The 50th anniversary of the ordination to the priesthood of the Rev. Edward Wilson Averill, D. D., retired dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Fond du Lac, Wis., was marked at Trinity Cathedral, Phoenix, on Sunday, March 12. Dr. Averill was the preacher at the eleven o'clock service. He has established a home in Phoenix since his retirement, and is one of the Canons of Trinity Cathedral, continuing to exercise his ministry here, and especially at St. Paul's, a Mission of the Cathedral.

Born March 13, 1870, he was graduated from Northwestern College, Naperville, Ill., and from the Western Theological Seminary. Following his ordination to the priesthood, March 13, 1894, his ministry was spent in the same three dioceses which his father, the Rev. Martin Van Buren Averill, had served.

During this half century of consecrated service, Dr. Averill has ministered to churches in Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin,—a period distinguished by a rectorate of 19 years at Trinity Church, Ft. Wayne, Indiana, and an equal length of time at St. Paul's Cathedral, Fond du Lac, where he went as dean in 1923.

For many years Dr. Averill was a trustee of Howe School in the Diocese of Northern Indiana, and of Nashotah House in the Diocese of Fond du Lac. He also served on the Standing Committee and Board of Examining Chaplains in each of these dioceses. Many readers of church literature are familiar with his "Talks"—a series of small books on Church History, Confirmation, the Episcopal Church, the Old Testament, and the Prayer Book. Quiet in demeanor, he thinks deeply, writing and speaking with conviction.

Of special interest is the fact that Dr. Averill was present as a deputy—twice as an alternate—at every General Convention, except one, from 1901 to 1941.

THIRD YOUTH SERVICE BUREAU IN TENNESSEE

Nashville, Tenn.—Nashville is to have a Youth Service Bureau as a branch of the Church Mission of Help. Miss Edith F. Balmford, National Secretary of CMH has been in Nashville conferring with an organizing committee on plans for the Bureau. She spoke of the possibilities of this work to a meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Branches of all the Nashville parishes. Miss Balmford says that the Nashville Youth Service Bureau will be the third in the State of Tennessee, as there are already offices in Memphis and Knoxville. CMH was established in Tennessee in 1924.

Mrs. R. Brinkley Snowden, diocesan president of CMH and Miss Agnes Grabau, supervisor of the Memphis branch, also attended the conference. Social agencies concerned with the welfare of children and young people report a need for this Bureau, Miss Balmford said.

CONTEST FOR CHURCH ATTENDANCE

Birmingham, Ala.—Three organizations in St. John's Church, Ensley, are in a contest for Sunday church attendance. Each Sunday one of the three, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Business Woman's Auxiliary or the Laymen's League, sponsors and gets credit for attendance. First Sundays are rotated. Next summer the organization getting out the smallest number will entertain the other two groups.

Seminary News From Nashotah

Missionaries Returned from Far East Address Society

Nashotah, Wis.—During the weekend of February 26-27 the Missionary Society of Nashotah House had the privilege of being addressed by two distinguished missionaries from the Far East. The seminary was first visited by the Rev. Henri B. Pickens, who was for many years in the Diocese of Hankow, and who recently returned to this country on the Swedish rescue ship Gripsholm, after spending some months in a Japanese concentration camp. He spoke movingly of the great migrations of the Chinese people that have been necessitated by the war with Japan; of the way in which the Church has faithfully gone with them into exile; and of the tremendous opportunities for a Christian resurgence in the new China that shall be after the war. He also spoke of the occasional fine contacts which have been had, even in war conditions, between missionaries in China and individual Christians in the Japanese army.

The following day the seminary was visited by the Hon. and Rev. John F. Bolger, of the Diocese of Papua, in New Guinea. Mr. Bolger has been for fifteen years in charge of one of the large missionary stations in the diocese, and more recently sub-dean of the Cathedral and a member of the legislative council of the colony of British New Guinea. He spoke in high praise of the valuable service that has been rendered to the allied cause by the Christian natives of the island. His talk was not only a discussion of war conditions, however; it contained an eloquent plea for an awakened conscience of Christian peoples on behalf of the unevangelized, as well as for better inter-racial understanding.

Neither man would say a word about atrocities or utter a syllable which might be calculated to fan any fires of hatred against any group of God's children, including our public enemies. They intimated that no race or people or country has a corner either on acts of mercy and humanity or on expressions of hatred and atrocity. Each appealed for understanding—and for the prayers of their listeners on behalf of all.

ANNUAL CONVOCATION

Missionary District of New Mexico and Southwest Texas

Albuquerque, N. M.—The Fiftieth Annual Convocation of the Missionary District of New Mexico and Southwest Texas met February 8-10 in St. Clement's Church, El Paso, Texas. Convocation opened with an Evensong service conducted by the district clergy and the bishop's annual address, in which Bishop Stoney reported substantial progress during the past year, and urged that the Church be brought to people of all social classes. The business sessions were devoted largely to adoption of revised district canons and discussion of a ten-year plan for increasing assessments and quotas looking toward the attainment of diocesan status. Provision was made for local share in the Bishop's salary by means of solicitation of a "Bishop's Dollar" from each communicant in the district. Officers elected for 1944 included the Rev. W. G. Wright as a member of the Executive Council and the Council of Advice, the Rev. Malcolm N. Twiss as president of the Council of Advice, the Rev. Robert S. Snyder as Church Program treasurer and chairman of Forward in Service, and the Rev. C. J. Kinsolving, III, as member of the Cathedral Chapter. Delegates to the Provincial Synod are the Rev. Ross R. Calvin, Ph. D., and Mr. John Benson, both of Clovis, N. M. The Rev. W. G. Wright, rector of St. Clement's, was host to Convocation at a reception held at the rectory, and the Rev. M. N. Twiss, of St. Alban's, El Paso, was toastmaster at the annual banquet. The 1945 Convocation will be held at Gallup, New Mexico.

Change of Name Being Considered to Rio Grande

The Missionary District of New Mexico and Southwest Texas is hoping to have a new name, "The Missionary District of the Rio Grande". On the suggestion of the Rev. R. H. Channon of the San Juan Indian Mission, Bishop Stoney has asked for a vote from members of the 1944 Convocation as an adjourned action of that body, and has received favorable replies from three-fourths of the members of Convocation. A memorial asking for the change of name will be presented to the House of Bishops at their next meeting. The present title is cumbersome, and the Texas part of the missionary district is often slighted by the use of "New Mexico" only in referring to the district. Bishop Stoney reports that even his certificate of consecration makes him "Missionary Bishop of New Mexico" and omits Southwest Texas altogether. Inasmuch as the Rio Grande flows through the entire district, the proposed title is properly descriptive of the whole jurisdiction and avoids omission or comparison of the two states included in it.

Many Union Services

Many Union Services are being held this Lent throughout Rhode Island. While participation in Union Communion Services must be omitted on the part of Episcopal Church clergy, there still remain many other ways in which friendliness may be shown toward the strictly Protestant bodies. And even the Roman Catholic churches participated in the United Campaign of the churches last fall in the Narragansett Convocation. Both the Rhode Island bishops participate in Union Services of preaching and worship, in fellowship with Christians of other names.

"Doctrine of Man" Subject of Discussion At Convocation

The Narragansett Convocation and some other parts of the diocese are taking up seriously the discussion of "The Christian Doctrine of Man," as outlined by the Forward in Service Movement. Most of the churches in the Narragansett Convocation will have sermons on that subject all through Lent. The same subject will be discussed at the next meeting of the Narragansett Convocation in May. It is surprising how wide can be the thoughts on this apparently dry subject. It broadens out until almost all of Christianity is being considered from the point of view of the Christian attitude toward God and man.

The bishop of Rhode Island, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Perry, held a Quiet Day for the Clergy of the Diocese on February 21, at St. Martin's Church, Providence.

A Quiet Day for the women of the Blackstone Valley of Rhode Island was held in Trinity Church, Pawtucket, on February 24, conducted by Sister Patricia.

Providence—The Quiet Day for the Woman's Auxiliary and the Diocesan Altar Guild will be held in the Church of the Redeemer on March 23. The Suffragan Bishop of Rhode Island, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Bennett, will be the Conductor.

A Retreat for Women will be held in St. Stephen's Church on March 26, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Robert Casey.

A Quiet Day for members of St. Martin's Church was held on March 2, conducted by the Rev. Canon Edward N. West, of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City.

A Retreat for men will be conducted by the Rev. John H. Wright in St. Stephen's Church on April 2.

The day for the offering in Rhode Island for the Army and Navy Chaplains' Fund is Passion Sunday, March 26.

The Birthday Thank Offering for the Children of the Church Schools will be established under the direction of Mrs. Parker E. Monroe.

The Rhode Island Clericus met on March 6 at Grace Church in Providence. The speaker was Dr. Alexander Dormer on the subject, "The Philosophy of Christian Art."

D. A. R'S. MAINTAIN BRITISH NURSERY

New York, N. Y.—The Daughters of the American Revolution completes the first year's payment for maintenance of British nursery, and emphasized its appreciation of British- American comradeship on the anniversary of Washington's birth. An appropriation of $600 voted by the national organization supplements, according to Mrs. William H. Pouch, President General, contributions received from chapters and individual Daughters in all parts of the United States.

The nursery, Sacombe Park, is located in Ware, Hertfordshire. It is one of twenty-nine nurseries being supported by American funds through the Save the Children Foundation. It cares for evacuees, and children of mothers employed in the war industries, as well as orphans.

DIOCESE OF ALABAMA

The Journal Sent to Every Church Home

Mobile, Ala.—The Journal of the annual Convention of the Diocese of Alabama was published as the March issue of the diocesan magazine, "The Alabama Churchman", and sent to every Church home in Alabama. Historical notes were appended to various reports in order to make the material more readily understood.

Army Officers Sympathetic

The mother of a crew member of a bomber which failed to return from a mission over Europe has learned how considerate Army officers are. She had received word that her son, a Sergeant, was missing. Listening to the Army Hour on the radio she heard described the raid in which her son was lost. So she wrote to the squadron in England to which her son had been assigned, and in reply received letters from two men, a Lieutenant-Colonel and a First Sergeant. They wrote sympathetic letters, and told of seeing the ship fall, but expressing the opinion that the crew was not killed. Appreciation for such kindness was expressed in the Christ Church Messenger, Mobile, Alabama—the mother is a member of Christ Church, and so is the missing son.

Legacy

A legacy of $5,000.00 left to Christ Church, Mobile, by Miss Willey Creagh, will be used to provide a stained glass window in the church, in memory of her family as was requested before her death.

NEW GUINEA MISSIONARY TELLS OF SERVICES RENDERED BY NATIVES

New York, N. Y.—The Rev. John D. Bodger, New Guinea missionary of the Church of England, now in this country, tells of a recent confirmation of 20 Australians at Mrore recently. "Some Gona natives came to the service," he said, "after which they handed the Bishop several bags of money, some Church collections, and a collection they had taken up among themselves for a Church rebuilding fund."

Illustrating the service rendered constantly by natives to the Allied Nations, Mr. Bodger quotes a letter just received telling that a report came to a village of a crashed Liberator in the mountains. They spent three days in getting to it, found that it had been lying in the mountains for months. Some of the bombs had exploded and the entire crew was killed. "The natives picked up and buried a lot of the bones and a missionary read the burial service over them. They found the identity of two of the crew."

CONSIDER HE OWED MONEY DID SOMETHING ABOUT IT

New York, N. Y.—A retired priest of an eastern diocese decided that he owed money to the National Council, and he called on the Presiding Bishop to do something about it.

For forty years, he explained, he has been receiving without cost, first The Spirit of Missions, and later, Forth. He valued the magazines and decided that he wanted to pay for them, insisting upon Presiding Bishop Tucker's acceptance of two $20 bills, payment in full for 40 years' subscription, past tense.

The money will be given to some missionary project in which the clergyman was especially interested during his term of active service.

CHRISTIAN MINISTERS PARTICIPATE IN SERVICE IN SYNAGOGUE

Dothan, Ala.—Temple Emanu-El, synagogue of Dothan, dedicated its pulpit and a plaque in memory of "those of all faiths who gave their lives for freedom of worship", February 25. The observance of Brotherhood Week was further stressed in the participation in the service by various Christian ministers. Three addresses were scheduled. The Roman Catholic chaplain of a nearby air field sent his regrets at the last minute. The president of the Ministers' Union, the Rev. G. R. Madson, vicar of the Church of the Nativity, and the local rabbi, made addresses.

The Seminaries of the Church Need Your Support

St. Paul says, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach, except they be sent?

The task of the seminaries of the Church is to help the right men to respond to this challenge.

The Presiding Bishop has appointed January twenty-third as Theological Education Sunday, asking the clergy to put before their people the needs of the seminaries of the Church where men are prepared for the ministry.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

Man always has God or an idol.—Luther.

A well-known bank president says, "If I had twenty tongues I would preach politeness with them all, for a long experience has taught me that the results are tangible and inevitable."

Selfishness is the great unknown sin, for no selfish person ever thought himself selfish.

We must recognize now in war that when we talk of great peace aims we acquire great obligations to maintain them.—Arthur Hays Sulzberger.

Perhaps we receive few answers to prayer, because we do not intercede enough for others.—Wesley.

When Dr. Moon, of Brighton, England, was stricken with blindness, he said: "Lord, I accept this talent of blindness from Thee. Help me to use it for Thy glory that at Thy coming Thou mayest receive Thine own with usury." Then God enabled him to invent the Moon Alphabet for the blind, by which thousands of blind people were enabled to read the Word.—Selected.

Happy the heart that keeps its twilight hour,
And, in the depths of heavenly peace reclined,
Loves to commune with thoughts of tender power—
Thoughts that ascend, like angels beautiful,
A shining Jacob's ladder of the mind!
—Paul H. Hayne.

When a child looks at the stars, the sea, the mountains, he says, "Who made them?" When a scientist beholds the unimaginable vastness and the unimaginable minuteness of this universe he too asks "Who made it?" Some have tried to make answer in terms of "First Cause", "Law", "Force". Some have equated the creator with creation saying, "The whole of things is God". Christian doctrine speaking a far surer and far more inspiring word answers: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth".—Canadian Churchman.

The task of the church is to preach Christ and to train people in Christian living. Every organization in the church and every meeting of every organization should seek to accomplish that aim, for it has no other reason for existing.—Selected.

CATHOLIC FOR EVERY TRUTH OF GOD, PROTESTANT AGAINST EVERY ERROR OF MAN

LETTERS

Bombings Upheld

March 15, 1944.

Mr. Editor:

There has been wide discussion of the protest published by twenty-eight ministers of religion and others against the present bombing of cities in Germany.

As a minister of the Christian Church, may I express through your columns my profound disagreement with the position taken in that protest, a disagreement which I believe is shared by the vast majority of the ministers of all Churches in our land. I have great respect for the signers of that protest individually, but the protest which they have issued is spiritually and morally a gravely harmful one. It is morally confusing and weakening to our people at a moment when they need every support that Religion can give them; it depreciates and casts a doubt upon the heroic service of the men in our Armed Forces who are giving their lives for us and for others; it gives aid and comfort to the aggressors and evildoers in this world conflict; and it tends to discredit religion by giving the impression that the Pacifist position is the true Christian position.

The Pacifist principle, the principle of "Peace at any price" is not the Christian principle. The Christian Religion teaches that there are evils worse than bodily suffering and death, and that there are things which we must uphold and defend even at the cost of life itself, and it is on this principle that our airmen, and all the men in our armed forces are giving their lives.

All of us abhor war quite as deeply as do the signers of this protest. All of us are grieved and horrified at the destruction and suffering which war brings. Our airmen have no desire to bomb cities or to kill civilians, but this is brought upon us by the forces of aggression, cruelty, and terror which we are fighting, and those evil forces have it in their power to end the bombing of their cities at any moment by giving up their evil aims and oppressions and laying down their arms.

But as matters stand the bombing of cities which are military objectives, fearful as this is, is only a necessary and inescapable part of our whole effort to end the war, to stop the bloodshed, cruelty and suffering, to liberate the enslaved and tortured peoples, and to open the way for a Just and Righteous Peace and for such cooperation and fellowship of the peace-loving nations as shall safeguard the world against another such outbreak of barbarism.

If the war is to be shortened and the world freed from this assault of brutality and terror, what substitute can the signers of this protest suggest for the bombing of cities which are military objectives, terrible and grievous as we all feel this to be?

William T. Manning,
Bishop of New York.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

ONE OF OUR MAJOR difficulties is the wall we erect that shuts off our view of what we ought to see, which circumscribes our thinking and limits it, and muffles the sounds of many things we ought to hear. Spiritual walls or barriers, such as pride, intolerance, superiority or inferiority, fear, and the like, are often the causes of our acting like bigots and fools. The world is wide and the horizon has unlimited bounds, and when we fail to catch visions and think great thoughts and hear not the voice of God, we are limiting the world to a little thing just about big enough for me and my opinions. Take those who listen to public speakers and others. They listen but they hear only what they want to hear and make the speaker's words conform to some preconceived pattern or seize upon some section or phrase or theme which has become anathema to them. Take the subject of racial minorities. Some people cannot listen intelligently to an unbiased discussion of it but must inject their own warped and narrow beliefs into it without reference to truth or justice or plain common courtesy. Even when we disagree we must give the other person the right to speak as he sees the right and not to shut off his way as wholly wrong and build ours up as wholly right. Some people grow restless and annoyed, and at times are roused to the fever heat of maliciousness and hate, because another dares to differ in point of view or article of belief. Back to those who cannot listen unemotionally to racial discussions. It is rather pitiful to know that they have built a wall so high and thick that for them there is only one race (or one religion or one party or one nation). There will be no solution to our world problems during or after the war unless these walls come down.

THE ANCIENT STORY of Joshua and the children of Israel conquering Jericho on their way to the promised land is a good story to illustrate what we have been talking about. Joshua could not force the wall down. There was no obvious means at hand to break down the wall and yet it must be broken down for it blocked the way to the promised land. Joshua did the only thing possible. He lifted up his eyes and looked for a way from God. He was not disappointed, for a definite plan unfolded for conquering the walled city of Jericho. It was unorthodox, but Joshua obeyed. You remember the story of 6 days 'round the city once, then seven times 'round on the 7th day and the climactic blasts from the rams horn trumpets and the great shouts of the people. And the wall of Jericho came tumbling down, flat, every stone of it and the word came to the people, "Pass on." Their very first act was to give God thanks and praise for helping them to break down the wall.

Our walls will stand until we lay siege to them under the wise guidance of God and obediently encompass them 'til they fall and our way is unblocked to the promised land and dawn.

The Red Cross and the Pipe Line of Life

By WILLIAM C. KERNAN

OF ALL THE ORGANIZATIONS in the world today which have done an outstanding job in every phase of the alleviation of human suffering, doubtless the Red Cross deserves the most praise. Among their other activities, within the past two years, we have become better acquainted, through their appeal for assistance, with the importance and necessity of making blood plasma available to war casualties.

In every community of the country, this Red Cross appeal for blood has had enthusiastic response. From every community of the country, men and women are contributing to the huge pipe line of life that begins in every town in America and stretches out to every one of our battle stations throughout the world. And from this pipe line comes a powerful flood—it is the blood of our nation—the anonymous blood of America saving the lives of her sons.

Many of us have never stopped to think that the fundamental unity of our country is so aptly illustrated in the simple act of giving blood for those in a critical or dangerous condition. We do not realize perhaps—but it is about time that we did that the names, big or little, on this pipe line illustrate best of all, why our country and our way of living must triumph over the aggressor.

DOES IT MAKE any difference whether the name be O'Brien, Jones, Goldberg, Svoboda? Does it matter whether this blood comes from Protestant, Catholic or Jew? Does it matter whether the donors are Democrats or Republicans—rich or poor—clergymen or laymen? Irrespective of political beliefs, irrespective of their country of origin, or the church which they attend—all who give blood—give it willingly to the cause of Humanity for which our Saviour suffered and for which we are fighting again today.

If we realize this—if we appreciate the fact that saving the lives of our men at battle stations throughout the world is blood which comes from all of us—we begin to realize and appreciate the fundamental meaning embodied in our Constitution which tersely set forth the principles of our Government—the Equality of mankind.

So at this time of the year, let us contribute generously to the Red Cross—appreciating not only its importance in the world in which we are now living—but more especially the fact that through its blood donor service—it is not only saving lives, but knitting together more closely that democratic brotherhood which we call America!

BOOK NOTES

By the Faculty of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific. Edited by Randolph Crump Miller.

CONTEMPORARY THINKING ABOUT JESUS: AN ANTHOLOGY. Compiled by Thomas S. Kepler. Abingdon-Cokesbury. $3.50.

"I accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour" is the heart of the Christian faith, but often the most devoted Christians are unfamiliar with the best thinking about Jesus. This compilation of the best Christian scholarship (and one Jew) is sure to be of the greatest help to those who wish to know more about Jesus. For clergy, lay people, and college students, this is a miniature library of contemporary scholarship. Here are the best statements by Harnack, Major, Goodspeed, Grant Streeter, Niebuhr, McCown, Scott, Otto, and many others. It is also an introduction to the study of the Gospels, for the first section is entitled "The Nature of the Synoptic Gospels," and the second "The Portrait of Jesus in the Fourth Gospel." Then comes "Jesus' Relationship to History," "Eschatology and Ethics," and finally "Modern Evaluations of Jesus."

There are not many serious omissions, except that there are no excerpts from Pittenger's Christ and Christian Faith, Horton's Our Eternal Contemporary, Bowman's The Intention of Jesus, or Knox's The Man Christ Jesus. There is not enough theological reconstruction in the "Modern Evaluations" and perhaps the section on the Fourth Gospel is longer than necessary. But this is THE book for those who want a quick, reliable, and helpful guide to the best thought about Jesus which this generation can offer.

A PORTRAIT OF JESUS: A TWENTIETH CENTURY INTERPRETATION OF CHRIST, by Sherwood Eddy. New York, Harper. 1943. xvi + 231 pp. $2.00.

One who has sat under the magic of Sherwood Eddy's oratory can almost imagine that he hears him again, in reading the chapters of this book. Indeed, the book's marked homiletical quality underlies both its strength and its weakness.

Nine of the twelve chapters are homilies on various phases of Jesus' ministry and passion. They are replete with telling illustration, and with a deep piety. Again and again one finds arresting thoughts like these: "Jesus reveals God's love for the unlovable and His will to love the loveless into loveliness" (p. 79). "The only impregnable doctrine is history" (p. 132). "Our modern doubt is not whether God is better than Jesus, but whether He is as good as Jesus" (p. 62). Chapters 10 and 11, on Paul and the Fourth Gospel, state clearly the best critical positions. As to John, Mr. Eddy is unusually successful in combining critical skepticism with a deep understanding of the gospel's allegorical meaning and spiritual import. Chapter 12 summarizes the first eleven, and makes a closing appeal for faith in Christ. Three appendices, on the gospels as historical sources, the backgrounds of Jesus' life, and New Testament chronology, are competent. There is an excellent bibliography.

But the book is weak from the scholarly standpoint. An acknowledged layman in the New Testament field, Mr. Eddy has read most of the best books. He does not seem, however, to have digested his material. In chapter 11 he avows an extreme critical estimate of the Fourth Gospel, yet elsewhere he quotes it on an equal footing with the others (e. g., pp. 22, 51). He twice suggests that the Sermon on the Mount was delivered in its present form (pp. 52, 60). Modernization abounds, as in the discussion of the Kingdom (see pp. 19, 25, 82) or in including "the rich, fundamentalists, racial bigots, nationalists, patriots" among the opponents of Jesus (p. 48). The lack of historical precision is evident in the astonishing statement that "As to which miracles really happened and how they occurred, the individual must give the answer" (p. 40). The reviewer has noted many lapses, of which the most glaring appears on page 161. In a footnote John the Apostle is martyred in 44 A. D., presumably in Palestine, whereas in the text above he lives to a good old age in Ephesus.

There are banalities, as when it is said of the Crucifixion that "All four Evangelists seem to feel that there is deep, pregnant meaning in this unfathomable, superhuman tragedy," and "There was something broadly human in this universal event" (pp. 99, 112). Yet the book is devotionally inspiring and homiletically suggestive. The chapter on the Resurrection is worth the price of the entire volume.

So They May Walk in the Light

By JAMES W. KENNEDY

"There was a light; there was a voice. The voice was the voice of Jesus and it said, 'arise, and stand upon thy feet: for to this end have I appeared unto thee, to appoint thee a minister . . . to open their eyes, that they may turn from darkness to light. Paul hastened to reply, 'I was not disobedient to the heaven vision.'"

AFTER THE LAST WAR, among the thousands of veterans to return, there were two young men I later knew who had been through the thick of it. They were bewildered and stunned, trying to readjust to a different world and a different life. They would often go off alone in a boat up the bayou for hours, pausing in some lonely cove, trying to figure things out. The war did not make sense nor did the results of the war, and God seemed to be far away from them. It was twenty years after when I knew one of them intimately and he told me the story of his search for light and peace. He had come to me with the raging burden of hate that had never ceased. There was no one who ministered unto him at the time when his soul was sore and raw. We did help to heal the wound of hate, but twenty years after.

Among the veterans of all wars there are those who have never recovered from the shock of it, nor have they ceased their questioning, for their questions are still unanswered. The aftermath of the last war, with its terrible maladjustments and substitutes for happiness, its bitter disillusionments in those who fought for an ideal that exploded in their faces, should make us determined that this thing shall not happen again, that the roaring, reckless, greedy, "all for me" 20's shall not be repeated as the giddy, senseless, futile "what's the use" 50's the "testament of youth."

I AM SPEAKING of the men and women who have walked through the places of Gethsemane from one end of the earth to the other, and have returned (or will return) home after witnessing the crucifixion of a world, to stand in suspended loneliness between earth's death and earth man's resurrection.

And in Christ alone is the Resurrection and the new life. But the kind of religion most of us have (the lack of vision of Christ and the disobedience to the little we have seen of him and heard from him) will not appeal to them nor feed the deep hunger of their souls. The sights they have seen of cruelty, suffering, waste, and senseless destruction will be hard to blank out. The thoughts they have mulled over long and hard concerning a God who allows wars to exist, their fellowmen who are grasping and greedy during their absence, the futility of post-war planning, the reasons for breaking up their homes and business and education will be difficult to forget and even more difficult to straighten out. The deeds they have been forced to do will stifle and block until we chisel them loose from the past.

No, the nice, quiet, sweet little Church they left behind with its goody, goody gospel will no longer be big enough to hold these men who have smelled the scent of death, unless the vision of Christ, and our response and obedience are there. Christ is the only way of complete redemption from the very real hell on earth they have known. And no man can redeem his own soul. But Christ can. We can catch a vision of Christ and hear his voice. We must not refuse to respond to the voice and the vision when it comes. We are all of us who care; they are all those who come back, who do not care or who care desperately for something real and vital; the Church (Christ) is the spiritual link between.

Now then is the time to begin preparing in the very spiritual blood stream of us, the manual for the reconstruction of men's souls. Memories must be purged of their horror; viewpoints and attitudes must be dewarped; bewilderment must be banished; God must be fitted into the picture adequately; and the dangerous conditions which lead to false gods, false evaluation of standards and values, and loose ends of existence must be cured or prevented; before we can hope to guide men's feet into the way of peace, the light way of Christ.

THEY NEED THE CHURCH, the Christian religion; and the Church needs them, if there is to be a new kind of world more full of love than hate.

Men never quite lose the atmosphere of their prewar religious life, although the experience of war often buries it out of sight. We have many evidences of this fact from chaplains and others who have talked with the boys about it. And they will talk about it privately, even if they do scoff at it in groups. This means we have a point of contact for a great many of these boys. Of course, we must be realistic and admit that every slit trench does not contain a saint on his knees with Bible in hand—although the praying and the Bible reading are on the increase.

Of course, there has been a real spiritual growth in the lives of many service men. I have seen it again and again, especially the awakening of boys from the home churches to an appreciation of their dormant faith and to a new sense of the reality of God and prayer. To these we can make appeal. But for the large masses of men who have never had any satisfactory or even normal contacts with the Christian Religion, we need something a lot more stirring and convincing than the usual. These men are not going to care much about words, least of all about the usual abstract words of religion void of tangible, evidential proof of their meaning in our lives. They must see in us the kind of acting, thinking, and feeling that is proof of a life that is more than bitterness, cynicism, selfishness and hopelessness—that is worth living.

We must have a better answer and philosophy than they have, if we would redeem and reconstruct these lost souls. And this is the job of the Christian religion in the coming years. Just as Paul was won from a life of violence and rebellion and disobedience by Christ; and just as his past was cleansed of its hate and blindness, and life became new and different and creative; so may we in similar fashion approach the lost and lead them to the lighted street called straight.

Already the boys are saying:

"There will be no lasting peace. The Bible says there will always be wars and rumors of wars. The Bible is right. There is too much selfishness." Without the vision of Christ they are right. We must do our best to give them the vision—reason is not sufficient nor pious phrases. God created man in His own image, every man, and therefore every last man can become God's Son—can do His will.

"Will evil ever be overthrown?"

We do not know how long sin will continue to corrupt and destroy men's lives but the resurrection and exaltation of Jesus Christ gives assurance that the long struggle between sin and grace shall have an end, all His enemies put under His feet, God's holy, wise and good purpose will be accomplished.

"What good will all this suffering and sacrifice do? Will the world ever be different with men as they are? How can those who have been maimed in body and mind be made to see it was not cruel wastefulness? How can we reconcile God's love and light with the sights and sounds of hospital ships, and the absence of those who won't come back?" God has not gone fishing and we can prove it! This great universe was made for peace and love and life and light. It works under these conditions of obedience to its laws. It goes "haywire" under an other set of rules. The laws of the universe and of human behaviour are good, and are known to a great extent. When man disobeys, retribution and punishment come; history has written this lesson anew for every age and man simply refuses to learn. The innocent always suffer from our wrong choices, and all of us are in on the guilt. Even my friend's wound or death is partially on my hands, "For I have been disobedient to the heavenly vision." I have turned my face away from Christ's way. I have made loud noises to drown out His voice. My every demonstration of self-will, self-sufficiency or self-determination is the root cause of world suffering. War cannot be reconciled to God's way. He has nothing to do with war which men themselves bring on themselves. God does redeem as much of war's loss as He can and seeks to use men's sense of insecurity and loss to make them turn to Him as the only hitching post in the universe. God is good. Man can be like God. Man can also be the devil incarnate. The choice is with man.

NOT ONLY DO WE NEED to be concerned as a Christian Church for the boys who come back with bewildering questions and brooding melancholy, but we need to make the Christian religion real in the homes our boys and girls return to; the kind of homes they dream about and willingly sacrifice for. They will return strangely grown, with a world-wide perspective and in some cases a real sense of world responsibility. We must keep pace and forge ahead spiritually to share their dreams and make up for their lacks and help them to keep the whole picture of life balanced and in focus. They will have forgotten the old ways of friction and misunderstanding in the home. (What have we done about them?) They will remember the good and happy times. Even now, we must begin preparing the script for the drama of homecoming and learn our parts well.

For every disillusionment, a new slant and outlook, through the eyes and mind of Christ, must be given.

Some steps we can begin to take now before they come back and swamp us—catch us off guard, unprepared and inadequate.

Write letters but guard the content. Let them reflect your faith and your belief that those who follow His way to the end will overcome the world. Make them always aware of our love and prayers (but never be pious about it). Letters can lay the groundwork for the readjustment to come. Try to pass along the answers gained to questions asked and discoveries made along spiritual lines—from Bible reading, prayer and obedience. In subtle ways let God's way with you be revealed. If they can know all is well with us, they can take it to the end. Their weakness will become strength if we can show that we are standing strong and fearless and are not disillusioned or despairing, but are maintaining a place of return intact. Do this also in conversations, with service men whenever opportunity comes.

The home again. Check the fabric to see that it is in good repair. Will it stand the strain of the maladjusted one's presence? Are we still easily irritated or upset? Do we still trudge along in the same old ruts and bad habits? Now is the time to change, to cleanse. Wives and parents, ask: is my home worth the sacrifice? Is it ready for their return? As Christ becomes more nearly the core and center, so the answers become more nearly affirmative.

We must no longer put off facing or remain adamant concerning those kinks in our own lives that will block our usefulness in helping to restore our loved ones to normal lives. No matter what the trouble may be, whether resentment, stubbornness, uncontrol, lack of faith, fear or anxiety, our true salvation and release come along the lines of daily (many times daily if needed) communion with God in prayer, seeking His will in the treatment of our condition and laboring with Him to overcome and correct our anemic or sickly condition of spirit. What we are will help in large measure to change that one who comes back to us; and straighten out his attitudes and motives and give point again to life.

Since the prospect is frightening, and the task is difficult, and our own capacities limited, we may be tempted to shirk our responsibilities, to abdicate in favor of confusion, silence, and the evil one. Alone we might well be unable to face it, but with God's Christ at our side we cannot only face anything and everything, but be enabled by the "might of His spirit" to lift them up to see the vision of a new life devoid of the old way of man's inhumanity to man, and filled with the real prospect of peace on earth. It won't be easy, but if all our hearts beat to the rhythm of Christ's nearness, and our single voiced melody joins the chorus of a world-wide song, men may hesitate in the flight toward unreality and join in to sing a remembered part of our song, the hymn of praise for God's creation which He wrote in the very fibre of our beings from before we were, to last into eternity.

In those words of our text, taken from the story of Paul's conversion, is a personal challenge and the pattern of reorientation for the lost of the earth; for the disillusioned and embittered; for the physically torn and emaciated and the mentally shattered; for the souls that have forgotten God.

"Prodigals" all, we, like Paul, must beseech God to hear us and help us.

The long road back, which will demand of us all we have of stalwart faith and valiant heart, must be started with the vision of the possible through Christ, recognizing that the causes of these disastrous wars and convulsions in which we find ourselves are spiritual—little sins of mine and yours, disobedience to God's laws, blown into a giant of evil to haunt us in our guilt and to force us (by an inner compulsion) back to the law of love, which leads to justice and the recognition of human rights.

War and Theology

G. A. Studdert Kennedy, the famous English chaplain of the war, was fond of saying, that he went to France with a fine pocket size theology. It was a neat trim theology. It fitted nicely into the blouse pocket of his uniform. All the answers were contained in this convenient theology. The first shell that exploded near him, blasted his pocket size theology into a million pieces. The sequel is that Kennedy picked up the pieces of his blasted theology and through the reality of his war experience came out with a living, vital theology that made him a true prophet of God in the after the war years of his ministry.

We have proof that many chaplains now serving in our armed forces are going through a similar experience.

Just the other day, we heard a chaplain speak, who had served for the twenty-nine months in the South and Southwest Pacific. A good bit of this service had been with submarine crews. He told the story of a submarine setting off on a mission. The Roman Catholic members of the crew had gone to mass conducted by their chaplain. This chaplain held service for the Protestant members of the crew. There was one Jewish sailor. He came up to the Protestant chaplain just before they left the dock, and said, "Padre, you gave something to your members of the crew, haven't you something you can give me?" Without hesitating the chaplain put his hand in his pocket and gave to the Jewish boy a war cross. When the submarine returned after his cruise, the chaplain was on the dock. As the Jewish boy come off, he waved to the chaplain and shouted, "See, Padre, the Cross is still with me." Theology is shattered.

Listen to another chaplain, who writes in reply to the query what have war experiences done to your theology?

"The first effect has been to throw all theology into the background, as the most important thing here is the question of Christianity itself rather than any variety or special interpretation of it. In the cross-section of America that comprises the fighting forces one meets with complete ignorance of the Bible, lack of familiarity with doctrine, and lack of the habit of worship, that you have to deal with the barest fundamentals. The place to begin is with the teachings of the Bible and not theology. It is appalling how the families of the nation have neglected to educate their children in the most elementary aspects of the faith we profess to believe. The tragedy is stark here, for, in the face of peril, these boys avidly yearn for that faith, and yet have not the background to grasp it. The chaplain feels that alone in the midst of such ignorance, he can only provide a stop-gap ministry. One man cannot make up for the negligence of a generation!

"My second observation is that denominations and 'churchmanship' are of very slight significance. The battle is Christianity vs. paganism or Stoicism or superstition. The fulcrum of this missionary struggle is the Bible, and the doctrine of Christ as the Incarnate Son of God. All talk of different churches, and the things that divide them, is merely confusing, and frequently the excuse cited by the pagan for his remaining pagan. On the ship here, and everywhere, men of all churches worship together, earnestly and honestly, and many may not even know to what church their chaplain belongs and care less. In this place the fight for Christ is terribly real, and on such a contest the secterian prides and prejudices of the Episcopal Church and all others are ridiculously absurd." (Chaplain Francis B Sayre, U. S. N., as quoted in the Christ Church, Cambridge, Mass., bulletin.)

Both of these chaplains have had their theological approach changed by the realities of the battlefield. We believe that they would say the change was for the better. Their conviction of Christ as the Incarnate Son of God, has been burned deeper into their lives. We know they have passed that conviction on to the men to whom they are ministering.

War changes our theological approach. It changed it twenty-five years ago; and it will change it and is changing it now. This we believe to be all for the good. Men must have a faith. The faith men have is expressed by a theology. The theology that is being born in the turmoil of the present, we believe, is going to be one that will give us a firmer grip on life's stern realities; a surer hope in the sustaining power of God's love; and a greater confidence in our ability to solve our problems of human relationships through the redeeming power of God's love.

Congratulations to Both

We feel that the Diocese of Iowa and the Very Reverend Dean of Christ Church Cathedral, Louisville, Kentucky, are to be congratulated. The Diocese on having elected a man, who has proved the worth of the talents with which God endowed him; and the man because he has been called to a place of honor and responsibility.

"Cy," as his intimate friends call him, is a lovable person. In a quiet and unassuming way he is a real leader of men. We feel that he will draw the clergy of his diocese about him and be to them a real "father in God." The diocese of Iowa should progress steadily under his leadership. Congratulations to both diocese and dean.

The Times and the Prophets

By EDWARD D. MYERS AND W. C. HELMBOLD

PART II.

God is a spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth.

THE DISCOVERY OF GOD was the response of these great creative geniuses to the challenge offered to them by the Babylonic Time of Troubles: the double challenge of class divisions and of national divisions. The whole of the rank-and-file of that Civilization, including the political leaders of the two Hebrew nations, was responding to the challenge of nationalism by adopting the violent way of war and political and military alliances, just as we at the present time are making the same response. All four of the prophets repudiated this way of violence as of no avail because it was sinful, sinful not only in that it showed a lack of trust in the God of all mankind, but also in that it was itself not compatible with that spiritual regeneration which alone could save the people. And all four of the prophets responded to the challenge of class divisions by uncompromisingly denouncing the social injustices they saw about them as destructive of that mercy and love and piety which together constitute the attitude of the spiritually regenerated soul.

Now when the prophets are viewed as contemporaries the radical nature of their teachings becomes apparent. To presume to transpose some of their prophecies into the language of our times would give us the declaration that no military alliances between England and Russia and America—no all-out war effort—will avail to save us unless we undergo a spiritual regeneration; that the issue confronting Western Civilization is not one of a choice between fascism and democracy, but between Violence and Gentleness; that violence begets violence and is self-destructive; that the double challenge of social and national divisions can be successfully answered only by the development of the spirit of love between men of all nations and by the realization that they are all equally children of God. And it is to be remembered that the great prophets were proved right in their predications by subsequent events.

We must and will win the war: that is clear. But military victory, according to Amos and Hosea, will be no benefit and may even be a great evil unless it is accompanied by a renewal of genuine spirituality and a belief in the brotherhood of all men based on the fatherhood of God. Thus far Amos and Hosea.

Oh that I knew where I might find Him that I might even come into His Presence!

THERE CAN BE little doubt that Germany will ultimately be defeated by those very weapons which the malady of Militarism has placed in her ailing hands. But how are we to escape a defeat of the same or of a greater magnitude: a spiritual overthrow on the day when the sun is darkened and the mourners go about the streets, those of us who are left to mourn?

We do well to detest the forces which engineer organised inhumanity: transplanting whole nations, annihilating others, everywhere polluting and denying what our measure of civilization had supposed to be the inalienable rights of man. For there is this difference between the Assyrian malady and the modern, between the Prophets' day of reckoning and our own: their enemies did what they did with a simple and unreasoning, a naive cruelty, arising from untutored instinct, while our opponents are inspired to accomplishment by the perverted rationale of a monstrous and artfully corrupted intelligence; it was not to defile, but only to destroy, that the Assyrian came down on the fold. It is further to be observed and deplored that Germany has already won a triumph of greater magnitude than our subsequent victory by mere force of arms can possibly be: she has forced the democratic nations to adopt her own method, the method of Violence, and to use her own weapons which are the military

We have heard a great deal about the evils of Totalitarianism, and much that we have heard is desperately, frightfully true. And it is true in one actual sense in which our opponents approximate to a whole and undivided creature, while we still represent a half, a stunted, Man. That sense is the one of religion. Out of a tissue of pagan myths and ethnological fabrications, the totalitarian propagandist has woven an Ersatz-religion, a diabolical and soul-destroying substitute for the supernatural. This now seems to have been sufficiently indoctrinated in the youth of the country to serve as an instrument for total war. But how could such an inhuman superstition come to have been successfully imposed upon an entire nation? And, if it has, is not all of that nation to be held as criminally responsible?

AS FOR THE criminal responsibility, let us look first at ourselves. "The bulk of mankind," said Swift, "is as well qualified for flying as for thinking"; and now that we have reached the enlightened era of total war—on land, on sea, in the air—we may conclude that flying is an accomplishment for which the human animal is admirably qualified. But not as yet for thinking.

And so fortunately we have neither the responsibility nor the right to determine the degree of our opponents' culpability. What we must do is to discover where our own gross folly lies. From the preceding century we have inherited a preposterous belief in material prosperity and the Progress of Mankind, onward and upward with the physical sciences. Year after year for more than a century, our material assets have continued to increase—only to be scrapped in a universal holocaust. Our opponents, we say, are either dupes or devils to be taken in by a crude and tawdry myth as a substitute for religion; but if they really do believe (and it is to be feared that a good many of them do), they are at least, within their self-imposed limitations, whole and undivided creatures, even though we judge them to be fools. And we—what substitute have we devised for religion? What substitute can there be for Half Men? For where a man's treasure is, there is his heart also—or half his heart, smothered in material possessions, drowsing the dream of the senses. "If with all your hearts ye truly seek Me, ye shall ever surely find Me." Thus saith our God.

As long as our nature is divided, it will remain incomplete and stunted. The will to violence is the will to destruction; and in the end it becomes a maniac will to self-destruction. "All they that take the sword shall perish by the sword" is an inexorable law of life; and any belief in a conclusive military victory is an illusion. It is demonstrated not only in the religious teachings of the prophets but also by the fact that, throughout the whole of human history, no attempt to win salvation with the sword has ever been ultimately successful.* We cannot be saved, either spiritually or even materially, until our hearts are purified by the love of God and the love of all His creatures. We cannot continue to give lip-service to the supernatural Reality while our actual bent is for violence and revenge and material prosperity.

This may not be interpreted as a plea for pacifism, for whatever high merits such a philosophic or Christian position may be shown to possess, it is quite unseasonable to begin its application now and not to have done so much sooner. Our opponents' propaganda has already appropriated and defiled such noble gentleness, together with whatever else is best in human idealism. Therefore to our armory we must add the weapons of the spirit, laid up secure where moth and rust do not corrupt, and where the thieves of conscience cannot break in and steal. If we fight with the arms of violence only, we are surely undone.

If with all your hearts ye truly seek Me, ye shall ever surely find Me.

WE MUST RENEW the religion of the spirit, religion of that sort taught by the greatest of all moral authorities when He said:

> Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like unto it: thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

We must and will win the war: that is clear. But to win will be meaningless, valueless, unless we are then able to win the peace. And in order to do so we must be whole and undivided men, with out wills made perfect to the will of God. There can be no means of winning the peace merely by economic reconstruction or by political reorganization or by military disarmament or by leagues of nations or by anything else—save only through a change of spiritual clime or dimension. And that change of spirit involves nothing less than the renewal of our faith in the Fatherhood of God, a passionate and effective belief in the brotherhood of all men as the sons of God, and the focussing of all our interests and all our attention upon the spiritual values, as it has been commanded us:

> Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind.

PASSION SUNDAY

THREE CROSSES stood upon a skull-shaped hill.
The Holy One amid poor sinners two.
One cursed and raved with hardened evil will,
The other, mild, He heard for pardon sue.

Still stands The Cross in view of all mankind,
And still men jest, or rave, or pass it by;
But others, pardon by it only find.
Among these humble ones, dear Lord, am I.

I did not choose Thee, Lord, Thou didst choose me
No merit mine, Tis all Thine affluent grace.
Oh! may I share Thy sufferings selflessly,
And by Thy Cross attain to see Thy Face.

SO THEY MAY WALK IN THE LIGHT

WE, THE CHURCH, for them would prepare a manual for the reconstruction of men's souls.

When do we begin? Now.

Where shall we begin? "Begin Here."

Think in terms of the one you love best. Keep thinking—what will he expect of me? What will he need from me?

God wants us to work with Him in this world-wide, age-long task of man's redemption from the hurts and handicaps and horrible evil of war.

We must answer first for ourselves. Then ask Christ for the words and the way to claim the souls of others.

"There is a light; there is a voice. The voice is the voice of Jesus and it is saying, 'arise, and stand upon thy feet: for to this end have I appeared unto thee, to appoint thee a minister . . . to open their eyes, that they may turn from darkness to light.' We must hasten to reply, 'I shall not be disobedient to the heavenly vision.'"

Strong we must stand in the face of the wild wind; strong and ready and able through Christ they must find us

BOOK NOTES

CHOOSE YE THIS DAY, by Elmer G. Homrighausen. Westminster Press, Philadelphia. $1.50.

This is an interesting and stimulating examination of the whole subject of evangelism and conversion from a point of view that could be called "neo-orthodox." The author analyzes the present disinterest in religion, even among nominal church members, and discovers that its roots lie in the failure of modern Christians to make a definite, conscious decision for or against Christ. While there is beyond dispute much truth and many a sound insight in Mr. Homrighausen's thesis, the general position which he outlines is open to the usual objections against "revivalism" and the "sudden-conversion point of view." He does not bring to light any really new methods of personal evangelism, but the contemporary church will do well not to ignore altogether his plea for a heightened consciousness of the difference between Christ's way of life and the other way of life. The clergy in particular will find much in this book which they can and ought to use.

GOD'S GIFTS

For life and health and strength
I thank the Father kind;
I cannot count His mercies o'er,
So many gifts I find.

The wee bird has its nest,
Safe in the trees so tall,
For birdlings' nests, for children's homes,
I thank the Lord for all!

LITTLE BROWN BIRD'S CORN-BREAD

Little Brown Bird watched her mother mixing the cornbread. She was such a pretty little Navajo girl in her long green skirt and her purple tunic—a dress just like her mother's.

"I wish I knew how to make the cornbread," she sighed.

White Cloud began to smile. "Well, why don't you learn?"

"Could I? Oh, I would love to!" Her black eyes were shining. "When could I?"

"Today," her mother laughed. "Now you watch just how it is done, and then tomorrow you will know how to do it yourself."

So Little Brown Bird watched carefully every single thing her mother did, to learn how.

The next morning White Cloud decided to go shopping. "I feel just as free as a bird," she laughed, "now that I have a grown-up daughter who knows how to clean the hogan and cook the dinner."

That made Little Brown Bird feel very happy. "Are you going to trade in your new blanket?" she asked.

"Yes," replied White Cloud. "I am going to the Trading Post and turn in that Navajo blanket I have just finished. I will bring home something nice," she promised as she jumped onto her pony and rode off.

Little Brown Bird decided to have a very special dinner for her mother that night. So, after she had cleaned the hogan she made a good fire in the firehole. This was right in the middle of the hogan and the smoke blew out a smoke hole in the roof. Then she took a piece of mutton and started a fine stew to cook.

Next the little Navajo girl mixed up the cornmeal and water, just as she had seen White Cloud do, until she had a good big lump of corn dough.

"Now I need the baking hole," she decided.

This was the oven and just a hole in the ground outside the hogan. She put some hot, red coals from the fire into the bottom of this pit and laid the corn dough, which she had wrapped in ever so many clean corn husks, on top of them. Then she filled the hole with clean soft dirt.

Now she had only to wait—and no peeping at it—until the heat from the red coals baked the bread.

"My stew smells so good," she sniffed happily. Then she ran to the little garden, which Black Eagle had made, to get some beans and onions to put in with the meat.

"How lucky we are to have a garden," she said, because there is so little water on the desert that not many Indians can have a garden. So she stopped and sang a little song of thanks to the Great Spirit for the sacred magic that had made the seeds grow.

"Oh, a new yellow squash flower," she cried, touching the flower with her brown fingers. What a fine squash you will be some day. And I remember when I planted your seed—a flat little one. And to think that the Great Spirit made it grow until now we have a big squash vine!"

The yellow flower nodded in the breeze as though it knew all this, and Little Brown Bird laughed out loud.

So the hours flew by so fast that before she knew it the day was done. She went to the door of the hogan and looked out. Surely enough she could see White Cloud on her swift little pony. And Black Eagle was with her.

"I will get the cornbread," said Little Brown Bird, running to the bake-hole.

She dug up the cornbread. My, it smelled good! Then she ran and stirred the pot of stew. It would be good, too, she was sure.

The minute they stepped inside the hogan, Black Eagle began to smile. "Smells like something good to eat," he said.

"Everything is ready," Little Brown Bird told him proudly. "I have stew and cornbread," She held up the golden yellow loaf.

"Just what I wanted," said her father.

White Cloud was looking happy, too. "I have a surprise for you," she told her little daughter.

"For me?" Little Brown Bird had not been expecting anything just for her.

"Something very good," put in Black Eagle.

"To eat?" the little girl asked.

White Cloud nodded. Then she held it up. A can of tomatoes!

Little Brown Bird's eyes were shining. "Oh, I just love canned tomatoes!" she cried. Among the Navajos that is a very fine treat, indeed.

"What a happy day I had!" the little Indian girl said.

MRS. CARDINAL HAD HER WAY

When a cardinal decided to build its nest in a cedar tree at the side of our front porch, it conflicted with certain plans which we had made. It was time for the usual spring arrangement of our porch furniture, and also we wanted to clean and wax the floor.

I watched that cardinal with keen interest as it pulled tiny brown twigs from around the bottom of the cedar and placed them skillfully in forks of the tree. A very neat nest, partly lined with small scraps of paper, was soon constructed.

So the question to be decided was whether to proceed with our work on the porch, and endeavor to disturb the cardinal as little as possible, or wait until the creature had finished with its nest. Then I remembered a previous spring when a cardinal had built its nest at one end of the porch in a rose-bush. Apparently discovering that its location was not private enough, the nest was never used. Perhaps the same thing would happen in this case; thus, we decided to wait.

Dust accumulated on the porch floor, but it remained unswept. In due time three tiny bundles of baby cardinals nestled in their cradle of twigs and leaves. Indeed, the close-up glimpses of the family routine of those cardinals was compensation in abundance for our delay.

Frequently I placed sunflower seed near the edge of the porch floor only several feet from the nest. At such times it was quite interesting to watch the mother bird crack the seed and make numerous trips to and from the nest.

I observed that the male cardinal was quite helpful too. Once he flew to a branch of an elm, holding a green worm in his bill. As though pre-arranged, the female flew to the branch and took that little worm in her bill and returned to her nest.

There is a vacant nest now in that useful cedar, and we are a bit sorry that our enjoyment was so brief. But, according to nature, those little cardinals are now flying about with the guidance and protection of their parents. Yes, we are glad that we had some little part in making that fact possible.—A. L. Butts, in Our Dumb Animals.

Arrangements Completed

For the Archbishop of York's Visit to New York After Few Days in Washington

New York, N. Y.—Arrangements have now been completed for the visit to this city of the Most Reverend and Right Honorable Cyril Forster Garbett, Archbishop of York, Primate of England, and Metropolitan.

Before coming to New York the Archbishop will spend a few days in Washington, where he will be the guest of Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador.

During his visit in New York the Archbishop will be the guest of Bishop Manning. He is to be here from Saturday evening, April 22, until Friday, April 28, when he goes to Chicago for two or three days and from thence to Canada, where he will make a brief visit before returning to England.

The Archbishop will preach at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine at eleven o'clock on Sunday morning, April 23. On Sunday night, April 23, at eight o'clock, there will be in the Cathedral a "United Service of Prayer for the Establishment of a Just and Righteous Peace" and the Archbishop will preach on "The True Foundations of a Just and Durable Peace". The Archbishop's recent visit to the Church in Russia will lend special interest to his sermon on the above mentioned subject.

At the United Service of Prayer on Sunday night, ministers of all Churches are invited to take their places in the procession and to bring their congregations with them.

During the week that he is to be in New York, the Archbishop's schedule includes the two services at the Cathedral, as stated above, a visit to the General Theological Seminary, a meeting at Columbia University, where he will receive an Honorary Degree, on Wednesday a dinner given in his honer by the Church Club of New York at the Waldorf Astoria, and many other meetings and engagements which will make his schedule each day a very crowded one.

It is, historically, an interesting fact that the Archbishop of York holds the title, "Primate of England", and the title of the Archbishop of Canterbury is "Primate of All England".

A copy of the letter of invitation to the Service in the Cathedral on Sunday night, which is being mailed to ministers of all Churches.

CANON HODGSON NOW REGIUS PROFESSOR OF DIVINITY

Washington, Conn.—The Rev. Dr. Leonard Hodgson, of Oxford, who lectured and preached at many places in this country last June and July, including the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, and the International Round Table Conference at Princeton, has been appointed Regius Professor of Divinity in Oxford University. He has been Regius Professor of Moral and Pastoral Theology since 1938, and Canon of Christ Church. In his new position, which is the most distinguished honor in the field of theology, he succeeds Dr. Oliver Chase Quick who retired last Christmas on account of ill health.

Canon Hodgson is well known to Church leaders all over the world for his notable achievement in arranging for and carrying through the Second World Conference on Faith and Order at Edinburgh in 1937. He has been Theological Secretary of Faith and Order since 1932, and took over the responsibilities of General Secretary as well in 1933. In this dual capacity he had full charge of the theological preparations and of all the practical arrangements at Edinburgh, and proved himself equally competent in both. He is a member of the Provisional Committee of the World Council of Churches, and Secretary of the Faith and Order Department of the British Council of Churches. He is chairman of the committee on American Affairs of the Church of England's Council on Foreign Relations, having come to know this country well during his years as professor in the General Theological Seminary, New York.

He is the author of a number of books: "And Was Made Man", "The Lord's Prayer", "Essays in Christian Philosophy", "The Grace of God in Faith and Philosophy". In the London "blitz" of 1940 the stock of the two books last named was destroyed in the warehouse of the publisher, and portions of them have been re-published under the title "Towards a Christian Philosophy" (1942).

Two important volumes edited by him are "Convictions", the replies of the Churches to the report of the Lausanne Conference, and "The Second World Conference on Faith and Order" containing the complete record of the Edinburgh Conference, in which his condensation of the speeches made during the discussions is a masterpiece of reporting.

His Croall Lectures, delivered in Edinburgh last year, will shortly be published under the title "The Doctrine of the Trinity".

FLORIDA APPOINTS ARCHDEACON OF NEGRO WORK

Miami, Florida—Bishop John D. Wing has appointed the Rev. John E. Culmer, rector of St. Anges' Church, as Archdeacon of Negro Work in the Diocese of South Florida. The Archdeacon under the Bishop, will have the supervision of all the colored clergy and congregations of the diocese. He will continue as rector of St. Anges' parish, one of the largest Negro congregations in the country, with more than 1,500 communicants.

South Florida has 20 congregations of colored people, served by eight clergymen, with a total membership of 4,721, of whom 3,678 have been confirmed. Archdeacon Culmer is known widely as an outstanding leader of his race, and he was the only Negro deputy to the last General Convention.

Conference Reorganized

Now to Be Known as "Council of Southern Mountain Workers."

Asheville, Tenn.—The General Conference of Southern Mountain Workers which has been meeting annually for a number of years, was completely reorganized at its session this year. Instead of an informally organized "Conference," it is now to be known as the "Council of Southern Mountain Workers," with new Constitution and By-laws, officers elected were: President, Mr. Arthur Bannerman, director of the Asheville Farm School; vice-president, the Rev. E. Dargan Butt; executive secretary, Dr. Alva W. Taylor, present incumbent. The Rev. Clifford L. Samuelson, associate secretary in the National Council's Division of Domestic Missions, is a member of the Executive Committee.

Following the custom of previous years, the Episcopal Church group participated in meetings of the entire Council, and in addition had a program of their own. The Rev. A. Rufus Morgan, Franklin, N. C., was general chairman of the conference which is held in cooperation with the Division of Domestic Missions.

Bishop Mason Presiding

Presiding at a panel of Church school administrators, the Rt. Rev. W. Roy Mason, suffragan bishop of Virginia, described the work of the twelve schools in his diocese. He stated that one of the main problems of Church schools is to keep them operating on the basis and purpose for which they were originally established. Started as mission agencies to needy children, the schools tended to follow the trend of becoming boarding schools for people who could pay sufficient tuition to keep the schools operating. He pointed out that many Church families with children in our Church schools cannot afford to pay the tuition. He called attention also to the fact that with the development of the public schools, maintenance of some Church schools can no longer be justified unless the purpose of the schools is re-defined.

Rev. George P. Mayo Speaks

In describing the various emphases which had been made during the long history of the Blue Ridge School, the Rev. George P. Mayo, its founder, held that the provision of Church training in addition to standard academic work does not justify maintenance of a Church school. "If we appeal to the Church or the public for the support of schools," Dr. Mayo said, "we must fulfill the needs of young people. There is great need for Church-operated schools to serve children from broken homes, or otherwise in need of constructive influences. This need is becoming so increasingly apparent that the Church schools should demonstrate that

America Builds A Cathedral

Article in Coronet Magazine Tells Story of St. John the Divine

New York, N. Y.—The Cathedral of St. John the Divine is the subject of an illustrated feature story in the April number of Coronet magazine. "America Builds a Cathedral" is the title of the article by Mona Gardner, who tells of the meticulous care given to every step in the construction of this great building which "should still give majestic testimony five thousand years from now." A school for stone masons trained men in hand work. Glass artists were sought in every part of the world. "Designing the great Rose Window of the central facade was a unique drawing-board adventure that occupied twelve months. But an even greater task was searching out and finding enough colored-glass artists to make and assemble the 10,000 pieces of luminous stained glass that go into this tremendous 40-foot window." Artists have been working continuously for 50 years making stained glass pictures for the more than 50 great windows—some of them 44 feet high.

The Cathedral, the Coronet article says, was first conceived by Bishop John Henry Hobart in 1828. The charter was granted and fund-raising began in 1873. The cornerstone was laid in 1892. Seven years later the crypt was opened for worship. "Since then, four successive bishops have carried on the slow work of building other architectural additions, including seven chapels, rotating like a coronet around the altar. The entire nave was completed for use only in November, 1941."

Work on the building was dropped the day Pearl Harbor was bombed, and will not be resumed until after the war. "Meanwhile, a steady stream of pilgrims drop their pennies and dollars into the big teak coffers by the main door, not just to achieve an architectural masterpiece, but as a part of man's constant and overwhelming urge to help create something universal and eternal."

Some sixteen million dollars have gone into the Cathedral thus far. It is second only to St. Peter's in Rome in size. "Reduced to terms in which we ordinarily think, St. John's is two blocks long, and equal in height to an 18-story building." Like the medieval cathedrals, the structure is built almost entirely of stone. "The only steel in its whole mighty frame is in the ridge roof-steel, where old-world cathedral builders regularly used wooden beams that crumbled and powdered away into nothingness in a matter of decades."

SOUTH FLORIDA

Youth's Center Opens

The Men's Club of Christ Church Bradenton, started plans for an entertainment center for boys and girls of high school age, and got the Kiwanis Club to sponsor this project. At a meeting held in the parish house of Christ Church a Youth's Council was formed, with Rev. Frank B. Brunton as one member, together with representatives from the civic clubs, PTA and High School, and this council is completing arrangements for opening the Youth's Center. The Men's Club is carrying forward its work for the library of the rural school at Gillette, which this club started last year with the gift of 750 books. Now they are collecting books to add 750 more volumes to this library, which is gladly used by the entire community.

The Church School of Bethesda-by-the-Sea, Palm Beach, has set $1000 as its goal for the Lenten mite box offering, and is holding a weekly food sale to aid in making this goal.

Bishop Thomson Confirms Class

The Rt. Rev. Arthur C. Thomson, D. D., (retired bishop), of Southern Virginia, now living in Miami, confirmed a class of 32 persons in the Church of Bethesda-by-the-Sea -on February 27. A long-time friend of the recto, Rev Tage Teisen, D. D., Bishop Thomson consented to make this visit to Palm Beach, relieving Bishop Wing of a long trip amid travel difficulties. Dr. Teisen had previously asked that an offering of $1000 for missions be given when Bishop Thomson made his visit and this was done. In the afternoon service on that day, the Massing of the Colors was held, with a congregation which overflowed all seating capacity. Hon. Joseph E. Davies gave an excellent address and the offering for the Church Army and Navy Commission was $272.00.

"GOD'S ACRE" PLAN SUPPORTS WORK OF RURAL CHURCHES

Alto, Tenn.—Following the example of the Rev. E. Dargan Butt, of Christ Episcopal Church, Alto, many other rural clergy are organizing their congregations to the dedication and care of "God's Acres." A plot of land is set apart, and used to earn money for the Church's work. In addition the Lord's Acre raises food in a time of food shortage. Cotton, grain, vegetables, poultry, pigs, and maple sugar are but a few of the products made and sold. On one farm the mother made $20 from a field of sweet peppers, two children raised a calf, $22, the youngest child raised chickens, $6—a total of $48 toward a new church furnace. The Farmers' Federation of North Carolina endorses the plan highly, stating "Use of the Lord's Acre plan will stimulate in the members of the Church and Church school a greater spiritual interest, and a deepened sense of responsibility to work cooperatively for a Christian world."

Resolution of Gratitude Recorded

Missionary Council of Church of England Feels Deep Appreciation of Fellowship and Aid

New York, N. Y.—At the last meeting of the Missionary Council of the Church of England, presided over by the Archbishop of York, the council adopted resolutions concerning the aid to British Missions given by the Church in the United States during the past three years.

The resolutions:

"That the Council desires to place on record its gratitude to the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U. S. A., for its generous benefactions to the Missionary Societies of the Church of England, amounting over a period of three years to $578,000.

"It also welcomes the forthcoming visit of the Chairman (The Archbishop of York, the Most Rev. Cyril F. Garbett) to the U. S. A. as an opportunity for assuring the donors of this fund of the far-reaching benefits conferred by it and of the Council's deep appreciation of the intimate partnership which it betokened and enhanced."

In transmitting the resolutions to the National Council, the Rev. Canon J. McLeod Campbell, secretary of the Assembly's Missionary Council, said, "While no formal resolution can do justice to the feelings of gratitude and fellowship of those who pass it, I am none the less glad that there should be this explicit record upon our Minutes. I should be grateful if you would pass it on to your friends in America."

BISHOP KENNEDY HAS REACHED HONOLULU

New York, N. Y.—The recently consecrated bishop of Honolulu, the Rt. Rev. Harry S. Kennedy, has at last reached his field, according to a message received by the National Council.

Bishop Kennedy's consecration took place in Colorado Springs on January 11, and not until now has he been able to secure transportation. He is hopeful that before long it will be possible to secure transportation for his family also. They are at present in Colorado Springs.

The Bishop advises that the Convocation of the Missionary District of Honolulu will be held April 22.

NATIONAL FAMILY WEEK

Washington, D. C.—Dates of National Family Week this year are announced as May 7-14. While secular agencies, as well as the Federal Government, are promoting this observance, Churches should not lessen their interest, or regard it as a merely secular movement. They should lead in the future as in the past. They should support every community agency in stressing the importance of family life, while continuing to urge that the highest form of family life is Christian. National Family Week is an occasion when State, Community and Church forces can unite to recall the people of America to the importance of the family in all of life.

DEATHS

William Samuel Bishop, D. D.

The Rev. William Samuel Bishop died on March 14, 1944.

Dr. Bishop was the son of the Rev. George Sayles Bishop, a clergyman of the Reformed Church, and Mrs. Hannah Moore Willotson. Born in Northampton, Mass., August 26, 1865, Dr. Bishop was seventy-nine years old when he died. He graduated from Rutgers College with a B. of A. degree in 1887, and received his Masters in 1891. Serving first in two parishes in Colorado, Dr. Bishop returned to New York City to become Curate at old St. John's Chapel of Trinity Church, where he remained eight years. His scholarly attainments were recognized in his appointment as Professor of Dogmatic Theology in the University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee, holding the Chair for eleven years. Returning to parochial work he served as assistant to Grace Church, Orange, New Jersey, for five years, removing then to Washington to become chaplain of the National Cathedral School for Girls. Subsequently he became vicar of St. Thomas' Church, Washington, until he retired.

Study at Oxford and a year in charge of the English Church at Perugia, Italy, gave him an opportunity to enrich his background for subsequent study and authorship. His many contributions to church papers and dictionaries pointed to the production of more weighty and scholarly volumes among which "The Development of Trinitarian Doctrine in the Nicene and Athanasian Creeds", "Spirit and Personality", "Theology of Personality", "The Gospel of Divine Personality", "The Self Revelation of Christ in the Gospel of St. John", and "Christ and the Spirit". Dr. Bishop merits the distinction of being among the very few who have received the Doctorate in Divinity from the General Theological Seminary, New York City, by examination.

William Samuel Bishop, however, will be remembered among his many friends for the graces of a sweet and spiritual personality. Assiduous in his attendance upon all clerical and church gatherings his quiet and observing demeanor marked him as one fully aware of the responsibility resting upon "one who did the Lord's business". His character was one of pervasive goodness, wherein to gentle culture were added the reflection of a Christian gentleman.

Funeral services were held in St. Thomas' Church, Washington, D. C., on Thursday, March 16, conducted by the rector, the Rev. H. S. Wilkinson, D. D., the Rt. Rev. George W. Davenport, D. D., retired bishop of Easton, the diocesan clergy attending in robes.

Dr. Gerard F. Patterson

Dr. Gerard F. Patterson, who retired as Archdeacon of the Diocese of Ohio in 1938, after serving in that post for eighteen years, died of a heart ailment while on his way from Cleveland to Fremont, Ohio, by bus, to conduct services there. He had spent considerable time since his retirement preaching and conducting services wherever he was needed around the Diocese.

Dr. Patterson, whose death occurred on Saturday, March 4, came to Cleveland forty-five years ago to found a parish in the sparsely inhabited Glenville neighborhood, and remained to become one of the foremost leaders of religion in Cleveland. In his long career Dr. Patterson performed nearly every ecclesiastical activity short of the Episcopal Office. But it was as a pioneer missionary that he first made an outstanding reputation.

He was born and reared on a farm at Norwood, Ontario, and had to walk eight miles each day to and from the country school. Later he taught school for two years to help pay his expenses at the University of Toronto. From Toronto he went to the Theological Seminary at Nashotah, Wisconsin. Immediately after his graduation and ordination he left with a classmate for the mission field of Oklahoma.

Dr. Patterson established eleven missions in Oklahoma Territory. In 1893 the young cleric settled down to the quieter, although exacting, routine of the rectorship of St. John's Parish in Clinton, Iowa. From there he went in 1895 to Calvary Parish, in Sedalia, Missouri, where he remained four years.

In 1899 he accepted the appointment by Bishop William Andrew Leonard to the charge of the Mission of the Incarnation in Glenville and to St. Stephen's Mission in Collinwood. Under his care the Mission of the Incarnation became a thriving parish.

In 1908 the present parish house was built as the first unit in the commodious new plant which now houses a large congregation.

In the fall of 1920 the Diocesan Council elected Dr. Patterson Executive Secretary and in October, 1921, Bishop Leonard appointed him Archdeacon. He carried the work of both offices until December, 1938.

Kenyon College gave recognition to his work in 1936 by conferring on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. He was an honorary member of the Alathian Club, a ministerial association.

Funeral services were held at Trinity Cathedral by Bishop Tucker assisted by many clergy of the diocese.

Dr. Patterson was a man universally beloved and one most faithful in the performance of his duties. He died revered by everyone who knew him.

Miss Stepha L. Dodson

Funeral services for Miss Stepha L. Dodson, 86, retired Episcopal missionary who died in a local hospital in Kinston, N. C., March 16, after a week's illness, were held at St. Mary's Church Saturday afternoon, with interment in Maplewood Cemetery. The Rev. Thomas H. Hamilton and the Rev. George B. Hanrahan, Presbyterians, officiated at a brief eulogy at the home, and the Rector, Rev. Edwin F. Moseley, officiated at St. Mary's Church.

Miss Dodson, a native of Texas, spent 32 years as a missionary in China, where her sister, Dr. Elizabeth Dodson, was killed in the great earthquake of 1923. For a number of years she was head of St. Mary's Hall, Shanghai. Before entering the missionary service she lived in Wytheville, Va.

Principal George F. Wiese Reports

The Patterson School in Western North Carolina, principal George F. Wiese said, has a program aimed primarily at providing training in agriculture and forestry, combined with college preparatory course. The school also has industrial arts courses. Mr. Wiese says that his board and staff steadily adjusts the program of the school to efficiency in training Southern Mountain boys for leadership in their home communities.

Rev. Peter Lambert and Others Heard From

The Rev. Peter Lambert, headmaster of Appalachian elementary school, emphasized that depleted staff requires a reduced enrollment, and practically all the school's income must come from tuition. For this reason, he said, the opportunity of the school to be a real missionary agency, aside from providing substantial Church teaching, is of necessity limited. Miss Annie Park told of the widening scope of work for children done at St. Anne's Preventorium, Mission Home, Va., and Miss Lucy Morgan, director of Penland Handcrafts, told of the educational, social, and economic value of this type of Church program. Miss Louise Pittman of the John C. Campbell School at Brasstown, N. C., described the work in cooperatives carried out in the community, through school leadership.

The conferences and discussions led to general agreement among the thirty Mountain Workers attending, that there is need for a correlation of the work of the numerous Church schools in the Southern Highlands.

A resolution was passed calling for consideration of the use of equipment of the closed Valle Crucis School for training future workers in the area by means of brief, intensive courses on methods of mountain mission work. The Conference felt strongly the need for special training for clergy, laymen and women who are to work in the Southern Mountains.

Rev. Clifford L. Samuelson Opens Session

In his address at the opening session, Mr. Samuelson emphasizes that rural Church workers should not be overawed by the changes occurring in their communities, for most of these changes are simply an acceleration and intensification of problems to which rural Church workers are accustomed. Among such difficulties the speaker listed loss of young men and women from the community; constant movement of families; shortage of trained leadership and competent lay leadership; lack of adequate equipment; difficulty in holding group meetings because of travel difficulty. "All of these," Mr. Samuelson said, "are not new problems. They have ever been with the rural missionary. Thus this is no time for getting into an 'all is lost crisis state of mind.' We must simply knuckle down and do the old job quicker and better."

"The tensions of class and race prejudices and hatreds are not new with the war," Mr. Samuelson continued. "They have always been with us, but often we Church leaders have either glossed them over or failed to recognize them. In so doing we have sown the wind and we are reaping the whirlwind of bloody slaughter and riot.

"The intensification of these social factors require intensification of effort on the part of the Church. Our motives and methods must be sharpened to meet the new needs," said Mr. Samuelson, outlining various ways through which local and regional Church leaders are adapting their work to meet the new demands.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

"Every true Christian is an artist of the immortal."

Earth has not a spectacle more glorious or more fair than this—love tolerating intolerance; charity covering even the sin of lack of charity.—F. W. Robertson.

"Take courage, ye whose hungry hearts yearn for things ye cannot name to others! All these things are noted in the Book of Him who knew and felt them all."

When we think of the future of our world, may we see nothing brighter or better for it, as the outcome of all these laboring ages, than that the Cross of Jesus being lifted up, all men may be drawn to it.—Rev. Wade Robinson.

Calculate your utmost need, then multiply it into infinite love, and the result is the Heart of God.—Selected.

In the Lord's atoning grief
Be our rest and sweet relief;
Store we deep in heart's recess
All His shame and bitterness.
—St. Bonaventura.

The ever-recurring theme, the one crowning purpose of all our work is to make Jesus Christ known, loved and obeyed. The Church, the Body of Christ, is not an end in itself, but the means to an end, this end being that in Him men may have life and have it more abundantly.—Dr. W. S. Rycroft.

The eye of Christ alone has penetrated the mists that cloud the valley of death, and by His authority is written upon the pages of inspiration all we need to know of the life to come.—Selected.

When we feel those sweet drawings toward some infinite good which earth can never bestow. When we feel that something within us thirsts even for the living God, we are to know that we are not lured on by some deceitful mirage, building its bright walls and domes on the empty winds of the desert. We are to know that these walls we behold, however faintly, are really the walls of the New Jerusalem—that these are really her towers flashing far up in the indescribable light.—Selected.

Christ's method of doing miracles was different from that used by others. Miracles were done at the hands of prophets and apostles by God Himself in answer to prayer. Elijah cried, "O Lord, my God, I pray Thee, let this child's soul come into him again." Peter said, "In the Name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." But the words of Jesus are, "Thou deaf and dumb spirit, I charge thee come out of him." "Receive thy sight," "Stretch forth thy hand," "Lazarus, come forth." He invokes no other power. He speaks with authority and might of His own, as indeed, very God.—Bishop Graves.

The Great Welcome

..''This Man receiveth sinners.''—Luke xv, 2.
''Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.''
—I. Tim., i, 15.

---

The words in scorn once spoken,
Have never pass'd away.
''The wrath of man shall praise Thee,''
As do these words today.

''This Man receiveth sinners,''
And still to Him they come
For pardon and for cleansing,
And for His welcome home.

And lo, the Great Apostle
Takes up the wondrous word,
Blazons it on the Banner
Of His beloved Lord.

Calls it the ''faithful saying''
Worthy of all belief,
''He came to save the sinners,
Of whom I am the chief.''

''This Man receiveth sinners,''
And even now He waits—
Jesus, the same as ever,
At Heaven's wide-open gates.

But—must we come as sinners?
And must we stoop so low
To find the wealth of blessing
He waiteth to bestow.

Oh, have our hearts forgotten
The awful cost of sin,
The agony He suffered
His victory to win?

Nay, bring us, Lord, still lower,
Where we may never miss
The fullness of Thy welcome,
And of the Father's ''kiss.''

WAR CREATES NEW OPPORTUNITIES

Exceptional opportunities for missionary service in the Holy Land created by the war give, this year, special significance to the Good Friday Offering.

Last year the Rev. Weston Henry Stewart, D. D., after twelve years' service in the Holy Land, was appointed and consecrated Anglican Bishop in Jerusalem to fill the vacancy caused by the tragic death of the Rt. Rev. George Frances Graham Brown, D. D. Bishop Stewart has long been Archdeacon in Palestine, Syria, and Transjordan; knows the work in every department; is a scholarly and saintly evangelist, and begins his great task with the prayerful devotion of those who are interested in the Jerusalem and Near East Mission. He begins in a fairly tragic hour. This seems to me to be all the more reason why we need not only continue past loyalties but exceed them in holding up his hands at a moment when the harvest seems white and crying for laborers.

The new Bishop's first act was to appoint Canon C. T. Bridgeman, Archdeacon of Syria and Lebanon. This gives Canon Bridgeman authority to advance the splendid educational work he has organized and inaugurated among the Assyrian colonists on the Khabur River.

Whether in Jerusalem or throughout the bounds of the Jerusalem see the war strangely has brought peace and missionary opportunity. Our cooperation is vital. While the support is world-wide in normal times, the war has fairly isolated the Holy Land and today practically a third of this support comes from our own Good Friday Offering.

I ask my brethren of the episcopate earnestly to present this opportunity to their clergy and through them to their people. May we all pray and give generously in this difficult year that God may bless a missionary work of deep significance in the land where centered our Lord's birth, ministry, sacrifice, and triumph.

H. ST. GEORGE TUCKER,
Presiding Bishop.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

SOMEONE WROTE IN last week and checked me on a statement made recently concerning those who crucified Christ. I quote his words:

"Among the strange things you stated you said, 'The Jews are not the only Christ-killers!' Of course, this is a clear indication that the Jews are or were Christ killers. Documented history disproves this ancient anti-Semitic carnal. The Jews in Rome had much less to say about the government then than they do in America now, and, so far as having enough power and influence to have any man nailed to the cross, they would have suffered such a fate themselves for having suggested it."

This person missed the point of what I was saying; namely: that we are all guilty of the crucifixion of Christ. An old hymn of the passion expressed it well.

"Who was the guilty? Who brought this upon Thee?
Alas, my treason, Jesus, hath undone Thee.
'Twas I, Lord Jesus, I it was denied Thee:
I crucified Thee."

IT IS QUITE TRUE the Jews did not crucify Jesus. The Romans did. Through fear of the Roman tyrants, those who were then the chief men among the Jews delivered up Jesus to this tyrant. It is true that the Jews took no further part in the actual trial and crucifixion. Pilate, the "man of blood," was responsible for the rest. But if the Jews had not been letter strict in their interpretation of the Law, and if they had not been full of a preconceived idea of the Messiah, they never would have precipitated the public opposition to Him, that led to the many disturbing incidents dangerous to the Roman government which was always suspicious of any loud, unusual group activity of the Jews which might lead to rebellion. The long history of the Palestinian Jewish group was: domination by larger nations, the desecration of Hebrew sacred places, open and fierce rebellion against the oppressing nation, as in the time of Judas Maccabees. This was before Christ. The Jew was upset by Jesus because He insisted on more than a literal interpretation of the old Mosaic Law and the acceptance of Himself as God's Son.

Narrowness, fear of change, an unnamed sense of insecurity, the unwillingness to rethink religious conclusions and positions in the light of possible new truth—these things crucified Jesus. The Romans, callous from long years of cruelty and ambition, were not overly concerned about any man's death, especially the death of an ancient enemy, a Jew. The Jews did not kill Christ actually but the Jews and the Gentiles and all who walk the earth who refuse to change, to adapt and grow to new ideas, to recognize that "new occasions teach new duties, time makes ancient good uncouth; they must upward still and onward, who would keep abreast of truth"; they crucified and crucify Jesus.

THE CRUCIFIXION in Palestine about 2000 years ago is over. But the crucifixion in our street is still going on, because of my intolerance of another's opinion, my refusal to admit any one right but myself, my treason to God's best, made possible for me through Christ, my selfish disregard of anything that might disturb the old ways. No man can say "I am guiltless of Christ's Crucifixion" until the very human things which brought Him to trial and death—privilege, prerogative, hypocrisy, blindness to the greater demands of the Law, greed, religious and racial prejudices—are not found in us.

Good Friday should add to our understanding of man, especially the man Jesus and this other man—myself.

Christ's Crucifixion will cease only when all men rise out of the darkness of misunderstanding and their self-appointed goddom and seek the risen Christ.

THE SUNDAY NEXT BEFORE EASTER

The Collect

Almighty and everlasting God, who, of thy tender love towards mankind, hast sent thy Son, our Saviour Jesus Christ, to take upon Him our flesh, and to suffer death upon the Cross, that all mankind should follow the example of His great humility; Mercifully grant, that we may both follow the example of His patience, and also be made partakers of His resurrection, through the same Jesus Christ our Lord.—Amen.

Death and the True of Heart

By FREDERICK W. KATES

IN THESE DAYS, when the beat of the wings of the angel of death is ever sounding in our ears, and when daily, hourly, whole legions of young men are, to use the stock phrase, going before their time, in the sense of dying with but few years to their credit, it is our duty to look at the unfearful side of death."

These words of the late Bishop Charles Henry Brent, though written 25 years ago in the midst of World War I, might well have been written for and addressed to us of today.

Faced with the solemn and sobering fact that thousands of our finest young men have died, are dying and will die in this war in which we are engaged, a fact we dread to countenance yet cannot deny, how shall these men and we ourselves regard death?

Three things, certainly, may be said, and the first is this: There are far worse things than death.

To live as a slave rather than to die fighting that men might live free is far worse than death.

Hopeless mental illness, interminable sickness, excruciating pain; being nervously, and physically, disabled beyond possibility of redemption—these, in many instances, are far worse things and infinitely harder to bear than the welcome release of death.

And there are many who still believe that to live in dishonor, cowardice, and disgrace is a far worse thing than death.

About death, whether it comes to us in our bed at home, or in battle on land or sea or in the sky-blue air, this second thing surely may be said: It is nothing of which we should be afraid.

From another world beyond this we came into the world at birth—and alone. Into another life and world beyond this we depart at the hour of death—and alone. By birth and by death we enter and leave this life on earth, so brief an interval and so small a part of the eternal life we have to live. Granted we have no control over our birth or over the hour of our death and the manner thereof, still there is nothing to be afraid of with regard to either. Birth and death, like joy and gladness, like suffering and pain, are entirely normal incidents in our life's story.

But if we are afraid of death, and there is no man but feels some trepidation of spirit when death draws nigh, the New Testament reassures us that death is nothing to fear.

Death is sleep, the Psalmist tells us, and the New Testament repeats the figure. It is our Lord Himself who speaks the words: "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth . . ." When Stephen was stoned to death by the angry mob in Jerusalem, it was said of him: "He fell asleep." So death is a going to rest, a going to sleep, with our work over, our labor done, and rest come at last.

Death is also an exodus, a going forth, from a land of bondage to a realm of liberty, an act of emancipation liberating us to go forth into the Promised Land.

IN THE NEW TESTAMENT death is also pictured as an unmooring. "The time of my unmooring is at hand," said St. Paul. Death is like that—it launches us into the sea of larger life beyond this life we know so well.

Death, finally, is a home-coming, a going home, after being wayfarers, strangers and pilgrims in a strange land. At death we seem to embark upon an unknown sea, but we do not go to an unknown land. We go where Christ is, where He has gone before to prepare a place for us, and there we shall be at home.

If death is this—a going to sleep—a going forth into a land of liberty, a time of unmooring and release, and a return of the pilgrim home—then, surely, we have no reason to be afraid.

Death, the book of Genesis tells us, is a punishment. Death, says Science, is just a law of nature. But, Jesus Christ says, death is nothing save the gate through which we pass into immortal life, the gate of life through which we pass to our joyful resurrection. If we believe this and trust in Him, there is nothing about death to cause any one at any time to be afraid.

Can anything more be said? Yes, we can say this, quoting Theodore Roosevelt: "Only those are fit to live who do not fear to die."

The man who is not afraid to die, it is only this man who is free to live. The skies are his to hold in his hands. The earth is his and all the richness therein. The wonder of life and its magic charm, his every day, and he rides through life on eagle's wings.

Yes, only when we are no longer afraid to die do we truly begin to live. It is only the man who has died to death that is fitted to live.

When we have conquered the terror of death and the fear of dying, we shall be as men born again—suddenly come alive, and something else too: we shall no longer be afraid of anything on earth or in heaven. When the fear of dying is overcome, all other fears melt away.

Death holds no terrors for the clean and strong and true of heart. Death only terrifies him who is afraid to live.

GOOD FRIDAY

ETERNAL CROSS! Symbol of Life Divine,
Bring to thine own outstretched arms
These arms of mine!

Eternal cross! On which my Saviour died,
Bring to thine own Life the soul
In deep sin dyed.

Eternal Cross! Spirit of Jesus' care!
Bring mine eyes and hope and love
To Jesus there.

Eternal Cross! Bearing the Saviour's love,
Bring my heart and mind and will
To Him above.

Eternal Cross! Bearing the Father's Son,
Bring my soul and His at last
To be but one!

This is My Body

By MAURICE D. ASHBURY

SAINT PAUL in writing to the Corinthians in that first letter puts down his record of that which he received from the Lord Jesus. "That the Lord Jesus the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread, and when He had given thanks He brake it, and said, 'Take, eat, this is my body which is broken for you; This do in remembrance of Me'." (I. Cor. 11:23-24).

In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and all things that grow upon the face of the earth, and every living creature, and He beheld it and it was good. Then He created man and woman, and placed them in the Garden of Eden under ideal conditions. Out of His great desire to have companionship with His creatures, He endowed man with a free will. In order that they might exercise this power and love Him from choice, it was necessary that it be possible for them to choose evil in preference to that which was good. And, lo, when they were given this privilege they chose evil. Then it was that they were driven out of the Garden of Eden, and the gates were closed behind them. Thus, man, through sin, through his choice of evil, separated himself from God.

But God loved man, the supreme glory of His creation. Therefore, He planned through the flood to bring man back into the Garden of Eden and unto Himself. Out of all the inhabitants of the earth, He found Noah and his family godly. He warned Noah to prepare for the great flood that was coming, which would destroy every living thing upon the face of the earth. So, when the flood came, Noah and his family and the animals gathered into the ark with him were saved. Thus it was that God gave man a second opportunity to follow Him, to choose good instead of evil. However, in the second generation after Noah, we find that man again chose evil rather than good. Another way had to be prepared whereby man through choice could return unto God. Then down through the centuries God sent His prophets and holy men to teach His people of His ways and to prepare for the advent of His Son. When the time was fulfilled, God so loved the world that He sent His only begotten Son, to the end that all that believe on Him, should not perish, but have everlasting life. He sent His Son to again open the gates of the Garden of Eden for man, that man through following His example and accepting Him as his Saviour might again enjoy himself in the presence of the Father.

BORN IN BETHLEHEM, Jesus grew up in Nazareth. Finally He launched upon His mission. Back and forth between Galilee and Judea, He went, preaching and teaching and living that which He taught; healing the sick, comforting those that were sorrowful, feeding those that were hungry, helping all those in need, giving them a new conception of God, the Father, and LOVE. The common people heard Him gladly and followed after Him. When the leaders of the Judaistic Church beheld that the whole world was going after Him, they were filled with fear that the strange doctrine which this man preached would undermine their church and cause them to lose their power. They began to plan and devise schemes whereby He might be brought to trial and disposed of, thus to preserve their way, their order, their established order.

DURING HIS MINISTRY, Jesus chose twelve of His disciples, the Apostles, to be with Him, to whom He would entrust the carrying on of His work, of bringing men back to the Father, back to the Father through Him who had been sent as the Saviour of mankind. It soon became clear to Jesus that His way led to a Cross. Finally, the forces of evil closed in about Him. He was brought before Pontius Pilate, the Governor, was tried and crucified. But in the night in which He was betrayed, within the shadow of the Cross, He took bread, and when He had given thanks, He brake it, and gave it to His disciples, saying, "Take, eat, this is My body which is broken for you, This do in remembrance of Me." He made this supreme sacrifice for you and for me. That was over 1900 years ago but He asked us to do a certain thing in remembrance of Him. During those centuries, those who have been faithful and loyal to Him, have kept this commandment. They have partaken of His body and His blood. Through this act they have been strengthened inwardly and have been inspired to carry the glad tidings of the Saviour to the ends of the world.

WE COME ON DOWN through the ages until today. The devil takes upon him the form of a man, he stalks forth upon the face of the earth, bringing famine and pestilence, death and war to man. Great tribulation is brought to all men. The privileges afforded man as a Son of God are jeopardized. The devil would make slaves of all men. Then the call comes for many to go forth, that their bodies be broken, that their bodies be given, to preserve for us the privilege of choosing and enjoying the Christian way of life. Our young men and our young women have heeded the call to go forth, and, if necessary, give their bodies, for you and for me, and for those that shall come after us. We understand this, we understand the sacrifice they are making for others. Yet there are those among us, like the contemporaries of Jesus, who stand by and say, "We will have nothing to do with it, we are innocent." You know what group that is, the pacifists, they stand apart, they will do nothing. But can you? Aren't we all involved in this thing today, just as those who stood by and witnessed the crucifixion of our Lord? Isn't Pontius Pilate labelled as the man under whom Jesus was crucified?

Still there are those today who would only use the occasion of suffering and sacrifice to improve their own material position, who have no appreciation of the high ideals for which the sacrifices are being made.

There are still those who peep from behind the curtains during the tumult and watch the multitudes go by to give their bodies. It is not a lonely figure approaching a hill outside of Jerusalem, but many approaching the desert of North Africa, the mountains of Sicily, the beachhead of Salerno or Anzio, the jungles of the South Pacific. There they go, to sacrifice, to give their bodies for you and for me. When the tumult is over, all of us will want to share in the great benefits obtained through the victory. We must do many things in remembrance of these men and these women.

CAN'T WE AROUSE ourselves to the point where we are deeply conscious of the one supreme sacrifice that was made for us and in all humility approach the Altar of God and do the thing that He said "Do in remembrance of Me"? He said that because He knew that in doing this one thing you would keep Him in remembrance until His coming again.

What would you think of those who are near and dear to you, if, when you departed, they failed to do the one thing you had requested of them to do in remembrance of you? They need not reason that we would never discover their neglect. Their attitude and their spirit would bear witness to what they had or had not done.

Let us not forget the sacrifices, the great sacrifices that are being made for us today on the battlefields of the world. May these sacrifices work to make us even more deeply conscious of the one supreme sacrifice made for us and for all men, that the gates of the Garden of Eden might swing open again, that we might enter into the blessed presence of God, to dwell forever. Only through this sacrifice could the gates be opened again.

"God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, to the end that all that believe on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." God's only begotten Son, our Saviour and Redeemer, in the night in whch He was betrayed took bread, and when He had given thanks, He brake it, and gave it to His disciples, saying, "Take, eat, this is My body which is given for you. This do in remembrance of Me."

A RENDEZVOUS WITH LIFE

I have a rendezvous with life
Within the Blessed Sacrament
When over me the priest is bent
And Jesus comes, exceeding fair,
For He has promised to be there.

I know I am not worthy thus
To take His life mysteries;
My sins are higher than a hill,
His mercy deeper than the sea,
And so in my communion still
I find His love and it healeth me;
And I to my pledged word am true.
I shall not fail that rendezvous.

ment of association with non-Catholics. The movement (Sword of the Spirit) courageously initiated by his eminence the Cardinal (Hinsley) is, we believe, the first attempt to put the desires of the Holy See into practice."

We hope Bishop McIntyre will read this article of the Rev. Mr. Tonnar. We are certain that he would profit by it. Christian forces are to continue weak and ineffective instruments unless they learn the lesson of working together in a spirit of cooperative helpfulness.

May we all pray, Roman Catholic and Protestant alike, that God will give us the vision in these stern days to see the best that is in our respective groups, and to minimize the weaknesses. Christian cooperation is so necessary.

Without giving up our spirit of friendliness, we do resent this blanket condemnation of our brethren. We feel with Dr. Searle that it is a serious blow to a united Christian front in the face of the world's paganism.

THE FUZZY-WUZZY ANGELS WITH THE FUZZY-WUZZY HAIR

(Verses in tribute to the natives of New Guinea, written by an Australian "digger" and read by Dean Bodger at Diocesan meetings in Chicago last month.)

Many a mother in the Homeland, when the busy day is done,
Sends a prayer to the Almighty, for the keeping of her son;
Asking that an angel guide him, and to bring him safely back—
Now we see those prayers are answered, on the Owen Stanley track.

Though they haven't any haloes, only holes slashed through their ears,
And their faces marked with tattoos and with scratch pins in their hair,
Bringing back the badly wounded, just as steady as a hearse,
Using leaves to keep the rain off, and as gentle as a nurse,
Slow and careful in bad places on the awful mountain track,
And the look upon their faces makes us think that Christ was black.

Not a move to hurt the wounded, as they treat him like a saint;
It's a picture worth recording, that an artist's yet to paint;
Many a lad will see his mother, and the husbands see their wives,
Just because the Fuzzy-wuzzies carried them to save their lives,
From mortar or machine-gun fire or a chance surprise attack,
To safety and the care of doctors at the bottom of the track.

May the mothers in the Homeland, when they offer up a prayer,
Mention these impromptu angels with the fuzzy-wuzzy hair.

PRAYERS OF THE SPIRIT. By John Wallace Suter. Harpers. $1.00.

This is a collection of one hundred prayers (four from the 1928 Prayer Book) by America's foremost writer of prayers in collect form. Everyone of these prayers could be used liturgically without breaking with the language of the past, and still everyone of them speaks to the living present. There are prayers for the Church, for Christian brotherhood, for inward calm, for times of sickness and death, for national life, for the Church year, and for time of war. There is a little office of the Beautitudes which could be used as a Litany. This book has value for private devotions, for public worship, and (we hope) for prayers to be inserted in the next revision of the Prayer Book.

Jesus of Nazareth Passes By

Our guess is that most churches will be filled with goodly congregations on this Palm Sunday, 1944. Processions will be large and impressive in many instances. The music will be enriched, and the whole pageantry will be uplifting. Therein lies a danger.

Outside the churches will be passing other processions. Here are some of them: The procession of the pagan indifferent; the procession of the cruel hates and prejudices of men; the procession of marching men, equipped with modern implements of destruction, the fruit of the unleashed passions of evil men. Have the churches any answer to give to those who form these processions? We believe they have.

The answer comes in the form of the answer that was given at the end of the first Palm Sunday procession! Jesus of Nazareth passed by and found His triumph on a Cross. That Cross is the answer to the cruel, hateful processions of men today. The answer is not in the lilies on the altar, it is in the Cross on the altar. It is in the Cross that we may find planted in our hearts.

A blind beggar sits by the gate of an ancient city and cries out from his blindness: "What is this excitement?" He is told Jesus of Nazareth passeth by! There are millions of blind beggars sitting by Jericho gates in the world today. They in their blindness wish to know why all this commotion by you Christian people? Do you mean what you say? Are you ready to practice what you profess to believe? When you tell us Jesus passes by, why don't you ask us to join the procession, too?

As Christians we must ask all men to join with us in the procession that Jesus leads. But we must make it clear that the procession leads to a Cross. Its sign of victory is a Cross. No one dare join that procession, when Jesus passes by, who is afraid to face the Cross.

God give us grace to make real our belief in the "triumphal entry!"

A Blow to Christian Cooperation

The Southern Churchman stands ready at all times to further the cause of Christian cooperation. We believe this cause to be pre-eminent in these tragic days. We believe that Christianity holds the key to a "just and durable peace". Therefore, we are pained when ecclesiastics in places of influence use their office to block honest attempts at Christian cooperation.

"Time" in its current issue carries a most distressing news item, citing what we believe to be an unwarranted attack on Protestant clergy in general, and a direct blow at the cause of Christian cooperation. Bishop Francis A. McIntyre made a recent address in which he called anti-Semitism a "stuffed wolf" set up "by paid publicity agents" (Time, March 20th). In Metropolitan Church Life, weekly paper of the Greater New York Federation of Churches, General Secretary Robert W. Searle reported (so writes Time, March 27):

"Early in the summer I called upon Bishop McIntyre. I suggested to him that the inter-racial situation and the juvenile situation in New York were so serious as to challenge religious forces to take the initiative in bettering conditions. I asked him . . . if he would be willing to appoint three or four (Roman Catholic) representatives to meet with three or four whom the Federation might appoint in order to explore the possibility of cooperative action.

"My suggestion was rather curtly rebuffed with the reply, 'How can we cooperate with you? There is not a single Protestant minister in New York who believes that Christ is God!' To my question as to how many Protestant ministers he knew he answered, 'None'."

Dr. Searle comments, "I am convinced that Bishop McIntyre does not represent the spirit of New York's Roman Catholicism, but, unfortunately, he is in a position to block the cooperation which the community desperately needs".

Our comment falls into two fields. The first is that we do not accept the Roman Bishop's blanket indictment of the Protestant clergymen of New York City. We number some of them as our personal friends. We know that they are not dis-believers in the deity of Christ. We would suggest to the good Bishop that he cultivate the acquaintance of some of these outstanding Christian leaders. He would find that they are men of deep conviction and believe as earnestly and devoutly in the deity of Christ as does the Bishop. Their approach may be different, but the reality of their experience of the Incarnate Son of God has as profoundly affected their lives as has the Bishop's experience. We believe that the Bishop would also discover that these men respect his convictions, but at the same time hold true to their own convictions. We cannot have Christian cooperation if we make sweeping statements about each other which have no basis in fact.

Our second comment is this: In the May, 1943, issue of Columbia, a Roman publication, there is an article by the Rev. Bernard A. Tonnar, S. J., entitled, "Papal Policy on Cooperation with Non-Catholics". The writer states: "From the time of Leo XIII to the present Holy Father there seems to be two periods. The Repression Period of Cooperation, typifying the pontificates of Leo XIII and Pius X, and the Encouragement Period of Pius XI and Pius XII." We wonder if Bishop McIntyre recognizes that the supreme head of his group has been responsible for furthering this period of encouragement? One of his priests writes this: "It will be observed that the directions of the Holy Father have become progressively liberal, gradually passing from mere tolerance to positive encourage-

DEVIL'S DARNING-NEEDLE

I belong to the order
  Of sleek dragon-flies,
Have a long skinny body
  And two poppy eyes.
Yes, my short legs look funny—
  They're so badly bent,
But with wings like a fairy
  I'm filled with content.

If you watch you will see me
  Zoom down to the pond
Where I search for mosquitoes
  Of which I am fond.
Though it seemed that for ages
  No one understood—
You will find I am harmless
  And really do good.

THE CHILDHOOD OF OUR LORD

What was the first thing which the little Lord Jesus remembered? Perhaps it was the way His mother lifted Him when He went in and out of the door with her. She always bowed her head and touched a shining metal thing that was fastened to the doorpost; she called it the mesusah. She kissed her finger when she touched the mesusah, and said something that was like a prayer: "The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in, from this time forth and for evermore."

Jesus remembered that His mother taught Him to do exactly the same. Every time He went in and out, Mother Mary said He must touch the shining metal mesusah, and kissing the finger that had touched it, He must murmur the blessing.

We can just imagine hearing Mary tell Jesus why He should do this—why the case, called the mesusah, was there, and what was in it. Perhaps Jesus asked, Mother, why do we touch the mesusah? Why is it there? and this is the way she would answer:

"In the mesusah are words written from the Law of God, my Son. These are the words," and reverently she repeated:

Hear, O Israel;
The Lord our God is one Lord,
And thou shalt love the Lord thy God
With all thy heart,
And with all thy soul,
And with all thy might,
And these words, which I command thee this day,
Shall be upon thy heart.

No doubt Mary told Jesus that every father must have those words written on parchment and fastened to the doorpost, so that everyone who passed in or out would see them. The mesusah reminds us to remember the Lord God and to love and serve Him. Probably she would say, "And so, my Son, we touch the mesusah, and because the words are the words of God, we kiss our finger in reverence and say a blessing."

We can picture Jesus looking at the shiny metal case and asking "The words are in there?" His mother replying, "Yes, the strong case keeps the wind and rain and sun from harming the parchment. The words of God are safely kept."

CLOUD DRESSES

If all the clouds were silk, my dear,
And we could reach them from down here,
We'd cut and sew the fabrics, rare,
And lovely dresses have to wear.

I'd choose a rose-pink one from dawn,
With silver stars embroidered on;
A string of pearl beads I would wear,
And apple blossoms in my hair.

For you a blue one from the skies,
To match your innocent blue eyes;
I'd trim the lovely dress so bright,
With sheerest cloud lace of pure white.

And when the evening sun drooped down,
I'd make a lovely crimson gown—
An evening wrap of softest blue,
With golden moonbeams shining through.

From rainbow clouds of every shade
What lovely dresses could be made!

MAKING TRAGEDIES OF TRIFLES

Some one has given the counsel, "Don't make tragedies of trifles," and it is good advice. The world is full of whining, embittered people who are making life gloomy for themselves and others, and yet their lot is no harder than that of hundreds of thousands who are smiling and sunnyhearted. The trouble is that they make a tragedy of every little event that goes wrong.

A young woman, a teacher, once said to a friend, "Every day for a week I have missed my street car by half a block." Her tone suggested that she was announcing the direst of tragedies and her expression emphasized that idea. The cars on the line she patronized ran every five minutes, and yet she seemed to feel, and indeed said as much, that her missing a car on a number of days in close succession was proof that everything was against her.

There are real tragedies in the world and lucky are those whose lives are not touched by them. If you are one of the fortunate number, do not try to make up for the lack of real tragedies by make-believe ones.—Exchange.

WHO IS HE?

A modern French author has written thus: "Two thousand years ago a trial took place ,a man was tried, condemned and put to death. To open your Bible is to enter the court where Jesus Christ's trial takes place. All kinds of witnesses walk in. Each in his own language tells what he has seen and heard from the place where he stood. These witnesses are the prophets and apostles. The collection of these testimonies is the Bible. Only one question matters:

Who is the accused?

What has he done to be there?

In what sense has he taken upon himself the most abominable crimes?

The witnesses only matter in so far as they can help us to answer these three questions. The only value of their testimony lies in the light it throws on the Accused. When they have borne witness they vanish from the scene. They withdraw and leave us alone to face with the Accused, who asks: "But whom say Ye that I am?"

Woe to him who leaves the court, woe to him who closes the Bible without knowing Who is Jesus Christ and of what He is accused?

Is He Lord? Then crown Him Lord of all your activities and relationships.

Is He Saviour of the World? Then ask Him to cleanse and redeem all your life.

Is He Son of God? Then receive Him into your heart that you, too, may know God as Father in Christ.

Returning to Beloved Work

Rev. Robert E. Wood, Invited Back to China by Bishop Tsu, Is On His Way

New York, N. Y.—The Rev. Robert E. Wood, who returned to the United States on the first Gripsholm trip, is on his way back to China, according to announcement by the National Council's Overseas Department. Exact time and place of departure were, of course, not announced, but Mr. Wood's return to the work from which he "retired" and which he loved, is explained best in his own words:

"Bishop Y. Y. Tsu is the one who is inviting me back to China, although I am nearly 72 years old, for special work among students. The Church Missions House, New York, is backing me up and making arrangements, and even our Chinese Ambassador is helping me to get a passport from the United States State Department, saying that I will be welcome in China."

Nearly all of Mr. Wood's 46 years in the ministry of the Episcopal Church have been given to missionary work in China, where he was priest-in-charge of St. Michael and All Angels, and chaplain of the Church General Hospital, Wuchang, in the Diocese of Hankow.

The Rev. Mr. Wood is modest about his own important share of the Church life of China, and during his stay in this country hardly mentioned what is so well known in China; the experience he has gone through, such as the Boxer outbreak in 1900, the Revolution of 1911, the siege of Wuchang, when he was shut in and under fire for 40 days in the walled city, the rough adventure of travel throughout a large area of the interior of China, and his extensive refugee work in the present war.

His work has been most varied and far-reaching. It has included such different features as revision of the translation of the Prayer Book in Chinese; assisting in the compilation of a new and widely used Hymnal; directing his large and important parish, with vigorous missionary work on all sides, both in city and country, radiating from that center; all of which work he founded; reaching people of all classes; high officials of the Government, officers and soldiers of the army, scattered farmers in little villages, college students, and richksha coolies of the streets.

His clergy house was a hospitable center where Chinese clergy and catechists gathered for devotion and conference, for personal direction in problems and difficulties. Chinese from far and near dropped in on him for a meal, for a day, or for a week, and were always welcome.

Following Mr. Wood's official retirement from active service, he wrote that being on a pension was such a joy, as the money permitted him to help people so much more effectively than ever before. At the same time he continued a full schedule of services, evangelistic work and services to the needy exercised in scores of ways.

Following repatriation in 1942, Mr. Wood cherished the ambition to return to China, and to spend the rest of his life in work with the Chinese people. He is about to realize that ambition.

NATIONAL YOUTH COMMISSION TO MEET APRIL 21-24

New York, N. Y..—In preparation for the meeting of the National Youth Commission at Racine, Wisconsin, April 21-24, the Commission officers, Miss Helena Schnurbush, of Wakefield, Mass., chairman, and Miss Nancy Lee Noble, St. Elmo, Tenn., met with the Rev. Frederick H. Arterton, executive secretary, and the staff of the National Council's Division of Youth, at Brugler House.

Mr. Arterton explained that the group worked on plans for the forthcoming meeting, which will review the progress of youth work in the Church in the past, with special reference to participation in U. M. C. Y. The Commission will also discuss present needs and plan the emphases and program for the coming year, together with study of the strategy by which these emphases and the program may be carried out throughout the Church.

Bishop Charles C. J. Carpenter, Bishop of Alabama and chairman of the Division of Youth, will attend the Commission meeting and serve as its Chaplain. Bishop Benjamin F. P. Ivins, of Milwaukee, will be the Celebrant at a corporate Communion service.

The Commission is made up of two young people and one adult from each province, three members at large, two members elected by CRYO and one by the Canterbury Clubs, representing College Work.

TWO EPISCOPAL INSTITUTIONS RECEIVE GRANTS

New Orleans, La.—The Church's two institutions in New Orleans received increased grants from the Community Chest for the year 1944. The Children's Home was awarded $5,948.17, and the Gaudet Normal and Industrial School is to receive $4,488.25. The Gaudet School is one of the American Church Institute for Negroes group of schools, although owned and operated and partly supported by the Diocese of Louisiana. Both grants are slightly larger than the totals for previous years, recognizing the increasing usefulness and service of the two Episcopal activities.

Chaplains Welcomed by Missionary-Trained Natives—Children Sing Star Spangled Banner

New York, N. Y.—Chaplain Charles H. Buck, Jr., formerly of St. Paul's Church, Crownsville, Md., and now somewhere in the south Pacific, writes the Overseas Department of the National Council of a visit with missionary-trained natives on a neighboring island. "The most imposing feature of the whole native village was the Church, a handsome building of home-made concrete . . . I suppose 'mortar' is the proper word, decorated inside with inlaid peral-shell."

Chaplain Buck's visit was during the absence of the missionary, so, he says, "the 'king' was conducting services. He is a benign old gentleman with great dignity and piety. His speech of welcome was deeply moving, assuring us that he spoke for all his people when he said that the village was honored by our presence, and offering us any assistance we might desire in surveying. We took along a doctor who spent every minute of his time treating the sick, and we left a large supply of medicines and hospital equipment for the native dresser, a cultivated member of the village who had been a couple of years to medical school. The schoolmaster had prepared for our friendly invasion by teaching all the children to sing the Star Spangled Banner. They sang with amazing expression and a rhythm that is all their own. In one place they achieved an effect worthy of more famous choirs, singing 'the rocket's red glare,' so softly that it tapered off in a fine thread of sound, and then shouting 'the bombs bursting in air.' It made ripples along the spine."

GIFT TO UNITED JEWISH APPEAL GREATLY PRIZED

New York, N. Y.—A gift of $1,000 to the United Jewish Appeal has been made from the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief. the UJA is on behalf of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, the United Palestine Appeal, and the National Refugee Service. Bishop Tucker, with the remittance, wrote: "Through a division of responsibility our major efforts and yours are directed towards the alleviation of the ills of different religious and cultural groups. I know somewhat of the tremendous responsibility which is being carried by the American Jewish community in meeting the tragic needs of the Jewish people around the world. We wish to associate ourselves with these efforts and therefore send you the attached check as token of our bond of sympathy and basic unity of purpose."

Acknowledging the contribution, Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, chairman of the board of the United Jewish Appeal said: "I assure you no gift is more prized by us than this one which is impelled by the tenets of humanity which our great beliefs have given to this world. The knowledge that you are well acquainted with the work the American Jewish community is doing through the United Jewish Appeal agencies to alleviate the tragic needs of our people is, I assure you, a source of strength and encouragement to my lay and rabbinical colleagues, who cannot rest until this work is done."

INSPIRED TO GIVE

New York, N. Y.—A little footnote in the Lenten Forward—day by day noted that "there are still 75 of our workers in the Philippines. Bishop Binsted is still allowed to minister, but all the workers outside of Manila are held in concentration camps. They count on us not to forget them and their hundreds of former charges now left unshepherded."

That accompanied the reading and meditation for March 11 in Forward—day by day. On March 17, the Dean of one of our Cathedrals wrote the National Council saying: "Mr. .... was inspired to give the enclosed check by the memorandum on page 19 of the current Forward—day by day. He asks that this money be used, if possible, to help Bishop Binsted in the work he is doing.

Mr. Whitney says that it is not possible at present to transmit funds to the Philippines, but that as soon as a method of handling it can be found, the gift will go to Bishop Binsted.

NOT A LUXURY

New York, N. Y.—"Excuse the interruption" writes Mr. Robert Kemp of Boone School, Wuchang, China, now at the Lienho Middle School at Tsingchen in Free China, to a New York friend. "Two kittens just climbed into my lap. They are not a luxury, for they are intended to grow up and help their mother reduce the plague of rats and mice which infest the old temple which houses the school. This with a view of reducing a second and worse plague, which is fleas in swarms." Fleas, Mr. Kemp might have added, are carriers of a still worse plague which is the plague itself. The kittens are playing their part in the prevention of that dreaded disease.

Y. M. C. A. Worker Returns to U. S.

Mr. Roger D. Arnold Home After Living in China Twenty Years, Will Go On Speaking Tour

New York—Roger D. Arnold, for twenty years with the Y. M. C. A. in China, a warm friend of the Episcopal Church's work in Kunming, has returned to the United States, and, after a brief rest to recuperate from illness, will be on a speaking tour for the Y. M. C. A., giving opportunity to hear first-hand news and experience from Kunming, one of the most important centers of new work in free China.

After twenty years' residence in Kunming, Mr. Arnold probably knows that remarkable spot better than any other foreigner and most Chinese. He was there before, during, and after the incredible changes caused by the immigration of Chinese from the North and East after the war began. He has seen the even more fantastic developments due to the American "invasion" by air which has made Kunming headquarters of the American air force in China.

Mr. A. J. Allen, treasurer of the Church's mission, has been sharing Mr. Arnold's house and reports that, on leaving Kunming, Mr. Arnold could have sold the house and furniture for fabulous sums since housing and all foreign goods are now in extreme demand. Instead, he has rented it at only a nominal figure to Mr. Allen for his continued use as home and office, furnished and equipped even to an adding machine, indispensable and irreplaceable.

Most impressive in China after seven years of war, Mr. Arnold finds, are the endurance and confidence of the Chinese people. Neither reactionaries, fascists nor communists, he believes, can make any permanent or extensive impression on the inherently democratic and independent spirit of the Chinese.

This makes it all the more urgent, Mr. Arnold feels, to do everything possible now to develop and strengthen Chinese leadership, and, for Episcopal Church people, to support such Church institutions as Hua Chung College and the Lienho Middle School, and Christian work among the students of the great government universities.

The plight of most students is nearly desperate because the cost of living is so high. They cannot afford adequate food and clothing, the lack of it makes them ill, and illness adds to the unbearable expense of living. The international Y. M. C. A., like other Christian agencies, realizing the importance of developing native leaders and of helping present-day students to continue their education, organized the National Student Relief Committee, with headquarters in Chungking, which has been supported by gifts from European and American students and from United China Relief. Mr. Arnold was treasurer of Student Relief for the Kunming area. Mr. Allen, for whom the complexities of current Chinese finance have no terrors, has succeeded him, at the request of Chinese friends on Mr. Arnold's departure.

Besides aiding the work in China today, Mr. Arnold says, it is most important that Church people at home should be recruiting the finest possible young people to be trained for service in China. "Swamped with opportunities" is the phrase he used for the Y. M. C. A. Many of the Chinese staff have been drawn off into government service, so many, Mr. Arnold remarked, that one or two government departments seem to be almost wholly staffed with former Y. M. C. A. workers. Mission boards as well as the Association have had too long an interval without additions to their staff and need now to be finding young recruits.

During April Mr. Arnold will be speaking in the following cities: April 10-12 Wichita; 13 Topeka; 14-15 St. Joseph; 17-19 Tulsa; 20-23 Denver; 24-26 Kansas City, Mo.;; May 1-3 St. Louis.

PREVENTING YOUTHFUL CRIME

The nation-wide concern over juvenile delinquency has found a happy solution in Washington, D. C. A patrolman in the 13th precinct of the Nation's Capital rediscovered a truth long-forgotten, namely, that by giving youngsters something wholesome to fill their minds and activities, they can be kept from committing crimes. When this principle was put into practice, the number of cases of automobile stealings, breaking street lamps and the promotion of fights took a decided drop.

A Junior Police and a Junior Citizens Corps were organized in the precinct and its results were so satisfactory that the Major and Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police organized a new juvenile bureau in the Police Department. Citizens and police officials alike feel that the creation of this bureau to prevent crime by the youths of Washington is an exhibition of just plain common sense.

Uniform Crime Reports, a publication of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, states that 20,786 youth 17 years old were arrested last year for serious crimes in the country as a whole, and that there was an increase of 28 per cent in arrests of boys of that age.

The importance of directing the activities of youth into paths of right conduct and before they get an opportunity to become enmeshed in a life of crime cannot be overestimated. Good can triumph over evil, but not if good remains dormant while evil is incessantly alert and active. This move of the Washington Metropolitan Police Department shows that its officials are determined to have good take the offensive and do it before it is too late.—Exch.

DIOCESE OF MICHIGAN

Consents to Election of Coadjutor Received

Detroit, Mich.—The Rt. Rev. Frank W. Creighton, D. D., bishop of the Diocese of Michigan, has announced that consents to the election of a Bishop Coadjutor for the diocese have been received from a majority of the bishops of the Church and Standing Committees of the various Dioceses, and that consequently the Diocese of Michigan may proceed to the calling of a special Convention for the election.

The Standing Committee of the Diocese, through its Secretary, the Rev. Irwin C. Johnson, rector of St. John's Church, Detroit, has sent a call to all clergy and vestries in the Diocese, setting the time for the Special Convention as Wednesday, May 24, 1944, at 10:00 A. M. in St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit.

The Standing Committee, supplemented by several other clergy and laymen, has been acting as a committee to receive nominations for Bishop Coadjutor.

BISHOP PAGE WELCOME VISITOR VISITOR

Detroit, Mich.—A welcome visitor to the Diocese of Michigan for two weeks beginning March 19 was the Rt. Rev. Herman R. Page, Bishop of Northern Michigan. Bishop Page assisted the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Creighton, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese, with a heavy schedule of Lenten visitations. Bishop Page is the son of the late Bishop Herman Page, for sixteen years head of the Diocese of Michigan and Bishop Creighton's predecessor. He is well known in the Diocese, having made many visits here during his father's lifetime, and served as a leader at several conferences of a Diocesan nature.

BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW CHAPTERS HOLD FINE RALLY

Dearborn, Mich.—Junior and Senior chapters of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, numbering 17 or 18 groups in fourteen parishes and missions, were represented at a fine rally held in Christ Church on the evening of March 21. More than 125 were present for the dinner and meeting.

Following the dinner, there was an interesting program featuring a clever magician and the kind of group singing one would expect from 125 young men; announcements by the Rev. Sheldon T. Harbach, diocesan director of Boys' Work, regarding the summer camping program of the diocese; and the introduction of some of the leaders in charge of the meeting, including the Rev. Walter Fry, assistant minister in St. John's Church, Detroit, the representative of the diocesan Department of Boys' Work responsible for the Brotherhood of St. Andrew in the Diocese of Michigan; the Rev. Allan L. Ramsay, rector of St. Mary's, Detroit, vice-president of the Department of Boys' Work; the Rev. John R. Scarlett, rector of St. Peter's Church, Tecumseh, and Mr. R. Merrill Bird, of the Dearborn chapter, chairman for local arrangements.

The meeting was brought to a close with a service of rededication and admission of new members, held in Christ Church. Mr. Scarlett made an address on "You and the Brotherhood", and during the service 17 boys, from various chapters, were admitted to membership. Mr. Fry, Mr. Ramsay and Mr. Harbach also participated in the service.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE OVERTAXES SEATING CAPACITY

Miami, Fla.—A serious problem now facing the vestry of the Church of the Holy Cross is how to accommodate the choir and congregation at the regular 11 o'clock services. All space in the chancel, including extra chairs, is occupied by the acolytes, the boys choir of twenty-four voices, and the regular adult choir of thirty adults. The only answer to the situation seems to be to enlarge the chancel, which would reduce the nave, already overtaxed. The present seating capacity of the church is 300. Dr. G. W. Gasque, rector of the church, announced last Sunday morning that if there is any further increase in the attendance, it may become necessary to divide the congregation into two identical services, one at 9:30 and one at 11 o'clock .

THANK OFFERING SENT BY LAYMAN ON RECTOR'S 25TH ANN.

Wilkinsburg, Pa.—The Rev. Dr. William Porkess, rector of St. Stephen's Church, in speaking of his twenty-fifth anniversary as rector of the parish at the Sunday morning Service, March 5, stated he had recently been conversing with a layman about this twenty-fifth anniversary. He went on to say, his main desire was to do something himself—financially substantial, to reduce the Church's mortgage, but the personal situation was, he was willing and not able. This, however, was his desire. Then a few days later he received from the layman a check for $1,000, as a Thank Offering, for the rector's long rectorship, the donor's name to remain anonymous. Dr. Porkess had the joy of making the announcement to the congregation, and presenting the gift at St. Stephen's Altar, on the anniversary Sunday.

COPTIC CHURCH

The appointment of a new Coptic Patriarch, in succession to Patriarch Amba Yohannes, who died in June, 1942, draws attention to an ancient Church of which most English people know little. The Coptic, Assyrian, Abyssinian-Orthodox, Syrian and Armenian Orthodox Churches form a group representing bodies which broke away from the Church of the Roman Empire about the sixth century. The theological cause of the severance was to be found in the Nestorian and Monophysite controversies. The Coptic Church represents the Monophysite Patriarchate of Alexandria; it holds that Christ can be in only One Nature throwing doubt upon His real manhood. The Copts are Egyptians, speaking Arabic, and number about 880,000, scattered throughout Egypt amidst Moslems. Their liturgy today is in Arabic though many ancient Egyptian words are employed. There is in the Church very little sense of missionary obligation, and in many other ways reformation is overdue. In the present election only a fraction of the members was entitled, by law, to vote. All four candidates were in favor of reform, but it was anticipated that the votes of the Copts in Cairo would result in the election of the acting Patriarch, Amba Yassab. Actually by a very large majority, Amba Makarius, Archbishop of Assiut, was elected. Assiut has always been an outstanding center of the Coptic community.

CONGRATULATIONS

London—Oxford University is to be congratulated upon its refusal to be used by the present Spanish Government in a subtle attempt to win some measure of British interest and support. The Higher Council for Scientific Research in Madrid offered to the university a gift of valuable books. By a majority vote the university declined the offer quite definitely on the grounds that they saw in the gift an attempt by Franco's Government to ingratiate itself with the British public. Oxford University has a well-earned reputation for wide, and tolerant thinking; it can have no possible fellowship with a Government which exists only by fettering all freedom of thought, and which would not be above using Oxford's acceptance of the gift as first-class propaganda. Oxford's decision will be welcomed by the great majority of Spanish people who are merely waiting for the day of their delivery from bondage.—Editorial in The Record.

RECTOR OF CHRIST CHURCH NOW A LIEUTENANT IN NAVY

Raleigh, N. C.—Rev. John Armstrong Wright, rector of Christ Church for the past seven and one-half years, has received his commission as a Lieutenant in the Chaplains' Corps of the United States Naval Reserve.

The minister is leaving for Williamsburg, Va., to attend William and Mary College.

Mr. Wright came to Raleigh from St. Paul's Church in Augusta, Ga., after the retirement of Rev. Milton A. Barber, who resigned on account of failing health, after serving the parish for thirty years.

The Vestry declares that the program of the church as well as the church school has "gone forth in great strides", under his leadership, and the membership of the parish has steadily increased.

Since the entrance of the country in World War II, Mr. Wright has led the parish in many wartime activities and projects and the presence of men and women of the Armed Forces is conspicuous in the congregation each Sunday morning.

RESCUE WORK IN PALESTINE

New York, N. Y.—Rescue of refugee Jewish children through "Children to Palestine, Inc.", is being aided by the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief. The Fund has made several contributions, and hopes to give a total of $3,600 this year for this work. Mr. Samuel A. Eliot, chairman, explains that, under the auspices of the Youth Aliyah movement associated with the great organization of Jewish women, Hadassah, many thousand Jewish children have been gathered in the occupied or neutral countries, transported to Palestine and there cared for in hospitable homes and given vocational training in the agricultural settlements and the trade schools. "What seemed to be a doomed generation," Mr. Eliot said, "has been reborn and is helping to build a better future for mankind."

Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, of Massachusetts, is an honorary vice-chairman of Children to Palestine, Inc., and Bishop John T. Dallas, of New Hampshire, is a member of the Executive Committee. Among the sponsors of the organization are Bishops Frederick G. Budlong, of Connecticut; W. Appleton Lawrence, of Western Massachusetts; Oliver L. Loring, of Maine. Also Bishop-elect Angus Dun, the Rev. Phillips E. Osgood, Miss Vida Scudder and President Kenneth M. Sills.

LENTEN SERVICES

At Church Missions House

New York, N. Y.—During Lent a special service is being held in the chapel at Church Missions House at 11:45 A. M. All through the year there are noon-day prayers, but this Lent speakers are invited to address the headquarters staff. The Rev. Dr. Charles L. Gomph, Grace Church, Newark; Bishop Charles K. Gilbert, Suffragen, of New York, and the Rev. Dr. Samuel Shoemaker, Calvary Church, New York, have been speakers to date. On March 22, Lt. Comdr. C. Leslie Glenn spoke; on March 29, the Rev. Dr. Louis W. Pitt, Grace Church, New York, and on April 5, the Rev. Dr. James Thayer Addison will close the series.

Attendance has been 75 to 80 on each Wednesday.

"REINFORCE YOUR RELIGION" WEEK IN SOUTH PACIFIC

(The following story was written by Staff Sergeant Richard J. Murphy, Jr., of 107 East Woodbine Street, Chevy Chase, Maryland, a Marine Corps Combat Corespondent.)

Somewhere in the Pacific—(Delayed)—This is "Reinforce Your Religion Week" here.

Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish services are being held nightly in the camp chapel, a 40x100 Quonset hut. Attendance of Marines here, almost all of whom are Tarawa veterans, has been "very satisfactory", according to Chaplain William W. Lumpkin (Lieutenant Commander, Chaplain Corps), U. S. N. R., rector-on-leave of the Church of the Holy Communion, Charleston, S. C.

"This is not a revival," pointed out Chaplain Lumpkin, who heads the chaplains stationed here. "Its purpose is the deepening, strengthening, and reorienting of religion."

This is the first time that such a thing has been attempted in this Marine unit. Chaplain Lumpkin added that he did not know of its having been done in any other military organization.

The Catholic portion of the week is being devoted to a mission. Several hundred Marines have crowded nightly into the church to say the rosary, hear a short sermon by one of the Catholic chaplains, and participate at Benediction. There are also two daily Masses, at 6:30 A. M. and 4:30 P. M.

Although there is no Jewish chaplain here, three Jewish services are scheduled for the week. They are being conducted by an Army chaplain, a USO worker, and a Seabee officer.

The idea for the week came from several of the chaplains. It was presented to Marine authorities and received their endorsement.

"There hasn't been any order put about it, though," Chaplain Lumpkin explained. "We didn't want anyone to get the idea we're trying to force religion down their throats."

The church flag (a blue cross on a white field) flies all day long on Sunday before the recently dedicated camp chapel. All religions hold services there. In addition, services are held for individual units here.

"ONWARD, LAYMEN"

Macon, Ga.—Donald G. Mitchell, Jr., who is the diocesan keyman for the Diocese of Atlanta, is stirring up the men of the diocese. He calls his work "Onward, Laymen", with the sub-title that it is the diocesan branch of the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work. He writes, "We in Macon have started a weekly discussion meeting on the Christian Doctrine of Man, each Sunday night during Lent, with a layman leading each of the five discussions. I led the third in the series and was much gratified at the responsiveness of the audience. I feel that a definite continuation for our Episcopal men of Macon who sponsored the series will be the outcome. In our Lenten series we have opened the meetings to men, women, and young people."

"While in Atlanta last week, I had conferences with men from three parishes and made good headway in getting them in the know of what the program is. I shall be in Atlanta again in connection with my social work programs in April, and I hope on that occasion to make additional contacts as I find they are most effective."

Men of the diocese are planning a Laymen's Conference for the week end of September 1 to 4 at Camp Mikell.

JAPANESE-AMERICANS IN FIGHTING FORCES

New York, N. Y.—Insisting that American-born Japanese are patriotic and dependable citizens, the Rev. Dr. G. A. Wieland, head of Episcopal Church work in the home field, says that there are 10,000 young Japanese-Americans in the United States armed forces. Of these, half were in uniform before Pearl Harbor; the other half were inducted since then. All reports, Dr. Wieland says, indicate that they are good soldiers, comparing favorably with any other group.

REPORT LEPER MISSION, NOV., DEC., JAN., 1944

After all reports are in, I hope mine for the Leper Mission can be published.

Gifts came from Chicago, Florida, Baltimore, Atlanta and Huntington, W. Va. In Virginia from Norfolk, Fredericksburg, Halifax, Hollins, Prince George, Haymarket, Culpeper, Urbanna, Rapidan and Richmond; a large number too numerous to mention but much appreciated.

I have to report the gift of a five hundred dollar bond from my good friend, Miss Urith Greene, of Norfolk, which will bring much happiness and comfort to many Lepers, also, over five thousand dollars was sent by American Mission to Lepers, Inc., to the British Mission in London, founder of the work, in December, to help the starving Lepers in Bengal, India. The Woman's Auxiliary, Diocese of Virginia, gave $855.62 for 1943, Junior Branch under Miss Allison $281.21 the past year. Through Mrs. Robert Harrison's work with the "Pete Banks" and my own efforts we have a total of $2,830 to report. Dr. Kellersberger, our General Secretary, writes, "The needs are greater than ever, but Richmond has been and continues to be a great center for help to needy people with Leprosy." Let us work harder than ever to further Christ's command — "Cleanse the Lepers."

Respectfully submitted,
MISS EVELYN P. MERIWETHER,
President, Treasurer, Richmond Branch, American Mission to Lepers, Inc.

NEW SCHOOL FOR PACIFIC COAST

One of the most importan developments in missionary education is the projected East Asia Training School for Missions. If the plans are developed, the several divinity schools in this area will pool their resources to form a federated school of missions, which will be backed by the Foreign Missionary Conferences and the mission boards of the member denominations. Facing toward Asia, the resources of the Bay area are tremendous, and a cooperative school will provide an adequate program. Students will enroll through their denominational institutions, and share in the entire program. The cooperating institutions are the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, St. Margaret's House, the Pacific School of Religion, the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School, the Starr King School for the Ministry (all in Berkeley), and the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Ida Whittemore Soule

Mrs. Richard H. Soule, founder of the United Thank Offering, whose influence has been felt in every missionary project of the Episcopal Church, was buried from the Church of Our Saviour, Brookline, on March 26, when Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill, assisted by the Rev. Henry McF. B. Ogilby, rector, conducted the service. Interment followed in Mount Auburn cemetery on the morning of the 27th. Mrs Soule died on March 21, early in her 96th year; her 95th birthday was on February 17 last.

Since the first United Thank Offering of $2,000 in 1889, to the most recent one last October in Cincinnati, more than eight million dollars have come to the missionary work of the Church. Through the interest and vision and activity of one woman, a tremendous program has been in effect for the past 43 years, steadily growing until today the U. T. O. supports the majority of women missionaries in Episcopal missions at home and abroad, trains them, gives them medical care and pensions, and also makes imposing contributions to the work of the National Church through its gifts for the building of hospitals, schools, churches, and the like.

Rev. Frank F. Snyder

The Rev. Frank Frantz Snyder, rector of St. Mary's Church, Williamsport, and also of the Church of Our Saviour, Montoursville, Pa., died suddenly of a heart attack on March 2. Canon Stuart F. Gast, rector of Christ Church, Williamsport, was the celebrant at a requiem service of the Holy Communion, and Bishop J. Thomas Heistand of Harrisburg read the burial service in St. Mary's Church, Williamsport, March 6. The committal service was read by Canon Clifford W. French of Harrisburg in the cemetery at Palmyra, Pa.

Before entering the ministry in middle life Mr. Snyder had been a mining engineer. He served with the U. S. [illegible]avalry in the Philippines from 1898 [illegible] 1901. He was born at Union Deposit, [illegible]a., March 17, 1878. The Eternal City

John, the beloved disciple, in Revelations, chapter 21, verses 19, 20, endeavors to express in human language the most transcendant spiritual beauty and permanence of the heavenly city—the everlasting city. He selected, singularly enough, to describe the foundations thereof, beautiful crystalline gems: Jasper, Sapphire, Chalcedony, Emerald, Sardonyx, Sardius, Chrysolyte, Beryl, Topaz, Chrysoprasus, Jacinth, Amethyst, every one of which appears in the minute crystals of

WINNSBORO BLUE GRANITE

"The Silk of the Trade"

When the surface of this granite, which is a composite of these actual precious stone crystals, is highly polished, all the scintillating beauty and color of these jewels become visible.

How peculiarly fitting that monuments to loved ones be erected of lasting granite, containing the very gems which the Apostle John mentioned in this metaphorical description of the foundations of the walls of the everlasting city, the city of our resurrection hope.

Be sure that monuments you buy are cut from genuine Winnsboro Blue Granite Like other high quality materials there are many inferior substitutes which resemble this granite on first appearance, but do not possess its durable qualities and lasting beauty.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

Rejoice, the Lord is King!
Your Lord and King adore!
Mortals, give thanks and sing,
And triumph evermore.
Lift up your heart! lift up your voice!
Rejoice! again I say, rejoice!

Jesus the Saviour reigns,
The God of truth and love:
When he had purged our stains,
He took His seat above.
Lift up your heart! lift up your voice!
Rejoice! again I say, rejoice!

He sits at God's right hand,
Till all His foes submit,
And bow to His command,
And fall beneath His feet.
Lift up your heart! lift up your voice!
Rejoice! again I say, rejoice!

Rejoice in glorious hope:
Jesus the Judge shall come,
And take His servants up
To their appointed home;
Lift up your heart! lift up your voice!
Rejoice! again I say, rejoice!

—Dr. Frank Laubach.

How vast the grief a world must bear!
And yet
The heart still sings against which hate is hurled.

From beds of mire the rarest pearls are drawn,
From conflict, peace we never shall forget.

What floods of joy await this bleeding world!
How dark the night before the golden dawn!

—Josephine Moore.

The things that are come upon the world—human slaughter, class struggle, race prejudice—are in danger of overwhelming us. Our hope lies not in ourselves, but in God.

God is saying to us today, as he did to Joshua of old, "Be strong and be of a good courage, be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

But we need to hear him. Lent is a time to listen and to deepen the sense of comradeship with our Father and with each other.

"Be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus."

"Endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ."

The same sacrificial spirit that millions are manifesting in this war must be carried over into the peace. Some of us must give ourselves and our children. Some must give our dollars, and all of us must pour into the cause that mighty, mysterious, magnetic force of prayer, which multiplies every dollar and every man's effort a thousand-fold. —Dr. Frank Laubach.

Nothing emphasizes the reality of Christ's manhood more than His prayer-life. As Man He lived in communion with the Father. Prayer was a necessity of His holy soul. Early in the morning, while others slept, He talked with the Father in the lonely wilderness, where He could hold undisturbed communion. In this He is the example for us.—Sunday School Times.

AGAINST LAX IMMIGRATION LAWS

Dear Mr. Editor:

In The Southern Churchman of March 11 among the editorials I notice a congratulation to Attorney General Francis Biddle on his statement that "he hoped that after the war our immigration laws would be liberalized," and also that he hoped we would permit free immigration for at least a limited period after this war.

I would have to know in what respect he hoped our immigration laws would be liberalized but I certainly cannot pass over any expression of desire for free immigration for any period after this war. Prior to the present immigration law, for fifty years and more we had free immigration, principally the result of desire for cheap labor regardless of any other consideration. After a long and difficult fight the present law was enacted, which was the best that could be obtained. In my humble judgment many of our troubles at the present time can be traced to this unlimited immigration, without regard to whether the immigrants would make proper progenitors of our future citizens, particularly because they largely settled in the cities and are the basis of the great difficulty in getting decent governments in the cities.

Qualified as your approval is that immigration should be limited to competent healthy persons, I have no particular objection to it, except that I think the basis of all immigration should be upon the needs of this country and not upon the desires, or even necessities, of would-be immigrants.

I feel it my duty to enter a protest to any proposition which looks to relaxing our immigration restrictions to any extent after this war, and particularly to any indiscriminate enlarging of the numbers of the immigrants. The pressure brought to bear constantly for increasing the number of immigrants has been continuous and tremendous on Congress ever since the limitation of immigration, and to revert for any period of time to our previous immigration policies in my opinion would be disastrous.

Respectfully yours,

Berkeley Minor, Jr.,
Attorney at Law.
Charleston, W. Va.

CORRECTION

My dear Editor:

The issue of March 25 on page 2 carries an unfortunate statement of Rev. Thaddeus P. Martin being formerly rector of St. Timothy Church, Wilson, N. C., and having accepted St. Athanasius Church for Negroes at Brunswick, Ga. This same error was made by The Living Church—evidently from the same source as yours. Would you be so good as to correct to read: formerly was temporarily in charge of St. Anna's Church, Littleton, and All Saints', Warrenton, N. C.

Parish Buys War Bond for 192 Men and Women in Armed Services

Miami, Fla.—During the Fourth War Loan drive, the members and friends of Holy Cross Parish, invested in a $100 bond for each of the 192 men and women from this parish who are serving in the armed forces, and a certificate for such bond was mailed to every one on the parish honor roll. Also the Men's Brotherhood of this parish voted to send a membership card, signed by the president and secretary to every man in the service, and to ask parents and others to pay the membership fee of one dollar. As a result, 188 of these cards have been mailed. On March 15, this Church received an Award of Merit "in recognition of distinguished service to freedom in support of our armed forces, our allies, and our defense agencies through the War Chest of Dade County."

Vacant Lot Given For Children's Play Ground

Palm Beach, Fla.—Recent gifts to the Church of Bethesda-by-the-Sea include a handsome Lavabo bowl, a Nativity painting, a Gothic panel having five divisions and a Ship Model, the latter hung in the south transept. A large Service Flag and an honor roll were dedicated in this Church on March 26. One member of the parish recently purchased a large vacant lot across the street from the church and gave it to this parish. This provides a playground for choir boys and other children until needed for other use, and prevents having business houses placed too near the church.

Annual Convention April 25-26

South Florida's annual diocesan convention will be held in All Saints' parish, Lakeland, on April 25-26, and the diocesan meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held on the same dates. Rev. William F. Moses, rector of All Saints' parish, is also the diocesan secretary.

Four Diocesan Camps

Four diocesan camps are to be held at Camp Wing-Mann, South Florida's diocesan camp site, the conference for adult leaders to open on June 4-11, with Rev. W. Keith Chidester of Winter Park as director. The camp for small girls will be held June 12-24 with Miss Alcesta Tulane as director and Rev. M. A. Frazell as chaplain. Younger boys will have Camp St. Andrew, June 26-July 8, with Mr. Morton Nace as director and Rev. William Hargrave as chaplain. The Y. P. S. L. has Camp St. Mark, July 10-22, with Rev. Martin Bram in charge.

Two students have withdrawn from the school to enter the armed forces. One new student has enrolled, beginning with the third quarter on March 27. A former student, the Rev. Shunji Nishi, was married in the chapel of the Episcopal Theological School on March 5.

New Dean of E. T. S.

The Rev. Dr. Charles Taylor has been elected Dean of the Episcopal Theological School, to succeed Bishop-elect Angus Dun of Washington. Dr. Taylor has been on the faculty since 1925, and is Professor of Old Testament. He is the father of five daughters and twin sons.

Professors Put on the Spot.

Four faculty members were not stumped in an information please program sponsored by the Interseminary Movement on KRE on March 21. The students conceived and conducted the program, and the unrehearsed questions were presented by James (Fadiman) Smith of San Anselmo. Star of the "experts" was Dean Shires, who was ably abetted by President Jesse Baird, Professor John Bailey, and Professor Randolph Miller. Only one question was missed, and the students were amazed at the knowledge of the professors.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

A BIGOT is a dry spigot; according to Webster, "a bigot is a hypocrite who regards his own faith and views in matters of religion as unquestionably right and any belief or opinion differing from them as unreasonable or wicked. Hence, a person intolerant of opinions conflicting with his own, as in politics or morals; one obstinately and blindly devoted to his own Church, party, belief, or opinion."

A crack-pot is like a cracked pot, not all there, not normal, not useful, one who has broken open and whose contents are running out at the wrong places. Particularly this name is applied to one who is obsessed with an idea that is bizarre or wrong or different, one who is without a sense of humor, who is a stranger to wisdom.

A "bigoted crack-pot" then is something far removed from what most of us would like to be, since fanatics are seldom popular and whether they be right or wrong they get their share of "Raus mit ems."

None of us wants to be a bigot. Jesus was constantly inveighing against them as contrary to the will of God. He could not let pass any sign of hypocrisy, for those who appeared one way and actually were another could not be trusted to do anything more than voice opinions and pass along phrases from a book. His most scathing denunciation of them is found in St. Matthew, Chapter 23. He had in mind the scribes and Pharisees at the moment, but his words apply to the hypocrites of every age who hug their intolerance as a cloak in a bitter cold wind. I list a few of the charges Jesus made against them:

"For they say, and do not."

"They will not help bear others' burdens."

"They do good to be seen of men."

"They are stumbling blocks to themselves and others."

"Their long prayers are a pretense."

"They carefully strain out gnats, and swallow camels."

"They are shiny clean outside but dirty within, appearing beautiful outwardly but within full of deadness and uncleanness."

"They refuse to hear the word of God to repent and return unto His way."

"They are desolate but will not admit it and continue putting on a pious show until some person or event strikes at their bigotry" and literally drives them to the wall, out from behind the pillars of their self-deceit, and they in humility cry, because the Christ they now see as He is and themselves they now see as they really are: "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

THE CHRISTIAN understanding of man teaches us to recognize bigotry in ourselves and others and enables us to correct it. The Christian understanding of man also enables us to differentiate between a bigot and a man of sound conviction and faith, between a crackpot and a man of vision and prophetic insight. The Christian understanding of man enables us to evaluate another individual more accurately. It enables us to form our opinions from the light truth sheds upon his person and not hastily made judgments of him because of the beliefs he holds contrary to ours. We must use care in the throwing of epithets. In kindness we refrain from using them even if they are true and patiently try to shed more light for the person's seeing. In wrath we must refrain because we usually do injustice to the person involved and not only condemn him but ourselves with our words. We can be sure of the truth in the matter when before we pass our judgments, we sit down in quiet and ask God to show us the way to understanding and dawn.

COLLECTS FOR EASTER DAY

Almighty God, Who through Thine only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, hast overcome death, and opened unto us the gate of everlasting life, we humbly beseech Thee that, as by Thy special grace preventing us, Thou dost put into our minds good desires, so by Thy continual help we may bring the same to good effect, through Jesus Christ our Lord, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee and the Holy Ghost ever one God, world without end. Amen.

O God, Who for our redemption didst give Thine only begotten Son to the death of the Cross, and by His glorious resurrection hast delivered us from the power of our enemy; Grant us so to die daily from sin that we may evermore live with Him in the joy of His Resurrection, through the same Christ our Lord. Amen.

Easter Assurance

By the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker

Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church

AT a time when so many of our dear ones are giving their lives in defense of a righteous cause, the Easter assurance that death is the entrance into a richer, more abundant life with the Risen Christ, illumines grief with the radiant light of faith.

Easter brings the further assurance that their sacrifice for a righteous cause was not in vain. By their death they open a door of opportunity. Their death is a challenge to us to pass through that door and by our effort and sacrifice convert the opportunity into a reality. Their passing is a summons to us to press forward towards the goal to which they have opened the way.

To us, Easter brings a challenge from those heroes of the faith who have followed Jesus along the path of sacrifice. Let us also, seeing that we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. Easter assures us that those who dedicate themselves in response to this challenge will bring nearer the time when the kingdoms of this world shall have become the Kingdom of the God of righteousness, freedom, and love.

Memorial Chapel of Guadalcanal

Built by 4,000 Natives and Presented to the People of the United States

"This is the House of God. This is none other than the Gate of Heaven."

With these words the native population of the British Solomon Island Protectorate presented to the American people a memorial chapel honoring 1,600 American dead, buried on Guadalcanal.

Guests of honor at the ceremony, carried out in the open air, included four major generals, two brigadier generals and a rear admiral, leaders of the United Nations forces in the Solomons war zone.

Jason, a Christian native, leader of the Labor Corps, made the presentation through Lieut. Col. D. C. C. Trench, Acting Resident Commissioner. Acceptance for the United States was made by Brig. General A. F. Howard, U. S. A.

Jason's presentation address was the highlight of the ceremony. With simple dignity this barefoot native, attired in white "lap-lap," or loin cloth, and a singlet, said:

"Me want to tell you all people that all me fella belong Solomon build this church because we want to thank you. We have worked hard and we hope you like this church. And we pray that God will bless all of you and we hope you will pray for your friends who are lying in this cemetery.

"Also we want to thank all the Americans and Allies who have fought to push the enemy out of our land. Now we give this church to you. But this church no belong you and me. This church belong God.

"And we ask God to bless us all. Thank you."

Brief dedication prayers were then said by Chaplain John O'Neil, U. S. N., of Boston, Mass., and Chaplain O. G. Grotefend, A. U. S., of Pittsburgh, after which the Native Labor Corps, singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" in six-part rhythm, led the audience into the chapel.

The chapel, with a seating capacity of 280, is made entirely of thatch and native woods. Viewed from the air it resembles a huge heart, with a cross in the center. At the peak of the heart is the flagstaff. Flower gardens have been planted in front of the chapel and along its sides.

It took approximately 4,000 natives a little more than two months to construct the chapel, the main body of which covers an area of ninety feet and twenty-six feet. The chapel is twenty-six feet high. Other details of chapel construction:

Fourteen thousand leaves and 5,000 strips of bamboo have gone into the chapel. One hundred thousand lineal feet of "kwasi-kwasi" (woven matting) are the walls. The rafters are of ambuala, a local wood. The roof is made of vatu and the altar of narlea, semi-hardwoods. The floor of the chapel is a combination of mamahui and uuala, native timbers.

Eighteen wood and inlaid carvings include a lectern, a font and cross, three fish emblems and twelve doves of peace.

There are two offices attached to the chapel, each of them ten feet square.

The chapel, open day and night, has a twenty-four hour honor guard.—"The Southern Cross Log" of the Melanesian Angilican Mission, March, 1944.

GOD'S VICTORY AND PEACE

Easter, 1944

THROUGHOUT THE AGES, Father, hast Thy love
In patience sought for sinful man's release;
Ever yearning, ever watchful from above,
To conquer death and give victorious peace.

To conquer sin and wrong, Thou gav'st Thy Son,
Who took upon Himself the form of man,
And alone He tasted death for everyone
Who dares to die that he may live again.

And so, dear Lord, we give our sons to Thee,
That Thou in love may guide them in Thy way
To suffer but to win the victory
And peace of man's new Resurrection Day.

—Mary Winder Osborne.

From Tomb to Triumph

By B. S. MURRAY

ON EASTER DAY the Church of God proclaims Now is Christ risen from the dead! Joy, overwhelming and immortal, fills our hearts, for Christ, the Firstfruits, broke the bonds of death because it was not possible that He should be holden of it.

Jesus is risen, as He said,
Risen in triumph from the dead.

When Canon Liddon preached on this subject in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, he said: On tomb after tomb in the crypt beneath your feet you read the words: "Here lieth the body"—of this great general, of that accomplished artist, of this distinguished man of letters, of that pious ecclesiastic. Here lies the body,—and until the last trump shall sound no power can avail to raise it from the dust. But at the open tomb of Jesus sits an angel with the spoken epitaph: "He is not here; He is risen." Earthly greatness, as a rule, ends with the grave. The greatness of Jesus Christ on earth began with His triumph over the grave."

"Death . . . . Swallowed Up of Life."

The Easter message assures us that death is swallowed up of life! Death cannot hold life,—only the body, of course! Our attitude towards death is so pre-Christian and expresses the attitude that death reigns unconquered. In fact, all our acts and funeral customs point in that direction. At the tomb of Jesus, long ago, all necessary precautions were taken that His Body may not rise again. Then they, like many now, failed to realize that life, and not death, has the final word. Now that their Lord was dead the disciples seek Him in the tomb. Somehow they do not expect that He will rise from the dead. Their reluctance to believe in His resurrection, even when at last they looked upon Him, seems strange when we reflect upon the miracles which they had seen Him perform. He did raise Lazarus and the widow's son at Nain. Could He not raise Himself? Doubt and timidity, defeatism—engulfed them, yet they still loved Him!

The Angels At the Tomb

Very early in the morning visitors came to the tomb to complete the embalming of His Body only to go away to proclaim Him risen from the dead. The stone was rolled away—something had happened! Something marvellous, stupendous! Angels tenant the tomb and voices heard saying, "Come, see where the Lord lay!" Yet everything was so peaceful, so quiet. Three anxious women; two angels, for the most part invisible; an empty cave, and an unsolved riddle of folded grave-clothes. Silently the Prince of Peace folded aside His burial clothes and went out into the twilight garden. . . . .

There Mary Magdalene chats with the angels and, seeing the presence of Someone near, turns herself, and "beholdeth Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus." You see angels were present at His tomb so that they may be present at ours. And sorrow and suffering may be transformed to our good. Here I detect a challenge to take up our cross, whatever it may be, and follow Christ, the Risen Saviour, in the strength of His patience and the constancy of our faith. Identifying ourselves with Him we see, even in life's darkest hour, the shining of eternal light. Angels in tombs? Of course! As Easter Day—earth's brightest day—and Good Friday—earth's darkest day—were only three days apart we are to look for angels in the tombs of trouble.

Look Through the Tomb

Now that Christ is risen we look neither at nor into the tomb but rather through the tomb. It is opened at both ends. Human hands made the door into the tomb; a Divine hand made the door out of it into the world beyond. When Jesus entered the corridor He passed quickly through it and broke open the door at the other end and then came back again with the keys in His hands.

"See," He cried, "I have the keys of death and the passage through is free for you all. You just go down that dim corridor straight into the Father's home." Think of it! You are going home to a room in the Father's house specially prepared by Jesus. And more than that, He is coming back to get you. So on that last journey He shall be our Guide and Companion. What more can we desire than the companionship of One who has been over the road and knows every step of the way? I know nothing more comforting than to know that Jesus has promised to come and fetch us when the hour of our departure draws near. And where He is there will we be also. With Him. That will be Heaven. When people want to know where Heaven is, your answer is: "Where Christ is there is Heaven." To be with Him is to be like Him. The glory and joy of the hereafter life will be in Jesus' company.

"Walk In Newness of Life"

I am so glad that our Church does not argue but simply states the indisputable historic fact of the Resurrection of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Plainly, authoritatively, confidently the living Church proclaims that at least One who was actually dead and buried has come back from beyond the grave. By His resurrection Christ has "brought life and incorruption to light" (2 Tim. 1:10), challenging us to attain unto Christ and, as new men, with another chance, go forth radiant witnesses of His resurrection. Life is one, indivisible, eternal. And there is more beyond! That's what the Easter message declares, for Jesus came back with His chart of eternity. The sons of men revised their theories of death and departure, believing what already had been their hope and cried with certainty of knowledge: "There is more beyond!" This gives meaning and continuity to life. And since that first Easter morn children of the Resurrection have marched to new, stirring music. No more we seek the living among the dead; we let the dead past bury its dead, and lay hold upon teeming vitalities. "Forgetting those things that are behind, and reaching forward to those things that are before," we accept the responsibility of our beliefs, we grasp the symbol of the Resurrection. Taking the wings of the morning we aspire to higher things; those things which are above our stunted, stinted, scanty experiences, we are impelled to seek, if we be truly risen with Christ. The Resurrection is an upward impulse, an ascent "with Christ," a challenge to accept another chance, a new life lived with Christ in God. Accordingly, to our spiritual vocabulary we add the word New,—a new zeal, a new power, a new program grips us. A provincial program forthwith becomes planetary. New men "in Christ", we are ready for the shape of things to come and face life, as the new day dawns, radiantly, courageously, and confidently. Onward, upward, forward we go to the stirring music of faith, hope, and love, these three. We see Christ who was sown in weakness, raised in power. As we see Him victorious, untrammelled, omnipotent over the last enemy, and yet the same tender, thoughtful, loving, devoted Friend, who has promised never to leave us or forsake us, but will pilot us to our room in the Father's house. All we can say is, Rabboni, Master! Master of life and death—Master of my soul and body, and bid Him—

"Touch with one coal
My frozen heart, and with Thy secret key
Open my desolate rooms!"

WITH THIS NEW challenge we must walk in newness of life along the Pilgrim Road heavenward. Eastertide coming in the Springtime, with the bursting of innumerable buds, incredibly abundant on every side, epitomizes the Easter of the soul, the opening of endless avenues glistening with new luminance. We must go on following the gleam and hearing Him say: "He that liveth and believeth in Me shall never die!" This is the Easter faith and the Easter message. Let us propagate the Easter message by going forth and telling everyone everywhere, for "Ye shall be My witnesses!" Tell that Christ is the center of all attractions, the heaven of every heaven. He is the Living Christ! Like Paul of old believe on Him and His Resurrection and thou, too, shalt be saved (Romans 10:9). So Easter summons us to Life,—an abundant, victorious, spiritualized life hid with Christ in God, and bids us allow the thrilling life-giving message of the Resurrection to so captivate our hearts that we go forth henceforth like the disciples of old and proclaim the Risen Christ to a battered, war-cursed, sin-sick world. In the spirit of conquerors we determine that Easter must lead to Pentecost, as we set our affections each day upon, and work for, Christ and His Church. Alleluia! By its assurance the Easter message broadens life here and lengthens it beyond the grave. The secret? From tomb to triumph!

For Easter Day, for the Church of God, for Christianity, for Redemption, and for the hope of Immortality, we thank God. Jesus lives; we shall live also! Since the Saviour triumphed over death, let us not deny to Him a triumph over our hearts. Live your life henceforth in the power and light of His Resurrection and becoming thereby a sharer of His victorious life, go on from strength to strength, following in His steps—From Tomb to Triumph!

The Green Gate

By Nancy Byrd Turner

THERE is a phrase in a certain old prayer that likens the grave to a gate. It would be hard to find in all literature a figure of speech more deeply fraught with beauty and truth.

This is to be said of gates: they do not lead into blind alleys; nor do they open merely for the purpose of closing again. Whether they lead into winding roads or broad fields, somehow they always take the traveler somewhere. And so the old saints, serenely sure that death is but a brief halt in a long journey, chose their metaphor well.

From the very beginning the instinct of immortality has wrought in the heart of our race. It was the ancient custom of barbarous times to place food and arms in the warrior's grave for his use in the future world. The Egyptians thousands of years ago called the tomb "the house of eternity" and faintly hoped for survival in that house. As time went on the idea grew and strengthened. Old Job, weeping in the dust, took heart of grace to put a piteous question to the ages: "If a man die, shall he live again?" The cynical writer of Ecclesiastes broke his bitter musings on annihilation to say, against his will, as it were: "The spirit shall return unto God who gave it." King David, grieving above the body of his little child, cried suddenly with happy tears, "I shall go to him!" and was comforted. Now and then some wistful seer caught a glimpse behind the veil; now and then humanity heard—in a psalmist's music or in a prophet's message—the clear, high note of immortality, as unmistakable as a trumpet call. Slowly with the passing of the centuries the instinct brightened to a dream, the dream became a hope.

Many doubted that hope; some denied it outright; some deemed it only a matter for intellectual curiosity. But a few clung to it because they must. And then in the very midst of their longings and speculations, their doubts and denials, the first Easter of the earth came to pass.

It is a strange story, that first Easter. But it is a simple one too, with a hillside garden for its quiet setting, and the time spring, and the hour break of day. An old story now. There are those who challenge it; there are those who repudiate it utterly; so men challenged and repudiated it two thousand years ago. But it shook kingdoms; it altered the course of history; upon its promise the heart of the world is stayed.

Henceforth for us there is a new significance in the springtime of the year and in dawns and in old April gardens. Nay, ever since the trembling faith of the ages was justified on that dim slope there is a new meaning in life itself. Now we can look upon the grave with altered eyes, seeing it clearly even through our tears, not as a grave, but as a green gate opening on eternal life.

EASTER SOON AFTER CALVARY

Lift up your heads, ye sorrowing ones,
And be ye glad of heart,
For Calvary and Easter Day—
Earth's saddest day and gladdest day—
Were just one day apart.

FAITH AND GRACE

For victory, for world-wide peace,
For Love Divine that shall not cease,
For all Thy lovingkindness, Lord,
We thank Thee now with one accord.

The Hope of the World!

There is a very fine line in one of our modern hymns, which reads:

"On shadowed thresholds dark with fears." The poignancy and the reality of this line is being brought home to us. There are literally millions of thresholds "dark with fears." There is the vacant chair at many a table. The warrior has gone forth to the war. The emptiness of loneliness broods over many a household. The fear of sudden death, to a loved one, causes a contraction in millions of hearts today. The darkened threshold is no poet's dream, it is a reality in this world of ours.

What can one say; what can one write in this hour of the world's darkness, that will bring comfort and a sense of well being to the world's sorrowing millions? There is but one word, one message of hope! Christ is Risen! It is the whispered word of hope in a heedless, cruel world. Christ is Risen! There is no other message that one can give to a pained and broken world. Christ is risen! No longer may the darkened despair of millions of thresholds be the final answer. The final answer is not in the dark of the world's despair, but in the Light that streams from an empty tomb! Is this only wishful thinking? Let us see.

Dr. W. A. Smart, in his vivid book, the "Contemporary Christ," closes his last chapter entitled the "Author of Salvation," with these words:

"The contemporary Christ! At times we think that we have Him securely shut up in His first century Palestine, and then we discover Him walking beside us. The things He says are so simple and so contemporary, and so impossible. He seems not to fit into this contemporary world we know so well; but when we stop long enough to hear what He is saying, we feel that there is no hope for the world unless it will listen to Him. He speaks with Palestinian accent the homely things that were true in His world so long ago, and all at once it dawns on us that they are also the things by which our world must live if it would escape the abyss."

"The contemporary Christ" of the first Resurrection Morn now walks abroad in the world today. He brings, or at best can bring, to "shadowed thresholds dark with fears," the light and love and courage and faith of His own radiant life.

The trouble is as Dr. Smart has suggested, we do not stop long enough to listen. We rush madly on. We have not the time to pause. We cannot be stopped in our heedless pursuit of pleasure, and our lust for power. But those pleasures and that power are fruitless. We hope that they will last, and we learn through the bitterness of our sorrow that they cannot last. They tarnish easily and decay with the rise of the morrow's new pleasures and power.

The strange Christ of the Palestinian accent offers us pleasures that will not tarnish, and power that will not wane. The pleasures He offers are the pleasures born of the Spirit of God. A desire to do well by our neighbor; to serve our Heavenly Father with a loyalty and devotion that cannot be broken by earth bound loyalties. The power He offers is the power to find the new life, which may come to each of us, through His Risen and Ascended Life.

He is in our world today, this contemporary Christ of the Resurrection morn. There is no other answer that we can give to the fears of our present day. "Christ is Risen!" "Death hath no more dominion over Him." And because He is risen and has conquered death, we, too, can conquer the fears that darken our threshold today.

We ask you, believer with firm conviction, believer with luke-warm conviction, unbeliever, what hope lies in these schemes and plans of men for a better world? Does not history teach us that the plans of men are discarded after their usefulness has been spent? But here is God's plan. Here is God's plan of salvation for all mankind. It is the hope of the world!

Yes, we are children of a kind and gracious Heavenly Father, and the kind Heavenly Father has given to us the chance to live. The chance to live through Jesus Christ our Lord, in spite of what may happen to these physical bodies. "In sure and certain hope of the resurrection into eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord," we say in all confidence, as we commit our loved ones to His care.

At this Eastertide 1944, with all of its fears, with all of its doubts, with its darkness and its despair, there comes this radiant message of hopefulness—"Christ is Risen." We need to hear that message today. We not only need to hear it; we need also to heed its plaintive appeal.

It is no easy way. It is no way of soft sentimentalism. It is the way of the Cross, the way of sacrifice, that will lead us to understand the tremendous import of the three words: "Christ is Risen."

There is no other hope for the world. It is Christ's Resurrection, as a part of history or chaos.

We choose Christ's way. We believe with all sincere conviction that herein lies the one best hope for a muddled, pain wracked world. Christ is Risen!

A Cross of Peace Rises On Switzerland's Highest Mountain

Members of the expedition to the Dom in the Valais, Switzerland, putting final touches to their heavy task. The Swiss Cross of Peace now stands on the summit, 14,942 feet above sea level.

IN THE FALL OF 1943 parties of veteran Swiss mountaineers of the Saas and Zermatt valleys started from the Mischabel Hut, 10,932 feet a/s. above Saas-Fee, for an ascent of the Dom, 14,942 feet a/s. The Dom is the loftiest peak entirely on Swiss territory. Distributed in their respective knapsacks these experienced Valaisan climbers carried the parts of an iron cross, a base for the same, a can of cement and sand and other articles necessary for the erection of this landmark, which is to serve as a symbol of the country which lies at its feet, Switzerland, island of peace surrounded by the fiercest warfare.

Making up this expedition were 14 guides, a Capuchin priest, a member of the Swiss Nationalrat or House of Representatives, an honorary Doctor and several experienced alpinists. These intrepid men made climbing history on that day, for within the 15 hours needed for their mission, including ascent, anchoring of the cross and descent, they conquered four peaks, each over 13,000 feet high.

Preparations for the raising of this cross took several weeks. The cross itself, made of iron bars, was dedicated by the Bishop of Sion. Its total weight, including all needed materials, was 165 pounds. The figure of Christ which alone weighed 17 3/5 pounds was carried to the summit of the Dom by the youngest member of the expedition, 11-year-old Georg Bumann, son of a guide and ski instructor. The senior member of the party, 62-year-old Josef Knubel of St. Niklausen, reached the towering peak without any difficulties.

An icy wind swept over the Dom when the expedition reached the mountain top. Several feet below the summit, Capuchin Father Armin Breu of Sion delivered a sermon in Latin, directly above a 6,500 feet precipice. Father Breu described the erection of the cross on the Dom to a Photopress reporter in these words:

"In midst of the turmoil of war which is drawing ever nearer to the frontiers of our land, in the days when nightly bombings lay entire cities in ruins, destroying peace of home and family happiness, the Swiss cross towers above death, destruction and tears as a symbol of peace. Switzerland is a chosen country, and the sacred soil out of which the cross of the altar of sacrifice rises heavenward."

The figure of Christ, an inscription and tablets with the coat-of-arms of Switzerland and the Canton of Valais adorn the cross, which now rises on the Dom.

Guides of the Saas Valley carry the parts of the iron cross up the mountain ascent of 14,942 feet.

FELLOWSHIP

JESUS, MASTER, Thee I praise for the love that crowns my days—
For the beauty of Thy ways; songs of joy to Thee I praise,
Now and evermore.

Sin did nail Thee to the tree; I shall not a sinner be—
For I'm risen, Lord, with Thee; that henceforth I might be free,
Lord, I Thee adore!

My heart is Thy dwelling place, and filled with Thy love and grace,
That I might win in the race, and behold Thee face to face
In Thy heaven above.

What my hand can do for Thee. What my tongue can tell of Thee.
What my eyes can search for Thee, to find souls to bring to Thee,
I will do for love.

Fellowship for Christian men, must begin at Christ and then
It will spread to all as when, every soul was born again
On Pentecostal day.

When we love our Blessed Lord, all our ways are fair,
When we love our neighbor well, unity is there;
"Union" is of little worth till we have the second birth
Through the Spirit, here on earth—
To guide us on our way.

—Lewis Hoffman Kemper.

EASTER

Sing, soul of mine, this day of days,
The Lord is risen!
Toward the sunrising set thy face,
The Lord is risen!
Behold, He giveth strength and grace;
For darkness, light; for mourning, praise;
For sin, His holiness; for conflict, peace.
Arise, O Soul, this Easter Day!
Forget the tomb of yesterday,
For thou from bondage art set free;
Thou sharest in His victory
And life eternal is for thee,
Because the Lord is risen.

AN EASTER SURPRISE

"Wake up, you sleepy-head," called Janice to her sister Joyce who was rubbing her big brown eyes. "This is Easter morning, and we must hurry if we are going to be on time for Sunday School."

Joyce was up in no time, for the mention of Easter morning and Sunday School was enough to waken any little girl. Just the thought of having a new dress and new shoes to wear changed the dressing process to an interesting one.

All of a sudden Joyce happened to look toward the window, and what do you suppose she saw? Big raindrops chasing each other down the window pane.

If you could have seen the look on Joyce's face, you would have thought there was a rain storm inside as well as outside.

"O, why does it have to rain on Easter Sunday? Now I will have to wear my raincoat and rubbers, and people won't see my new dress and new shoes."

The next thing that happened was that Janice began to pout, too, and two little girls that pout are much worse than one.

"Now our egg-hunt will be spoiled," piped Janice, "and we aren't going to have a happy Easter at all."

The two little girls were peering out of the rain-covered window at the rivulets of water running down the street.

Just about that time Mother's voice was heard calling, "Janice, Joyce, are you ready for breakfast?"

"Yes, we will be right down, Mother," they said and when Mother met them with a smile, it did help those horrid frowns to disappear.

All during breakfast they cast anxious looks out of the window, but the raindrops fell faster and the wind blew harder.

After they finished eating, Mother read a chapter from the Bible, and one of the verses that she read puzzled these two little sisters very much.

"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God."

"Why, Mother, I don't see how this rain storm on Easter Sunday can be for our good," said Janice.

"Do you enjoy the grass and flowers?" asked Mother.

"Certainly I do," answered Janice.

"Well, it is the showers that bring the flowers," Mother explained, "and I am sure that there are other ways in which the rain is sent for our good, too."

In Sunday School that morning Miss Stone asked, "How many of you like the rain?" Only one little boy put up his hand, and when she asked him why, he said, "Because I like to sail my toy boats on the water."

"I am glad that one of my boys has learned the secret of contentment," said Miss Stone.

After the Easter lesson was studied, and Sunday School was over, the next thing to look forward to was the Easter egg hunt in the afternoon. On a nice day, Mother would hide the brightly colored eggs in the yard, but when the children came home, she informed them that the eggs were already hidden in all parts of the house.

"After the dinner dishes are washed," she said, "you may look for them."

"Daddy, won't you please help us with the dishes today?" asked Joyce.

"O, please do," begged Janice.

Of course, Daddy could not resist such pleadings, so Joyce tied Mother's apron on him, and it was not long until every dish was washed and dried and put away.

Mother was waiting for them in the parlor, and after giving them each a basket in which to place the eggs, she said, "All right, now you may begin." You never saw such scampering and you never heard such excited screams!

"O, I found one in my shoe," exclaimed Joyce.

"Here is a pink one in the waste basket," cried Janice.

Such fun as they had, looking into every place where they thought the eggs could possibly be hidden.

After a fifteen-minute search, Mother said, "I think you had better count your eggs and see how many you have."

"I have ten," said Janice.

"Let me see, I have ten, eleven, twelve," counted Joyce.

"There are two more eggs to find," explained Mother, "and I am anxious to see who will have the most."

"Where can they be?" asked Joyce. "O, I found one under Daddy's hat."

The last one was the hardest to find.

"I have it. It was in the desk drawer," exclaimed Janice.

Just then there was a knock on the door.

Daddy went to open the door, and threw up his hands in amazement. There in the doorway stood Jack. He was their sailor boy who had been at sea for a long time.

By this time Mother and the girls were there. They noticed that Jack looked pale and bedraggled.

"Why, Jack, what has happened?" asked Mother.

"Well, it's a long story, so let's sit down and I'll tell it to you. It was this way. Our vessel was homeward bound and we were about twenty-five miles from home when suddenly someone called 'Fire!' Before we were hardly aware of it, our ship was in flames and the fire was well under way. There was nothing to do but lower the lifeboats and do it as quickly as we could.

"When all the lifeboats were filled, there were three of us left and we jumped overboard. We could swim, but the water was so cold we saw we could never get to shore in that way.

"Just as we were about to give up in despair, we saw a piece of floating timber and after a great deal of effort, we managed to climb on to it.

"We noticed that black clouds were beginning to gather in the sky, and then before long the wind began to blow and the rain fell in torrents. It was really a strong gale, and to our delight it was blowing us toward shore. If it had not been for that storm, I should never have reached home."

"O, Mother," said Janice, "now I can understand what the Bible means when it says, 'All things work together for good to them that love God.' There really was some good in a rainy Easter Sunday, because it was the storm that brought Jack home."—Helen Goetz in Burning Bush.

British Issue Tracts to Army

Meeting Need for Convincing Religious Literature

New York, N. Y.—Evidently experiencing the same need as that encountered by so many American Army and Navy Chaplains—the need for simple, convincing, religious literature,—British Chaplains are being supplied with a series of brief tracts issued by The Churches' Committee for Supplementing Religious Education Among Men in H. M. Forces.

Subjects include "Is There Proof That God Exists?" "Is the Bible True?" "Science and Religion," "Is Religion 'Dope'?" "Why Not Scrap Theology?" "Psychology and Religion." "Did the Miracles in the Bible Really Happen?" "Why the Cross?" "Is Prayer Any Good?" "Why Go to Church?"

The tracts are written by the Rev. H. M. Sanders, Prebendary of St. Paul's Cathedral, and Consultant in Theological Studies to the Chaplain-in-Chief, R. A. F.

JAPANESE-AMERICAN WEDDING IN GRACE CHURCH

New York, N. Y.—Wearing the uniform of a United States Army Medical Corps First Lieutenant, Japanese-American James Yamazaki was married on Saturday, April 1, at four o'clock in the chantry of Grace Episcopal Church, New York City. The bride is Aki Hirashiki, also an American of Japanese ancestry, studying at Columbia University, and residing at International House.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. George A. Wieland, executive head of domestic missionary work of the Episcopal Church, and the bridegroom's father, the Rev. John Yamazaki, formerly of St. Mary's Church, Los Angeles, and now stationed in Chicago.

Another member of the Yamazaki family, John, Junior, is a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, now ministering to members of St. Mary's congregation, in the Gila River, Arizona Japanese Relocation Camp, while another brother, Peter, graduate of University of California Law School, is a Second Lieutenant in the United States Army.

Lieut. James Yamazaki was graduated from the Medical School of Marquette University, Milwaukee, and finished his interneship in a St. Louis Hospital. He has completed indoctrination training at Carlisle, Pa., and will be stationed in Missouri.

ANNUAL MEETING W. A., MAY 2-3

Richmond, Va.—The Woman's Auxiliary in the Diocese of Virginia will hold its Annual Meeting May 2-3 at St. Stephen's Church, Richmond. All three bishops of the diocese will be present.

One of the speakers will be Dr. Lewis Franklin, Treasurer of the National Council. Dr. Franklin has been described as "the most prominent layman in the Church" and he will bring the latest information of the missionary field.

One hour will be given to talks by missionaries in the mountain missions of the diocese. This hour will close with a talk by Bishop Mason. Bishop Tucker will give his usual charge to Auxiliary women and Bishop Goodwin will speak on "Conditions in the Diocese and where women can help most."

A full program will appear in a future issue.

ARCHBISHOP OF YORK TO BROADCAST

The Archbishop of York will broadcast an Easter message from the British Embassy, Washington, on Saturday, April 8th, at 6:45 to 7:00 P. M. Eastern War Time, Coast to Coast Network.

This will be the Archbishop's first public statement in this country.

He will be introduced by Henry A. Wallace, Vice-President of the United States.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY TO SING FOR ST. JOHN'S

New York, N. Y.—The Choir Boys of Westminster Abbey, London, England, on Good Friday, April 7th, at 8:45 P. M., New York time, will broadcast a program in honor of the Choir Boys of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York.

The Abbey Choir Boys will sing under the direction of Dr. O. H. Peasgood, acting organist of Westminster Abbey, and it will be broadcast to the United States by the British Broadcasting Corporation under its program, called: "Junior Bridge Builders."

Fighting Bishop To Be Moved

Bishop-General Leonidas Polk's Remains to Be Buried in Cathedral, New Orleans

New Orleans, La.—Plans of the Diocese of Louisiana to bring the remains of Rt. Rev. Leonidas Polk, First Bishop of the Diocese and Lieutenant-General of the Confederate Army, from their present resting place in St. Paul's Church, Augusta, Georgia, are making definite progress. Consent to the proposed move has been secured from the Polk heirs, and the rector, wardens, and vestry of St. Paul's have been most cooperative. Bishop Elliott, of Georgia, who held the burial services after Bishop Polk's death in 1864, made it a matter of official record that the body of the famous "Fighting Bishop" was left in the custody of St. Paul's "until such time as the Church in Louisiana should claim its rightful inheritance." St. Paul's has offered Louisiana the handsome marble tablet now marking the burial place of Bishop Polk, which Louisiana has gratefully accepted, only after agreeing to replace it with a suitable new marker. Louisiana also has insisted on reimbursing St. Paul's for the cost of the disinterment and the repairs for any damage caused to the Church by such act.

Plans for the proposed monument to be erected to Bishop Polk in St. John's churchyard, Thibodaux, have been approved and the contract let. It is to be a handsome granite monolith, suitably inscribed. It is hoped that the erection can be completed within a few months.

In due course Bishop Polk's remains will be reinterred with due dignity and ceremony in the choir of Christ Church Cathedral, New Orleans, perhaps in the early autumn.

CHURCH WAR CROSS FOUND IN JAPANESE GUN EMPLACEMENT

Boston, Mass.—A Church War Cross was sent to the Army and Navy Commission by Chaplain William W. Lumpkin, who wrote: "I am enclosing a Church War Cross which, it seems to me, should be placed in the archives of the Commission among the Commission's precious possessions. It was found on Tarawa in a Japanese gun emplacement, where, judging from its rusty condition, it had lain for some time. The most logical guess is that it was taken from one of our people who had been killed, or possibly was a prisoner, during the earlier stages of the war, and kept as a souvenir.

"The Marine who found it and brought it to me said that the Cross was at the bottom of a hole drilled in the concrete to steady a machine gun tripod. Apparently it had been lost by its Japanese finder."

A Joy and A Challenge

The Presiding Bishop Makes Report on His World Relief Fund

New York, N. Y.—A report on the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief for the year 1943 is called by Bishop Tucker "a joy and a challenge to us all; a joy that we have joined with others in the work of great Christian charity; a challenge, calling us under God's guidance to renewed effort for a just and durable peace."

The report shows that of the total amount of $127,755 received and disbursed in 1943, $54,956.56 was undesignated and was allocated by the Presiding Bishop; $72,799.24, including $25,000 from the United Thank Offering of the Women of the Church, was distributed as designated.

Largest single item in the report is China, which received $60,976.50, for the emergency support of our missionaries; to help maintain 130 civilian hospitals and provide medicines; to aid orphanages and children's camps; and to give relief in the battle zones and famine areas of Free China.

Aid to European refugees received $11,972.31, which was used to give relief to homeless, afflicted and starving people, in cooperation with the World Council of Churches; to distribute food in the internment camps; to feed children; and to aid European scholars and undergraduate students sponsored in American colleges and schools.

$24,776.32 helped supply chaplaincy service and religious activity for prisoners of war regardless of nationality, race or creed. Scriptures, prayer books and other religious literature were distributed.

The Church joined with others in sustaining 168 mission stations and 2,500 missionaries cut off from support of their home societies in India, Africa, China, Oceania and Madagascar. This work received $3,185.

The sum of $4,780 was used to aid uprooted students. Fifty Japanese-American students, members of the Episcopal Church, released from relocation centers, received scholarship assistance in 36 American colleges. European students, struggling on in prison camps and "underground" are being helped.

Religious ministry for hundreds of women in uniform; military nurses, land and factory workers in Great Britain, North Africa, the Middle East and Italy, accounts for expenditure of $2,050.

The remainder of the year's allotments, $18,015.67, is accounted for by aid to bombed-out peoples and suffering populations of Great Britain, Norway, Greece, Russia and Poland, and for relief work in Puerto Rico, for Negro and white cooperation in Rural America; to help the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, and for a variety of other relief purposes as designated by donors.

MRS. SHERMAN PAYS TRIBUTE TO MRS. IDA W. SOULE

New York, N. Y.—Commenting upon the death on March 22 of Mrs. Richard H. Soule, Mrs. Margaret M. Sherman, executive secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary, said Mrs. Soule "has often been called the mother of the United Thank Offering, although she modestly claimed that far too much credit had been given to her for starting it.

"It came about in this way, according to Mrs. Soule, 'I went to General Convention of 1886 in Chicago. The Church in Chicago was crowded for the Auxiliary service and several women near me had silver dollars in their hands. I looked for at least five hundred dollars in the offering. When the service was over Miss Emery beckoned to me and asked me to help count the offering. I could not believe it: It was only $82.71. I told her I thought it was because no one knew what it was for, as everyone near me had put in a dollar (there were more than five hundred women at the service).

" 'As soon as the custom was established of announcing what the offering taken at General Convention should be for, we began to think, why should not those who could not attend have the privilege of sending their offering? Gradually the news was taken back to the parishes and a special officer appointed to receive the money, and it began to be called the "United Thank Offering.' "

"At the 1937 Triennial Meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary it was voted that the Pension Fund for women workers, which was built up from the United Thank Offering, should be known as the Ida W. Soule Pension Fund, in honor of her in whose mind and heart originated the great offering of the women of the Church.

"In a letter to Miss Lindley, written in May, 1940, Mrs. Soule said, 'Won't you, before you leave, have the Ida W. Soule Pension Fund for U. T. O. missionaries abolished or rather changed back to the United Thank Offering Pension Fund? Nobody knows who Ida W. Soule is, but everybody knows what the United Thank Offering is, and all who have served under it seem to me entitled to a pension from it, not from Ida W. Soule, who could not possibly give them one.' But the Pension Fund stands as a memorial to her, whose long life was a faithful and radiant witness to the love of God in her heart."

GENEROUS CONTRIBUTION TO RED CROSS

New York, N. Y.—It is reported that 85 officers and members of the staff at the Church Mission House contributed $210.85 to the American Red Cross. Mr. James E. Whitney, assistant treasurer of the National Council says the amount is quite remarkable, in view of the fact that many of the Missions House people give in their home communities, located around New York and in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

LECTURE GIVEN IN SPITE OF

New York, N. Y.—Bad weather and an epidemic of sickness upset plans for a lecture to be given by Clement E. Taylor at a Community Church at Fort Dalton, Florida. As a result, only eight people came, but Mr. Taylor decided to give his lecture anyway. He reported a thoroughly helpful session, and the little group gave an offering of $5 which Mr. Taylor forwarded to Presiding Bishop Tucker for his Fund for World Relief.

Aim to Reach Young People Through Two Million Sunday School Teachers of the Nation

New York, N. Y.—A National Mission to Christian Teachers to be held next October and November has been officially announced by a joint planning committee of the Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and the International Council of Religious Education. Chairman of the Committee is Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, minister of St. Nicholas Collegiate Church in New York City.

This new type of Mission, according to Dr. Jesse M. Bader, executive secretary of the Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches and director of the Mission, was proposed to counteract the steady decline of Sunday School enrollment in American Protestant churches during the last few years.

Pointing out that 50% of the nation's population do not belong to any church, Dr. Bader remarked that within that group are millions of children and young people who are receiving no religious instruction whatever. The aim of the National Mission is to reach these young people through the more than two million Sunday School teachers of the nation.

Cities in which the missions will be held have not yet been announced although requests have come in from the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and North Dakota, Virginia, Illinois, Missouri, Maine, West Virginia and Washington.

Plans now call for three-day sessions in each city. Most of the meetings will be held in the evening and will bring together in group discussions Sunday School superintendents, religious directors, Sunday School teachers and officers, as well as the ministers of the community. Afternoon meetings will be held for those who are unable to attend at night. Following the group meetings will be a mass meeting with nationally known speakers.

SCHEDULE FOR DAILY PRAYER LEADERS MADE

Radford, Va.—At a meeting of representatives of several Radford churches held Sunday afternoon at the Recreation building a schedule of services at the Honor Roll for the noon day moment of prayer during the next few weeks was adopted.

During the week the Church of God is in charge. Christ Lutheran Church will arrange for the service during the week of April 3, and Carter Street Methodist Church week of April 10. Representatives of Zion Hill Baptist Church, colored, will see to the services from April 17 to April 22. The Noon Day prayer will be offered each day except Sunday.

It was learned at the Conference that many individuals and organizations, including schools, are pausing for the moment in prayer for Divine guidance and for the safety of boys and girls in the services of their country.

Present at the conference were Audra I. Bond and Clemmie Ratcliffe, of the Church of God; G. C. Tomlinson, of Christ Lutheran Church; Roy Graham, of Carter Street Methodist Church; Annie R. Turner and Ella Jones, of Zion Hill Baptist Church, colored, and the sponsoring committee from Grace Episcopal Church, composed of Rev. Wilfred Roach, John M. Goldsmith, Dr. Minor Wine Thomas, and John Wood.

Another conference in the interest of the movement will be held at a later date.

Children's Home Receives Legacy

Diocese of Louisiana to Administer Most Generous Bequest

New Orleans, La.—The Children's Home in New Orleans, owned by the Diocese of Louisiana, has received a legacy of $50,000 from the Succession of Mrs. Anne Brooks Fordtran, and is in addition named as the residuary legatee of the estate. The amount of the residuary bequest cannot yet be determined, but is expected to be in the neighborhood of about $300,000. Both bequests are to be used for work among children for whom the Episcopal Church in Louisiana feels its responsibility. The Board of Managers of the Children's Home is giving serious study to the great opportunity which is unfolded by this most generous legacy, and proposes to present to the Diocesan Convention of 1945 a carefully considered plan to properly carry out the expressed purposes of the bequest.

GENERALS MARSHALL AND PERSHING TO TAKE PART IN EASTER RITES; EPISCOPAL BISHOP SPEAKS

General George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, and General John J. Pershing, leader of the American Expeditionary Force in the last war, will participate in the 14th Annual Easter Service of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar at Arlington National Cemetery on Easter Sunday, April 9. The services will be broadcast over the Columbia network from 7:30 to 8:15 A. M., EWT.

General Marshall will be heard in a prayer for victory from the cemetery amphitheater. General Pershing will place a cross of lilies on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

The sermon will be delivered by Rt. Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Pennsylvania of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Others participating in the service include Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., Chaplain of the United States Senate and Grand Prelate of the Grand Commandery of the District of Columbia; Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., Chapalin of the House of Representatives; and Rev. John C. Palmer, D. D., Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia.

Music will be by the United States Marine Band.

then held in a building on High Street. Later a site was purchased and a parish house built in which the growing congregation worshipped. This was followed by the building of an attractive brick church. In 1943 the property was cleared of all debt and the Church was consecrated by Bishop Brown of Southern Virginia.

Mr. Birchette was interested in Christian Social Service and contributed much to the welfare of the colored people in Portsmouth. He established a public library and reading room in the parish house, which with the St. James' Kindergarten, was of great service to the people of his race.

The funeral was held from St. James' Church, Portsmouth, with Bishop Brown officiating, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Hubert A. Paine. Several of the clergy were in the procession. Interment was at Lawrenceville.

St. James, Portsmouth, was Mr. Birchette's career. Quietly working and building throughout the years, he has left a strong and vigorous work behind him as a monument to his devotion to his Lord and His Church.

Dr. E. J. Williamson

Dr. Edward J. Williamson, Professor of Modern Languages and Literatures, Emeritus, at Hobart and William Smith Colleges, Geneva, N. Y., died at the Clifton Springs Sanitarium March 17, after an illness of several days. He had been a member of the faculty of the colleges for thirty-seven years.

Dr. Williamson was born at Kingston, Ont., Canada, in 1878, and received his early education there. He was graduated from Queen's University, A. B. and A. M., taking his doctor's work at Chicago University, receiving his Ph. D. in 1907.

Following his graduation from Queen's University, he served as a tutor at the University from 1898-1901, and was a lecturer on Modern Languages at St. John's College of the University of Manitoba from 1904-1905. He came to Hobart College, after completing his doctorate at Chicago, as an assistant professor of the German Language and Literature in 1907, and was named to a full professorship in 1908. In 1911 Dr. Williamson became Professor of Modern Languages and Literatures, a position which he held until his retirement in 1943, when he was named Professor, Emeritus.

Dr. Williamson was the author of Grillparzer's Attitude Toward Romanticism and co-editor of Sturm's Der Schimmelreiter.

Funeral services were held in Kingston, Ontario. A special memorial service was held in St. John's Chapel at the Colleges March 23. The Rev. Stuart G. Cole, Chaplain of Hobart College, officiated.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

This was the first creed: That Jesus, risen from the dead, was Messiah and Lord.—Knox.

"Much of the best work done for God is anonymous."

Every child comes into the world with the message that God does not yet despair of man.—Tagore.

Let us not despair of Christianity in Japan. Bishop Reifsnider, before the war was given a card of greeting on which was written in Japanese: "To know more the depth of the love of Christ and to make it known, and to practice it among those who are ignorant of it." That has the ring of truth.

Christ appeared in sympathy with the lowest of the people and thereby made it a firm and ruling principle that their welfare was the object of all government.—Edmund Burke.

"Teach me to feel it was my sin,
As though no other sin were there,
Which was to Him who bears the worlds
A load that He could scarcely bear."

We are only in the infancy of the expansion of the Christian Church.—Kraemer.

"Careless Christians do more harm to the Kingdom of God than open enemies."

He has known little of life who has not met sorrow beyond the help of man. In the last emergencies of life and death a religion which is to be an anchor to the soul must prove its power. And when every other comfort fails the Christian turns to the faith that conquered in Gethsemane, its ultimate expression being the prayer of the Son of God, "Father, not My will but Thine be done!"

Jesus lifted with His pierced hand empires off their hinges, and turned the stream of centuries out of their channel, and still He governs the ages.—Jean Paul Richter.

There are countries where the chaos and oppression is so overwhelming, the hunger for bread so dominant, that the things of the spirit have little chance. But suffering for Christ does bring revival, and there are countries today where the Christian Church is far, far stronger than it was before the war—I should name France and Germany, and Holland and Norway and China, but there are other countries also, both near and at the ends of the earth, where I believe this to be the case.—Selected.

CATHOLIC FOR EVERY TRUTH OF GOD, PROTESTANT AGAINST EVERY ERROR OF MAN

Angus Dun---Bishop-Elect of Washington

The Dean of the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Cambridge, Angus Dun, who is to be consecrated the fourth Bishop of the Diocese of Washington on this coming Wednesday, comes from distinguished ancestry. There is a connecting link in his lineage between the South and New England, therefore he should not feel alien to the State across the Potomac, as he takes up his residence in a neighboring diocese. For on his father's side he is descended from Anthony Walke of Virginia, who carried the last tribute money from Virginia to the Barbary pirates. On his mother's side he is descended from two well known Rhode Island families, the Hazards and the Robinsons.

Angus Dun was born in New York City, but lived the larger part of his childhood in Albany. After graduating at the Albany Academy he entered Yale, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1914.

As many men in the ministry have entered college with other professions in mind, so did Angus Dun. Having been the victim of infantile paralysis which resulted in many operations, he fully intended studying medicine. But at Yale he came under the religious influence of Professor Henry Wright, a teacher who held a central position in the under-graduate religious life. Through this influence Angus became active in the student Christian Association. This led to his identifying himself with the Church of Christ in Yale, which was Congregational, in its associations. Angus had been baptized in the Dutch Reformed Church, but had never actively affiliated with that body. The influence of the Church deepened during his college years, and he finally decided to devote himself to the ministry, and was confirmed in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Albany, by Bishop Doane. The Congregationalist's loss was our church's gain.

After graduation at Cambridge, he served several small churches in and around Boston. With the rapid development of Camp Devens, during the last war, Bishop Lawrence had him transferred to Ayers, the village near Devens, at which post he acted as civilian chaplain.

After the war, Dean Dun studied at Oxford and Edinburgh. He returned to teach at Cambridge. He remained at Cambridge until his election as Bishop. He was elected Dean of Cambridge in 1940.

Dean Dun has been particularly interested in advancing the cause of Christian unity. He attended both the Oxford and Edinburgh Conferences in 1937. He has been an active member of our own General Convention Commission on Approaches to Unity. This foretells the strong leadership by our Church in the Nation's Capital.

Dean Dun has a keen sense of humor, and this writer can testify that he has no equal in telling a good Scotch story. This is, no doubt, attributable to his Scotch Presbyterian ancestor, a clerk, who lies buried in the Cathedral yard at Glasgow.

Washington's new Bishop brings great gifts to the high office to which he has been called.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

I WANT TO TELL, as well as I can remember, of my visit to the city of everywhere. As my train pulled in, I saw it was a very lovely town, laid out decently and in order, an ideal place to live. As I alighted from the train, I saw many people, cultured and well dressed, intelligent and friendly looking. But to my astonishment I realized that no one wore shoes, at least no one I could see at the station. I hopped into a waiting cab and on my way to the hotel I asked the cab driver why no one wore shoes. His only reply was, "Yes, why don't we?" as if he had thought the same thing many times and was struck with the foolishness of it, without reaching any conclusion.

At the hotel the same thing was true. I looked and looked but I saw no one with shoes on. Even my friend who met me to show me the city wore no shoes. As we walked about the beautiful city I said nothing, but noticed that everyone was barefoot. As we reached the center of the city of everywhere my friend pointed out a large building that was an architectural gem. "That is our shoe factory," he said proudly. "Shoe factory!" I exclaimed. "Where do you market the shoes? I thought no one wore shoes in the city of everywhere." "Well," he replied, "we do not exactly manufacture shoes there, but we talk a lot about it and there are some beautiful patterns on file and there is a most wonderful array of machines and leather to make the shoes." This seemed to satisfy my friend, and we walked on. But my mind was in a whirl. No shoes, but a big shoe factory that did not manufacture shoes. Finally we came to a side street and I saw in a shabby sub-basement a cobbler who seemed to be very leisurely with the single pair of shoes before him. I insisted on visiting him. My question was put immediately, "Mr. Cobbler, how do you manage to make a living in a city where no one wears shoes?" "It is rather hard," he admitted, "but there are a few people who wear shoes and I repair them, but these persons are not welcomed here, they are so different from the others."

My friend saw me back to the hotel. A happy thought suddenly came to me. Asking my friend to wait, I ran back to the cobbler and bought all the shoes for sale in his shop and rushed back to the hotel. I put the shoes down in front of my friend and said, "Surely there is a pair here that will fit you." He seemed pleased at my thoughtfulness but made no move toward the shoes. "Don't you want the shoes?" I asked. He replied slowly, "Well, not exactly; you see, no one else wears them and if I do I'll be different and my friends won't understand and I'll be ostracized." "But," I asked with exasperation, "why don't you wear shoes?" "Yes," he said, "Why don't we?"

This is all of the story I remember, but as one thinks on the many subtle implications of it one understands why it is called the city of everywhere and how neatly it fits us, in whatever place we live. Make it your own and as you repeat the question, "Why don't we?" Say it three different ways: Why don't we? Why don't we? Why don't we?

The morals of this story are pretty self-evident and should play a large part in determining the direction of today's life, that is, if we are not afraid to wear shoes.

Almighty Father, who hast given thine only Son to die for our sins, and to rise again for our justification; Grant us so to put away the leaven of malice and wickedness, that we may always serve thee in pureness of living and truth; through the merits of the same thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord. # Analogies From the Fourth Gospel

Morning at the Lakeside

By HEWITT B. VINNEDGE

"There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of His disciples. Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing. But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus. Then Jesus saith unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered Him, No. And He said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes. . . . Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye now have caught. . . . Come and dine." (John 21:2-6, 10, 12a).

ALL THE POST-RESURRECTION appearances of our Lord are fraught with deep significance: for those to whom He appeared and for subsequent generations of believers. There was His appearance at the empty tomb; it brought comfort to the heart of Mary Magdalene, and to all the rest of us by its emphasis on the impermanence of evil and pain and sorrow and death. There was His appearance to the Apostles when St. Thomas was among them; it brought strength to the wavering faith of the doubting Apostle, making him a courageous man of faith, and it was the occasion of conveying our Lord's special blessing on all later Christians "that have not seen and yet have believed". And here is this appearance to seven Apostles on the shore of Lake Tiberias in Galilee. Let us consider the purpose of this appearance and its significance for us.

The Apostles had passed through the trial and grief attendant upon their Lord's crucifixion. They had experienced the exaltation of His resurrection appearances to them in Jerusalem. But now we can imagine that they were feeling the sense of His withdrawal from them, in Jerusalem. He had not manifested Himself for some time; and perhaps they began to wonder whether they might not after all have been the victims of a delusion, and had maybe been living in a fool's paradise. And so they look about them and decide to leave this Jerusalem, with which they were not at all familiar—this Jerusalem where their Lord had suffered, where Judas had betrayed Him, where Peter had denied Him, where they had all deserted and fled from Him. They were attempting to escape the questionings of their minds by fleeing from the scene of events that had raised the questions. Therefore they decide to go back to Galilee, where things had been simpler, where they had daily talked with the Lord, where the hearts of the peasants and simple fisherfolk had responded warmly to His teaching, where people had not hounded Him to death, where He Himself had acted in an understandable and human way, not coming suddenly through closed doors.

THUS IT WAS, perhaps, that these seven went back to Galilee. But, as often it happens when one tries to go back to supposedly better and happier times, they fell into the danger of going back too far. Hence we find St. Peter, who should have been their spiritual leader, not guiding them to a better understanding of the events of the last few weeks, but going fishing. He was the recognized leader; and so they all say, "We also go with thee." They were reverting to the old occupation which they had followed before Christ had ever called them. They were forgetting that "henceforth", from the time of that call, He had intended that they be fishers of men, not of fish.

But it is a difficult thing to go back. We can never recapture the vanished glow of pleasures that have passed. We can never fully enter into the delightful simplicities of a former way of life. "And that night they caught nothing". At last, however, there comes an end to that nightmare of pursuing the past, to that dream of chasing shadows whose substance is gone.

"When the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore." Here was their inescapable Master. But so deeply engrossed were they in pursuing shadows, so intently were they occupied in getting back to the "good old days", that the "disciples knew not that it was Jesus".

THERE HE WAS with them once more. They were unable, then, to run away from His mysterious appearings, and the questions that resulted. There He was, to show that the Risen Lord still intended to support and guide His Church, and every individual within that mystical Body of His. There He was, inquiring after their well being: "Children, have ye any meat?" Is all well with you, my sons? Are you able to supply your needs apart from Me? Are you able in your own strength to obtain that which will satisfy and nourish your souls? And "they answered Him, No".

When those seven disciples had made that reply, they had taken the first step toward finding the satisfaction which they needed. For then they were able to receive His direction, to act in accord with His word, and so to gain what they sought. Then they could be in position to accept His gracious invitation, "Come and dine". Come and feed upon Me "in your hearts by faith, with thanksgiving". Then they were able to see that it was indeed the Lord Who was directing them. Then could they hear once more the loving words of the Good Shepherd Who had given His life for the sheep, and now was making provision that they might evermore be sustained.

"That night they caught nothing. But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore". How often do we pass through a night of waiting, perhaps a night of honestly striving to make things better! How often do we forget the lessons of the Lord of life, and revert to notions that we had before He ever summoned us to His fellowship! How often do we go through a night of uncertainty, trying in our own strength and under our own power to solve all the problems and find all the answers!

It cannot be done. We must press on to the morning when we shall admit that in this way we have gained no meat, no sustenance. For then Jesus will be standing on the shore. Let us not make the mistake of failing to recognize Him.

What Outfit?

By DAVID L. GREENE

IT HAPPENED AGAIN at a Legion Convention when I dropped in to greet some old friends. For umpteen times at Legion gatherings I have been asked, "What outfit did you belong to?"

Perhaps there is that "old soldiers never die" look about me; or maybe my interrogators fail to notice that little "H" for "Honorary" in the center of my membership badge worn as Padre of a local branch. Anyhow I get asked that question repeatedly.

So with the best grace musterable I hasten to explain that having become a hockey casualty just prior to the Great War, I belonged to the Company of "the little man that was not there." For somehow I feel that I do not quite belong with those Veterans who smelt the smoke of battle on Flanders Field. But I am quickly disabused of this complex by the heartiness of my reception.

Then I hear that question asked amongst little groups in all corners of the Convention hall, "What outfit did you belong to?"

Two ideas seem to emerge out of the session of back slapping, anecdote swapping and note comparing that ensues when these old pals get together. First, it does not matter what outfit you belonged to so long as you were engaged in the same grand enterprise of winning the war. Second, it does matter much whether you happened to belong to the same outfit as your questioner, for the closer the association, the deeper the comradeship.

The secret of good fellowship lies in serving a common cause. In today's war of the democracies against aggressive barbarism these old truths are being learned by a new generation. Once more national and racial barriers are being transcended. Democratic youth is discovering that certain undying principles for which men contend are shared by youths who serve under various flags; that the virtues of courage and self-sacrifice are found amongst brothers in arms of many lands.

IT IS OF SMALL moment whether a man pilots a Polish plane, or sails a Canadian corvette, or trundles an American tank. The outfit he belongs to may be Russian, Chinese, Australian, or Fighting French. It may be Medical, Chaplain, or Service Corps. It is United Nations first, last, and all the time.

Yet one can imagine how the Veterans of this war will gather at conventions in the distant future in the same good old spirit of comradeship. How they will slap one another on the back and ask, "What outfit did you belong to?" How there will be that same deeper affection amongst those who served in the same unit.

This tendency to foster outer and inner circles of fellowship runs through most of our social relationships. Recently I attended a luncheon for an urban branch of my old University Alumni Association. I noted there that same spirit of belonging-ness. There was also the urge to segregate ourselves into small groups, the test question being, "What year did you belong to?"

In our Western States and Provinces we have Old Timer's Associations. If you came to the community fifty years ago you are entitled to join. When these sturdy pioneers get together they have a royal time re-living the old horse and buggy days. But the picnic will not be far advanced before the party will be subdivided into little groups of ex-New Yorkers, ex-Nova Scotians, and ex-What-have-you's. It is of prime importance what outfit one belonged to!

How should this tendency to segregation affect our Church life? Since the days of my youth I have been familiar with the aphorism that the Church is an army and the various denominations are its several battalions; that we are all fighting its battle in different ways; that we are all going toward the same goal and it does not matter by what route we travel; that when we occupy the Celestial Land we will not be asked what our denomination was; or, in other words, "What outfit did you belong to?"

CONFESSEDLY I have not always concurred in this opinion. I grew up in the school which taught that the Church's Divine foundation permitted of no deviation from the Faith as delivered to the Saints.

Latterly, however, I have come to feel that in view of the non-Christian and anti-Christian forces at work in the world today some modification of attitude is imperative. The challenge today seems to be not so much what body within the Church we shall favor, as whether we shall have any Church or no Church. At least, whether we shall have an effective Church, for the Church cannot be destroyed entirely. It does matter tremendously for the future of civilization what outfit people belong to—the Christian or the not Christian group.

I have come to think that after all there may be room for some difference of opinion as to the traditional circumscribing tests of the true Church, and as to the interpretations of what constituted the Faith delivered. The unprecedented movement today towards Church Union seems to indicate that revision of some formerly accepted dicta regarded as essential is due. The proposals for union of the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Presbyterian Church is a case in point.

Surely if the Church is to advance "like a mighty army" some such basis for concerted action must be discovered. The United Nations are sinking their differences and combining their forces in the face of grave dangers. Can the Church of God be content to do less?

The moving picture film, "United We Stand," is a remarkable presentation of the results of disunity on the part of the democratic nations. It is also an impressive commentary on results achieved after they became really united. We need some such visual portrayal of the results of disunity in the Christian Church to stimulate union sentiment.

AS THE CHURCH stands today her ranks include out and out unionists, traditionalists and isolationists. She faces a challenge to achieve some measure of united purpose amongst these diverse elements. What outfit do you belong to?

Perhaps this matter of ultimate Church union is regarded as beyond the grasp and power of our ordinary Church membership. You cannot do anything about it? Well, you can pray about it. Prayer changes things.

But you would like to do something more practical and tangible? Very well. Every congregation has its active members who attend Church regularly, give systematically and work incessantly. It has also its "associate members" who drop into Church occasionally, put two bits on the plate when they attend, but seldom, if ever, help with Church activities. Which outfit do you belong to?

Every congregation has its spiritually minded people who believe in the power of prayer and are present at every meeting of a devotional nature. It also has its materialists who are experts in organizing money-making schemes but are fearful to launch out upon a purely free will offering system of support; they are inclined to pass the Lord and praise the ammunition. What outfit do you belong to?

Every congregation has its doers and its boo-ers; its talkers and its balkers; its payers and its pray-ers; its workers and its shirkers; its fighters and its spiters; its stickers and its quitters. What outfit do you belong to?

At a Legion Memorial Service one time, I mentioned amongst other epics of the Great War the blocking of the waterway at Zeebrugge by a British battle ship. After the Service a Legionaire told me he was glad I spoke of that incident for, he said, "I was on that expedition." He was feeling again the thrill of that valourous exploit and proud that he had belonged to the British Navy.

It may be that at the last Assembly we will not be asked what Church we belong to, but it seems fair to assume that we will be asked where we were and what we were doing when the Church Universal was facing the great crisis that is today.

ARE WE TAKING PART in her engagements with materialism, indifference, intemperance, social injustice, social evils, and false philosophies? Are we helping in any way to straighten out the cross purposes in the body politic which threaten even now the hope of the world for a just and enduring peace?

It is plain that the conscience of the average Church member is not yet deeply stirred up to a realization of the world situation and the Church's part in establishing and preserving a real Christian civilization. And this, in spite of the fact, that we are expending billions of dollars and sacrificing our youth allegedly for this noble purpose.

True, there is in every congregation an inner circle who are making magnificent efforts towards helping the Church fulfill her Mission. But there is also a large outer circle who are glad to be called Christians and proud to be known as Anglicans or Episcopalians, whose chief contact with the Church is at the three main crises of life. And there is a middle circle of people who take their religion as some people take their liquor—in moderation. They never get fired with enthusiasm for prosecuting the Church's program. What outfit do you belong to?

TB In Old People

From the National Tuberculosis Association

LOVELY YOUNG Isabella was only twenty-three when she died. Although she had been swept away by the great white plague, there were many who loved her and will never forget her exquisite features and coloring, her appealing gentle manners. The fine glow of her spirit burned until the last."

A tear jerker out of the past century ended up with those touching words. A generation or two ago, tuberculosis was predominately a disease of young women. This traditional conception is continuing into the present, although changing figures and medical interpretations show that the highest TB death rate today occurs in old age.

The tragically sentimental appeal of the loved young girl cut off in the flower of her youth is not an accurate and realistic approach to the problem of tuberculosis control. There is no doubt that there must be community action under the guidance of doctors and public health leaders in attacking this menace systematically.

The time was, and it was not so long ago, when tuberculosis did kill more young women than any other group. The tuberculosis rate has dropped and changed the whole picture. In the early years of the century, TB was the first cause of death in this country. It is now the seventh. In the early 1900's tuberculosis caused about twelve out of every hundred deaths. Today that number has been reduced to four out of every hundred. In those early years, someone died of tuberculosis about every three and one-half minutes. Today there is one death every nine minutes.

ALL THIS SOUNDS like wonderful and heartening progress. Yet, we must consider health victories as we do our military victories. The enemy is a constant menace until the last shot has been fired, until all arms have been laid down and until all treaties have been signed. And we are far from "the last shot" in the warfare against TB—TB is still a mighty peril to life.

One of the main sources of infection is among old people. There are gentle old ladies with "just a slight catarrh," or a "little cough" who can infect their families "unto the third and fourth generation."

Homeless old men constitute one of our knottiest sociological problems. These vagrants spread infection far and wide. The problems of hospitalization for transients, of care for migrants, come into bold relief when any effort is made to give medical care to this group. Added to the sociological complication is the psychological reaction—sometimes maudlin sentimentality, sometimes revulsion. Homeless old men, living as they do on the city garbage dumps and in sordid flop houses, are prey to an excessive amount of tuberculosis, and they carry it as they travel.

TB in old people is the unhealthy heritage of the past century. We must apply case-finding methods which will prevent this heritage from blighting the coming generations.

Routine school examinations, the more apparent symptoms in youth and the case-finding programs among those in the prime of life are helping to reduce the incidence among young people. Older tuberculosis people, who are not expected to be as energetic and who are not so desperately needed for war and production, can easily escape detection.

Tuberculosis, of course, is still the greatest killer of people in the prime of life. The romantic appeal of Isabella in her crinoline, of Camille and the Bronte sisters is still partly valid, but such glittering facets could no more win a grim war for health than the gold braid and fanfare of military bands decide the terrific conflict on a battlefield.

While we must not forget Isabella and Camille, we must also work up all-out raids and precision bombing against the more fecund sources of infection. Because of long duration, and symptoms more than usually difficult to notice. TB in old people is one of these sources. Difficult as the problem of case-finding and isolation in this population group is, it can be solved by an informed and cooperative public.

Low Sunday

Traditionally the Sunday after Easter is called "Low Sunday." This is a perfectly natural sequence. Churches have been filled to capacity on Easter. The service for Easter has been made the focal point. It naturally follows that some let-down should come. It does come.

This is a sad commentary on our Christian approach. The Christian who has really celebrated the Feast of the Resurrection, is not going to have a let-down the following Sunday. He is going to find his place in his church, and there, in company with like minded persons, will continue to nourish his spiritual life. The convinced Christian knows no "low Sunday." It is the person who has only scratched the surface of Christian worship, who can speak about a spiritual let-down.

In these stern days, we Christians carry a tremendous responsibility. We surely cannot speak in terms of Low Sunday. Of course we have our periods of frustration, but we know that underneath, at all times, and in all places are "the everlasting arms." We must convince others of the reality of the victory God has won for us through Jesus Christ. In the Christian church there should be no low Sundays.

An Important Bishopric

We carry this week a brief story of Angus Dun, bishop-elect of Washington. It is no light responsibility that Dean Dun will assume at his consecration on Wednesday next. The Diocese of Washington is an important diocese. The man who leads that diocese becomes an important figure, not only in the Councils of his own Church, but in the life of the city of Washington, and for that matter the nation.

It is comforting to realize that the man who is about to take over this heavy responsibility, is one of charming modesty. He is keenly aware of the duties he is assuming. He is a scholar, and his scholarship is so well grounded that it makes him realize the danger of ever speaking ex cathedra. It is heartening to know that the Protestant Episcopal Church is to be led in the city of Washington by a man of humble and devout spirit.

God bless you, Angus Dun, and the clergy and people of your diocese.

Invasion Day Plans

Under the auspices of the National Office of Civilian Defense, plans are being made to observe Invasion Day. The spirit prompting this move is not to be questioned. If, as we believe, we are fighting this war for the liberation of oppressed peoples, everywhere; and for the continued preservation of our own liberties, all is well and good. The Christian forces in every country have a stake in the success of "I Day." The leaders of Nazi Germany have very plainly stated their views in regard to Christianity. They wish none of it. Therefore the Churches should share in the hopes and fears that will center around "Invasion Day."

We must add this word of caution. The Christian Church can only observe "Invasion Day" in one way —as a day of Penitence. We are all corporately guilty for the great ill that besets our generation. We share in the blood that will be spilled, in order that oppressed peoples may be freed, and our freedom preserved. This will be no day in the Christian sense, for superpatriotic speeches and ceremonies. It will be a day that should drive us to our knees. It should be a day when we will be thinking of those who are making the supreme sacrifice, and pray that God may enable them to win the eternal victory. It will be a day when we will ask God to give us more of His Holy Spirit that we may bring comfort to broken hearts; and bind the wounds caused by the loss of a dear one.

It is in the spirit of the Cross of the Victorious Christ, that the Christian Church should observe "I Day." That means in the spirit of penitent thanksgiving.

A Mis-Use of Terms

We dislike finding fault with any of our Christian brethren. We must admit that we are becoming a little irked by the assumption of an unwarranted use of terms by the Roman Catholic hierarchy. On Easter Eve, the press carried, and gave prominence to a statement by Archbishop Spellman of New York. With what the Archbishop had to say, one could not find fault. We do object to the continued use of the title, "Military Vicar to the Armed Forces."

This is misleading. The armed forces of our country have no official military vicar. There is a Chief of Chaplains for the Army and Chief Chaplain for the Navy. As it happens the present Chief of Chaplains of the Army, Brigadier General Arnold, is a Roman Catholic priest. All Protestant chaplains with whom we have talked, state without exception that the Chief of Chaplains is eminently fair. No religious bigotry is tolerated. We are certain that Captain King, the Navy's Chief Chaplain, who is a Protestant, exhibits the same fine spirit. We wish that our Roman brethren and the Press, would make it clear that the Archbishop of New York, is military Vicar to the Roman Catholic members of our armed froces. A title which he certainly has a right to, by his Church. He is not Military Vicar to all the armed forces. This is a gross misuse of terms. It certainly does not aid in building up a united front.

The South India Scheme

THE PRIMATE'S REPLY TO THE METROPOLITAN OF INDIA

The text is now published of the formal reply which has been sent to the Metropolitan of India by the Archbishop of Canterbury as Metropolitan of the Province of Canterbury, in answer to the two questions concerning the action of the Province of Canterbury in the event of the inauguration of a United Church of South India in accordance with the Proposed Scheme of Church Union as this is presented in the seventh edition of that Scheme. Prefixed to the formal reply set out below is the text of the covering letter which the Archbishop of Canterbury has sent with it.

, Lambeth Palace, S. E.,
January 31, 1944.

My dear Metropolitan:

With this letter I am sending the formal reply to the questions which you sent to me in your letter dated 4th February, 1943. It is inevitably formal in character. But the feeling among the Bishops and Clergy in Convocation was very far from formal. The Lower House expressed both its regret that, should the union be inaugurated, the four dioceses concerned would cease, at any rate for a time, to be constituent parts of the Anglican Communion, and also its deep appreciation of the spirit of devotion to the cause of unity which has animated them. I need not say that I share both of those feelings to the full.

The Lower House also expressed the wish that I should recall all concerned to the "Appeal to All Christian People" issued by the Lambeth Conference of 1920. I understand that they had in mind especially the requirement of assured agreement in matters of faith, and the proposal that "a ministry acknowledged by every part of the Church" should be secured by means of a mutual commission. You probably know that anxiety has been expressed in this country with regard to the former point, though I think this has been due to misunderstanding; and the adoption of the latter would, no doubt, make acceptance of the Scheme easier for Anglicans provided that the form of commission were satisfactory.

We have based our reply on the advice given to the various Provinces of the Anglican Communion by the Lambeth Conference of 1930, and we actually quote a passage of several lines from the Encyclical Letter issued by that Conference. In the quotation will be found the words—referring to the United Church—"its Bishops will be received as Bishops." As this statement is not repeated in the numbered paragraphs setting out the lines of administrative action which the Bishops will follow, I think it worth while to say here that it is obviously accepted, for without it the whole structure of our reply would lack coherence.

The Upper House, after settling the contents of the formal reply, asked me to convey to you and through you to our brothers, the Bishops of the Church of India, Burma and Ceylon, our affectionate sympathy in the special burden of responsibility which they have to carry, both in regard to the whole situation in India and in relation to the subject-matter of this correspondence, our thankfulness for the eager desire to attain unity manifested by the Christians of South India, and our prayer that they may be guided by the Holy Spirit to fulfill that desire in such a way as may most promote the glory of God and the true welfare of His Church.

I enclose also a copy of the address with which I closed the discussion of the matter in the Upper House; I am, of course, alone responsible for this, but the Bishops associated themselves cordially with the spirit of it.

With deep personal regard and affection, I am
Yours very sincerely,
(Signed) WILLIAM CANTUAR.

The Reply

Lambeth Palace, S. E.

My dear Metropolitan:

I duly received your letter in which you put to me, as Metropolitan of the Province of Canterbury, two questions concerning the action of this Province in the event of the Inauguration of a united Church of South India in accordance with the Proposed Scheme of Church Union as this is presented in the seventh edition of that Scheme. You asked whether this Province would—

(a) break off communion with the Church of India, Burma and Ceylon; and/or

(b) refuse to be in communion with the Church in South India.

I have put these questions before the Diocesan Bishops of the Province of Canterbury in the Upper House of Convocation, and they in turn sought the counsel of the Lower House. You will, of course, understand that our concern was to answer your questions, and to consider the Scheme itself only so far as seemed necessary to that purpose. What I am now conveying to you is therefore not to be regarded as a formal Act of Convocation registering approval or disapproval of the Scheme. You will also understand that our answer must be regarded as liable to review if need arises, since it is not yet known what will be the future course either of the proposed United Church or of the relations between it and the Church of India, Burma and Ceylon. With this understanding I proceed in what follows to express the common mind of the Bishops, who have approved the contents of this statement after receiving a reply from the Lower House to the request for its comment and counsel.

(a) As regards the first of the two questions to which we are asked to reply our answer is quite simple; the answer is No. The Church of India, Burma and Ceylon will, if the Scheme of Union in South India takes effect, lose four of its dioceses; apart from this it will remain unaltered. The Church of India, Burma and Ceylon is, according to the practice of the Anglican Communion, responsible for deciding, in accordance with the doctrine of the Church and with its knowledge of the special conditions in the area concerned, whether or not to give its sanction to the Scheme.

(b) The second question cannot be quite so simply answered. When the Lambeth Conference in 1930 expressed its "strong desire that, as soon as the negotiations are successfully completed, the venture should be made and the union inaugurated" (Resolution 40c) it also approved the following description of the resulting situation: "The united Church in India will not itself be an Anglican Church; it will be a distinct Province of the Universal Church. It will have a very real intercommunion with the Churches of the Anglican Communion, though for a time that intercommunion will be limited in certain directions by their rules. Its Bishops will be received as Bishops by these Churches. Its episcopally ordained ministers—a continually increasing number—will be entitled under the usual rules to administer the Communion in the Churches of the Anglican Communion. Its communicants will be entitled to communicate with the Churches of the Anglican Communion, except in cases forbidden by the rules of those Churches. On the other hand no right to minister in the Churches of that Communion will be acquired by those ministers who have not been episcopally ordained." (Encyclical Letter, p. 27).

In accordance with that anticipation, and provided that the Scheme as finally adopted does not differ, in any point affecting the relation of the Church of England to the Church of South India, from that which is contained in the Seventh Edition of the Scheme, I am conveying the common mind of the Bishops of the Province of Canterbury as finally expressed after considering the comments and counsel of the clergy of the Province as represented by the Lower House of Convocation, when I say that their administrative action will follow these lines:

(1) Subject to such rules and customs as are accepted in respect of all communicants in the Province, a communicant member of the united Church would be admissible to Communion in the Churches of the Province;

(2) An episcopally ordained minister of the united Church would be qualified to receive the License or Permission of a Bishop to officiate, subject, when they apply, to the provisions of the Colonial Clergy Act, and to such rules and customs as are accepted in respect of all ministers in the Province; thus, for example, if he applied for and received such License or Permission it would be on the understanding that he should not officiate in Non-Anglican Churches except in such ways—e. g.—preaching by special invitation on particular occasions—as are permissible or customary for Priests or Deacons of the Church of England.

(3) A minister of the united Church who has not received episcopal ordination would not be qualified to receive a License or Permission to officiate in the Province, except in such manner as is permitted under the regulations governing the Interchange of Preachers and set out in an Act of Convocation agreed to by both Houses in May, 1943, of which I enclose a copy.

(4) No censure would attach to any member, ordained or unordained, of this Province who may be in South India or go thither, if he communicates with the united Church or takes work of any kind in it.

I hope that I have made clear what the position would be.

The united Church would not be a Province of the Anglican Communion, and there would not at this stage be unrestricted inter-communion between it and this Province, but there would be such intercommunion between clergy and laity of the united Church and those of this Province as I have stated.

These provisions represent certain restrictions upon full communion, that is to say, upon complete interchangeability of Ministers and complete mutual admissibility to Communion. We reiterate the hope expressed by the Committee of the Lambeth Conference of 1930 on the Unity of the Church, "that when the unification within the united Church, contemplated in the Proposed Scheme, is complete, full communion in that sense will be secured between the united Church and" the Church in this Province.

Yours very sincerely,
(Signed) WILLIAM CANTAUR.

LOW SUNDAY

LOOK BACK this day, my soul,
Let fall on thee again
The beams of Easter's aureole,
Lest it have shone in vain.

Recall thy vows, my soul,
Thy hopes, thine Easter prayers.
See clear ahead that heavenly goal
Of Life, which Easter bares.

Be glad today, my soul,
Bask in the Easter rays.
Then on to act the Christian role
In Love's unselfish ways.

COMPASSION

By Maude Waddell

I sing of the beauty of pity,
Of the hearts of tender things,
Of the tears of the broken-hearted,
And the clipped or wounded wings;
The dew on the grass is healing,
The rain washes clean old scars,
And the pitying heart is revealing
As the light of the brightest stars.

I sing of the beauty of pity,
And love that is tender and sweet,
That gently comforts the weary
Who plod on bleeding feet;
I sing of the heart that remembers
The old and feeble and poor,
On whom as frozen Decembers
Life fast is closing its door.

I sing of the heart that pities
The life that is touched with woe,
Of the fatherless urchins of cities,
And the cold of rags in the snow;
For the beauty of pity is radiant,
And the heart that feels for another
Is worthy of God his Father,
And worthy of man his brother.

SPIRIT OF FLAME: A STUDY OF ST. JOHN OF THE CROSS, by E. Allison Peers. Morehouse-Gorham, New York. 1944. $2.00.

This newest work of Professor Peers, noted student and critic of Hispanic culture, deals with the thrilling and bewildering figure of St. John of the Cross, a Spanish Carmelite friar of the sixteenth century who is considered one of the greatest of Christian mystics. St. John is noted for his "hard sayings" concerning the way to perfection, and he is consequently not likely to appeal to the sentimentalist or the activist. Some of St. John's counsels seem rather negative, and at times almost Manichean, but we are assured by the author that such things are intended only for "advanced contemplatives." There is something of the austere grandeur of Castile in St. John of the Cross, and this has a beauty of its own. The average American Christian will find much in this book which will make him stop and think.

"AT EMMAUS"

They plodded o'er the weary road,
That far-off Easter Day,
And Jesus came and walked with them
Along the dusty way.

They entered in, and tasks of yore
Took up that eventide;
And Jesus, 'neath their humble roof,
Came with them to abide.

They spread a table 'gainst their need,
With simple, peasant fare;
And Jesus joined them at the board,
Their frugal meal to share.

And light and blessing were for them
O'er all life's pathway shed
By Jesus, Comrade of the way,
Now risen from the dead.

Still Jesus of the Emmaus road
Walks with us in the way,
And shares and blesses toils and joys
Of every common day.

THE HAND IN THE DARK CLOSET

Once upon a time there was a little girl who had two hands. One was a good hand, it never misbehaved, and the other was sometimes a bad hand. It looked exactly like the good one. It had four fingers and a thumb. (Both belonged to a little girl named Junie Weston.) It was nearly always clean. It was strong and brown. It had four dimples on the back and, if you had seen it, you would have thought, "What a nice little hand that is!" But one day, if you will believe it, that hand slapped Sadie Meadows and she cried and went home.

That week Junie was visiting Aunt Edith and, when she went into the house, her Aunt Edith said:

"What made Sadie go home?"

"I guess she didn't want to play any more," Junie said.

"Was that all?" Aunt Edith asked.

Then Junie told the truth, as she had been taught to, and Aunt Edith took the hot little hand between her two cool hands.

"This little hand struck her!" she said sadly.

Junie nodded her head gravely.

"And yesterday it threw stones?"

Once more Junie nodded.

"And the day before it pinched?"

"Yes, and one day it pulled hair."

"I can hardly believe it. What does your mother do for it?"

"Sometimes she shuts me up in a dark closet."

"Shut up a whole girl for what just one hand does! That doesn't seem quite right. The feet haven't done anything bad, the other hand is a good hand, and moth—"

"No," said Junie. "I didn't call Sadie bad names. I just hit her."

"I see. Just that one hand! It does not seem to know how to behave itself. We must certainly do something for it."

"I think that until it learns better, it ought not to play with good hands and feet."

"But, Aunt Edith—" Funny lights were beginning to dance in Junie's eyes. "We couldn't take it off!"

"No, but I think we should put it in some kind of dark closet, a traveling closet. Do you remember when Uncle Will broke his arm? The black scarf around his neck? Just this way; I'll show you."

Out of a black silk handkerchief Aunt Edith made a sling and put Junie's hand into it.

"Now," she said, "you can go out and play, but the hand must stay right there where I've put t. And the eyes, and the arm, and the head must all help the hand—"

She explained how and Junie went out again. At first it was fun, just because it was different, but afterward it was not so much fun and finally it was no fun at all. Sadie came back through the opening in the hedge and they started to laying big green walnuts in rows along the grass, to show where the walls of a house should be and Junie could use only one hand and that made the work slow and tedious. But she remembered and she had told Sadie, of course, and Sadie helped her remember.

"She made me mad, telling me every time," Junie explained to Aunt Edith. "My arm was helping; and my eyes—they would not look at things to make the bad hand bad; and my head wouldn't think about such things. But finally my feet had to help, too."

"I see," said Aunt Edith. "They had to bring the hands and the dark closet inside. Well, perhaps the hand has learned by this time and won't need to be shut up any longer."

Junie said she felt sure of it. Aunt Edith untied the sling, which she called opening the door of the dark closet. The hand seemed glad to be free. Junie ran back to Sadie, and the next time Aunt Edith looked out four hands, all well behaved, were at work on the house of green walnuts.—The Story Hour.

SONGS I LOVE BEST

Not from a gilded cage,
But from a green leafed tree,
I love to hear a songster
Peal forth his melody.

No song a caged bird sings,
However sweet his note,
Thrills my heart as does a song
From an outdoor songster's throat.

It gives me greater joy because
The one who sings is free
To fly about in God's green world,
Where all His birds should be.

THEY COULDN'T SLEEP

Two missionaries went to a village in Korea in which the Gospel had never been preached. It was noised abroad that they had come, and practically the whole population gathered. The interest of the people was so great that the meeting continued until a late hour.

Finally, the missionaries closed the meeting and were shown into an adjoining room for the night. But the people did not go away, and the murmuring of their voices kept the missionaries from sleeping.

About two o'clock, one of them went back and said to the people, "Why don't you go home and go to sleep? It is very late, and we are tired."

The head man of the village answered, in substance, "How can we sleep? You have told us that the Supreme Power is not an evil spirit trying to injure us, but a loving God who gave His only begotten Son for our salvation; and that if we will turn away from our sins and trust Him, we may have deliverance from fear, guidance in our perplexities, comfort in our sorrows. How can we sleep, after receiving a message such as this?"

How could they, indeed? The missionaries, forgetting their weariness, sat down with those poor people and communed with them until the morning dawned.—Selected.

A MAGIC THING

A pencil is a magic thing!
A slender case of wood
That holds within its wooden self
So much of bad and good:
Lovely phrases, tender names,
And words that cut and sting!
Who takes a pencil in his hand
Deals with a magic thing.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NEWS

Arrangements For Consecration

Invitation List Closed for Consecration of Bishop-Elect Dun—Many Notables Expected

Washington, D. C.—The invitation list for the consecration of the Very Reverend Angus Dun, D. D., at Washington Cathedral on the 19th of April is now closed.

The Committee on Invitations regrets the limitations placed upon the invitations, necessitated by the seating capacity of the Cathedral, which is approximately 2,300 seats, of this number 1,580 have been issued to the Washington Diocese. These have been apportioned to each parish according to the number of communicant members. Approximately 500 are reserved for those in the procession, which includes visiting bishops, of which thirty-two are expected, all local Episcopal clergy, lay delegates to the Convention and other diocesan groups.

Loud speakers, however, have been set up in the North and South transept entrances to enable persons interested to follow the service and hear the Consecration Sermon. They will also be able to view the procession as it enters and leaves the Cathedral.

It is expected that His Grace, Bishop Sigurgier Sigurdsson, Primate of Iceland, now in Washington, will attend the Consecration. Also others who have accepted an invitation are the Rt. Rev. Bishop Dionisije, Serbian Orthodox Bishop for the United States; His Beatitude Eshai Mar Chimun XXIII, Assyrian Bishop; Bishop J. Z. Jasinski, Buffalo, New York; Bishop J. Padewski, recently returned to this country from an internment camp in Germany, and Bishop J. Misiaszek, Scranton, Penna., representing the Polish National Catholic Church of America.

Dr. Dun will be consecrated Bishop by the Most Reverend Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, and the Rt. Rev. Henry K. Sherrill, Bishop of Massachusetts, will preach the Consecration Sermon. Bishop Sherrill and the Rt. Rev. Y. Y. Tsu, Bishop of Kunming, are the Co-Consecrators. The Bishop-Elect will be presented for Consecration by the Rt. Rev. Henry W. Hobson, of Southern Ohio, and the Rt. Rev. Malcolm E. Peabody, Bishop of Central New York. The Litany will be read by the Rt. Rev. W. Appleton Lawrence, of Western Massachusetts. Attending Presbyters will be the Rev. Charles L. Taylor, newly elected to succeed Bishop-Elect Dun as Dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., and the Rev. John M. Burgess, Chairman of the Department of Christian Social Relations of the Diocese of Southern Ohio and rector of the Church of St. Simon of Cyrene, Lockland, Ohio. The Rev. John H. Fitzgerald, Secretary of the House of Bishops, will be Registrar.

Among the acceptances received by the Committee on Invitations from diplomatic and official sources are: The British Ambassador and the Viscountess Halifax, Sir Girga Bajpai, Agent General for India, and Lady Bajpai; the Australian Minister and Lady Dixon, the Yugoslavian Ambassador and Madam Fotitich, the Netherlands Ambassador and Madam Loundon, the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. McCarthy, the Norwegian Ambassador and Madame Munthe de Morganstierne, the Minister from New Zealand and Mrs. Nash, the Minister of Finland and Madame Procope, the Minister of Iceland and Mrs. Thor Thors, Sir R. I. Campbell and Lady Campbell, Mr. Andre Boissier, of the Swiss Embassy; Hon. and Mrs. David E. Finley, Justice and Mrs. Frankfurter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Glover, Jr., Chief Justice and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Admiral and Mrs. Ernest J. King, Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Associate Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Dr. Leo. S. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, and the First Secretary of the Chinese Embassy, Mr. Tswen-ling Tsiu.

Included in the list of clergy of other faiths who will march in the procession are: The Rev. Seth R. Brooks, Chairman of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital; the Rev. S. Arthur Devan, Director of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Dr. Frederic Brown Harris, Chaplain of the Senate; the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, Rev. John W. Rustin, President of the Federation of Churches; Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, Pastor of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, New York City, and Frederic E. Reissig, Executive Secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches.

DIRECTOR AND NAVY CHAPLAINS TO MAKE TOUR

San Juan, Puerto Rico—Captain Robert D. Workman, Chaplain Corps, U. S. Navy, the Director of the Chaplains division, will make a tour of Naval activities in the Caribbean Islands, South America, the Mediterranean area, and the British Isles to observe the effectiveness and efficiency of the Navy Department's program for ministration to the spiritual needs of Naval personnel.

Traveling by air, Captain Workman, who resides at Washington, D. C., will be accompanied by Commander John R. Boslet, Chaplain Corps, USN., also of Washington, Catholic chaplain on duty in the office of the Director, and Lt. Commander Joshua L. Goldberg, Chaplain Corps, USNR, Long Island, New York, Jewish Chaplain now on duty at Headquarters, Third Naval District, New York.

Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox, has presented greetings to Chaplain Workman to be presented by him to the Naval Chaplains, Naval personnel, and Church authorities in the field. The tour will take about two months.

Tasmania's New Bishop

Visit New York en Route From England to New Field

New York, N. Y.—Church people in the United States have been having a preview of Tasmania's new bishop, Geoffrey Franceys Cranswick, who was in New York for a week en route from England to his new field, which he expects to reach early in May. His consecration took place on St. Paul's Day in Westminster Abbey. Mrs. Cranswick goes out with him, but their 11-year-old son remains temporarily in England to recover from an ill-timed attack of measles.

Bishop Cranswick was born in Australia, where his father had a hundred-mile "parish." His mother was a descendant of John Harvard. The future bishop went to England to enter Cambridge University and Ridley Hall. After his ordination in 1920 he went to India, where he spent fourteen years as a missionary in Bengal, not far from the friendly Tagore, whose poems he read in their native Bengali. He went back to England to become India secretary for the Church Missionary Society.

In Tasmania, that shield-shaped island south of Australia and just north of the high latitudes known as the roaring forties, his Cathedral is St. David's in Hobart. He has more than eighty clergy, whose work is supplemented by that of sixty or seventy lay readers. Tasmania's 26,000 square miles average fewer than ten people to the mile; the island-state has a number of towns but its rural population outnumbers that of the towns, and the mountainous regions are not yet even wholly explored.

The new bishop is the eighth since the diocese was organized a hundred years ago. The see is older than the state, which hardly had settled government before 1853. It is 300 years since the Dutch navigator, Tasman, discovered the island and named it for his patron, Van Diemen. It was later renamed for its discoverer.

Bishop Cranswick spoke of the great encouragement and help which American gifts and interest have afforded to the Church in England and hopes that much may be done to unite English and American Church people more closely. He mentioned especially the difficult situation in India and wishes that much prayer for the Church in India might be offered by the Church in America.

Attendance Increased 45%

Religious Programs at U. S. O. Overseas Show Marked Increase

New York—Attendance at religious programs conducted by U S O in the clubhouses of the Overseas Department, shows a 45 per cent increase in one month's period. The latest monthly statistical report, issued by the organization, reveals this jump which is second highest among all group activities, exceeded only by that listed as "Special Interests."

In continental United States the increase is 10 per cent; the increase in religious material distributed, 2 per cent. The figures show that 601,735 pieces of religious literature were distributed in this latest month. All other literature, loaned and distributed, totalled 614,882. All literature is issued upon request only.

DR. SHERMAN JOHNSON APPOINTED TO COMMISSION

Cambridge, Mass.—Dean Dun has resigned from the Joint Commission on Approaches to Unity, to which he was appointed as a Presbyter, on account of his approaching consecration to the Episcopate.

In his place the President of the House of Deputies has appointed the Rev. Dr. Sherman E. Johnson.

Dr. Johnson is a graduate of the Western Theological Seminary. He took his doctorate in Philosophy at the University of Chicago. After serving on the faculty of Seabury-Western and Nashotah House, he became a member of the staff of the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge. Nashotah House conferred an S. T. D. upon him. He is generally regarded as one of the leading New Testament scholars in the Episcopal Church.

INSTITUTE OF PASTORAL CARE A NEW PROJECT

Boston, Mass.—Emphasizing the present as well as post-war need for effective pastoral work, New England leaders of clinical training for clergy have organized and established a new educational project to be known as the Institute of Pastoral Care. Its stated purpose is "to organize, develop and support a comprehensive educational and research program in the field of pastoral care, with special reference to the ministry to the sick, using the opportunities offered by clinical training as a primary means to this end." While its major emphasis will be upon post-ordination training, courses will also be open to theological students.

Institutions represented on the Board of Governors are: Harvard Divinity School, Episcopal Theological School, Andover Newton Theological School, Boston University School of Theology, Massachusetts Council of Churches, Massachusetts General Hospital, Federal Council of Churches, Ella Lyman Cabot Trust and The Earhart Foundation.

Recently elected officers are: President, Very Rev. Willard L. Sperry, D. D.; Vice-President, Rev. Everett C. Herrick, D. D.; Secretary, Very Rev. Charles L. Taylor, Th. D.; Treasurer, Very Rev. Earl B. Marlatt, D. D., and Executive Director, Rev. Rollin J. Fairbanks.

Headquarters of the Institute have been established at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, where a summer school will be held consisting of two sessions, six weeks each. It is expected that other training centers will be established as standards are met. The Institute plans to publish, or promote the publication of, a professional journal.

A FINE START

Collections in Expectations to April 1st were most gratifying. Allowing one month for collection and remittance there was due from those dioceses which have filed their Expectations the sum of $277,977. Of this amount 108.3% was paid. This compares with 95% on April 1st, 1943.

The actual amount of money collected to April 1st was greater than for the same period last year by $67,621.32. This increase reflects not only the higher percentage of collections but the materially increased Expectations.

More and more of the dioceses are adopting the plan of remitting each month one-twelfth of their Expectation.

Thanks,
LEWIS B. FRANKLIN,
Treasurer.

1943 CANONS

A Correction

Mr. Editor:

As secretary of the late Joint Commission to Codify, etc., the Canons, may I ask the courtesy of your columns to call attention to a glaring misprint on page 97 of the 1943 edition?

The fourth line of Section 2(b) of Canon 39 is printed thus, "of the Province shall not apply in the case of the," which makes no sense at all in this place. The correct reading of this line is "of the Province prior to the meeting of the House." The incorrect reading is a duplication of the last line but four in this subsection, where it does make sense.

This seems to be explicable only as "one of those things" which will sometimes happen in the best regulated composing rooms. Will those who read this kindly make correction in their copies of the 1943 Canons? Thank you.

JAMES R. SHARP.

DOUGHNUTS CAST UPON THE WATERS

New York, N. Y.—Mrs. Tsu's doughnuts and other edibles are as bread cast upon the waters. Having heard of the hospitality of Bishop Y. Y. Tsu and Mrs. Tsu to American airmen in China, the Chattanooga (Tenn.) District of the House of Young Churchmen raised $45.10 and sent it to the National Council with a letter asking that Bishop Tsu receive the gift as soon as possible, and saying, "We have heard of the delicious American meals he and Mrs. Tsu serve our fighting boys in China so we would like to feel that we are helping him in this way, or in whatever manner he sees fit".

"Pineapple Clericus" Organized

Troops Stationed There Call Themselves "Pineapple Soldiers"

Honolulu, T. H.—Believed by its members to be unique among organizations of the clergy, "The Pineapple Clericus" was organized recently by a group of Army Chaplains of the Episcopal Church stationed in the Hawaiian Islands. Its name is derived from the fact that troops stationed in the "Paradise of the Pacific" invariably refer to themselves as "pineapple soldiers".

Meetings are held each week, commencing with a celebration of the Holy Communion, followed by breakfast and a business session. The program consists of papers and discussion of matters of mutual interest. Recent papers have included "Uniformity in Celebrating the Holy Communion", "Proposals for Prayer Book Revision", and "The Episcopal Chaplain and the Protestant Soldier". Bishop Kennedy, of Honolulu, who has given his full support of organization, is scheduled to address the group in the near future.

The cosmopolitan character of "The Pineapple Clericus" is shown by the diocesan connections of its officers, who represent three widely separated regions of the United States. Chaplain Frank L. Titus (Diocese of Albany) is president, Chaplain William J. Wyckoff (Diocese of Chicago), vice-president, and Chaplain Francis W. Read (Diocese of Los Angeles), secretary.

Bishop Kennedy Confirms Six Soldiers

In his first Episcopal visit to an Army post, Bishop Kennedy, of Honolulu, conferred the Apostolic rite of Confirmation on six soldiers, including a major and a lieutenant. The service was held in one of the chapels on the post, and included the singing of hymns by the chapel choir. A large congregation was present to witness the ceremony and to hear the Bishop's sermon.

Members of the class included veterans of Enewitok, Kwajalein, Makin and Attu. The class was presented by Chaplains Frank L. Titus, William J. Wyckoff and Francis W. Read.

RHODE ISLAND

Bishop Perry's Easter Message

Providence, R. I.—The Rt. Rev. James DeWolf Perry, D. D., bishop of Rhode Island, had the usual Easter message asked of him by the Providence papers. The last paragraph reads: "For Christians for all time and through all the world the Resurrection has become the key to the mysteries of life, solution of suffering, release from sin, triumph over death. But all on three conditions—that we accept the pain with unfailing trust; that we acknowledge the reality and the shame of sin; that we face the fact of death with open eyes and without fear, "suffering with Christ that we may be also glorified with Him."

The Rev. Thom Williamson, rector of St. Peter's-by-the-Sea, Narragansett, is taking the services for the last three Sundays in April at Christ Church, Cambridge, Maryland, in the Diocese of Easton, in the absence of the rector, the Rev. Charles W. Hinton, who is on a speaking tour. The services at Narragansett will be taken by the Rev. Archie H. Burdick, Master at St. Andrew's School, Barrington, R. I.

Union Services Held

Many of the parishes in the Diocese of Rhode Island held the Three Hours' Devotions on Good Friday, with good congregations. A few of the parishes were connected with union services in which ministers of various denominations joined with clergy from our Church in the services or sermons. Many denominational or union services were held during Lent. In the "South County" of Rhode Island, Washington County, these services culminated in a Maundy Thursday union Communion Service, in which however the Episcopal Churches did not participate, though joining in the other services held between Ash Wednesday and Good Friday. Flowers, especially lilies, are scarce and expensive in Rhode Island. More than one parish church curtailed its decorations this Easter. Lack of these lilies, beautiful as they are, must be compensated for by a more warm and glowing spirit of worship and devotion, and a deeper communion with the Crucified and Risen Lord, and fellowship with His people of all lands and races.

DORNAKAL WEEK OF WITNESS

Every year Christian congregations go out in bands to evangelise the countryside. The time chosen is in May, between harvest and the first rains, when work is at a standstill. Two weeks of careful preparation precede the campaign, so that all members of the congregation may know how to take their part in it. During the week itself, men and lads go out to different villages each night, and often from nine till midnight they will sit in the moonlight in a village street while one of their number gives a song-story from the life of our Lord, all the villagers grouped round in the street, on doorsteps or on housetops to listen. In the afternoon there may be a procession of women, led by the Mothers' Union officers, singing as they pass down the village street and stopping from time to time for the leaders to speak; or little groups of women will visit from house to house in the non-Christian quarters. Girls of the Diocesan Guild often get up a play, or take pictures round to show the children.

As a result of their efforts in 1941, 350 new villages asked for Christian teachers.

ONE DEATH THUS FAR AMONG EPISCOPALIAN CHAPLAINS

Boston, Mass.—Commenting upon recent newspaper stories reporting heavy casualties among Chaplains serving in the Nation's armed forces, the Rev. Henry B. Washburn, secretary of the Army and Navy Commission, said that among Episcopal Chaplains there has been but one death thus far. Chaplain Frederick B. Howden, son of the late bishop of New Mexico, died in a Japanese prison camp last year. Dr. Washburn said: "I am sure that many of our Chaplains are in positions of danger, but thus far, thank heaven, all seem to have escaped death or even injury."

Chapel Built By Seabees

Men of Marine Air Group and Navy Construction Attend Dedication

Bougainville—On Sunday, March 25, men of a Marine Air Group and a Navy Construction Battalion attended dedicatory services in their new chapel.

Sunlight filtered through the lovely colors of the window framing a life-sized painting of Christ and mingled softly with the artificial lights from fixtures bearing symbolic crosses.

On the rostrum were altar, pulpit, and lecturn. Jungle flowers flanked the lighted candles at either end of the altar and a polished altar rail fronted the whole platform.

An aviation machinists mate looked at the window and thought that it reminded him of the window in his church at home. A Marine flyer heard the music from the organ and thought of his wedding day. A construction engineer watched the flickering candles and remembered his wife and recalled the day they took the baby to the church to be christened.

A choir composed of Leathernecks in shirt sleeves sang "Come, Thou Almighty King" and the congregation joined in singing "The Church's One Foundation". Their Chaplain, Lieut. Robert W. Coe, Jr., ChC, USNR, Brookline, Massachusetts, led the service. He read from the 17th Chapter of St. Matthew, "Upon this rock I will build My church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

The chapel's architect, Lt. F. E. Whitehouse, CEC, USNR, of New York City, and its builder, Lt. Commander C. T. Wende, CEC, USNR, of Indianapolis, Ind., presented the new chapel to the Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. L. H. Delano, Jr., of Santa Barbara, Cal.

The Seabee Chaplain, Lt. (jg) Russell V. Goff, ChC, USNR, of Albuquerque, N. M., gave a brief sermon and the men all joined in singing "Onward Christian Soldiers".

Following a service of Holy Communion the fighting men filed out of their chapel to the business of war—outside they saw raw, unpainted buildings, tents, jeeps, trucks, guns, and planes.

But for that brief hour they had been transported back to Indianapolis, to Santa Barbara, to Brookline, to Albuquerque, and to New York City.

Seabee builders who call themselves the "Can Do Navy" had again performed a miracle! From construction camp left-overs and from the jungle itself, they had constructed this house of worship. The Painting of Christ, which gave such a realistic impression of exquisitely designed stained glass, was made from oiled silk and the painting was the work of a Seabee artisan. The organ weighed less than 50 pounds and could be folded and moved to their next location, but they had fashioned bamboo poles into reed pipes which looked for all the world like a regular church organ. Lighting fixtures with crosses cut in either side with a can opener, had been painted so that the lighting was subdued. Log-hewn pews were sans cushions and back supports, but these fighting men aren't used to much comfort anyway, so that passed unnoticed.

One thing the Seabees didn't build into the chapel was an atmosphere of deep reverence. That came in with the men themselves.

THE MELANESIAN BROTHERHOOD

The island of Guadalcanal is the headquarters of a native evangelistic brotherhood, founded in 1925 by Ini Kopuria, an ex-policeman. Ini began life in a mission school on the island, became a village teacher, then enlisted in the Native Constabulary because he found teaching dull. Two years later he fell seriously ill, and while lying in hospital he resolved to offer his whole life to God. He told the Bishop, gave his land to the mission, made his Profession on October 28th, 1925, and was soon joined by six other Brothers.

The Brotherhood now numbers over 130, and there are many probationers and a large number of "companions." The Brothers live under the three-fold vow of poverty, chasity and obedience, renewing it each year. Their primary task is to evangelize the heathen, and they go out in pairs to different islands, meeting with many adventures, frequent success and sometimes persecution. Every year they meet in conference at the community house on Ini's land. Ini and two other Brothers have been ordained priests, but most of them remain lay brothers.

A SCHOOLBOY IN BORNEO

Goh came as a heathen boy to St. Luke's School, Simanggang, where he received Christian instruction and was baptized. He left school, returned to his home in a jungle long-house, then determined to settle in a heathen village. A year later the missionary priest received an urgent call to Sungei Pinang, where he arrived after four days' traveling to find Goh in charge of a well-taught congregation. They had cleared 3 acres of jungle, built and furnished a little chapel, and Goh led them in Matins and Evensong every day. They had built a school also, where Goh was teaching twenty-five boys. Fifty-five men and women were admitted as catechumens next morning, and afterwards they solemnly burnt a great pile of heathen materia medica in front of the chapel, repeating after the priest, "I believe in one God. . . ." Goh had settled in a heathen stronghold, where witch-doctors learnt their trade! When the Bishop visited Sungei Pinang just before the Japanese invasion, 110 Christians made their communion in the little church.

THREE POOR WOMEN

The fishing town of Labadi, on the Gold Coast, has long been a center of fetishism, and Christianity made little headway there. Suddenly an unaccountable revival stirred the Christians to new life; they not only built themselves a church, but began to win converts from among the most hardened of the heathen fishermen. It turned out that the whole movement was due to the influence of three poor women, who declared that they had seen a vision of the Lord Jesus. So real was their spiritual experience that they kindled to new life the whole community, and the little church stands amid

A GIRL GUIDE

Manche Masemula (pronounced Mayse-moola) was an African girl almost ready for baptism. She came to the meetings of the Wayfarers (African Guides) and was to be enrolled after her baptism. One day she fell ill and got some medicine from the mission doctor. As it did not cure her at once, her heathen family mocked her for believing the Christians. Then they collected all the villagers, took Manche away and beat her to death. "I shall never stop being a Christian," she told them, "and I shall laugh the more they hurt me." When they tried to dig her grave, they found huge stones in the ground, and finally sent in terror for the Christian priest, who showed them where to bury her. At their next meeting the Wayfarers gave Manche a king's salute, and after the day on which she was to have been baptized, all the Christians went in procession to her grave, which was solemnly blessed by the African priest.

INFORMATION—ADVICE, PLEASE

New York, N. Y.—Almost everyone on the National Council staff at 281 Fourth Avenue, New York, receives frequent requests for information and advice. The total list of questions asked in any month would reveal a large and varied thirst for information.

Our desk has kept a list of fifty queries and requests received by mail in a month, and finds the following among the subjects on which help was asked:

The Episcopal Church's whole mission work, domestic and overseas; the whole program of the National Council and how parishes can cooperate with it; all Church periodicals; Church history; the Church in Europe today; "all our domestic bishops"; the Church's work for better race relations during the past five years; work among migrants, "mountaineers", Spanish-Americans, Indians; work among the deaf, the blind; the effect of "missions" on commerce; British missions; "what is the Church doing in China today?" work in Liberia, in Japan, in Alaska, in India; work among Negroes (many queries about this, apparently reflecting General Convention's emphasis); "stories for a speech"; information about individual missionaries, and the "meaning of Shrove Tuesday".

CITED FOR GALLANTRY CHAPLAIN JAMES T. FISH

Boston, Mass.—Anouncement of the award of the Silver Star to Chaplain James T. Fish, formerly of Calvary Mission, Los Angeles, has reached the Army and Navy Commission. From somewhere "in the field" comes the citation for gallantry in action.

"During the period, January, . . . , January . . . , 1944," says the citation, "in which his organization was engaged in the hazardous mission of forcing a crossing of the . . . River, he remained in the forward area under almost constant artillery fire. With no regard for his personal safety, he visited and talked to men being subjected to artillery and mortar fire in forward positions, thereby greatly comforting them and increasing their self-confidence. On . . . January, still in the forward area under artillery fire, Chaplain Fish conducted religious services, for which all the men expressed their profound gratitude and admiration. The action of Chaplain Fish in remaining with and comforting his men in the face of great danger materially aided the effort of his organization and is in keeping with the highest ideals of the Church and of the armed forces.

There has just been published a small book, chiefly photographs, entitled Starvation in Greece, edited by a Greek, the proceeds to be devoted towards relief of famine conditions. In a preface of two or three pages the tragic position of the Greek people is made abundantly clear. The editor proves his opening statement that the sufferings endured by the Greek people are beyond the bounds of imagination; they will serve for all time as a most realistic illustration of hell on earth. The effect is that an innocent people found the whole economy of their country overthrown and chaotic conditions in what is primarily an agricultural land. The captain of one ship describes Athens in the winter of 1941-42 as a gaunt and hungry city where there were no horses, cats or dogs in the streets, for they had all been eaten. It was at this time that the people of the island of Syra wired to Athens: "Send us wheat or coffins." Conditions were so tragic that public opinion throughout the world was moved, with the result that arrangements were made for shipments of certain foods to be sent in Swedish vessels as well as medical supplies. This had the effect of saving thousands of lives, particularly the lives of children, but even so the conditions in Greece are appalling. Few things can be more illustrative of the need of shortening the war in every possible way than these pictures of people in that desperately unhappy land.—The Record, English.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

"Death is the gate of endless joy."

"The weak have rights—the strong have responsibilities."

An evil thought passes thy door first as a stranger. Then it enters as a guest. Then it installs itself as a master.

Peace will increase as your faith increases: one always keeps pace with the other. —Wesley.

It is not the cares of today, but the cares of tomorrow which weigh men down.—George MacDonald.

Happy are all free peoples too strong to be dispossessed,
But blessed are those among nations who dare to be strong for the rest.

Consult the honor of religion more, and your personal safety less. Were it not better you should die than that the world should be prejudiced against Christ by your example?

Nothing is easier than fault-finding; no talent, no self-denial, no brains, no character are needed to set up in the grumbling business.—Robert West.

Every day it becomes clearer that the root of the main political problems of today is religious—the presence or absence of faith in God.
—Archbishop of Canterbury.

St. Paul had three wishes, and they were all about Christ; that he might be found in Christ, that he might be with Christ, and that he might magnify Christ. —P. Henry.

When thou hast truly thanked thy God
For every blessing sent;
But little time will then remain
For murmur or lament.
—Selected.

"Full consecration may in one sense be the act of a moment and in another the work of a lifetime. It must be complete to be real, and yet, if real it is always incomplete; a point of rest, and yet a perpetual progression."

The gloom of the world is but a shadow. Behind it, yet within our reach, is joy. There is radiance and glory in the darkness, could we but see, and to see we have only to look. I beseech you to look.
—Fra Giovanni, 1513.

"God will not change. The restless years may bring Sunlight and shadow, the glories of the spring,
And silent gloom of sunless winter hours,
Joy mixed with grief, sharp thorns with fragrant flowers.
Earth lights may shine awhile, and then grow dim.
But God is true, there is no change in Him."

The Christian religion does not mean that we who are living look back over the years to our leader who is dead. It means rather that He, Our Lord, Who is eternally and for ever living comes, generation after generation, to us who apart from Him were dead.—Exchange.

LETTERS

Mr. Editor:

Would you be so kind as to insert the following in The Southern Churchman? I think it will be welcomed by some of our bishops and clergy who have entrance to prison or war camps.

Gilbert P. Symons.

German Prisoners of War

Some inquiry has come asking if the Forward Movement is preparing devotional material for German Prisoners of War in their language.

There is not sufficient demand for us to do so. Instead, I have made a friendly arrangement whereby I am to act as clearing agent for the Lutherans to supply our clergy with their German language material: two booklets, (1) a Pocket Hymnal with some music, and (2) a Pocket Order of Worship.

I am ready to send samples of these booklets only to clergy or officers who have legal entrance to Prisoner of War Camps, and thereafter to ship free of charge such reasonable quantities as they shall request.

Orders should be sent to Canon Symons, 412 Sycamore Street, Cincinnati 2, Ohio.

HELP KEEP CHAPLAINS' MORALE HIGH

Mr. Editor:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for your considerable contribution to the understanding and mutual confidence which exists between the Chaplains of the Navy and the churches they represent. Your sympathetic understanding of the problems of the chaplaincy and your fairness in interpreting those problems to your readers have been deeply appreciated by all of us in the Chaplain Corps.

I deeply feel the need for an unbroken chain of spiritual contact between our Navy Chaplains and the good church folk they left when they gave up pastorates to serve our men and women in uniform.

A Navy Chaplain's life in these difficult times is not an easy one. Men of God in uniform need the encouragement and support and prayers of every loyal American. I wish that you might know how grateful they are for the friendly words of appreciation from the home folk—how they treasure their prayers.

Your help in keeping the morale of our Chaplains high by your continued efforts to impress on churches the need for this contact is greatly appreciated.

May I presume on your good office in another urgent matter? As the Naval Services continue to expand the program of ship building with the resultant expansion in personnel, it becomes necessary for the Chaplain Corps to keep pace with this growth. At the present time we are 370 chaplains short of the allowed and required quota. In addition to this number, five hundred additional Chaplains will be required in the next six months.

Our most critical need is for Protestant Chaplains, since both the Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations charged with securing Chaplains are continuing to fill their respective quotas.

We know and appreciate completely the seriousness of the present dearth of ministers. But we know, too, that all departments of our Government as well as the civilian population are sharing the burden, a part of which is rationing of necessary material equipment. That the churches have recognized the need for rationing, too, is apparent on every side. I am sure that they are willing to make even greater sacrifices of their ministerial personnel, for I know that there is not a church member in this country who would purposely deny our heroic fighting men the services which only a good chaplain can supply.

The Denominational Commissions are acquainted with our needs. Our prayer is that every minister eligible for the Naval Chaplaincy will investigate the need for Chaplains of his own denomination.

We know that there are many splendid and outstanding clergymen who would be glad to enter the service, but who cannot because they do not meet the Navy's specific requirements in some particular. Their offer of service is appreciated, but the exacting needs of the Naval Service do not permit lowering the requirements as to age, physical condition, and education. The additional number of Chaplains needed to provide adequate spiritual ministry to our men and women must come from the group of clergymen not now in service who are able to meet the requirements.

May we count on your help in editorial comment and in your news columns?

Robert D. Workman,
Captain, ChC, USN,
Director, Chaplains' Division.

FROM OVERSEAS LETTERS

So Little Candy

England.

Dearest Father:

There is so much here that would interest you, but, of course, I can't write any of it. We are in a really lovely spot, peaceful for the most part. I had a call from the Duchess' Secretary yesterday, asking two of us again to tea, so Frances ..... and Lt. ..... (he is from Virginia) are having their turn.

When the Duchess called on us her chief lady-in-waiting, a very attractive person, was telling us how little candy they got these days, and how they craved it. Miss Thompson said they always got their monthly rations on the first day of the month and ate it up the same day, so that they would feel like they had had some! A beautiful box arrived from Charles yesterday. I opened it and it still looked so fresh I thought I'd send it to her. That may be out of order, but then we are Americans, so I took a chance! I hope she likes it!

We are hoping nothing stops our getting our leave, six of us are planning to go to Scotland.

Such People As the English!

We really made it after all, six of us together, all friends. Our leave came through Friday, and as it is against regulations for us U. S. Army folk to travel on Saturday or Sunday, we had to hustle to catch a train Friday night. I've never seen such people as the English! When we got on the train last night there wasn't a seat to be had, people were standing in the aisles. There are no longer any Pullmans on the night trains.

Four English officers, traveling with their men somewhere, vacated their compartment, which had been reserved for them by the Government, and insisted on our taking over. They took their bedding rolls along and slept in the baggage car.

I wonder if American officers would have done as much?

Edinburgh is a beautiful city; the people are so friendly and have such fine faces. They are much better dressed than in London, and the whole place looks so clean and neat and strong.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

THERE ARE SEVERAL phrases in the first chapter of Colossians which I want us to think about, for they contain certain key beliefs and bits of personal direction for those of us who are the Christian Church and who would make the Church an effective instrument for implementing God's will in every area of man's life.

Verse 9: "Full spiritual wisdom and insight with a clear knowledge of what his will is."

Verse 11: "He will nerve you perfectly with strength for the cheerful exercise of endurance and forbearance in every situation." Verses 13b and 14: "From the dominion of darkness . . . into the realm of His dear Son; by whom we have been ransomed from captivity through having our sins forgiven."

Verse 21: "It has brought you, who were once estranged from Him, hostile in attitude and engaged in doing wrong . . . into God's presence."

Verse 23b: "Never shift from the hope held out in the good news."

When the word "meditation" is mentioned, some people think immediately of a long time of uninterrupted quiet thought. Their excuse is: "not enough time". For them I would remind that "Haven" lasts only five minutes and yet there are often many thoughts in it, and there are always about 800 words. It is not often that the time element prevents meditation but rather indolence or not knowing how to meditate. The lack of time, then, should be no block, for a complete meditation can last anywhere from one to thirty minutes. A brief outline to follow as guide:

Try to form a mental picture of the thought or story. Imagine the setting, the speaker, the hearers and the like.

Then ask, what does it mean? Never give up until at least one thread of the meaning is unraveled and held.

Push further and ask, what of God's Spirit is revealed, and what is there in it that speaks to me for my present need?

Lastly, keep asking, how can I apply and use the lesson learned? Every meditation, brief or long, seeks God through the mind—seeks to throw light of wisdom, truth, and understanding upon it; through the heart—seeks to stimulate desire and conviction and commitment, to arouse love and faith; through the hands—seeks to become the motivation for action, positive and immediate steps to accomplish. Each verse fragment we have mentioned can be made the basis for a meditation.

Verse 9 should be used if we need a further clarification of what God's will is and the importance of prayer to bring it about.

Verse 11 should be used if the going is tough and human strength is running out and we are on the verge of feeling sorry for ourselves.

Verses 13 and 14 should be used if we are walking in darkness as slaves to some sin and know not the way through it.

Verses 21 and 22 should be used as the guide for coming back into God's presence when one is completely estranged from God.

Verse 23 should be used if our faith is a bit shaky and our hope is at low ebb and evil seems to be winning out.

No matter which verse you choose you will find Christ walking in the midst of it if you follow the spirit of the author, who some say was Paul, the great apostle to all of mankind.

We have a little more than one minute left. Take one of our meditation themes at random, say verse 23, follow the guide pattern, and see what comes.

"Never shift from the hope held out in the good news." What is the hope in the good news? "He that believeth on me shall never die." Or in larger measure, "God so loved the world that He gave His only

COLLECT FOR SECOND SUNDAY AFTER EASTER

Almighty God, Who hast given thine only Son to be unto us both a sacrifice for sin and also an ensample of godly life; Give us grace that we may always most thankfully receive that His inestimable benefit and also daily endeavor ourselves to follow the blessed steps of His most holy life; through the same Jesus Christ our Lord. # Thoughts on Personal Religion

From Bishop Strider's Mission, St. Paul's Church, Richmond, Va., Jan. 24-38, 1944.

Our Response to God.

OUR PERSONAL and individual response to God is very important. God is not dependent on you but you are upon Him. He does not exist for you without personal response.

Two roses may grow side by side on a bush,—one beautiful, one dwarfed. Why? Because of difference in response, stimuli, environment. What you put into an enterprise determines what you get out of it. A cathedral may be inspiring to one individual, but boring to another; yet it is the same cathedral! Then, too, the vessel you bring with you is the only one you can take away full. If it is a thimble, then only a thimble full will be yours. It is the investment that counts.

Prayer

Prayer is the means by which our relation to God is charted and developed. Prayer is: Petition. You need not apologize for this. Any need that is honest and real, in body, mind, or estate may be laid before Him. Prayer is: Communion with God: spirit to spirit knowing each other better; praising Him in every honest way you can. It is silent when it has gone beyond words too deep in God's presence. There should be more of this. Give God a chance to speak.

Answers to prayer may be delayed or disguised. Sometimes we pray in a divided way; lips say one thing, the heart another. God always answers the heart. His wisdom it is that answers.

Growth in prayer is from self-center to God as center; a loving, earnest effort to find what God wants supreme; getting done what He wants.

Bible Reading

A most dangerous tendency of modern times is neglect of daily Bible reading. We hear it read only in church. There is a great deal of the Bible in our church service but that is not enough. That cannot take the place of daily readings. One of the most necessary things to restore the power of Christianity is to be more diligent in daily reading of the Bible. Two chief reasons for this neglect are given:

1. No time. In the hectic atmosphere of hurry we live in, we have no time. But is not this just an alibi? We take time to do the things we really want to do. It is indeed the temptation of the devil. We must want to crowd in four or five minutes a day at least. Forward Movement booklets help here.

2. Do not understand the Bible. There are so many aids today this is not a good reason. It is not necessary to start at the first and read all through. The four gospels are simple reading.

One simple suggestion: Have the Bible as one book on your bedside table. Psychologists tell us the best time for impressions is the twilight between being full awake and sleep. It is not necessary to read a long passage or even a whole chapter. A few verses read thoughtfully and with openness of mind are enough. How those few sentences stand out!

An eminent lawyer once exclaimed: "I have just seen the most beautiful sentence in the human language!" When asked which one—"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee: because he trusteth in Thee." Isa. 26:3. "Search the Scriptures . . . have eternal life . . . testify of Me." St. John 5:39.

The Holy Communion

Our Lord's parting gift to His disciples was the service of the Holy Communion. There is evidence in the gospels, to a discerning reader, especially in St. Mark, that very early in His ministry our Lord attached great significance to the breaking of bread. This then was of sacramental significance, not suddenly thought of, on the spur of the moment in their last night together. For this He had been preparing all through His ministry. And it came to its climax in the words, "Drink ye all of this, in remembrance . . ." The last hours with His friends were the most important.

It is futile to try to define the Holy Communion. Phillips Brooks never tried to define the great mysteries of faith, but always talked about them. It was as if he reached up to them with one hand while the other hand reached down to men to pull them up.

There is something sacramental about eating together. We really know each other better when we partake of each other's "salt".

Our Lord then entered into the lives of His disciples by eating with them, in ways you and I can understand and so He will go out with you from the Holy Communion. As our lives are spent, all power runs out; this restores it. We need some source of supply for charge to our battery.

Or take the illustration of the radio: When you hear nothing you do not say there is no broadcast, but that your machine is dead. His current continues going out. We must be equipped to receive it.

We must be more definite: in our prayers, do not say forgive our sins; that is too generalizing and dissipating. Instead, ask forgiveness for "what I took from John Smith yesterday at ten-thirty". So, come to Holy Communion with a particular need in mind; "a definite intention," it may be called. It is helpful to write out what "I hope this particular service will do for me." If you are confronted with a decision on Friday or Saturday and can hold off until Monday, write out the problem and take it with you to Holy Communion.

Make this service become so real to you that you could not dispense with it any more than eating and drinking for your physical health.

Evangelism

These talks have been given in an effort to deepen and strengthen our personal religion. This was first defined as our response to God; then some aids have been given: Prayer; Bible Reading; the Holy Communion. Now let us consider results,—Evangelism.

Personal religion propagates itself, it must result in action. If it does not, it is not real. Some one said, "But you Christians are so selfish. You want something for yourselves, something that will make you happy, bring you more character." Indeed we make it seem so. Did our Lord?

Our personal religion grows a little sour and stagnant unless it emerges in evangelism. Dr. Fosdick uses in a book, the illustration of the two seas of Palestine. One has only inlets and becomes the Dead Sea. The other, the Lake of Galilee, gives out, has both inlets and outlets and becomes a life-giving body of water.

The Christian approach that gets in order to keep, is bound to be unsatisfied. "He who gives . . ." is personal religion at its best, linked up in a chain of

The Sheep That Were Not Fed

This description of the Chaplain's opportunity, written after the last war, is republished here for the light it throws on the great opportunity today before the Church in the armed forces, and especially the need for mature Chaplains. It is part of an essay in a volume called DISENCHANTMENT by C. E. MONTAGUE, published by Brentano's, 1922.

"I'VE BEEN A CHRISTIAN all my life, but this war is a bit too serious." So saying, a certain New Army recruit had folded up his religion in 1914, and put it away, as it were, in a drawer with his other civil attire to wait until public affairs should again permit of their use. He had said it quite simply. A typical working-class Englishman, literal, serious, and straight, he had not got one loop of subtlety or one vibration of irony in his whole mind. Like most of his kind he had, as a rule, left church-going to others. Like most of them, too, he had read the Gospels and found that whatever Christ had said mattered enormously: it built itself into the mind; when any big choice had to be made it was at least a part of that which decided. Not having ever been taught how to dodge an awkward home-thrust at his conscience, he felt, all unblunted, the point of what Christ had said about such things as wealth and war and loving one's enemies.

But this war had to be won; that was flat. It was like putting out houses on fire, or not letting children be killed; it did not even need to be proved; that we had got to win was now the one quite certain thing left in a world of shaken certainties. Any religion or anything else that seemed to chill, or deter, or suggest an alternative need not be wholly renounced. But it had to be put away in a drawer. After the war, when that dangerous precept about the left cheek could do longer do serious harm, it might come out again; our friend would see what could be done. For he was a man more strongly disposed than most of his fellows to hold, if he honestly could, the tenets of some formal religion. "They got hold o' something." he used to say, with curiosity and some respect, of more regular practitioners than himself. "Look at the Salvation Army legging along in the mud and their eyes fairly shining with happiness! Aye, they got on to something." He would investigate, when the time came.

THE TESTIMONIES that might have ensued were foreclosed by a shell that buried him alive in Oppy Wood, under the Vimy Ridge, where he was engaged in diverting the energies of the Central Powers from the prostrate army of Nivelle. He had by then been two years in France, and had told a few friends about various "queer feels" and "rum goes" which he would not have known by name if you had called them spiritual experiences.

The sunshine of one of the first element days of 1916 drew him about as far as I heard him go on the positive side. "You know what it is," he said in the course of one of the endless trench talks, "when you got to make up your mind to do as you oughter. Worry and fuss and oh, ain't it too hard, and why the 'ell can't I let myself off!—that's how it is. Folla me?"

The audience grunted assent. "Some other time," he pursued, "perhaps once in ten years, it's all t'other way. You're set free like. Kind of a miracle. Don't even have to think what you're going to get by it. All you know is that there's just the one thing, in all the whole world, good enough. Doing it ain't even hard. All the sport there ever was has been took out of everything else and put into that. Kind of a miracle. Folla me?"

"That's right," another man confirmed. "You'll see it at fires when people are like to be burnt. Men'll go fair mad to help them. Don't think. Don't feel it if they're hurt. Fair off it to get at them—same as a dog when you throw a stick in a pond."

"Ah, then," contributed somebody else, "you've only to hear a man with a grand tenor voice in song till you'll feel a coolness blowing softly and swif'ly over your face and then gone, the way you'd have died on a cross with all the pleasure in life while it lasted."

THE CLUMSY FUMBLINGS of uninstructed people among things of the spirit might, one imagines, be just stuff as a skilled teacher and leader in this field might have delighted to come upon and to inspirit and marshal. With tongues unwontedly loosened, men would set to and dig out of themselves, not knowing what it was, the clay of which the bricks are made with which religions are built. One man, with infinite exertions of disentanglement, would struggle up to some expression of the fugitive trance of realization into which he had found he could throw himself by letting his mind go, for all it was worth, on the thought of his own self, his "I-ness", until for some few seconds of poised exaltation he had thought self clean away and was free.

Another man would bring into the common stock a recollection of the kind of poignant portrait dream that sometimes comes: not a dream of any incident, but only the face of a friend, more living than life, with all the secret kindness and loneliness of his mind suddenly visible in the face, so that you think of him as you think of your mother when she is dead and the stabbing insight of remorse begins.

Thus would these inexpert people hang unconsciously about the uncrossed threshold of religion. With minds which had recovered in some degree the penetrative simplicity of a child's, they disinterred this or that unidentified bone of the buried God from under the monumental piles of debris which the learned, the cunning, and the proud, priests and kings, churches and chapels, had heaped up over the ideas of perfect love, of faith that would leave all to follow that love, and of the faithful spirit's release from mean fears of extinction. In talk they could bring each other up to the point of feeling that little rifts had opened here and there in the screens which are hung round the life of man on the earth, and that they had peeped through into some large outer world that was strange only because they were used to a small and dim one. They were prepared and expectant. If any official religion could ever refine the gold out of all that rich alluvial drift of "obstinate questionings of sense and outward things," now was its time. No figure of speech, among all these that I have mixed, can give the measure of the greatness of that opportunity.

Nobody used it: the tide in the affairs of churches flowed its best, but no church came to take it. Instead, as if by chance had planned a kind of satiric practical epigram, came the brigade chaplain. As soon as his genial bulk hove in sight, and his cherry robustious chaff began blowing about, the shy and uncouth muse of our savage theology unfolded her wings and flew away. Once more the talk was all footer and rations and scragging the Kaiser, and how "the Hun" would walk a bit lame after the last knock he had got. Very nice, too, in its way. And yet there had been a kind of savour about the themes that had now shambled back in confusion, before the clerical onset, into their twilight lairs in the souls of individual laymen.

When you want to catch the Thames gudgeon, you first comb the river's bed hard with a long rake. In the turbid water thus caused the creatures will be on the feed, and if you know how to fish you may get a great take. For our professional fishers of men in the army and war did the raking gratis. The men came under their hands at the time of most drastic experience in most of the men's lives, immersed in a new and strange life of sensations, at once simple and intense, shaken roughly out of the world of mechanical habit which at most times puts a kind of bar between one's mind and truth, living always among swiftly dying friends and knowing their own death at any time to be as probable as anyone's. To get rid of your phlegm, it was said, is to be a philosopher. It is also to be a saint, at least in the rough; you have broken the frozen ground; you can grow anything now; you can see the greatest things in the very smallest, so that sunrise on Iverness Copse is the morning of the first day and a spoonful of rum and a biscuit a sacrament. Imagine the religious revival that there might have been if some man of apostolic genius had had the fishing in the troubled waters, the ploughing and sowing of the broken soil.

> The frozen fountain would have leapt,
> The buds gone on to blow,
> The warm south wind would have awaked
> To melt the snow.

NOTHING NOW PERCEPTIBLE came of it all. What, indeed, could the average army chaplain have done, with his little budget of nice traits and limitations? How had we ever armed and equipped him? When you are given an infant earth to fashion out of a whirling ball of flaming metals and gases, then good humour, some taste for adventure, distinction at cricket, a jolly way with the men, and an imperfect digestion of thirty-nine partly masticated articles may not carry you far. You may come off, by no fault of your own, like the curate in Shakespeare who was put up to play Alexander the Great: "A marvellous good neighbor, i' faith, and a very good bowler; but, for Alisander—alas, you see how 'tis—a little o'er-parted."

The men, once again, did not put it in that way. They did not miss anything that most of them could have described. They only felt a vacancy, and unspecified void, like the want of some unknown great thing in their generals' minds and in the characters of their rulers at home. The chaplain's tobacco was all to the good; so was the civil tongue that he kept in his head; so were all the good turns that he did. But, when it came to religion, were these things "all there was to it"? Had the churches really not "got hold of something," with all their enormous deposits of stone and mortar and clerical consequence? So, in his own way, the army chaplain, too, became a tributary brook feeding the general reservoir of disappointment and mistrust that was steadily filled by the surface drainage of all the higher ground of our British social landscape under the dirty weather of the war.

begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." If my hope is gone or at low tide, there must be something wrong with my faith. I have been depending upon belief in myself. I have not steadfastly exercised my faith in God. I have fretted and worried over things about which I can do nothing. I have had visions of the world in ruins with all I love underneath. I have not believed in God's kind of love and faith enough to live by them day after day. I have been like a reed shaken in the wind—when things were good, full of hope; when things were bad, hopeless.

Jesus Himself seems to speak in these words: "Never shift from this hope for it is not an illusion, and it is from God." Such thinking should clear the day of doubts and fears from dawn on.

WHAT KIND OF SOCIAL ORDER DO WE WISH?

tions needful for meeting this challenge?

Will Christian forces hearken to the voice of those who, like the ten spies to the land of Canaan, say, "We are as grasshoppers in the sight of the giants of the land"—giants of difficulty in the path of united effort to a fairer social order? Or will they be like the two forward-looking, faith-inspired spies who reported that with the Lord's help the promised land could be successfully occupied—the promised land of a social order where every man has a fair chance to fully develop his God-given potentialities?

With far-visioned leadership, united efforts, full use of resources, technical knowledge and skills, Christian spirit, and an abiding faith in the common man we can have any kind of social order we wish. What kind of social order do we want in Virginia? What kind will we have? Let the churches answer.

Note: Those interested in the questions considered above should have a copy of "County and Community Standards and Planning", (Va. Agr. Exp. Sta. Rural Sociology Report No. 26) which deals with these and many other timely questions. They should also have copies of Report No. 25, "A Church Cell as a Church Challenge," and No. 27, "A Progress Report on the Virginia Rural Medical Case Study and Related Questions". They are free for the asking from the Va. Agr. Exp. Sta., Blacksburg, Va.

THOUGHTS ON PERSONAL RELIGION

friendship and sympathy; continually giving out.

A simple test: come to church one Sunday by yourself and try to get all you can. Before the following Sunday go out among your friends, the congregation, and by your tact and graciousness bring some one with you. What joy, peace, exhiliaration during the second service. You have shared your reverence as it was given to you. This is as it should be. "Except thy brother be with thee, ye shall not see My face." Is not this the reason we do not see His face clearly?

Pray to receive the word that we may bring others until all the world may know Him. Personal religion issues, as it should, in personal contact for the Master.

Belgian Catholics and Protestants Resist Together

In a recent address in St. Paul's Cathedral, Professor Emile Cammaerts, Professor of Belgian Studies at the University of London, spoke of the resistance of the Catholic Church in Belgium. We are grateful for the opportunity of printing his address.

In October, 1942, Abbe de Necker wrote a letter, from his prison in Bruges, to his old father, from which I should like to quote a few lines: "... You need not be ashamed of your Emmanuel. I have lived to give back Belgium to Christ. Such is the sentence which condemns me 'for spying and rendering service to the enemy.' ... The Master gives me, through His grace, the privilege of knowing beforehand the day and time of my death, so that I may prepare myself during two months of prayer and penitence. What a fine retreat! 'What fine resolutions,' I thought, when I still hoped to recover my freedom. The good God contents Himself with my resolutions. It is safer so ... My only sorrow comes from the pain I am inflicting on those whom I am leaving behind. I ask you to forgive me this, as well as all the wickedness of my life. I ask forgiveness from all those whom I have offended, as I forgive absolutely all my enemies, whether weak or strong. I have prayed for them. May the good God also forgive me."

Such proclamations of faith have been made by members of the Church belonging to all oppressed nations, including Germany. Christians of all denominations can understand them and take their share in them.

The first paragraph, however, in which Abbe de Necker speaks of "giving back Belgium to Christ" and of the "dangerous work he had undertaken" requires some explanation. It shows two things: first, that good Belgian Catholics cannot separate patriotism from Christianity, and, secondly, that some of them do not hesitate to undertake any kind of work, including spying, in order to achieve the liberation of their country, not because this liberation will necessarily give her "back to Christ," but because they believe that through freedom alone will she have a chance of returning to Christ.

I am not here to remind you that the Roman Church has opposed Hitler's idolatry as early and as strongly as the non-Roman Catholic Churches. The Pope's encyclical, Mit brennender Sorge, is dated March 13th, 1937, and ever since the fight has gone on, and the number of martyrs increased. In Belgium alone, a score of priests have been shot, and hundreds of them have been sent to prison and German camps. Through the untiring efforts of Dr. Micklem, among others, Christians in England know by now that they should no longer make disparaging comparisons between the resistance opposed by the various Christian denominations to Hitler's New Order. One good at least has emerged from the present ordeal: The realization that if we, Christians, are not yet able to unite in accepting the same things in the same way, we are already united in rejecting the same things, because they are radically opposed to any Christian order.

What I should like to do is to explain the character of this rejection more particularly in my own country, where, as you know, practically all believers—roughly, 3½ out of 8 millions—are Roman Catholics. Before I do so, let me quote an extract from another letter. It is written by an older man, Abbe Peters, cure of the small village of Comblain-au-Pont, near Liege, shot on August 31st, 1943.

... "My dear Brethren, by the love of God and the Holy Virgin, by the love of the Catholic Church and our Country, by the love of Comblaiu-au-Pont and your cherished families, do not forget the teaching I have given you. Love God above all things, ... and love each other through the love of God. .... And for the last time I cry aloud, 'All for God and Blessed Virgin Mary,' 'Long Live the Catholic Church,' 'Long Live Belgium,' 'Long Live Comblain-au-Pont.'

"Your Rector, who loves you now and will continue to love you in Heaven,

"Jos. Peters."

This old cure walked to his death, wearing the decorations he had won during the last war, and singing the Te Deum. Abbe de Necker had died some months before in order "to give back Belgium to Christ." We might almost say that Abbe Peters died to give back Comblain-au-Pont to Christ. The first could not separate the love of country from the love of God, the second could not separate the love of his belfry from the love of God. This is very characteristic of the resistance of the Church in Belgium.

Is not this worship of town and country somewhat dangerous? Could it not lead to an idolatry similar to the one we are fighting? "God forbid," as St. Paul says. What these priests are dying for is not a stronger country or a larger village. They are quite content with the material things placed in their charge. They are dying for a more Christian country, a more Christian village. A country and a village whose free citizens would be given a chance of loving and glorifying God. That is why there can never be in their mind any opposition, any conflist, between patriotism and Christianity.—From The Spiritual Issues of the War.

What Kind of Social Order Do We Wish?

By W. E. GARNETT

AS THE WAR DRAWS to a close groups planning for postwar adjustments are becoming increasingly active. If their work is to be most effective they must face such questions as: What kind of social order do we really wish? Here in Virginia do we wish a highly stratified society such as we have had for the past 300 years or do we want a social order which will give the common man a fairer chance? In this Jefferson Bicentennial year this is an especially appropriate question. A returning Jefferson would also undoubtedly ask: "Do you want a social order dominated by a few select groups and a handful of political leaders, of a more democratic order where the interests of all groups are duly considered by leaders selected by a larger percentage of the electorate than the approximately one-fourth of the adult population now voting?" In the last presidential election 41 States made a better showing than Virginia in this regard.

Do we want a social order in Virginia where approximately 100,000 or between one-third and one-half of the rural white families have marginal standards from the standpoint of income, property holdings, educational levels, and living conditions—families which are rearing at least one-third more children than an equal number of families with higher standards?

Do we want a social order where in normal times the marginal standard families have an income of less than $750? In 1939, three Virginia farm operators in five had a gross farm income of less than $600, as compared to two in five in 1929. The approximately 50,000 farm wage laborer families averaged even less. Gross farm incomes include the value of home produced supplies, other than rent, as well as expenditures for farm operation, but do not include some earnings from non-farm work of three farm operators in eight. Farm incomes have been improved during the war period but expenses have also sharply increased.

Can we feel proud of a social order where approximately two rural white men in five have so little property, real estate and personal, that they are assessed less than $2.50 taxes and over half are assessed less than $5.00?

Do we want a social order where the capital, income, and property holdings, as well as the educational levels of our city folk are more than twice that of their rural cousins—and these conditions in face of the fact that rural areas must be looked to for a large percentage of the State's future population?

Do we want a social order where thousands of rural families get inadequate medical care, or, if they do get medical attention, the cost is out of all proportion to their income; and where the milk supply, as well as the consumption of other essential foods, of one-third of the rural children is 50 per cent or more below acceptable standards?

Do we wish a Virginia social order where approximately 100,000 farm families live in sub-standard houses, or houses needing major repairs, and where more than three-fourths of the homes lack such conveniences as running water, electric lights and refrigerators and more than half are still without radios—conveniences in which more than 30 states make a better showing than Virginia?

Do we want a social order where the fourth of our population who happen to have dark skins are handicapped by many unnecessarily disadvantaging conditions?

Do we wish a social order where approximately one farm white man in four, aged 25 and over, has less than a fifth grade education, and only about one in eight has finished high school or gone beyond that educational level? Can we have acceptable cultural standards or the best personality development with such an educational foundation?

Careful estimates indicate that with employment levels as of 1940 only around 55 per cent of the Virginia male youth reaching maturity between 1940 and 1950 can find employment outlets in the state. Furthermore only about 61 per cent of the white and 56 per cent of the Negro farm boys will be needed on farms unless the 1940 number of farm workers is increased. If we have too much piling up on farms because of inability to get work elsewhere, marginal standard conditions will be increased. Is this the social order we want? The training of farm youth not needed in farm work for other types of employment so that they will be on a fair competitive basis is an important angle of the educational situation which has not had enough attention.

Will our post-war planners do the ostrich act in the face of the conditions outlined above? And what of our legislators? If our boys can fight for a better world overseas, they have a right to the best social order possible at home. For the most part the conditions outlined cannot be dealt with through direct legislation. However, they can be dealt with indirectly, especially through education. How adequately education is supported and how educational efforts are directed will influence our social order for decades to come more than almost any other one thing.

Church Responsibilities

And what of the church and its responsibility for the social order that is, and the social order which might be? Was the Archbishop of Canterbury right when he said: "There is no hope of establishing a new Christian social order except through the labor and sacrifice of those in whom the spirit of Christ is active"?

Will Christian forces be content to allow conditions so inimical to the best personality development to continue to persist? Has the church at last come to the point where ardor for a social order that might be a social order as visioned by the prophets of old and the Master Himself, will sweep aside all obstacles to the fullest exertion of church influence and church power—even such obstacles as over concern with denominational machinery and denominational prestige? (This concern has led to thousands of weak, struggling, inefficient churches—to one rural church for 263 people instead of one to the at least 1000 people needed for church efficiency.)

Will our ministers and church leaders be supporters of, or panderers to, the status quo with its many conditions denying a fair chance to the common man, or will they see visions of the social order that might be and inspire their people to make such visions a reality? Will the newly organized Virginia Council of Churches rise to the challenge of its opportunities? And will it take the united support of all denomina-

FAITH

"Oh, something has killed all the sunbeams!" cried a sad little boy one day.
"I know, for I saw them hidden by a big, black cloud, away!"
"And I," said his little sister, "am sure this is not so,
For I've often watched God's sunbeams, and what I know, I know!"

"Oh, the summer has gone forever!" said a maid with doleful sigh.
"I know, for I saw the flowers all wither and fade and die!"
But her wise little brother answered with a laugh that was good to hear,
"Just wait till the spring sun shines, and then you shall know, my dear!"

So, let's watch for the golden sunbeams till they gild every cloud of gray.
Let's wait till the blessed springtime scatters winter's gloom away!

MEXICO'S JUMPING BEANS

How does a jumping bean get that way? Is it alive or is it a seed that would grow if it were planted? Where does it come from? Why does it jump?

These dancing beans are one of the peculiar products of the southern republic of Mexico, where they are known as brincadores. If one of them is cut open, it is found to be just a hollow shell containing a small white grub, which immediately sets to work closing the opening again with a wall of silk. Its history begins with a small insect that flies about laying its eggs in the blossoms of the yerba de fleche or arrow plant. As soon as it hatches, the tiny grub buries itself in the seed pod at the base of the flower. The normal pods grow in three sections, each containing a round, hard seed. When they are ripe the dried pods explode.

In a wormy pod—only a few of the pods on each bush are wormy—the grub moves from section to section and eats the growing seeds one after another. Then the creature, which by that time is full grown, weaves a silk lining to the section it then occupies, to keep it from exploding and from leaving it without shelter. It is these wormy sections that become the jumping beans.

Its career as a jumper begins when the two empty sections explode and throw the third one to the ground with the worm inside. There it begins hopping and rolling about, and unless some bird or hunter gets it first it keeps this up until it eventually traps itself in some crevice or under a stone. This seems to be what nature intended, because in such a spot it is better protected from hungry birds. Eleven months after dropping to the ground, the worm has completed its transformation and emerges as an adult insect.

The capture and sale of these lively beans has become quite a business in parts of Mexico. They are gathered by children and youths, who trade them in at the nearest store. The storekeeper passes them on to the exporter, who ships the jumpers to the novelty dealers in the United States.

It is the worm inside, of course, that makes the bean jump. The creature takes a firm grip on the inner wall with its hind legs, raises its body a trifle and then jerks it down again with a hard slap that makes the bean jump or roll according to the position it happens to be in at that moment. This was discovered by watching the creature through a transparent window made in the wall of its home. If these beans are kept in a temperate spot where they can get a supply of air, they will continue their antics for months.—Boy Life.

A LITTLE KINDNESS

I have learned that very often the animal considered vicious or dangerous is merely frightened, and that a little kindness on the part of humans is the needed cure. I wish that everyone might remember this observation.

A good illustration of it came to my attention recently. Arriving at the office one morning I found the janitor trying to remove a hapless cat that had somehow strayed into the building. This he was doing by reaching through an adjoining window with a broom and yelling and hitting at the fear-crazed animal which had escaped to the ledge outside an open window. The cat was meowing piteously as it contemplated the choice of a two-story leap to the pavement below, or escape through the hall past the seemingly unfriendly people watching it.

Telling the janitor to stop, I approached the cat slowly, speaking in a low, calm voice. The janitor warned, "I wouldn't get too close to him, Miss. He's mean! He'll sure jump on you!"

The cat did look wild, but as I talked to it I could see the fear subsiding in its eyes. Reaching out, and still speaking gently, I touched its head. Then I began to stroke, and the stiffened body relaxed; in a moment the "mean" cat began to rub against my hand and purr! A few minutes later it was easily carried from the building to safety.—Jessie Franklin in Our Dumb Animals.

BABY, OPEN YOUR EYES

Baby dear, baby dear, open your eyes,
The sun is awake right up in the skies;
The little birds up in their apple-tree nest,
I'm sure, long ere this, have been washed and drest;
The daisies a long, long time since have begun
To open their white-and-gold flowers to the sun;
The bees are all singing, and so are the flies—
Baby dear, baby dear, open your eyes.

Dolly dear, dear dolly, is wanting you, dear;
See, how she's waiting for you, baby, here;
Never a dolly was sweeter than this;
Here she is waiting my baby to kiss.
All the nice breakfast by mother is laid,
Baby's sweet bread and milk soon will be made;
Up, dear, to crow and to laugh and look wise,
Dear baby, dear baby, open your eyes.

FROM EXPERIENCE

An English judge in India heard that a certain native, who formerly was a wealthy owner of an indigo farm, had confessed Christ, and was cast out of his home and deprived of all his possessions. "Let him come to me," said the judge, "and if he is a true Christian, he will not mind working as the attendant-bearer of my little son." So Nordubur came. One evening at household prayers, the judge read from the English New Testament, "Every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, . . . or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold." He thought a moment, and said, "Now, none of us has done this except one—Nordubur." He looked straight at the bearer and asked: "Will you tell us? Does this verse speak the truth?" Quietly Nordubur spoke. "I have not much possessions now," he confessed, "but I do have a new peace and joy. Christ says He gives a hundredfold. I know He gives a thousandfold."—Selected.

Archbishop Richmond's Guest

The Primate Addresses City's Clergy

Richmond, Va.—On the eve of invasion of the Continent, the British people are "very determined and quite confident," the Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Cyril Forster Garbett, Archbishop of York and Primate of England, who visited in Richmond April 11, declared.

The tall, white-haired churchman, who is travelling in the United States "on a holiday," spent the day visiting historic shrines in Richmond, and being the guest of honor at receptions. The following day he visited Williamsburg.

This is his first trip to the United States, and the British Archbishop was keenly interested in viewing St. Paul's Church, St. John's Church and the Virginia Capitol.

While directing most of his remarks at the many "interesting historic sights of Richmond," the Archbishop nevertheless noted that the "morale in all of England is excellent." He attested that the people know that the job of invasion will be tremendous, but that the people are ready for it.

The Archbishop was met at the station by the Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States. He was accompanied by the Rev. G. A. Ellison, his chaplain. After a luncheon at the home of the Hon. Alexander W. Weddell with Bishop Tucker and the Rt. Rev. Frederick D. Goodwin, bishop co-adjutor Diocese of Virginia, the archbishop was escorted on the sightseeing tour by Mr. Weddell, former ambassador to Spain and the Argentine. However, the Archbishop found time in his busy afternoon to address informally the Episcopal clergy at Mayo Memorial House.

At St. John's Church, the archbishop took special note of the flowering dogwood. "This is very beautiful," he commented as he halted to admire the branches.

Inside St. John's he was pointed out the spot where Patrick Henry made his famous "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death" speech. The archbishop readily consented to pose for a picture in the pew, adding that British-American relationships are "well-cemented" now.

Asked about his visit to Russia last summer, the Archbishop said that a "tremendous religious revival" is taking place in the Soviet. On two visits to the Moscow Cathedral, he said he found it filled with enormous congregations.

In England, the churches are not so well attended, he said, explaining that many churches have been bombed, many of the clergy have gone to war, and because Sunday is the time when the Home Guard has to drill.

CHURCH SHIPS PRINTING PAPER TO AFRICA

New York, N. Y.—At the earnest request of the National Assembly of the Church of England, the National Council two years ago, undertook to supply printing paper to Mission presses in Africa, as a part of the Episcopal Church's Aid to British Missions. The task is just now nearing completion, an achievement marked by the overcoming of seemingly insurmountable obstacles. Eight shipments have been made, a total of 41 tons of various sizes and weights of printing paper stock. The shipments were packed in 374 cases, size and method of wrapping determined by the fact that some of the paper had to be handled by native carriers.

Difficulties followed the project at every step. There was difficulty in buying the paper in the first place, and other difficulties were encountered in preparing it for shipment, in securing export permits from the various Governments, and, finally, in securing cargo space in ships to Africa.

A considerable part of the paper is for the use of Church Missionary Society presses; also presses of the Church of Scotland, and of the Universities' Mission to Central Africa. Destinations included Nigeria and Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Nyasaland, Likomo Island, Zanzibar, Portuguese East Africa and other little-known places where the Church of England is at work.

Dr. James Thayer Addison, vice-president of the National Council, has been informed through the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, that "News has been received that a shipment of paper from the Protestant Episcopal Church in North America has been received in Lagos, Nigeria. An arrangement has been made by which two tons are to be forwarded to the Bunumbu Press, Sierra Leone, to enable them to continue the production of literature for literacy campaigns. Warm appreciation was expressed for this very valuable service."

DEACONESS ORMEROD TO DIRECT CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Fresno, Calif.—A coordinated program in Christian Education is one of the first objectives set by Bishop Sumner F. Walters for the District of San Joaquin. Bishop Walters seeks to "rejuvenate existing Church schools into greater strength both in numbers and achievement", and to use Church schools and other educational processes as a "means of introducing the Episcopal Church in new areas."

Deaconess Isabel Ormerod will direct the new educational program. Her experience ranges from rural work in Northern Michigan to work among the isolated in Nevada. Just recently she has been organizing Christian education programs in the crowded defense area of Vallejo, California. The Deaconess will work with clergy in whatever areas are chosen for Christian education advancement.

DR. STANLEY JONES TO SPEAK TO WOMEN

Richmond, Va.—A meditation, especially for women, will be conducted by Dr. E. Stanley Jones Wednesday, April 26, from 11-12, at the First Baptist Church.

Bishop Hart To Broadcast

Topic Is "The Church and the Returning Soldier"

New York, N. Y.—The place of the Church in the tremendous task of reemployment for returned servicemen after the war will be discussed by the Rt. Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., bishop of Pennsylvania in a radio address in the Episcopal Church of the Air, May 14.

Bishop Hart's address will be broadcast over a chain of Columbia Broadcasting System stations, originating at WCAU, Philadelphia, 10 to 10:30 A. M. eastern war time. His topic is "The Church and the Returning Soldier," and Bishop Hart was chosen as the speaker because of his special qualifications to discuss this particular subject. He was a Chaplain in World War I, and a Chaplain on active duty in World War II, at the time of his election to the Episcopate. He is a member of the Army and Navy Commission, and personally heads the War Commission of the diocese of Pennsylvania, which has a most comprehensive program of work for uniformed men and women, for ministry to war workers, and for re-employment and rehabilitation after the war.

SOUTH FLORIDA

Two New Missions Organized

Orlando, Fla.—Two missions recently organized in South Florida are St. Matthew's, Clermont, under charge of Rev. Robt. C. Kilbourne, of Eustis, and St. Martin's at Clewiston under Rev. Sidney D. Mason. In the latter mission, plans are made to secure a lot, and funds are being raised to erect a church when building materials are available.

Visiting Bishops Aid in Administering Confirmation

Three visiting bishops who have spent the past winter in South Florida have aided greatly by administering Confirmation in several parishes. The Rt. Rev. Arthur C. Thomson, D. D., of Southern Virginia, officiated for classes in St. Stephen's and in Christ Church, Coconut Grove; in Holy Comforter Mission, Miami; in All Souls', Miami Beach; in St. Peter's and in St. Bartholomew's, St. Petersburg, and in All Saints', Fort Lauderdale. He also expects to confirm classes on Whitsunday in St. Andrew's and in the House of Prayer, Tampa. The Rt. Rev. Robt. E. Gribbin, D. D., who has been serving Christ Memorial Chapel, Hobe Sound, confirmed classes in St. Andrew's and in St. Simon the Cyrenian, Fort Pierce. The Rt. Rev. Wm. Hall Moreland, of Sacramento, who has made his home in Delray Beach for five years, confirmed classes in St. Patrick's, West Palm Beach and in St. John's, Hollywood. Bishop Moreland celebrated his 83rd birthday this Easter, his many friends in South Florida extending their felicitations.

Bishop Wing was Celebrant in the early service in St. Luke's Cathedral, Orlando, on Easter Day, dedicated several memorials and confirmed a class in the second service, and preached in the midday service. Memorials dedicated here included two large piers,—one to Mr. and Mrs. Jas. S. Winn and one to Miss Clara Burton, former parishioners,—representing the gift of $1,000 each for the Cathedral building debt, and twenty-eight memorial pews.

Twenty-two acolytes of St. Stephen's Church, Coconut Grove, So. Fla., were inducted recently into the Order of St. Vincent. Rev. Rex Wilkes is the rector of this parish, and Rev. F. R. Alverez is his assistant. The Y. P. S. L. here received a silver loving cup for winning in a membership contest with other Leagues, these young people making an increase of 250 per cent.

EASTER AT BLUE RIDGE SCHOOL

Bris, Va.—At Blue Ridge School our Easter offering is a matter of careful planning and diligent work. Just before Ash Wednesday we take stock of ourselves, so to speak, set a goal, and assign the proper apportionment to each class. The amount varies according to the number of pupils in a group and the age of the members. Our students have only limited means upon which to draw, but, as a whole, they are willing and eager, and undertake an interesting variety of jobs in order to provide their share of the designated sum. An older girl may rake leaves, wash windows, or help in the library, in her spare time. A small boy may earn pennies by "being good", which is surely "casting bread upon the waters".

We always go over the top and this year, with a goal of one hundred dollars, we soared far above it with a children's offering of $136.96.

There was an early celebration of the Holy Communion. At the 10:30 service, representatives from the different classes presented their offerings, the younger children bringing flowers for the large wooden cross at the steps of the chancel and making it blossom suddenly into a thing of rare beauty.

The choir had worked long and diligently over the Easter music, and it was very beautiful. The offertory was "As It Began to Dawn", by Martin.

There was also an Easter service and special offering at each of the three missions connected with the school.

EASTER ATTENDANCE RECORDS BROKEN

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Bishop Austin Pardue expressed great satisfaction at the attendance of Pittsburgh Church people at Holy Week and Easter services at Trinity Cathedral, which exceeded all previous records.

Bishop Pardue preached Monday to Maundy Thursday inclusive at noon-day services, attended by 3,700 people. Dean N. R. High Moor conducted the Three Hours Devotions on Good Friday with attendance of 6,200. Easter morning more than 1,000 people made their Communions, with a total attendance at all services of 2,200. The Bishop regards the Cathedral attendance as a good barometer for the entire diocese, and many rectors are reporting a great increase in Holy Week attendance.

Indian Professor's Truism

"You Can Live On Less, If You Have More to Live For"

New York, N. Y.—"You can live on less, if you have more to live for," the Foreign Missions Conference quotes from an Indian professor who visited China recently, and in illustration of the saying quotes our Bishop Robin Chen, who reported from Anhwei: "When the St. James Church compound was occupied by the Japanese, the workers moved into the old city and there, with leaks over their heads, and no floor under their feet, but plenty of fleas, flies, bedbugs, mosquitoes around them, the priest, the Biblewoman and their families had a glorious time in their new abode. God has never failed to bless their work.

"St. Lioba's Church services are being carried on in a Roman Catholic Church compound. The Nanking Church, overwhelmed but not overcome, has a program of family evangelism which is making good progress. Kweilin in Anhwei had a successful daily vacation Bible school. A hundred children were enrolled and the daily attendance was over 80. The lack of materials was a difficulty, but the first grade children did their handwork with old soap wrappers, cardboard boxes, a few pairs of scissors and some crayons. The older children made use of the bamboo which grew in abundance in that region. After the bamboo was sawed and split, they used pieces of broken glass to scrape it smooth and were able to make 800 swab sticks and 30 bamboo cups for dispensing medicine in the clinic. The girls made fans out of wheat straw, also shoes, handkerchiefs and other things. Each child made a pair of chopsticks which he took home. Sick children were taken to the clinic and treated free of charge. By the end of the term they had all memorized and could sing a dozen religious songs."

MORE NEW LANGUAGES

New York, N. Y.—The number of languages in which some part of the Scriptures has now been published is 1,062, according to an announcement issued by the American Bible Society. There is a record of four new languages making their appearance in 1943, three of them Gospels which will be used in Africa-Walamo spoken in Ethiopia, Yipounou and Yisangou for tribes in Gaboon, French Equatorial Africa. Down in Sydney, Australia, two books of the Bible were published in Gunwinggu, a language spoken by natives of northern Australia.

Formerly a new language appeared every five weeks, on an average, due to the untiring efforts of missionaries who were constantly producing the Scriptures in languages for use on their mission fields, and never before published. Undoubtedly this translation work is still going on, but with so many of the missions cut off by the war no word gets through of these activities.

In the meantime, the American Bible Society is examining translation manuscripts for publication which reach the Bible House in New York from Africa, South America, Haiti and Mexico.

The number of languages in which the whole Bible has been published is 184; the New Testament in 233 additional languages; at least one complete book of the Bible in 557 additional languages and parts of the Bible, less than an entire book, in 88 additional languages.

BISHOP CASADY—"A CHRISTIAN GENTLEMAN"

Norman, Okla.—High commendation of Bishop Thomas Casady of Oklahoma appears in the current issue of the Oklahoma Journal of Religion, a publication of Oklahoma University. "When Bishop Casady took charge here," says the article, "Oklahoma was a missionary district. In ten years he increased the membership and finances to the point where the district was made into a diocese. He is the first and only Bishop of the diocese. He is an ecclesiastical statesman, a state builder, and first of all a Christian gentleman. His policy is to bring good young men into the leadership of his churches, set them free, and encourage them to build their best into life of the communities and churches in which they work. In addition to building his own Church, Bishop Casady has had a leading part in the Oklahoma Council of Churches. He has backed this organization with funds, influence, and hard work. Oklahoma needs many more like him."

CHURCH SCHOOL LENTEN PROGRAM REPORTED

New York, N. Y.—First report on Church School Lenten program to reach the National Council is from St. Mary's, Warwick, R. I., the Rev. Robert L. Seekins, Jr., rector.

The school took up the suggested Lenten study theme, "Fellow Americans", and various projects and activities were developed in all grades.

The fifth grade girls had an exhibit, following the Presentation Service on the afternoon of Easter Day. Parents and friends were invited. The girls had studied the Fellow Americans stories, and they made a map, called "Where Fellow Americans Live and Worship". They made a color key for the map, with corresponding colors on the map, for different racial and national groups. Then the girls each wrote an original story, and these were arranged around the map as a border.

Second grade boys built a cardboard replica of the Church building with stained glass windows of colored cellophane. Third grade boys made a Calvary scene, with the Crosses. Several classes made scrapbooks on the Lenten theme. Some of these books included scenes and explanations cut from the Lenton number of FORTH.

The kindergarten teacher made a series of drawings based on "God's Children", and the children colored these. The pictures were a part of the School exhibit.

On Easter afternoon there was a processional, passing a hollow Cross, into which the children deposited their Offering boxes. As the box was deposited, each child received a Jonquil. The service was well attended both by parents and children.

Mr. Seekins tells that St. Mary's has about 400 baptized persons, and of these about 225 are Communicants. But the Church school has 106 children, nine teachers and two officers . . . 25% of the total membership represented in and active in the Church school. "For the size of the parish I am sure we have a wonderful Church school," says the rector.

DIOCESE OF GEORGIA

Place of Diocesan Convention Changed

Savannah, Ga.—The Diocesan Convention scheduled to be held April 19, at St. Paul's Church, Albany, Georgia, has been transferred to St. John's Church, Savannah. The reason being that St. Paul's, Albany, was without a rector for several months, and the new rector, the Rev. William R. F. Thomas, formerly rector of St. John's Church, Decatur, Ill., just arrived on April 12.

---

Savannah, Ga.—Bishop Barnwell returned on March 19 from Birmingham, Ala., where he preached at the noonday services at the Church of the Advent, his old parish. Bishop Barnwell's theme was "Christianity in the Changing World".

The Bishop was the noonday speaker at Christ Church, Savannah, during Holy Week, except on Good Friday, when he preached the Three Hours' service at St. Paul's Church.

Godfather Committee

Savannah, Ga.—Members of the Men's Club of Christ Church have been enlisted in a group known as the Godfather Committee to keep in touch with members of the parish now in the armed forces. Under the plan each member of the Committee has the name and address of a member of Christ Church who is in the service. It is the duty of the Godfather to attend one celebration of the Holy Communion each month for the man in the service, to pray for him, to write him a letter each month and to promise to assist him in readjusting himself to civilian life when he returns and in obtaining employment.

There is a similar plan at St. Paul's Church, Savannah, whereby men and women known as Spiritual Companions have each been assigned a man in the service. The Spiritual Companion will represent him at the Altar every Tuesday morning, will pray for him by name and will write him of parish life and activity.

New Director of Christian Education

Augusta, Ga.—Miss Emily Prentiss Wilson is the new director of Christian Education at the Church of the Good Shepherd. Before coming to Augusta last fall, Miss Wilson was educational advisor for the Church of St. Michael and St. George, St. Louis. Her duties at Good Shepherd will include church school and young people's supervision, parish and publicity work. She is the daughter of the Rev. J. D. C. Wilson, formerly of LaGrange, Ga., and now priest-in-charge of the Gulf Coast Missions in the Diocese of Alabama.

Brunswick, Ga.—Once a month St. Mark's Church is turned over to some seventy Greek-American families in this city for a Sunday afternoon service conducted by the Rev. John Hondros, rector of St. Paul's Greek Orthodox Church, Savannah.

UNIQUE BIBLE SUNDAY CELEBRATION

New York, N. Y.—Probably the most unique celebration of Bible Sunday held in connection with the observance was on February 6 in an Evacuation Hospital just back of the battle front. The American Bible Society, which promotes the annual observance of Bible Sunday, has just received word from Chaplain James E. Kirkpatrick of the U. S. Army, that he spoke to the hospital personnel and patients on "The Word, the Need of the World." He followed his address by a presentation of a blood-stained copy of the New Testament which had miraculously saved a soldier's life when a steel fragment passed through the book and lodged in the back cover.

When Chaplain Kirkpatrick stressed the great privilege of the chaplains in being able to present copies of the Testament, free, through the aid of the American Bible Society, he received an offering from his audience of more than $150 "to provide Testaments for other members of our armed forces." This gift has been forwarded to the Society.

The Bible Society has supplied over 3,000,000 copies of Bibles, Testaments and Portions to chaplains for free distribution at their discretion. The books are bound in brown for the Army, blue for the Navy, and can be supplied with the proper insignia, imprinted on the front cover, to the ten branches of the Service.

NAT. COUNCIL SUPPLEMENTS WORK IN WAR-BOOM TOWN

Stockton, Calif.—Recognizing the value of the work done by St. John's Parish, Stockton, under the leadership of its rector, the Rev. George Foster Pratt, in ministry to the Industrial workers of a war-boom town, the National Council has arranged to supplement the work by partially supporting an additional worker.

Mr. Waddell F. Robey, for some years past executive secretary of the Missionary District of Arizona, has agreed to come to Stockton to do pastoral and educational work in the crowded areas of the city. Mr. Robey will at the same time continue his studies for Holy Orders.

CHAPEL SERVING THREE CONGREGATIONS

Elkton, Md.—There is a Chapel in the Cecil County Episcopal Co-operative Parish, of which the Rev. Dr. J. Warren Albinson is rector, that is sometimes referred to as "The Roman Episcopal Church." The reason for this is that a Roman Catholic congregation worships in the building each Sunday morning before the regular services of the Episcopal congregation which owns the chapel. The congregation of Romanists had purchased lots on which they intended to erect their own chapel but war was declared and they were unable to obtain building material. They were holding their services in the local fire house but this was unsatisfactory as the group desired a more churchly atmosphere for their worship. Their priest called upon Mr. Albinson, told him of their difficulties and wondered if it might not be possible to use the chapel at an hour when it might not be required by its congregation. The rector took the matter up with his vestry and the members of the vestry were unanimous in their wish to share the chapel with the Romanists until building restrictions were removed and the latter could erect their own church building. In another community in the parish a Presbyterian congregation is without a minister. One morning an elder of the congregation called the rector, explained the situation, and asked if the Presbyterians could come to worship with the Episcopalians at the regular service in the chapel there until they could obtain the services of a minister of their own. They were cordially welcomed.

AFRICAN BLOOD SAVES MILLIONS

Nashville, Tenn.—A blood specimen taken 17 years ago from a black African native, Asibi, has protected millions of people all over the world from yellow fever, the Rockefeller Foundation reports.

The specimen was taken in 1927 at the Foundation's yellow fever laboratory at Lagos, West Africa, and was injected into a Rhesus monkey from India. Asibi recovered from the yellow fever but the monkey died.

Raymond B. Fosdick, president of the foundation, said all the yellow fever vacine manufactured during the past 17 years "derives from the original strain of virus obtained from this humble native.

"Carried down to the present day from one laboratory animal to another, through repeated tissue cultures and by enormous multiplication, it has afforded immunity to millions of people in many countries."

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION OF EMMANUEL CHURCH

Chatham, Va.—On May 25, 1844, the newly erected Episcopal Church at Pittsylvania Court House was dedicated by Bishop William Meade of Virginia and given the name of Emmanuel. This church had been established through the efforts of the Rev. Dr. George W. Dame, of Danville, who became the rector of both the church in Chatham and the one in Danville, the latter being also dedicated by Bishop Meade at this visitation, on June 2, 1844, and given the name of Epiphany.

Some years later, in 1858, the old Colonial Parish of Camden was divided, the northern half becoming Banister Parish, in which Emmanuel Church was now situated. The Rev. Dr. George W. Wilmer, a brother of Bishop Richard H. Wilmer, of Alabama, in 1859 became the first rector of the new parish, residing in Chatham.

The Centennial celebration will be held on May 21, 1944, with the Rt. Rev. William A. Brown, bishop of Southern Virginia, delivering the centennial sermon. The present rector is the Rev. Dr. J. Hubard Lloyd, who was formerly a missionary to Japan. Three former rectors are also expected to be present and assist in the ceremonies; the Rev.

Virginia Dairy

"The Home of Better Milk"

The Rev. Peyton Randolph Williams, rector of Christ Church in Georgetown, D. C., has received a call to Christ Church, Nashville, Tenn.

Christ Church has a congregation of between 1,500 and 1,700 communicants. The rectorship at the Nashville Church was left vacant when its minister, the Rev. T. N. Carruthers, D. D., was made Bishop of South Carolina.

Mr. Williams, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Williams, of Richmond, was called to the Georgetown Church more than two years ago. Prior to that time he had two churches in Fairfax and Arlington Counties, and was curate for a time at a Waterbury, Conn., church. A graduate of Woodberry Forest, the University of Virginia, and the Episcopal Eeminary at Alexandria, Mr. Williams is 35 years of age. He married Miss Elbert Moncure Goodwin, daughter of the Rt. Rev. F. D. Goodwin, D. D., bishop coadjutor of Virginia in 1942.

DEATHS

John T. Manson

John T. Manson, president of the American Bible Society, died at his home in New Haven, Connecticut, on February 21, 1944. A member of the Board for twenty-eight years, he brought to the Bible Society an invaluable leadership during the ten years of his presidency. To a large degree, the creative character of his period of the Society's life was due to him, to his suggestions and judgments, but more to his convictions. Constant was his concern that the Society go forward; always he was stirring up the staff to make sure that the Society was not in a rut, was not letting mere tradition direct its policy and method.

Mr. Manson gave particular attention to the Society's financial condition, and some of its most successful experiments in program and method owed much to his faith. None ought ever to forget his casual but classic remark at the time of the Society's 125th anniversary at the New York City Hall: "The Society is 125 years old; but that's just the beginning of our work."

The serenity of his faith and the earnestness of his spirit sprang from deep devotion to the Scriptures, and supremely to their Lord in Whom he put his trust.

Anna Reynolds Eckel

Anna Reynolds Eckel, widow of the Rev. Edward Henry Eckel, D. D., died after a short illness at her home in Warrensburg, Missouri, on Easter Monday.

Mrs. Eckel was born in Wilmington, Del., November 1, 1868, the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. William A. Reynolds. She graduated from Delaware College (now the University of Delaware) as valedictorian of the class of 1886, in which class her future husband was salutatorian. They were married June 27, 1889, shortly after Dr. Eckel's graduation from the General Theological Seminary and ordination to the diaconate.

A woman of gracious personality, broad human sympathy, and wide general culture, Mrs. Eckel was a worthy helpmeet to her husband in his successive parishes at Newport, Del., West Pittston, Pa., Williamsport, Pa., St. Joseph, Mo., Fort Worth, Texas, and Warrensburg, Mo. After Dr. Eckel's retirement in 1934, they continued to make their home in Warrensburg. Dr. Eckel's death occurred October 17, 1942.

Mrs. Eckel, who had traveled widely in this country and abroad with her husband, was particularly interested in the promotion of the United Thank Offering during her residence in Fort Worth and Warrensburg. She is survived by her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Eckel, of Warrensburg, who is custodian of the United Thank Offering in the Diocese of West Missouri, and by a son, the Rev. Edward Henry Eckel, Jr., rector of Trinity Church, Tulsa, Okla. A younger son, Albert Reynolds Eckel, died in 1913.

Following a requiem Eucharist, the Burial Office was said by the Rev. Fordyce E. Eastburn in Christ Church, Warrensburg, on April 12th, with the committal in Sunset Hill Cemetery, Warrensburg, beside the grave of her husband.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

Grow In Grace, and In the Knowledge of Our Lord and Saviour
(2 Pet. 3:18)

Grow in all the beauty
Of the Master's grace,
Unto heavenly fruitage
In our humble place.
—B. F. Leggett.

There is no peace for the individual, the family, or the nation on the basis of selfishness. We have to live with and for one another if we would have peace. Selfishness leads to distrust of ourselves and others. And distrust leads to antagonisms and war. Jesus Christ in His life and teaching gives us the light we need to walk the path away from selfishness to God. He says to us today as He did to His disciples of old, "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for My sake shall find it."

E. F. K.

Is Heaven Rest?

Is not Heaven rest, says some weary one. Yes; the rest of joyous, unimpeded service—the rest of those who serve Him day and night—the rest of those who run and, are not weary, who walk, and are not faint. The soul which has been crowded out of her proper place by ruthless circumstance or angry competition will breathe freely in that ampler air. There will be no jostling on the streets of the City of God. In company with the great multitude which has tasted the sorrow of defeat, we shall walk about the fields of light. What here we have yearned for there we shall enjoy. What here we have dreamed, there we shall dare and do, in endless unconstrained service, advancing from knowledge to knowledge, and from glory to glory."

J. E. McFADYEN.

"O think, to step on shore, and that shore—Heaven;
To take hold of a hand, and that—God's hand.
To breathe a new air, and find it—celestial air.
To feel invigorated, and know it—Immortality.
O think! to pass from the storm and tempest—to one unbroken calm.
To wake up, and find it—Glory!"

G. I. FORUMS

Fighter Group, H. Q.,
American R. C., England.

Dearest Mum:

We are going to have an interesting speaker at our G. I. Forum tonight. . . Mr. Ira Wolfert, author of "Battle of the Solomons." He's a nifty guy with a grand sense of humor. Last Sunday week we had Helen Kirkpatrick, London correspondent for the Chicago Daily News. Went to Smith with Sally Berkeley Gordon, and is most attractive and interesting. She talked on the French situation. She reported the Spanish war; was in Paris till 1940, then here for the Battle of Britain, Africa and then Italy, where she went forward with the Fifth Army. Last Sunday night we had a Quiz Contest (my first attempt at that); it was quite successful. We gave a dozen eggs as first prize.

LIVING WELL

American Red Cross,
Italy.

Dearest ———:

I believe we are living better than you. Here through the hospital, the R. C. can get provisions for making fudge and nuts are one of the few native foods not rationed, so of late chocolate nut fudge has been abundant. The girls have made it for practically all the wards. Also in the Recreation Hall we have hot chocolate for the boys and often the dietitian sends over cakes and pies she has left over. We have ice cream twice a week and very good meat interspersed with spam, which I like, and C rations, which also aren't bad cooked. Of course, I can sympathize with the boys, eating them cold from the can at the front. But here everything is beautifully served and lately we have been having salads. Cauliflower seems to be another native food which has become plentiful; we had it chopped up with pickles and served raw the other day. Army bread is delicious; it is made at central bakeries for whole areas. The P X lately has had salted peanuts and Hershey bars, which are a big treat, and also bottled coca cola. We are making paper flowers to stick in each piece of cake, which is the Easter dessert. It is astonishing and hilarious to see these husky men, back from the roughest life you ever imagined, sitting down making flowers out of crepe paper.

SO MANY ARE BRAVE

I went to a hymn service this evening at six and, as usual, there was a prayer for mother. It is a very nice service. The chaplain is an earnest sincere Lutheran.

Oh, mother dear, there are so many brave people in this world, and so many shocked through to their very souls. And when they tell you all of their buddies have been killed and you know they are just being mended up to go right back to the front again, I just haven't learned what to say. One of the girls I know who is going up said she wanted to go to a real church service once again and so we plan to go to a church of England service Sunday.

A TRULY CHRISTIAN SERVICE

Italy.

Precious Mother: The service last night was, I suppose, about the most Christian I've ever attended. The Chaplain said he wanted to have a Communion service on Thursday evenings in Lent and since there is no German speaking minister around, that seemed a service which might best be understood by any of the prisoners wanting to attend a service. So one of the doctors, three nurses, two of the detachment boys and two of our patients knelt together in the little Chapel and received the Holy Communion, praying for our enemies and that we might soon all be working together to further Christ's kingdom on the earth. It was particularly fine, too, when there are some who have to struggle with themselves to forget to think in terms of the enemy.—Hospital Visitor.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

GRANT, O LORD, we beseech Thee, that this day may be to us one of healthful work and progress, whether outwardly joyous or sad, may it be fruitful in good endeavor. Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely and of good report, grant that with one accord we may think on these things to do them."

When we pray such a prayer, we do not mean to ignore the existence of ill health, frustration, dishonesty, impurity, untruth and unloveliness. But rather to seek their defeat and ours through concentration upon their opposites. Since that is most real to which we give our best attention, it is our Christian responsibility to spend our time on the positive aspects of life rather than the negative. A "do this" philosophy instead of a "do not" one.

Many times we grow aware, all of a sudden, of the sharp differences between our intent and our conduct. When we are pushed for an answer we find most often we have not fed our intent. A young college boy once declared he was worried over what seemed to be his loss of faith. Upon inquiry it was discovered he had spent all of his time on science and other required subjects, neglecting entirely his spiritual life. He had not read the Bible or any devotional books or any biographies of great Christian saints. In other words, he had not fed his faith. We cannot hope to sustain our faith or belief or fervid zeal in our religion unless we keep it fresh, unless we keep in contact.

That is most real to us to which we give our best attention. No engineer or doctor or clergyman or business man would think of neglecting his own field, that is, if he wanted to keep up with its progress and understand the many new ramifications of its development. Yet the same man expects to keep up his spiritual growth with no similar effort on his part and is puzzled when his expertness and ability in the professional field does not carry over automatically into his religious life. Whenever a problem arises, in the field of medicine, for example, a doctor does not simply sit and wish for a method or an answer. He searches diligently through books and journals, and, if he cannot find it, he begins to experiment on his own, and he never really gives up, even though the answer is long in coming, or even if he does not fulfill the quest, he passes on what he has done to another.

IF WE WOULD ONLY follow the same procedure in our religious life! Most of us are not feeding our devotional life. That is why it is often barren of fruitfulness. Our spiritual appetites are whetted and often fed by just reading the life of some great Christian like John Wesley or Dr. Grenfell or Martin Niemoeller or Frank C. Laubach. These men had ample food and to spare for nourishing the inner man. They were secure in their certainty of God's care for this life and the life to come. They worked hard at prayer and stayed long with the Scriptures and listened to the words of others who had traveled the road ahead of them.

When our devotional life becomes dull and perfunctory, when prayer becomes routine and God seems silent, when our thinking becomes sterile and without enthusiasm, turn to the story of Brother Lawrence, or Thomas A. Kempis, or St. Augustine, or Starr Daily, or St. Paul. See and feel the flame God kindled in their hearts. Give attention to their experiences and what led to them, with as much time and thought as you would spend on the life of some great historical figure like Robert E. Lee or Abraham Lincoln, or as much earnest and uninterrupted concentration as you would spend solving a knotty problem of science or social planning.

Are We Ready for Invasion?

By MARGARET PRESCOTT MONTAGUE

THE WHOLE WORLD is tense with waiting in this spring of 1944; the immense armed forces in England wait in drawn expectancy, in Europe our enemies wait, we hope, in terror, while the subjugated nations wait in an agony of hope. There the fighting men long for the day to dawn when they, too, will have a chance to rush into battle against their oppressors, while mothers there look into their children's starved faces and pray for the hour when food will come—may it not come too late!

So all the world stands expectant for the moment of invasion. Over and over again in the religious services this year I heard this Easter called "The Easter Before Invasion."

Easter stands for the Resurrection and the Life, and a new world, but Calvary must come first. Are we, at home, ready then for the invasion, for this great and terrible moment?

The armed forces have trained to the last notch of efficiency, and are ready. Some of these men wait impatiently for action! Some in cynical fatalism, but some again realize the great opportunity before them of playing their part in this hour of possible liberation. Only this morning I heard over the radio the comment of one such man, a boy from the Middle West waiting now in England. I cannot recall his exact words, but in effect he said, "We don't care what happens to us, so long as we get a chance to do something, so that twenty years from now all this terrible mess won't come upon our home lands again."

So, he did not care what happened to him as long as he might help to insure the future safety of his country! Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friend.

Are you and I here at home worthy of this complete devotion voiced by the man from the Middle West? Are we ready also to do our utmost when the invasion comes?

The whole material world is waiting and expectant. We may believe also that the spiritual and unclean world is waiting as well. We hear it said constantly that this is the greatest period in human history! It may also be an hour of vast importance not alone in Time, but in Eternity as well, where the secret annals of the age-old struggle between light and darkness, good and evil, and God's working through humanity, are recorded.

IT IS HERE in this unseen realm that we at home will be given an opportunity to play a vital part, but when the invasion starts, we shall be called upon to give the best we have to offer in prayer.

Needless to say spiritual people and those of good will everywhere, are already praying and have long been doing so, but when that moment comes all of us are requested to pray, to pray as we have never prayed before. It is for this that we are to be ready.

Here in Richmond, and I suppose throughout Virginia, it has been arranged that as soon as the news comes over the radio that the invasion has really begun, all the church bells are to ring, and that night every house of God is to be opened for mass meetings of prayer and consecration.

I do not know where this call for prayer at the time of the invasion originated, but I trust that the news of it is being spread far and wide. It seems to me that it is the duty of each one of us to help give this publicity, to write about it and to speak of it to our friends so that more and more localities everywhere will be ready to meet and pour forth a vast volume of prayer straight from the hearts of our country.

Here is your opportunity and mine, not only to believe in prayer, but to take that belief into the very core of our being, and act upon it with all our hearts, all our minds, and with all our strength, and so be helping to sustain our men and to release God's forces of Light.

Martin Luther used to say, "I feel particularly well today, someone must be praying for me."

Oh! may our fighting men feel particularly well on the day of invasion because the heart of all their country is with them, poured out in a mighty prayer for their success. May it lift them up to light and strength and be to them an invincible power sweeping them onward like a mighty, rushing wind!

This is no figure of speech. Prayer transcends Time and Space. The instant you pray for anyone, that very instant you are there with him, your spirit and his together in the effulgent Presence of God. Wives and mothers may not know where their men are, but their prayers will find them wherever they are and bring their spirits together. We have not yet half realized this power, nor guessed what mighty forces of righteousness are released by prayer. As I have said, it is beyond Time and Space, so that it is for us here at home to see to it when the invasion comes that the praying heart of America goes forth with our forces, our spirits mingled with their spirits, our hopes with their hopes, keeping even stride with them as they go forward on the great adventure; our hearts thrown wide open to make a free channel through which the glory of God may come in. It is for the men to fight, and for us to pray, but be sure that we shall be there together.

And what shall we pray for when that hour comes?

Let us not hesitate to pray for Victory.

In these waiting days we should be preparing and consecrating ourselves by repentance, that with "clean hands and pure hearts we may go forward in God's name." So prepared when invasion comes we shall dare to ask for victory, that to be worthy of it and of a righteous peace.

WHILE WE WAIT let us face our sins and repent as best we can, but when the hour for prayer strikes, let us be done with sins for the time being, and believing that our side is nearer to God's will than the other, boldly ask Him for victory. Otherwise, we may block the channels of our hearts against the out-pouring of His Spirit. If we do not make bold to ask, how are we to receive? And if we fail in this petition now, more may fail with us than we can possibly know. Perhaps the Church Triumphant can only give its aid if we of the Church Militant ask for it.

We are indeed unworthy, but unworthy as the human heart is, it is the only means at God's disposal for making His will in the world prevail. He, Himself has made it that way. Beauty comes into the world through sunsets, flowers and a million other lovely gifts of nature, but righteousness is given to humanity only through its own open heart, consecrated and lifted to God to make a channel for His love, wisdom, enlight-

Sermon Preached at the Consecration of the Rev. Angus Dun, as Bishop of Washington

By THE RT. REV. HENRY K. SHERRILL, D. D.

WE ARE MET to share in the service of the Consecration of a Bishop. As we proceed, there will be heard words proclaiming the great truths of the Gospel. There will come before us constant reminders of the long life of the Christian Church and the story of successive generations of saints, evangelists and heroes. In this Cathedral, on this deeply significant occasion, we feel the reality of the Presence of the Living God. It would be easy to think and to speak solely of the Glory of God, of His Goodness and Mercy, of the Comfort and Peace which come from fellowship in the blessed company of faithful people. It is a temptation to shut the doors as of an upper room and so to forget for the moment the stern and tragic realities of the world in which we live. There are times when such relief and release are essential. But here we are consecrating a leader in the Christian Church. A leader must be prepared to face the facts, the discouragements as well as the opportunities of his times.

The Church, St. Paul declared, is the Body of Christ. It is not my intention to elaborate this familiar statement. I only wish to emphasize what the physical Body of Christ faced in obedience to the Will of God. That Body had nowhere to lay its Head. That Body was set steadfastly to go to Jerusalem to face danger and arrest. That Body was crucified on the Cross. The Church, we say, is the Body of Christ. Is the servant above his Master or the disciple above his Lord? To be truly the Body of Christ, the Church of Christ can expect no sheltered or favored position. The Church must live so dangerously, so sacrificially that the Master can once again say "This is my Body which is given for you."

IT IS ESSENTIAL that we understand that fact today. There are epochs in history which seem to be turning points, when decisions are made and roads chosen which determine the course of human events for generations. It is admittedly difficult to view dispassionately and to evaluate one's own time, but everything points to the stern fact that we are in such an era. I am not thinking alone of the winning or losing of the war. I am thinking even more of the character of the world which is to be. Our situation is too well known to need detailed description. There is no East and West in one sense, for modern invention has made the twain meet. Everything, from physical boundaries to men's hopes and fears, is in a state of flux. With clashes of nations, colors, and races there are cruelties and hatreds. Also we may be thankful there are noble deeds of high sacrifice. Above all, there is an unutterable longing on the part of untold millions for the new and finer day, which, please God, some day will dawn. It is not a comfortable, but a dangerous world. The Church cannot escape the common trial by fire. Too often Christian people are inclined to live in a paradise of wishful thinking which overestimates the influence of the Church and minimizes the difficulties we confront. We are prone to lack discipline and determination because when we are with church people and groups we become complacent. Surely now any sane view both of the Church and the world should stir us to the realization of the magnitude of the task before us. Is the Church merely an agreeable association without vital impress on the times, or is the Church the Body of Christ who gave His life? May it not be true that we are living in a period when the fulness of time has come again?

Certainly we are at one in the conviction that Christ has a message and a life for our day. Surely we must proclaim that His Gospel is applicable to our social order. But it is not enough to preach and to resolve: it is essential that the Word become flesh, that there be a true Body of Christ in an individual and corporate life which will determine the course of history.

LET US APPLY this to some of the pressing questions before us. I imagine that most of us would agree that the greatest need, beyond the immediate winning of the war, is the establishment of what, to avoid political terms, we may call a world family of nations. Only on the basis of such international understanding and cooperation can world peace be maintained and a more equable and stable world order be established. There can be no debate as to Christ's teaching as to the brotherhood of man, not as a political slogan, but because all men are the children of a Heavenly Father. From the point of view of Christianity, isolationism of an individual, a nation, or a race is a spiritual heresy. God was not isolationist when He so loved the world. The Church has never been isolationist in sending out missionaries to the four corners of the globe. I am not speaking in terms of any one scheme of world organization, but of the general spiritual objective to which the Church is committed, as the servant of Christ. It is to be hoped that from the fellowship of the Church will come inspired and determined men and women who will work out and support the definite means of achieving this objective.

This calls for more than sermons and resolutions; it demands attributes of mind and of heart. Above all, there must be a unique quality of life within the Church. The missionary cause is not a work of supererogation, not trying to force our way of life upon someone else. Missions means the sharing of the best we have, the truth of God in Christ, and then living in a fellowship with God which transcends all barriers of nationality. We may evolve all kinds of international machinery which is necessary, but which will be bound to fail if formed only for reasons of fear or of selfish advantage. There must be the spiritual motive and life. We may be grateful to God and to thousands of known and unknown missionaries that in almost every land, yes including Japan, there are those who count themselves members of the Christian Church. There are difficulties and tensions which will continue. But here the Church can be the Body of the Christ who draws all men to Himself.

ALONG THE SAME LINE, there is the whole problem of race relationship, a question not peculiar to the Far East or India, but one which confronts us at home with immediate and pressing necessity. Again the Gospel note of brotherhood rings clear and strong. There cannot be the slightest question as to Christ's way of loving kindness which is more than justice. To be realistic it is impossible to ignore the perplexities, the fears, and the prejudices which so often tie our hands and confuse our heads. I am not proposing any definite radical solution. I am saying that here is a matter which deeply concerns the Christian Church, which is intimately connected with the practice of the religion we profess. Again it is not a question of pronouncements and of programs, though they have their place, so much as it is a matter of life within the Church. Are we in truth a fellowship in which God is no respecter of persons? The Church is called upon to set an example, to create a spiritual atmosphere in which brotherhood can grow.

Let us take our economic order. There are those who uphold the theory that here certainly is no concern of the Church. But others more realistic see that the material and the spiritual are not so easily separated. I learned long ago when I was a chaplain in France that it is hard to pray when you are unbearably cold. The Church's interest in the social order is to see that there is the proper environment so that the spiritual life of men may have the chance to live and develop. In our cities we know that slums, with their bad housing, produce crime. There are slums equally in rural areas where poverty results in ignorance and in evil and where the life of the Spirit has indeed small opportunity. The Church cares for all men, irrespective of their station, but the Church should have an especial care for those who, through circumstances beyond their control, are oppressed by surroundings which destroy opportunity.

But for a much broader reason the Church must be concerned with the social order. We live in a period of complexity when great social forces carry the individual along a current which he is unable to control. The war is the supreme, if not the only, example of this. Millions of people who had nothing to do with the policies of nations or of statesmen have been uprooted and sent to far distant places by the exigencies of the times. What is true of war in lesser degree is true of business, or labor, or of any of the great social organisms of today. Certain individuals of special gifts or of heroic proportions may for a time seem to breast the tide, but for most people it is an impossibility. The spiritual life practically is conditioned to a tremendous degree by the framework in which it is set. Christianity does not claim that the Christian life is easy or ever will be, but the Church must strive to see, unless religion is to be the possession of the few, or unless Christianity return to the catacombs or the deserts, that the average man lives in an environment in which he has a fair chance to practice the teaching of the Master. The world cannot remain one-quarter Christian and three-quarters pagan; for a house divided against itself cannot stand, as the present tells us in suffering. Once again this is not primarily a matter of statements or of resolutions. It is the matter of the common life of us all within the Church. Have we such a consciousness of the presence of God, of the impelling summons of the Christ, that from our churches will go industrial leaders, economists, laborers, farmers, men and women of every walk of life who in the name of Christ are champions of a more Christian social order?

LET US COME TO THE CHURCH. Here is perhaps the most distressing fact of all. The Church which St. Paul stated to be the Body of Christ is a divided and broken Body. Under these circumstances how can the Church preach unity to nations and men? The familiar answer is too true to be lightly turned aside, "Physician, heal thyself". At a time when the forces of evil are so strongly entrenched, when men and women are longing for clear and convinced Christian leadership, there are divisions in the very family of Christ. At a time when the trumpet should give a clear and certain note, there are many trumpets and the notes not in harmony. No words can effectively describe the unhappy effect of this upon average humanity, non-Christian as well as Christian. I realize full well that this is a somewhat brutal simplification of the situation. There is the long history of the Church which has caused this condition. There are prejudices to be overcome and wounds to be healed. On the other hand, we must not forget the real progress which has been made in the greater cooperation of the churches. But what has been accomplished is infinitesimal to what must be done. I know many of the tensions and difficulties, but this cause cannot be ignored, on the lower ground because of plain common sense, on the higher because who can doubt what is the will of Christ? I am not suggesting a colorless, regimented uniformity, or a mere theoretically conceived union, but a deep and overpowering unity of the Spirit. Again it is not a matter of words, but of the character of the Christian Fellowship and of the vision we have of the Glory of God. Let the Church be the Body of Christ.

It may seem strange to some that I have not touched upon the special responsibilities and opportunities of the Episcopate. I assure you that I have not forgotten them. They are implicit in all I have said. A Bishop has the privilege of being a Pastor to clergy and people. He has upon his mind and heart the spiritual care of all the churches. He has important administrative duties, but they are insignificant compared to the quality of his spiritual vision and leadership. This is involved in every act, whether it be the direction of Candidates for the Ministry, conferences with clergy, wardens and vestrymen, visitations for confirmation or contacts with the community. With humility and yet with persistent courage he must strive to keep the Church true to the Master, or else the salt will have lost its savour.

The Bishop is also a missionary. If one may reverse the figures, he cannot be content to minister alone to the one within the fold, he must reach out to the ninety and nine who in our world have not realized the implications of Christian discipleship. The Bishop must not be insistent upon his authority and position and rights, as such. The Church is not a club with certain officers and with the purpose of mutual help and comfort. The Church is a living, militant missionary force, glad to spend and be spent, not careful of Her own prerogatives, even Her own

An Historic Consecration

The local press of Washington described Bishop Dun's consecration as having been done "with pomp and ceremony." We disagree with this description. There was ceremony, it is true. It was an ancient ceremony, moving because of its simplicity. There was no pomp. It was the liturgical dignity that appealed to those present.

One fact must have made its impression upon thoughtful churchmen present. Here was an ancient ceremony being enacted in the unfinished Cathedral of the Capital of a new nation. A nation whose people have come from every country in the world. A nation whose capitol now must seem in the eyes of enslaved peoples their one hope of rescue from slavedom. Here, in this Christian service East and West met. The old Church of the West and the young Church of the East assisted in creating a new spiritual leader for the Capital of the young giant nation of the West. For the Archbishop of York and Bishop Tsu of the Chinese Church both took part in the laying on of hands, creating a new Bishop of Washington. Then to add a finishing touch to the universality of the Church, one of the bishop's attending presbyters was a Negro priest—a former student of the bishop-elect.

May the symbolism of this historic consecration be the sign of the beginning of a new union for the Church. East and West must meet on a truly Christian plane; and all people in the East and in the West must gather together on equal footing before the altar of the living God.

Religious Liberty

With the tempo of this global war increasing daily in a military and naval sense, there is grave danger of our losing sight of some of the values which we are fighting to preserve.' We were glad to read in the press, this past Sunday, the text of a statement presented to Secretary of State Hull, by a committee representing the Federal Council of Churches, and the Foreign Missions Conference. We print the text of the statement in full.

The statement presented by the committee reads as follows:

"We recognize the dignity of the human person as the image of God. We therefore urge that the civic rights which derive from that dignity be set forth in the agreements into which our country may enter looking toward the promotion of world order and be vindicated in treaty arrangements and in the functions and responsibilities assigned to international organizations. States should assure their citizens freedom from compulsion and discrimination in matters of religion. This and the other rights which inhere in man's dignity must be adequately guarded; for when they are impaired all liberty is jeopardized. More specifically, we urge that:

"The right of individuals everywhere to religious liberty shall be recognized and, subject only to the maintenance of public order and security, shall be guaranteed against legal provisions and administrative acts which would impose political, economic or social disabilities on grounds of religion.

"Religious liberty shall be interpreted to include freedom to worship according to conscience and to bring up children in the faith of their parents; freedom for the individual to change his religion, freedom to preach, educate, publish, and carry on missionary activities; and freedom to organize with others and to acquire and hold property for these purposes.

"To safeguard public order and to promote the well-being of the community, both the State, in providing for religious liberty, and the people, in exercising the rights thus recognized, must fulfill reciprocal obligations: The State must guard all groups, both minority and majority, against legal disabilities on account of religious belief; the people must exercise their rights with a sense of responsibility and with charitable consideration for the rights of others."

As Christians we should use our influence, great or small, to see that our statesmen make full use of the principles invoked in granting real religious liberty to all peoples of the nations we release from German and Japanese slavery.

By Glastonbury's Stone

By JAMES W. KENNEDY

SOLEMN AND IMPRESSIVE were the happenings by Glastonbury's Stone in the Nation's Capitol on a recent April day. A bishop was consecrated there, but more important, around him flowed to uphold his hands the forces of Christendom. No other consecration ever held in America has had such significance and far-reaching overtones. Not only were patriarchs of the orthodox churches there, but also the Archbishop of York, representing the Church of England (this being the first time an English bishop has participated in an American consecration in over seventy years) and Bishop Tsu, representing the young Church of China. The significance of so many distinguished ecclesiastics and other clergy of all denominations was only one factor indicative of the importance of the occasion, for the distinguished list of diplomatic representatives and other notable leaders who were present—all the way from the British Ambassador and the Viscountess Halifax, and Associate Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts to Admiral and Mrs. Ernest J. King—also witnessed to the significance of this consecration of Angus Dun as Bishop of Washington. In addition to all the living persons present, it seemed as if King Arthur and Guinevere themselves were clinging like virile spirits to that stone which was brought from the famous old Glastonbury Abbey in England to form the seat of the bishop's throne in the Cathedral Church of St. Peter and St. Paul on Mount St. Alban, D. C.

In a real sense it was the people and the way they seemed to feel about this man who was to lead the Church in an area of such vital importance to the contemporary life of the nation and the world—it was they who made the atmosphere atingle with significance. The task of the Bishop of Washington is tremendous and intricate, and the demands upon this man who traces his ancestry back to a Scotch Presbyterian minister will try him to the full scope and span of his roots and stature. I sensed among the people there, as well as those who were not there, except in the spirit of their hope and expectation, a great faith in this man who can play such a dramatic and forceful role in the life of the Church in our time.

AS I LOOKED AT Bishop Dun following his consecration, there was a serenity and simple dignity about him that buoyed me up, for I felt that here was a leader prepared to face the facts and the discouragements as well as the opportunities of his time. His sense and acceptance of responsibility will only be increased by the realization of the magnitude of the task before him. He is an example of this unique quality of life we call spiritual, a quality so deep and sturdy that it has shown through many times before when great questions were at stake. Nowhere than in Washington could he exercise greater influence toward the unity of Christianity, a cause very dear to him, nor could he find a place more needful of a spiritual atmosphere in which brotherhood can grow.

Why did laymen, bishops, priests, friends, and the press journey many miles to witness such a consecration? There are perhaps three main reasons. One, the care and dignity in selecting and electing this bishop were a model to follow, and the man chosen is bright with many gifts, both intellectual and spiritual, and whom even to know casually is to love. Two, there is an unexpressed yet earnest desire for the bishop to bear tremendous witness in the nation's capitol. Three, the Church looks to the Bishop of Washington to furnish her a sounding board and measure of Christian strength in America.

The prospects for warmth and good humor and homey atmosphere at the Bishop's house on Mount St. Alban are exceedingly good because of the woman who will preside in it. There need be no fear of lack of power behind the throne. I realized that fact as I saw the surreptitious glance and handclasp between Bishop and Mrs. Dun as he left his chair and passed by her side on the way out of the Cathedral.

I began by saying all this took place by Glastonbury's Stone. I end with a fervent prayer that this consecration of a bishop will mean all we have declared it would, and that the significance of the event will make its mark on the soft wet clay of man's present life to help shape a different future for the world.

life. Nothing which is human can be alien to Her purpose. The Bishop should be the exemplar of this truth.

PERHAPS THE NOBLEST FACT in our day is that millions of men and women everywhere are giving themselves without counting the cost to a cause which they conceive to be greater than they. Whatever their limitations, and they are many, they have learned the meaning of sacrifice. They put to shame many of our complacent self-centered conceptions of the Christian life. They will spurn any institution, no matter how venerable or sacred, which is interested merely in self service or self preservation. The Church is the Body of Christ. A Body is to be used, as was Christ's Body—used to heal the brokenhearted, to free captives, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord, not for the sake of social reform alone but that men might be made into the glorious Body of their Risen and Victorious Lord. That is what it means to be a Bishop or a Priest or a Deacon or a layman, in the Church. We must never forget these uplifting yet exacting words: "Ye are the Body of Christ".

My Brother:

Those of us who know you will realize with what deep regret you leave the special work of training men for the Ministry of the Church. Because this is so vital in your eyes, I feel certain that in this new office you will find many opportunities to further this same cause. Out of years of study and of teaching, fundamental truths of the Word of God have laid hold upon you and you care deeply that these truths be applied to the Church and to the World. With simplicity, steadfastness and sympathetic understanding you will labor to this end. Again, those of us who know you appreciate your genuine pastoral insight and care. Clergy of many points of view, parishes and missions will find in you a wise counsellor and friend. You will strive to make the Church in this Diocese a Fellowship, which is the Body of Christ. Perhaps I can best express our prayer for you in the familiar words of the Prayer for the Alumni of the School you have served so well—that God will grant unto you the spirit of wisdom that you may teach His people His eternal truth and the spirit of holiness that you may go before them and lead them into His everlasting Kingdom.

HAVEN

The reality of our religious life is dependent in large measure upon the amount of time we give to it. We should always be nibbling at a devotional book, and the life of George Washington Carver is as valuable as the classic Confessions of St. Augustine for this; and to read and ponder the words of the Bible in order to learn more and more of Jesus Christ and the way God unfolded His life that we might in smaller measure attain unto the height and depth and rich enlargement of the same.

Our prayers for spiritual attainment demand hard and persistent work, take time and willing attention, but the results in freedom and power, in strength and faith, in security and adventure prove the worth of our endeavors.

enment, and power.

So then let our hearts be open and ready, that our prayers may go forth as our men go forth, that our Father's light may triumph over darkness, His unspeakable goodness be victorious over evil, His kingdom come, and the blessing of an enduring peace be established on earth.

Enter it quietly—
Jesus is there,
Leading our worshiping,
Hearing each prayer.

Sit in it silently,
Making no noise;

PROFESSOR BULLFROG'S TRIP

William Allen Ward

Professor Bullfrog was already late at the bend in the creek where he was due to give jumping lessons to all the little frogs of the swamp. But the Louisiana sun was hot and the wind was soothing to Professor Bullfrog's brow. So he sat down under a magnolia tree beside the creek and had almost dropped asleep, when he looked in the lazy waters and saw Old Man J. Thomas Alligator dozing on the surface of the stream.

Professor Bullfrog knew that the alligator was a good swimmer and could take him down the stream in a rush; but he also knew the old fellow had a mild temper and would not move an inch if he was not coaxed.

But Professor Bullfrog acted and then talked. He leaped on top of the alligator's slimy back. The alligator, awakened by the pounding on his back, was startled, and started swimming down the stream.

Within a few minutes the alligator turned the bend in the creek and Professor Bullfrog croaked: "Thank you, Old Man Alligator, I enjoyed the ride."

The alligator had not realized until Professor Bullfrog leaped from his back to the bank that he was hitch-hiking on his slimy back. He was very much provoked, but it was too late. Professor Bullfrog croaked in joy as the alligator turned the bend.

At the bend in the creek the frog children were waiting for their leaping lessons.

"You must learn to stand on the bank and leap far into the water," Professor Bullfrog was saying. "Just watch me. I'm one of the best jumpers in this swamp. Just watch me!"

Professor Bullfrog leaped.

And he leaped right in front of Old Man Alligator, who by this time was wide awake and on his way back to his favorite resting place.

"I'll snap you right in two!" the alligator sneered between his sharp teeth.

Professor Bullfrog started swimming and the big alligator started after him. It was a close race but Professor Bullfrog had one more trick in his bag. He dived under the alligator, then leaped on the Old Man's back and from that safe place he was able to brace himself for a big leap to the shore. And all the little frog people croaked happily. But Professor Bullfrog frowned and said, "You must show me more respect. But I'm mighty glad to get out of reach of that alligator. So, now, we'll all just go home."

FAITH IN HUMANITY

One day every pedestrian passing the governor's residence in the ancient Swedish city of Orebro was met by a duck who looked up at him and squawked excitedly. She evidently had an important story to tell, but how understand her? Finally the police officer noticed that after each speech she ran up to a tall tree close to the castle. He followed, and the duck flew up to an old magpie's nest near the top of the tree. There she stayed, looking down and continuing her chattering. The man brought a ladder and climbed up. He found the duck had selected this nest as a comfortable place to hatch her brood, but, alas! it was so high above the water that she could not possibly bring her little ones down. So she decided to invoke human aid, and her appeal was not in vain. The officer carried the dowy nestlings down and placed them gently in their native element.—Johanna Lyback in Our Dumb Animals.

THE VOICE

Hear the voice of Jesus
By Bethesda's pool,
Where the water's moving
Ever fresh and cool.

Words of comfort; hear them
Down the ages roll—
Art thou sick and helpless;
Wilt thou be made whole?

Tender Voice of loving Wisdom to restore
Man to grace eternal;
Rise, and sin no more!

Consecration Of Bishop Dun

In Presence of 2500 Persons in Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul

Washington, D. C.—"The only ceremony comparable of this service today was the Coronation of the King". These words, attributed to the Chaplain to His Grace, the Archbishop of York, the Rev. G. A. Ellison, significantly sounds the note of description of the sacred ceremonies attendant upon the Consecration of the Very Rev. Angus Dun as Fourth Bishop of the Diocese of Washington, in the presence of a congregation of 2500 persons who packed the present portion of the great structure of the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul on Mount St. Alban on Wednesday, April 19, 1944.

The order of the procession included about 640 persons, made up of representatives of the Diocesan organizations, Lay Members of the Cathedral Council and of the Executive Council of the Diocese; Lay Readers of the Diocese, Candidates and Postulants. Also represented were local Universities and the Cathedral Schools, the Trustees of the Episcopal Theological School, the Faculty and Student representatives of the Theological School in Virginia and of the Episcopal Theological School of Cambridge, Massachusetts. Representative Ministers of other denominations and Clergy of the Orthodox Churches. Following a marshal as a special segment of the procession were the Deaconesses of the Diocese, the Clergy of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the President of the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies. The Deans of the Episcopal Seminaries and as representatives of the Cathedral, the members of the Cathedral Chapter and of the Diocese. the members of the Standing Committee, followed by representatives of the National Council; the readers of the Testimonials, the Clergy of the Diocese, the Honorary Canons of the Cathedral. Probably the most observed section of the procession was that which contained the Primate of Iceland, the Bishops of Orthodox Churches, the Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the Participating Bishops who preceded the Bishop-elect with his Attending Presbyters; in turn followed by the Presenting Bishops, the Co-Consecrators, the Venerable Primate of England and his Chaplain and the Presiding Bishop with his Chaplain.

Important implications behind the rites connected with the Consecration was the closer cementing of the bonds of Protestantism and the rapproachement of differing communions within the Christian Church. It was also significant that for the first time since 1871 an English Archbishop participated in an American Consecration, represented by the Most Reverend Cyril Forster Garbbett, Archbishop of York.

Before the high Jerusalem Altar the Presiding Bishop of the Church began the Communion Service. The Epistle was read by the Suffragan Bishop of New York and the Gospel by the Bishop of Missouri. The high point in the Service was the sermon preached by the Bishop of Massachusetts who said, "the Church which St. Paul stated to be the body of Christ is a divided and broken body. At a time when the forces of evil are so strongly entrenched, when men are longing for clear and convinced Christian leadership, there are divisions in the very family of Christ. There are prejudices to overcome and wounds to be healed. On the other hand we must not forget the real progress made and the great cooperation made by the Churches. But what has been accomplished is infinitesimal to what must be done." His plea echoed the sentiment expressed by Bishop Dun at the Triennual Convention of the Episcopal Church at Cleveland.

Following the sermon, which was delivered in the Canterbury Pulpit at the Crossing, Bishop-elect Dun and his attendants walked through the great Choir to the Altar rail where the Rt. Rev. Henry Wise Hobson, Bishop of Southern Ohio, and the Rt. Rev. Malcolm Peabody, Bishop of Central New York presented him to the Presiding Bishop.

Then followed the reading of testimonials, printed in purple ink on parchment. The certificate of election was read by Ogle R. Singleton, Secretary of the Diocesan Convention, which elected Dr. Dun; the Canonical Testimonial, read by Charles F. Wilson, Chancellor of the Diocese; the Evidence of Ordination, read by the Rev. Edward Gabler, Secretary of the Diocesan Standing Committee; the Consents of the Standing Committees, read by the Rev. Franklin J. Bohanan, President of the Standing Committee and the Consents of the Bishops, read by the Rt. Rev. Noble C. Powell, Bishop of Maryland.

The Bishop-elect then made his promise of conformity to the Presiding Bishop answering the questions of the examination provided for in the service of Consecration of a Bishop. Having been vested with the Episcopal habit and the Veni, Creator Spiritus having been sung over him by the Bishop of Central New York, antiphonally with the Bishop and congregation, the Presiding Bishop and Bishops designated as Consecrators, the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill of Massachusetts, and the Rt. Rev. Andrew Y. Y. Tsu, Bishop of Kunming, China, together with the Rt. Rev. William Scarlett of Missouri, the Rt. Rev. Charles Gilbert, Suffragan Bishop of New York, the Rt. Rev. Noble C. Powell of Maryland, the Rt. Rev. Appleton Lawrence of Western Massachusetts, the Rt. Rev. Henry Wise Hobson, of Southern Ohio, the Rt. Rev. Malcolm E. Peabody of Central New York, and His Grace the Archbishop of York, Cyril Forster Garbbett, laid their hands in consecration on the head of the Bishop-elect and Angus Dun became the Fourth Bishop of Washington.

Bishop Dun was then installed in the official seat of the Cathedral reserved for the Bishop of the Diocese. The pastoral staff being presented to him, seated in his stall, by Canon Chancellor of the Cathedral, the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith.

The Communion Service then followed. Thirty-four Bishops partook of the elements, Bishop Dun receiving the

Presiding Bishop Suggests Prayers

Episcopal Churches Throughout Country to Be Thrown Open

New York, N. Y.—At the moment announcement is made of the invasion of Europe by Allied troops, Episcopal churches throughout the country will be thrown open for people of all faiths to enter and pray.

The head of the Episcopal Church, Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker, suggested this nation-wide prayer in a telegram sent today (Friday) to all the Bishops of the Church.

Bishop Tucker suggested that prayers be offered for the men engaged in the invasion; for victory, and for a future world order that will assure lasting peace and international justice.

Text of Bishop Tucker's message follows:

In view of nearness of invasion will you invite your clergy to open churches when news of battle has been confirmed, summoning their people to unite in prayer for God's blessing upon our armed forces and on all who minister to their needs, and for an early, honorable and lasting peace.

116th Annual Convention

Louisville, Ky.—The 116th Diocesan Convention of the Diocese of Kentucky opened on the evening of April 18 in St. Mark's Church, with a dinner for all the clergy of the diocese, the heads of all organizations in each Parish and Mission, with the Department of Promotion members and the Executive Council. The Rev. Benedict Williams, rector of Trinity Church, Toledo, Ohio, was the speaker, using as his theme, "Will the Return to Religion Be a Return to Christian Religion?" Immediately followed the opening service, at which time Bishop Clingman delivered his annual address. He reported he had participated in two inspiring ceremonies of burning the mortgages at the Church of Our Merciful Saviour, the only Negro congregation in Louisville, and in Emmanuel Mission, Louisville. Bishop Clingman called particular attention to the matter of business affairs in the conduct of the church's business, requesting that all treasurers be placed under bond and that the accounts of the church be audited annually either by certified public accountants or by other persons who will be recognized by the Department of Finance of the diocese. He added, "in connection with business affairs, I would urge upon you the importance of placing your parishes and missions in the best possible financial condition at this time. Our present prosperity is probably temporary and somewhat fictitious; the fact remains that there is a great deal of money in circulation and that more members of our congregations are in good financial condition than has been the case for many years. It is certainly their duty, as I trust they would consider it also their privilege, to support the church and its enterprises to the extent of their ability. Those of us who are in positions of responsibility should see to it that every member of every congregation is given the opportunity to contribute regularly and systematically to the support of his parish or mission and, quite definitely, to the support of the missionary work of the diocese and the National Church. I do not see how we can hope to avoid some sort of unhappy financial reaction within a few years after the close of the war. The larger the number of our regular supporters, and the larger the average pledge,—especially on the 'Red Side'—the better will be our condition to withstand the ravages of another possible depression. I speak out of a real personal experience in this connection, and out of the bitter experience of many congregations and dioceses during the lean years 1929-1934."

During Wednesday the reports and elections were held in St. Mark's Church. The elections were—Standing Committee: Rev. J. Wilson Hunter, Rev. W. H. Langley, Jr., Rev. Robert C. Board, Messrs. Alex. G. Robinson, Wm. E. Pilcher, Sr., and E. J. Wells. The Executive Council: Rev. W. B. Myll, of Owensboro, and the Ven. Harold J. Weaver, Messrs. Edward Hungarland and G. Edgar Straeffer, Sr.

W. A. GIFT ACKNOWLEDGED

Bishop Shen Tells of Hardships in Northwest China

"The Chinese general, who is almost second in command of China's armies, asked me to explain Christianity to him, for two hours last week," writes the Chinese Bishop, T. K. Shen, of Sian, northwest China, in a letter which has been some three months on the way.

A more recent letter from Bishop Shen, acknowledging a gift from the Woman's Auxiliary, says in part, "I do not need to tell you what hardships my fellow-workers have had during these seven years of war. The work has suffered, the people have been neglected and the churches are not growing as they should.

"I used to visit most of our stations every month, but now as traveling is too expensive my visits have been fewer. The annual budget for my travel used to be $100. Now a single trip to a country station only twenty miles from Sian costs more than $1,000 by mule cart. I have to resort to my bicycle, and I am not too proficient in cycling in hilly country. Your generosity will enable me to travel more, to increase our depleted staff, and to support our fellow-workers more adequately.

"Our mission compound is quite different from what it was when you saw it eight years ago. Twenty-three bombs have dropped on it. The church was totally demolished. The school and my house were partly destroyed. It is no use, and it costs too much, to do any repairs as we might be raided again. However, none of us were hurt or killed, though it is beyond me to describe the noise and the havoc of each raid.

"My wife is teaching in Sinking College and our children are studying at colleges and schools at Chengtu. We have been separated since 1938."

Many Stop to Pray

Noon Day Moment of Prayer Movement Growing

Radford, Va.—"Announcement is made by the committee in charge of the Radford Noon Day Moment of Prayer movement that the one minute service each day during the coming week at the Honor Roll of Sons and Daughters in Service, will be conducted by representatives of the First Baptist Church, Colored. The present week's services are being looked after by Zion Hill Colored Baptist Church members."

Items of this nature are appearing weekly in Radford's newspapers, which have accorded unlimited space and editorial encouragement to the group of men of Grace Episcopal Church, whose undertaking it was to promote a consciousness of the need of community prayer for guidance in the critical period through which the world is passing, as well as for the safeguarding of loved ones in service. The group represents the Laymen's League of Grace Church, which, in search of some definite, helpful activity in which it might engage, adopted the Noon Day Moment of Prayer as its objective. At a conference of representatives of other denominations, the movement was given hearty endorsement and an agreement was reached among them to take over week assignments for the moment before the Honor Roll. Thus far, Methodists, Lutherans, the Church of God, Episcopalians and two colored Baptist churches have carried on. Needless to say, the Ministerial Association of Radford has given its endorsement.

Obviously it cannot be estimated how many individuals there are who, at the noon hour, remember to stop wherever they may be to offer a prayer in their own way, but the indications are that there are many. Especially in the schools is the observance noted as teachers and pupils pause for it in their work. A business man in conference with others a short time ago, halted discussion and invited his associates to join him in his prayer, afterwards explaining the movement to them. There is no set prayer. It is appreciated that as for any who pray, the words of their mouths and the meditations of their hearts will be acceptable.

Grace Church committee is comprised of the Commonwealth's Attorney, the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, a professor at the State Teachers' College and the Rector.

ORDER OF ORDINATION

Rev. Thomas Neely Carruthers—May 4

New York, N. Y.—Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker has taken Order for the Ordination and Consecration of the Rev. Thomas Neely Carruthers, bishop-elect of the Diocese of South Carolina.

The Consecration Service will be held at St. Philip's Church, Charleston, South Carolina, on May 4, 1944, at 10:30 A. M. Presiding Bishop Tucker will be Consecrator, with the Rt. Rev. James Matthew Maxon, D. D., Bishop of Tennessee, and the Rt. Rev. Albert S. Thomas, S. T. D., retired, as co-consecrators. The Rt. Rev. Clinton S. Quin will be the Consecration preacher.

Bishop-Elect Carruthers will be presented for Consecration by the Rt. Rev. Everett H. Jones, of West Texas, and the Rt. Rev. Arthur R. McKinstry, D. D., Bishop of Delaware. The Litany will be read by the Rt. Rev. Frank A. Juhan, D. D., Bishop of Florida. Attending Presbyters will be the Rev. J. Francis McCloud, Christ Church, Nashville, Tenn., and the Rev. Prentice A. Pugh, D. D., Church of the Advent, Nashville, Tenn. The Rev. John H. Fitzgerald, Brooklyn, Secretary of the House of Bishops, will be Registrar.

SOUTH FLORIDA

Should the Emergency Come, Preparing to Meet it.

Miami, Fla.—The Rev. G. W. Gasque, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, made the following announcement to the 11 o'clock congregation Sunday morning, April 16:

"We want to acquaint you with the fact that it is the definite policy of your vestry not to spend a cent of our income for anything that is not absolutely necessary, and all monies received above expenses will be laid aside for possible postwar emergencies. We anticipate that as soon as the war is over, the masses of the people will go on a spending spree and that within a year or so most of our savings will have been dissipated; at the same time with millions of men returning from military service, and millions of women now in industry not willing to return to domestic life, we may be faced with the possibility of lowered wages, considerable unemployment, and general economic stress.

"Because of these possibilities we wish as a parish to build up a reserve fund during these prosperous days, and to urge our people to spend sparingly, to save all you can in war bonds, and to be liberal in special gifts to your church, so that as church and people, should the emergency come, we shall be prepared to meet it.

"For the benefit of those who do not want to invest all their savings in war bonds, and who may find it difficult to open savings accounts with small amounts at the bank, the Men's Brotherhood is forming a Church Credit Union where you can open a savings account with as little as one to five dollars."

Bishop Tsu Pays Second Visit to Florida

Orlando, Fla.—The Rt. Rev. Y. Y. Tsu, Bishop of Kunming, China, made a second most welcome visit to South Florida recently, having come first when making a tour with the Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies in January and February. He preached in St. Andrew's Church, Tampa, and confirmed two young women there who belong to the WAC. On Easter Day Bishop Tsu preached in Holy Trinity Church, West Palm Beach, and that evening he preached in St. Patrick's Church (colored). He also visited the Air Field at Venice and addressed a large group of Chinese cadets who are being trained there for service,—his helpful ministrations deeply appreciated.

Testimony Meeting for Dr. Brunton

Bradenton, Fla.—Knowing that the Rev. Frank M. Brunton has resigned his charge of Christ Church, effective in May, a group of colored residents there asked him to attend a "Testimony Meeting" which they were to have in his honor on April 12th. This meeting had a large and enthusiastic audience, including several of Dr. Brunton's parishioners, and the interesting program gave earnest tribute to four phases of his work for the colored residents:

"Dr. Brunton's Contribution to Civic Organizations."

"Dr. Brunton's Contribution to the Boy Scouts."

"Dr. Brunton's Contribution to the Religious Activities of the Community."

"Dr. Brunton's Contribution to the Schools."

He was presented with a beautiful gold Cross and chain from the colored churches and schools, and with a handsome wooden panel from his Boy Scouts, who had made this panel and carved an inscription on it. For some years Dr. Brunton has added work for the colored residents to his parish labors,—founding and sponsoring the colored troop of Boy Scouts, visiting and speaking in all the colored schools every two weeks, helping with their hospital and getting the Woman's Auxiliary of his parish to supply two annual scholarships of $50.00 each for two young colored people to attend college. He has also ministered to a large group of Bahama Negroes in a camp near Bradenton, giving them the Holy Communion regularly and assisting them in other ways.

THE PRESIDENT WIRES FELICITATIONS

Washington, D. C.—"Let me add my sincere felicitations to those of your many friends on the day of your consecration as Bishop of Washington," said a telegram to Bishop Dun from President Franklin D. Roosevelt, which reached Bishop Dun immediately after the consecration service. Continuing, Mr. Roosevelt said: "Behind you are many fruitful years dedicated to the preparation of others for holy orders; before you lies an even wider field of opportunity in which you can continue to exert a strong and even greater influence on the nation as a whole."

SUMMER SESSION AT NASHOTAH HOUSE

Nashotah, Wis.—For the first time in its 102 years of existence, Nashotah House will this year maintain a full summer session. The Very Rev. E. J. M. Nutter, Dean, explains that although the House does not favor the principle of accelerating the normal seminary course, a distinct obligation to incoming seminarists makes such a course obligatory. The majority of the members of each incoming junior class consists of men who have been living on the campus for two or three years, and who have been taking their college work at Carroll College (Waukesha) while living under the discipline of the seminary. The recent government directive which demands that all prospective seminary students must be so registered by July 1st, on pain of losing their special draft classification, makes it imperative that Nashotah House be regularly in session by that date, if its obligation to its collegiate students is to be met.

In an effort to meet this obligation, Dean Nutter has announced that the seminary will open in regular session May 31, and will continue until August 26. A full semester of work will be offered in this period. The regular faculty will be in residence and will offer the regular courses. Such courses will include the ones that would ordinarily be offered during the first semester of the academic year: Old Testament, Ecclesiastical History, New Testament Greek, and (in the field of pastoral theology) parish organization and religious education.

DIOCESE OF EAU CLAIRE ELECTS BISHOP

The Rev. William Wallace Horstick, since 1931 rector of Trinity Church, Aurora, Illinois, Diocese of Chicago, was elected on April 18 Bishop of Eau Claire, succeeding Bishop Frank E. Wilson, whose death occurred on February 16.

Mr. Horstick was born in January, 1902, in Harrisburg, Pa. A graduate of Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis., in 1929, he was ordained deacon in December, 1928, and priest the following June. He was curate at the Church of the Redeemer, Chicago, until he became rector at Aurora. In 1937 he married Miss Joan Piersen.

GROUP MEETINGS

Towanda, Pa.—Diocese of Bethlehem is conducting a series of district meetings of clergy and vestries to discuss "The Church and the Post-war World". Starting Sunday evening at Christ Church, Towanda, with the Rev. Burke Rivers and Bishop Sterrett as speakers, each section of the Diocese will share in the group meetings. Monday, St. Mark's, Dunmore, is host; Tuesday, St. Clement's, Wilkes-Barre; Wednesday, Trinity, Pottsville; Thursday, East Mauch Chunk, St. John's parish, and Friday, the final meeting at Church of the Mediator, Allentown. The speakers will vary, but the Bishop and the Rev. W. Paul Thompson, executive secretary of the Department of Promotion, will follow through. The meeting at Towanda was well attended and the speaker was clear, daring and helpful.

ENTHUSIASM OF LENTEN OFFERING

Sayre, Pa.—The Church School of the Church of the Redeemer reports a Lenten Offering of over $350.00. The enrollment of the school is under seventy-five. The following idea had much to do with the size and enthusiasm of the offering. The Sunday before Ash Wednesday when the boxes were distributed, each child was made an enlisted sailor for his or her boot training. With each twenty-five cents earned or contributed to the box the sailor advanced one rank and was awarded the appropriate ribbon for the sleeve. All who earned the rank of ensign or above were saluted by the rector as the reward was made. This salute was returned. The school had more officers than enlisted men on the Sunday after Easter with one admiral, one vice-admiral, a rear-admiral, three commanders and many of lesser rank. As the navy defends the world so Christian Brotherhood brings joy to the children of the world.

INTERCOMMUNION ILLUSTRATED

Porto Alegre, Brazil—The fact of intercommunion between the Old Catholic Church and the Anglican Communion has been illustrated by a recent service in southern Brazil, where there are five Polish Old Catholic congregations. One of these invited three clergy of the Brazilian Episcopal Church to hold a service in the Polish Church of the Holy Cross, Porto Alegre. The three Anglicans were the Rev. J. K. Appel, Brazilian, of Trinity Church, and the Rev. Custis Fletcher, Jr., American, Church of the Ascension, both in Porto Alegre, and the Rev. Octacilio M. da Costa, Brazilian, Christ Church, Jose Bonifacio.

An instance of the pastoral care and assistance which the Episcopal Church extends where desired by Eastern Orthodox authorities took place when the new missioner general of the Russian Orthodox Church in South America, the Rev. Dmitri Tkatachenko, visiting his people in Brazil, held two services in Christ Church, Jose Bonifacio, in which the rector, Mr. da Costa, took part.

FAITHFUL LELIA HASKINS

Radford, Va.—On the evening of Shrove Tuesday, the day before Ash Wednesday, just past, for the fortieth consecutive time the congregation and friends of Grace Episcopal Church, in observance of an old custom, sat down to a meal of pancakes prepared by the same faithful Lelia Haskins, colored, who prepared the first meal forty years ago, and without exception all of those that have followed.

NEWS OF PASTOR NIEMOLLER

Interest in Pastor Niemoller is so great that even the following brief items of recent news taken from a Swiss source may be welcome to our readers:

"Pastor Niemoller's health is good and his detention less strict: he has been given a bed instead of the pallet which was his only couch until recently. He is interned with five Roman Catholic Churchmen. Intercession on his behalf continues in his church at Dahlem. His wife is allowed to visit him every fortnight. He is greatly saddened by the news that his younger son is suffering from tuberculosis."

IN COMPLETE AGREEMENT

First Conference on Life and Work for Negro College Youth

Fort Valley, Ga.—Sponsored by National and Provincial Divisions of College Work and the Woman's Auxiliary, with Fort Valley State College Cooperating, the First Conference on Life and Work for Negro College Youth has ended with complete agreement by all present that it was a success in every way.

About 25 girls attended. They came from the Fort Valley State College, St. Augustine's College, Georgia State College, Milledgeville and Jacksonville, and including two young women, Episcopal Church members, who are studying this year at Gammon Theological Seminary in Atlanta.

Other vocational conferences have been held, notably in the Eighth, Fifth, Fourth and First Provinces, but the Conference just closed is the first Negro Provincial vocational conference to be held. The National Council's Division of College Work, the College Commission of the Fourth Province, and the national Woman's Auxiliary participated. The Rev. J. Henry Brown, D. D., Chaplain of the Fort Valley Episcopal Church Center was host of the conference and did much of the preparatory work. The Rev. Bravid W. Harris contributed several talks bringing out the need of doing something to meet the problems of Youth at this time; Youth, "who often have nothing but beer joints to which to go." He stressed the need of personal consecration, comparing the preparation for Church work with that of preparation to be a surgeon; also emphasizing the need to love people deeply in order to bring out the best in them. Miss Ellen Gammack, Personnel Secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary explained different types of work and specific needs in the Church right now, and the qualifications for Church workers. Dean C. D. Halliburton of St. Augustine's College preached at the Sunday morning service. Mr. W. M. Boyd of Fort Valley State College presided and President H. M. Bond of the College gave a general and cordial welcome.

Other topics discussed included: The Family, War Marriages, Soldier Adjustment, Religious Education, Post-War Problems, Employment-Unemployment and Demobilization; Camp Leadership, Personal Counselling.

$900 CONTRIBUTED TO BIBLE SOCIETY

New York, N. Y.—The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief has contributed $900 so far this year to the American Bible Society. Contributions in 1943 amounted to $4,250 to this agency.

From the Bible Society's figures, the $900 given this year will supply New Testaments to 4,500 men—three regiments. Bibles, New Testaments and Bible portions are being supplied to men and women in the armed forces, to prisoners of war, and to refugees and distressed populations. The Society is now planning a post-war supply of Scriptures for Europe, to be printed in Sweden. The total number will be about 100,000 Bibles and 250,000 Testaments in about ten of the languages of Europe.

EASTER RECORDS BROKEN

Miami, Fla.—Easter at the Church of the Holy Cross broke all previous records, with an estimated attendance of more than fifteen hundred at the three celebrations of the Holy Communion, 7, 9 and 11 o'clock. Chairs for the overflow were provided on the lawn between the Church and Firestone Hall. Easter Eve, the rector, the Rev. G. W. Gasque, baptized sixteen babies. Two new alms basins presented by the Young People's Service League were blessed at the first communion.

RESOLUTIONS

William Bland Dew

At the regular monthly meeting of the Vestry of Ascension Church, Amherst, Virginia, held on Tuesday, April 18, 1944, the following Resolution was adopted:

The Vestry of Ascension Church, realizing the ineffectuality of resolutions as a memorial to one of its deceased members, and having in mind the loyalty of service which William Bland Dew rendered to this Parish as a communicant and generous supporter of the Church, a member of its Vestry, a Lay Reader at many of its services, our frequent Delegate to the Annual Councils of the Diocese, do feel and resolve that we do hereby perpetuate the memory of our beloved friend and co-worker, so far as in our power lies, by incorporating into the minutes and records of the Vestry a copy of the article and likeness of the said William Bland Dew as it was published in the Southwestern Episcopalian of this Diocese in the March-April issue, 1944, thereof, and the Registrar is directed so to incor-

Norborne P. Gatling

At the regular monthly meeting of the Vestry of Ascension Church, Amherst, Virginia, held on Tuesday, April 18, 1944, the following Resolution was adopted:

The Vestry of Ascension Church, Amherst, Virginia, hereby express their sorrow at the passing of Norborne P. Gatling, a member of the Vestry of this Church. Although long connected through marriage ties with this Parish, where he was most affectionately regarded, Mr. Gatling until the last few years had been engaged in business in New York City, and had his residence in Brewster, Westchester County, within commuting distance from that city.

After retiring from business in New York he came to Amherst, the former home of his wife, to reside.

Immediately he became an active member in Ascension Church and was elected to its Vestry and lent his loyal efforts to the upbuilding of our Church as well as to the betterment of the community.

We express sorrow for our loss and extend our sympathy to his wife and his surviving son.

It is ordered by the Vestry that a copy of this Minute be sent to Mrs. Norborne P. Gatling, his wife, and to his son, Major Norborne P. Gatling, now in the United States Army in England.

Richard E. Lee, Rector.
Wm. Kinckle Allen,

GENERAL MONTGOMERY ON THE CORONATION SWORD

England—At a Mansion House luncheon in connection with "Salute the Soldier" Week. General Montgomery referred to an incident in the Coronation Service, and applied it to the nation's task in the invasion of Europe.

"The nation's Church," he said, "handed to our King from the altar of Westminster Abbey the Sword of State: 'With this sword do justice, stop the growth of iniquity.'" The task now in hand was the use of his Majesty's consecrated sword in the reawakened spirit of that day. There was no fear that the spirit which was alive with that resolution would fail, falter, or fade, on the day of victory. All must help, and the nation's Church must give the lead.

MINISTERS PLAN EVANGELICAL SERVICES HERE

Richmond, Va.—Dr. E. Stanley Jones, missionary to India, will be guest evangelist for the Richmond Christian Mission, which will be held from April 23 to 28 in the auditorium of the First Baptist Church, under the sponsorship of the Richmond Ministerial Union and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Dr. Jones, who has thrice refused election to the post of bishop, preferring to continue his missionary work, has worked in India, Japan, Korea, Burma, China and Malaya. He began his work as a missionary in 1907, when the Methodist Episcopal Church commissioned him as a pastor of the English Church at Lucknow, India.

A native of Clarksville, Md., he received his education at City College, Baltimore, and Asbury College. He has written 11 books, among them the "The Christ of the Indian Road." Some of his works have been translated into as many as 20 foreign languages.

The mission will open with a youth's rally at 3 P. M., Sunday, April 23, after which mass meetings will be held nightly through Friday.

"CHURCHWAYS" WILL COMBINE FIVE PAPERS

New York, N. Y.—A new methods periodical, under the aegis of the National Council, will make its appearance next September. CHURCHWAYS will combine five papers now issued by various National Council Divisions, the Woman's Auxiliary and Forward in Service.

The papers which will be discontinued are: Forward Today, Pointers, The Educational Reporter, The Broadcast, and The Social Relations Bulletin. A nominal subscription price, 10 cents per year, has been placed on the new paper, and existing subscriptions for any or all of the former publications will be extended to expiration.

The editorial board at Church Missions House, on which all Departments and Divisions of the National Council are represented, believes that the consolidation of the former papers into one will result in a considerable saving of manufacturing and distribution costs, and in addition will assure the continuous presentation of methods applicable to all varieties of work in dioceses, districts, parishes and missions, without overlapping, and with a wider range of usefulness.

RIGHT AGAINST WRONG
GOD VERSUS THE DEVIL

The "Daily Sketch" recently published a remarkable article found among the papers of Vice-Admiral Halifax, who lost his life in an aeroplane accident. The Admiral saw the present struggle as a plain battle of Right against Wrong, God versus the Devil. This is how he summed up the position:

"We say we are fighting for freedom; but there is no such thing. We say we are fighting for justice. We say we are fighting for a better world.

"Yet, in reality, if we are true to ourselves, we are fighting for one thing and one thing only—Goodness—and if we win that we win a true freedom and a real justice and a new heaven and new earth, for we shall win God.

"We seem to be ashamed, or frightened, to face up to it and openly declare our aim, for we are all so desperately conscious of our own shortcomings.

"But that should not matter. It is the aim that matters, and if we fearlessly declared the aim and strive for it in public and private life we should progress along the right path instead of drifting aimlessly without any object, albeit from time to time we would surely individually and collectively transgress."

WAR PRAYER

(Adapted from Queen Elizabeth's Armada Prayer)

We do instantly beseech Thee, of Thy gracious goodness, to be merciful to Thy Church militant, here upon earth, and at this time compassed about with most strong and subtle adversaries. O! let Thine enemies know that Thou hast received into Thine own protection our land and Empire, which they, most of all for Thy Gospel's sake, do malign. Set a wall about it, O Lord, and evermore mightily defend it. Let it be a comfort to the afflicted, a help to the oppressed, and a defence to Thy Church and people persecuted abroad. And, forasmuch as this cause is new in hand, direct, and go before our armies—and those of our Allies—by sea, air, and land. Bless them, and prosper them, and grant unto them honourable success and victory. Thou art our help and shield. O! give good and prosperous success to all those that fight this battle against the enemies of Thy Gospel. We ask this in the Name of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour. Amen.—The Record (English.)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHO WILL WIN THE KINGDOM?

April 19, 1944.

Mr. Editor:

"The Wacs and Waves'll Win the War," But?

Who will win the Kingdom for our Lord? According to a report from the Church Missions House, forty women are needed to fill vacancies, not to speak of new places which should be filled, and no candidates or volunteers! Talk about going to foreign places, right here in Arizona we have a foreign field among a pagan people and we need three workers. Who will win the Kingdom while the Wacs and Waves are "winning the war"?

Sincerely,

Walter Mitchell,
Bishop of Arizona.

TO CLARIFY CONFUSED STATEMENT

Mr. Editor:

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America today asked the cooperation of the religious press in dispelling the confusion created by the use of a similar name by an organization calling itself "The American Council of Christian Churches."

The immediate occasion for the statement was the evidence that an ill-considered resolution recently made public by "The American Council of Christian Churches" is being erroneously attributed, in uninformed circles, to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The resolution in question proposed that the government of the United States make a deliberate bombing attack upon the Shinto shrines in Japan.

When the resolution was first made public the officers of the Federal Council paid no attention to it. They assumed that readers would be fully aware of the difference between the American Council of Christian Churches, which was recently organized by a small group of ultra-Fundamentalists, and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which has been in existence for thirty-five years as a federation of historic Evangelical denominations. It is now clear, however, that not a few readers of the resolution in question have been misled.

Particular cases in point are the Japanese-American papers, The Utah Nippo, issued in Salt Lake City, and The Rocky Mountain Shimpo, both circulated among Japanese-Americans in resettlement areas and relocation centers. These newspapers, in printing the resolution, interpreted it as coming from the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and so erroneously concluded that it represented the main body of American Christians. Loyal Japanese-Americans have been so painfully distressed by the resolution that the Federal Council's officers have felt it necessary to make a public disclaimer of any connection whatever with the resolution.

SIN

Mr. Editor:

If a Christian says to a brother Christian, "I am no longer a sinner, for I have surrendered all to God and He leads me in the way everlasting" his brother Christian is shocked and exclaims, "O, don't say anything like that, God will punish you for such talk. All have sinned and all are sinners."

He expects you to sin and confess your sins and then sin again and confess again ad infinitum. In 1st Cor. 15: 34, we find this, "Awake to righteousness and sin not, for some have not the knowledge of God, I speak this to your shame," and "How can we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" They think they are better Christians if they sin and confess their sin than if they did not sin.

We are told to "follow in the footsteps of Jesus, who did no sin." One does not hear sermons now on that text.

By J. W. KENNEDY

AN ANGLE to the problem of forgiveness was dealt with recently in this manner: The question arose during a discussion of verses 12, 14 and 15 of Chapter 6 of St. Matthew's Gospel. I quote from an American Translation. "And forgive us our debts, as we have forgiven our debtors . . . For if you forgive others when they offend you, your Heavenly Father will forgive you too. But if you do not forgive others when they offend you, your Heavenly Father will not forgive you your offenses." Somewhere along in the discussion the statement was made that repentance was always the necessary prelude to forgiveness. Someone challenged this by remarking that a Christian should always forgive everyone, even the unrepentant. We examined the question from many angles and concluded somewhat in this manner: We cannot, nor can God, forgive anyone who is unrepentant. We can keep from being resentful against them and can love them, but we can only pray that in some way they will be brought to repentance and to the point of asking forgiveness and offering to make amends—for no one is truly repentant who is not willing to do any and everything possible to atone for his wrong doing. We must always stand ready to forgive and we must understand when repentance does not come, that it is because of blindness or ignorance or self-will. We must also seek to win others to repentance.

WE MUST FOLLOW Jesus' lead in this whole matter. In almost every instance of forgiveness recorded in the New Testament we find repentance—the desire for newness of life, and the willingness to make all possible reparations. This is true of most of the healings—it is true of the incident of the dying thief upon the cross—it is true of the scene at the foot of the cross which prompted Jesus to cry, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." His prayer showed He did not blame them and held no bitterness in His heart against them. But His prayer was not forgiveness. If we take the key message of Jesus into account—"Repent"—when thinking about this prayer we feel Jesus prayed that God might prompt them to turn and recognize their misdeeds, to fall upon their knees and cry, "Lord, have mercy upon us sinners." One did actually repent and was forgiven because of this prayer.

We must remember that God gave us the power to choose His way or another. It was not quite so simple as a moment's prayer of forgiveness. Each man must open the door from the inside and let the light of God in, the light from the lamp kept well trimmed and burning, ready for bursting in upon us the moment the door is opened. We cannot forgive another until that one is repentant, but as we pray for his awakening God opens many ways for us to aid in the process that breaks down the barriers.

The ones who have been forgiven most are the ones ready to forgive the most of those who have repented. That is why great sinners once forgiven often become great saints.

COLLECT FOR THE FOURTH SUNDAY AFTER EASTER

Almighty God, Who alone canst order the unruly wills and affections of sinful men; Grant unto Thy people that they may love the thing which Thou commandest, and desire that which Thou dost promise; that so among the sundry and manifold changes of the world our hearts may surely there be fixed, where true joys are to be found; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Jesus came into the world to draw all men unto God through repentance of their love of evil and surrender to their love of Him who gave each day a dawn.

The United Thank Offering

By SARA GAITHER LEWIS

THE UNITED THANK OFFERING is a subject on which I am glad to speak, always, as it is of vital interest to many of our women. Conceived in the mind of a Churchwoman, Mrs. Ida W. Soule, in 1886, it was born of a divine discontent, for it grew from her dismay and amazement when 500 women, attending the General Convention held in Chicago that year, gave less than one hundred dollars—she was one of two asked to count the collection—she felt they knew no joy in their giving. She suggested they might give more at the next General Convention if they knew beforehand for what purpose the money would be used, and she appealed to the women of the Church through a letter in the Spirit of Missions, prior to the Convention of 1889, which met in New York City. Even then the goal of $2,000 was only attained because Mrs. Cochran, the mother of Alexander Smith Cochran, who later built and endowed the College of Preachers at the Washington Cathedral, gave $1,000, and volunteered to give the same amount yearly, as long as she might live. But a beginning had been made, and, small though it was, it sent Miss Liza Lovell to Japan, as our first United Thank Offering Worker; it also built Christ Church at Anvik, Alaska. That small acorn of two thousand dollars became a mighty oak, in the form of about nine million dollars given in fifty-five years through the little Blue Box. At one time it paid the salaries of 194 women workers, Bishop Rowe's salary, and erected 35 buildings, besides repairs and upkeep for these buildings. It was not known as the United Thank Offering until offerings from women not attending the General Convention, were included. At General Convention in Baltimore in 1892, Mrs. Soule was introduced to Miss Julia Emery, as the "Mother of the United Thank Offering."

BEFORE GOING ON, I must pay tribute here, as all loyal Church women will do, to Mrs. Soule, who entered the life eternal on March 21st last, having celebrated her 95th birthday in February. The funeral was from the Church of our Saviour, Brookline, Mass., where as a child she attended school and church school with little Willie Lawrence, a family connection, who afterwards became the Bishop of Massachusetts, and who was a life long friend. The Living Church says: Died seems an inappropriate word to use in connection with Mrs. Soule, as she lives and her work lives, in all the multitudinous ways that missionary training, support, housing and pensioning, sponsored by the United Thank Offering, enables it to live and be an ever increasing power. What development, through the interest and initiative of one woman! In connection with her husband's business interests, Mrs. Soule lived in thirteen dioceses in this country, also, in South Africa and Russia, in addition she visited in Alaska and in China. A significant thing is, that wherever she went she was a constructive power in the life of the Church. For example, she started the Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's Church, Roanoke, when resident in Southwestern Virginia, where in 1893 she entertained as missionary speakers the Rev. John W. Chapman and Mrs. Chapman, when those pioneer missionaries of Anvik, Alaska, were on their wedding journey. The organ in Christ Church, Anvik, she gave in memory of her husband. She also gave the Chapel of the Transfiguration, in Nopala, Mexico, a tangible expression of her own ever vivid sense of thankfulness to God. She had always a happy face and gracious presence. Ever an honored guest at the United Thank Offering presentations in Massachusetts, she would rise in response to invitation, looking as sweet as the corsage of flowers the Auxiliary officers had pinned on her breast, and say that in the course of her long life she had reason to be thankful for many things; her chief cause for thankfulness, however, was that God had put it in her heart to start the United Thank Offering. But, if I had not thought of it, someone else would surely have done so, she would modestly add. So it was that a zest for happy, active, intelligent and helpful living, consecrated to noble ends, illuminated all her days; and we who remain join in the Church's prayer that we may have grace to follow the example of one of God's true saints, Ida Whittemore Soule, founder of the United Thank Offering.

The Pension Fund, named in honor of Mrs. Soule, should be a source of great satisfaction to the women of the church; it's capital account now totals $806,-238.39. Each triennium $100,000 is added, with an additional $18,000 set aside for pensions not covered by the Soule Fund, until it shall reach the desired amount. No more worthy memorial could have been instituted, for we owe it to our workers, to make their old age secure.

AT THE LAST TRIENNIAL a resolution was passed, reading: "That the designation United Thank Offering Worker be eliminated, and the United Thank Offering go toward the support of all women workers. $738,000 (more than half the last offering), in addition to the income from the Ida W. Soule pension fund, was turned into the National Council budget, towards the training, salaries, allowances and pensions of women workers, therefore in the future, the National Executive Board will have the privilege of approving all appointments of women workers. This Board has also been asked to prepare a budget for the offering to be presented in 1946—such faith they have in our remembering to be thankful."

There is not an item in the budget for this triennium to which I personally do not thrill, and feel deeply thankful we had a fund from which we could contribute to such vital needs today as British missions, Orphaned missions, the Women's Christian College, in Madras, India, Gingling College, China, work with Sharecroppers and Migrants, War Prisoners Aid, and Christian Literature, which is being used to offset the undesirable literature flooding the world today, which is a menace to the newly literate. Nor would we want to miss the share we will have in the Memorial to Bishop Rowe, for he was peculiarly our own, having been the only man supported by the United Thank Offering, and such a beautiful, stalwart soul he was.

Virginia's place, fifth, in this great offering, is a thing of which we are justly proud, but constructive criticism often calls for comparisons. There was a time when our church women were asked to give as much as a penny a day, and in the old type of Blue Box, used by Mrs. Soule as long as she lived, and by her contemporaries, there was always that amount. Today the slogan, "A Thank Offering when you are thankful," sets a higher standard, but even so, I believe

A Just and Lasting Peace

By THE MOST REV. AND RT. HONORABLE CYRIL FORSTER GARBETT, ARCHBISHOP OF YORK

AT THE VERY OUTSET of my address on "A Just and Durable Peace" I want to pay a tribute to the thorough and remarkable work which has been done already in your country on this subject. The declaration issued under this title has been widely studied and appreciated in Great Britain. It has been of great service in clarifying our thoughts and in expressing our ideals. The Archbishop of Canterbury, myself and many others sent a reply to the Federal Council of Churches in America in which "We welcome unreservedly the statement, believing that the main principles are such as to commend themselves to Christian minds in our country." Though greatly influenced both by this important declaration and the many comments on it, I do not propose to discuss it in detail, but to approach the problem in my own way and to state to you some of the principles which ought to govern, and steps which ought to be taken to secure, a just peace.

We start with the conviction that no lasting peace will be possible until the enemy in the East and the West are completely defeated. There would be no hope for the immediate future of mankind if the Axis emerged undefeated. They are not yet defeated. There is still in front of us a long, fierce and exhausting struggle. The more closely our foes are pressed the more unscrupulous they will show themselves in using treachery and cruelty to save themselves. Their leaders are fighting with the hangman's noose from their necks and will be ready to sacrifice millions to save their own lives. Only by victory can a lasting peace be won.

When peace comes there will be three immediate problems to solve—three duties to perform—I mean the starving millions of Europe to feed; a group, I fear a very large group, of wicked and impenitent war criminals to punish; and the necessity of disarming completely the Nazi nations. I must say a word or two about these duties of mercy, justice and security before I pass to the more permanent conditions of peace.

AS COUNTRIES are freed from the oppressor we shall find millions starving and exhausted. When some months ago I was on my way home from Russia, I met on different occasions men who had special knowledge of conditions on the Continent and in the Middle East. They all spoke in the gravest way about the position. They said in different words that starvation and oppression had worn very thin the crust of civilization, it might easily crack and all that we call civilization would be submerged by primitive despair and anarchy. Starving men care nothing about law and justice, their one passionate need is food for their families and themselves. We must be ready to feed at once the peoples as they are freed. Unless we do this a preliminary condition of lasting peace will be absent. People fighting for the means of bare existence will pay no heed to our idealistic exhortation. For the sake of food they will rob and murder. We must be ready to pour food into these countries. And this duty will not be fulfilled in a few months. It may be necessary for years to help these people in a fight against hunger. Both in your country and mine we may have to accept food restrictions long after the guns have ceased firing, so that the world may be saved from famine and pestilence. We who are Christians must lead the way in educating our peoples to accept gladly this sacrifice for the sake of our brother men who have had to pass through almost unimaginable sufferings.

THERE IS ALSO a sterner duty which will have to be accomplished by the allies. If there is to be permanent peace, the war criminals must be punished. Never in any war have crimes of such detestable cruelty been committed on such a vast scale and with such cold deliberation. If these ghastly crimes of murder and torture are allowed to pass unpunished the sense of justice in the heart of civilized man will be shocked. If the victorious allies decided to ignore these criminals by whom millions of men, women and children have been murdered and enslaved, mob vengeance and private vendettas would make Europe unsettled for many years to come. Justice and policy alike demand that the men who have been responsible for these awful crimes should meet with stern punishment.

And, thirdly, the Axis power must be completely disarmed. We do not want to take from them all hope for the future, we do not want to make them into the slaves of the victors, but we must take away from them their weapons and so deprive them of the means of again destroying the peace of mankind. The disarmament must be thorough, not only must existing arms be confiscated, but what is much more important, the means of manufacturing new weapons must be taken from them, and no other country must be allowed to supply them with munitions. The victors must not trust to the promise of the Germans and Japanese to abide by these terms, they must see that they are steadily enforced by international commissions armed and authorized to take immediate action where they detect any attempt at infringement.

From these preliminary conditions I pass to the more permanent conditions of peace. Let us be clear about our aims as Christians in creating a new order. We believe that God is the Father of men of all races and all nations, we believe it is His will that nations and individuals should live in obedience to Him and in fellowship with one another as members of a great family. We believe that all members of that family, both nations and individuals, are of value in the sight of God and that it is their duty to make the best use of any talents or gifts He has bestowed upon them and use them for His glory and in the service of their fellow men.

From this it follows that in a world according to God's will, the following characteristics would mark the relationship of nations to one another and to the whole human race.

FIRST, EVERY NATION would have political freedom to develop its own culture and to make its special contribution to the building up of a nobler civilization. This would apply to the great nations, to the peoples included within an empire, Republic, or Commonwealth, and to the smaller nations. The greater nation has its freedom to develop its own culture—the peoples within a system or union of nations should have, and often have, the freedom to develop and use their special gifts, and the smaller nations should have the security to enable them to do so. Sometimes the more powerful nations look down on the smaller nations and question the value of their independent existence. Mr. H. G. Wells in one of his best known books has a contemptuous reference to them. But our civilization would be infinitely the poorer if it had not had great and notable contributions from the city State of Athens, the small country of Palestine, and the city of Florence. The civilization of the future will suffer if Holland and Belgium, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Norway and Denmark are unable to give freely to it of their best.

Political freedom is not enough, the individual must have economic as well as political freedom. A man is not really free because he has a vote if within industry he is merely a cog in a vast machine. And the nation of which he is a member cannot give him economic freedom unless it has access to, or the use of, the natural sources of the earth. One of the most potent causes of war is the division of nations into those which have and those which have not. The nation excluded from the natural wealth of earth becomes restless and embittered. Some scheme must be devised by which all nations have some share in the riches of the earth. For this, economic co-operation is required. One of the chief causes of the failure of the Treaty of Versailles was that though on the whole its political clauses were good, it paid insufficient attention to the economic needs of the nations. In what is sometimes called "The Five Points" of the English leaders of religion there is the demand which really sums up what I am now saying, "The resources of the earth should be used as God's gifts to the whole human race, and used with due consideration for the needs of the present and future generations.' What is this but in other words a demand that God's gifts should be used for the good of the whole household of His children.

Thirdly, the relationship between States should be decided by justice and not by violence. This has two corollaries of vital importance. First there must be the progressive reduction in armament of the nations. Vast armies will not be needed if disputes are to be settled by peaceful means. The enemy nations must be disarmed as soon as possible, but if the victorious nations all remained armed to the teeth, sooner or later there will come the temptation to put some dispute to the test of force, or even a longing to prove the value of superiority of a huge and well equipped armed force. The sooner there is a reduction in the armies, the sooner will it be possible to direct great sums of money to the production of goods which benefit mankind. I doubt if, in an imperfect world, complete disarmament will ever be possible, but an all round progressive reduction in armaments should be possible until little more than a police force is left. But a general reduction in armaments will never be possible unless there is some method, other than that of war, of settling disputes between nations. I agree whole heartedly with the statement of the Commission on a "Just and Durable Peace." "We must have an organization to promote such changes in the treaty structure of the world as may be needed to keep that structure responsible toward the changes underlying future conditions. Without this no conditions of peace, however just and fair initially, will permanently assure peace."

IN A WORLD THEN in which there was peace, the nations would have political freedom, a just share in the riches of the earth, and would look to law instead of force to solve their disputes. Not one of these features of a new order could be obtained without co-operation, the small nations would not survive without the protection of the stronger; the riches of the earth would not be open to the weak without the active goodwill of the strong; and progressive disarmament is not practical without the agreement of those who are the most completely armed. What is clearly essential is some international organization or organizations which give security to the weak, arrange fair economic relationships between the nations, organize reduction in armaments and establish some means of revising obsolete treaties and agreements.

The real problem is: how is such an international body to be enforced. The last twenty-five years have taught us in tones of thunder that peace will never be secured by wishful thinking, pious resolutions, and rhetorical pacts. Something much more is required than the repeated declaration of peace loving societies and nations that war is hateful and should be abolished. Nor will the League of Nations secure the peace of mankind. It was too cumbrous to work in a time of emergency: the demand of unanimity petrified it when it should have acted; and it never had the whole hearted support of the great nations. Myself, I doubt if it is wise to attempt now to draw up a blue print for a comprehensive international organization. This no doubt will come in time. Its shape, nature and powers will emerge as the result of failures and experiments. What I am clear about is that the future peace of mankind, the peace of the world for many generations to come, will depend at first upon the closest co-operation between the three greatest of the Allies—the United States, Russia, and the British Commonwealth. These three great powers will stand out above all others when victory comes. On their future co-operation depends the peace of the world. None of us by ourselves are strong enough to make it certain that no nation might not risk braving our displeasure. But no nation, however wilful and militant, would dare risk the displeasure of the three greatest Powers. There are differences between us: our ideals are not the same in every case. Our internal policies are different, and we must respect the special characteristics of each of our allies. But it is the common interest of the three that there should be universal peace. Formal alliances and agreements may prove advisable, possibly even essential, but there must be the outcome of a determination for the three great Powers to continue into the days of peace the co-operation which will have led to victory. Other Powers would soon be associated with us. One of the earliest of these would be China-Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Holland, Norway, and others who have heroically fought the Nazi, would each make their contribution to the peace of mankind. Under the sheltering shield of the three great Powers there would be built up international organizations for the practical work of co-operation in different fields which would express and further the aims we all have at heart when we ask that the horror of war should be

"Invasion Jitters"

The press, both in this country and abroad, refers over and over again to the tension caused by the anticipated invasion of "fortress Europe." The English, after nearly five years of war, must be on edge. The occupied countries may have reached the stage of stupefaction after three to four years of subjection to tyranny. We, in this country, in spite of the heavy drain upon our man-power, are too far removed to have real "invasion jitters."

We do feel that as Christian people we should prepare ourselves now for the shock of invasion. To do this we should be thinking seriously upon our corporate guilt. The New York Times, in an editorial last Sunday, struck a very fine note. The gist of the writer's thought was this: We have reached the point where brutal ruthless methods must be used to win a victory. There is no way to turn back. We must see it through by "the way of blood and sweat and tears."

The Christian must be prepared to "carry on." He must be ready to allay "invasion jitters." He must be ready in the calm light of Christian reasoning to prepare for the victory that is to come.

St. Paul gives the clue for all Christians to follow—"God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself." God is with us!

The Church and the Chaplains

The Southern Churchman has always and will always stand back of our Army and Navy Commission. We think that they have done and are doing a fine piece of work. We happen to know a little about the busy life of the chairman of the Commission. The Bishop of Massachusetts is the bishop of a large diocese. A diocese that requires administrative oversight. He has given unstintedly of his time to the work of the Commission. Before any funds were available to carry on this important work, he personally conducted a campaign by correspondence which resulted in an initial sum being raised. This required time and energy.

We also know that both Bishop Sherrill and Dean Washburn have been careful in presenting to the commission the names of clergy who have applied for chaplaincies. We are certain that this "screening process" has proved effective because the record of our chaplains in the armed forces is good. All of this is on the positive side.

Because of our friendly attitude toward the Army and Navy Commission we dare make some suggestions. They may sound like criticism. If they sound in that nature, we trust that they will be considered constructive criticism.

The average layman and the average clergyman does not realize that a ministry in the armed forces and a ministry in civilian life are exercised along entirely different lines. The writer has served as a chaplain and knows something of the work of a chaplain. While traveling for the National Conference of Christians and Jews last year, and having the privilege of visiting many army camps and naval training stations, the writer met a fair number of our chaplains. Some of these were terribly discouraged. The Army and Navy make only the classifications Catholic, Protestant and Jew. Our men function as Protestant chaplains, not as Episcopalians. This poses a situation that some of our chaplains are not able to meet gracefully.

Our first suggestion is that the Army and Navy Commission direct the men who will be commissioned as chaplains to some retired chaplain or a man on active duty for that matter, who may clearly tell them of the many problems they will face, and how different a ministry in the services is from a ministry in civilian life. This might save many heartaches after the new chaplain reaches the Army and Navy indoctrination schools at Harvard or Williamsburg.

The second suggestion that we would make is, that the Commission hold retreats or one or two conferences for the chaplains stationed in a given area. We believe that both the Army and Navy would grant men leave for such a purpose. These conferences to be led by persons preferably who have had experience in the military or naval services. This, we believe, would give our chaplains a sense of security through continued contact with the civilian ministry.

Another suggestion we would like to make is, that the Army and Navy Commission notify Bishops of the men who are stationed at posts within their dioceses. We are sure that all Bishops would be happy to keep in touch with these men.

Further, we believe it would be helpful if the Commission would do as the Roman Church is doing, and appoint men to keep in touch, by travel if necessary, with our chaplains. Archbishop Spelman of the Roman Church, has just announced the appointment of fourteen military vicars (so called) to assist him in visiting their chaplains. The Southern Presbyterian Church has a man whose entire time is given to visiting their chaplains. We know that Bishop Sherrill paid a visit to Alaska, and has visited a great many other areas. He cannot do it alone.

Expenses? Some of the money raised by the general church could, we believe, be profitably spent in this manner. Our plea is for the church not merely to do material things through its Army and Navy Commission for our chaplains, but to minister to them spiritually, which will help them do the same thing for the men committed to their charge. Frankly, we believe this is one weakness in our Commission.

We believe that Bishop Sherrill gets a good many letters from chaplains. It would be helpful, we believe, in interesting larger numbers of people in the work of our chaplains, if the Commission would publish some of those letters. We know the church press would cooperate.

We believe in the Army and Navy Commission. We only wish to see its field of usefulness enlarged.

Western Windows

Friends All,

We are a scattered company, and our visits, one to the other, can be made only by means of the mail. Very encouraging have been your letters; many of them I would like to share so that others might be cheered. A southern man, into whose life had come a terrible tragedy, writes of the "inspiration" that Western Windows brings to him.

Infirmity deprives many of us from being active in the things of the Kingdom; some can no longer worship in their parish church. Such can continue to help by prayer. Many faithfully remember at the Throne of grace, clergy and teachers and choir and vestry and young people and servicemen, and others. God forbid that any should sin by neglecting to pray for these people. (I Samuel 12:23.) Some kind of service is within the reach of each of us. Heres' a man who has been in bed 18 years, stricken with arthritis soon after graduating from college, yet that man is the treasurer of his church.

From Connecticut another writes that the reading of the last eight or nine verses of Psalm 71 was the means of turning his helplessness into usefulness. Here is a fragment from his letter:

"Dear old friend, Western Windows, coming to me now for some two years, has been bringing new courage and determination not to give in to a broken body and advancing years while our Heavenly Father needs labourers. He has been so wonderful to me all my days; and now He finds work for me to do and gives me strength to do it. It is not what this world calls work, but each day He knows, tells me it is what He sends me to do; and I know He accepts my efforts. It may be a letter to write; a question answered; it may be a smile, as a visitor leaves me and comes again with that same smile. So now, I just want to say Thank You to you, for have you not shown me a way to serve? I have neither silver nor gold, but I have faith to send to you and to all your friends, with the prayer that it will help them while they wait also to serve in His cause, the cause of the Kingdom."

Thinking of you, I have been rejoicing in a verse familiar to most of us—"Jesus! where'er Thy people meet, there they behold the Mercy-seat; where'er they seek Thee, Thou art found, and every place is hallowed ground." Isn't that a comforting word for such as cannot reach the parish church of which Cowper wrote? (Hymnal 459)—But we have found that our homes, our rooms, our very chair or bed, have become sacred spots, hallowed ground. (See Romans 16:5 and Matthew 18:20.) A promise made long ago to a scattered people, we claim as ours: "I will be to them as a little sanctuary" (Ezekiel 11:16). The Holy Spirit has made our dwellings into an Ecclesionea Dei—God's Little Church—a Church in the House, and that is one of the great compensations experienced by those whose physical movements are limited. We belong to the same spiritual family as the man who sang out his soul in the 84th Psalm. "Blessed are they that dwell in Thy house"—Yea, and blessed, too, are all whose home, whose room, whose heart, has become another sanctuary, for then Christ's Presence hallows us; His protection is assured; His provision enriches us; His fellowship rejoices us.

Verse 11 of that 84th Psalm reads like a word from the New Testament, and indeed, the New Testament is its commentary. "The Lord will give grace and glory." Grace is redemption in its beginning, and Good Friday tells of that. Glory is redemption in its coronation, and Easter and Ascension-tide complete that story. There can be no glory apart from grace, but where there is grace there will be glory. Grace is the prelude to glory, and it is also the pledge of glory.

Have we allowed the Lord to be to us as a little sanctuary? Then the glory is as certain as the grace, and both the glory and the grace are our Father's gift to us through Jesus Christ. . . .

May we each grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To Him be glory now and forever.

My love to you all, and my gratitude for all.

B. Frank Mountford.

A JUST AND LASTING PEACE

no more and that instead mankind advance in an age of just and durable peace.

AGAINST SUCH international co-operation there will be ranged the opposing forces of national pride, greed and hatred; and sectional jealousies and interests. They will be overcome only by the power of a still stronger motive. We Christians believe we have this in our conviction that God is the Father of all mankind and that it is His Will that nations should live in peace and concord. The great aim of the Christian Church must be to bring individuals and societies to accept the Lordship of Christ. Discipleship of one Lord, devotion to one Saviour, allegiance to the one God, should draw us into a union which would enable us to transcend minor differences. I see no hope of a lasting peace unless behind it there is the passion and enthusiasm which comes from religious conviction. Force will eventually be misused, treaties and pacts will become outworn, old alliances made in days of peril will deteriorate and age long jealousies will revive unless the lovers of peace and goodwill are banded together in devotion and loyalty to God the Father above all nations. As the Churches fulfill their primary obligation of bringing mankind through Christ to God, they will be preparing the way for the establishment of lasting peace based on the acceptance of the eternal laws of God.

THE UNITED THANK OFFERING

if every woman gave the equivalent of a penny a day. Virginia would be in first or second place. We need to promote the offering, not by custodians alone, but by every woman, feeling an interest and helping reach the uninterested. Prayer, without thanksgiving is like orchestral music without the harp—together they make exquisite harmony. Our offering is already of tremendous force—surely we want to support and enlarge it.

CAN YOU?

Can you take a lot of roses and a hollyhock or two
And make a nectar finer than any witch can brew?
It is an old, old secret, known since the world began,
And if you cannot do it I know some one who can.

Can you take some tiny branches, some wool and bits of string
And make a cozy dwelling that lasts from spring to spring?
No builder through the ages has found a better plan;
And if you cannot do it I know some one who can!

LANGUAGE OF THE CITIES

Paisley shawls came originally from the Scottish city of Paisley, while the French city of Haviland gave its name to the delicate and highly prized Haviland china.

Bayonets took their name from the French city of Bayonne, nankin cloth from the Chinese city of Nanking and calico from the port of Calicut in India, from whence it was first shipped to the Western world.

The near-by Indian city of Madras gave its name to madras cloth and the Chinese city of Canton to canton cloth. Brussels sprouts bear the name of Belgium's capital city, while the first Axminster rugs and carpets were woven in the little English village of Minster on the river Axe.

Another village in England, called Worsted, gave name to the material known as worsted, while the old Arabian port of Mocha is still identified with coffee, because it was once the chief source of all the coffee used in Europe.

Cordova, one of the ancient cities of Spain, is remembered in cordovan leather, and the first cantaloupes were cultivated around the Italian city of Cantaloupo. It was for the same reason that the tangerine took its name from Tangiers on the north coast of Africa.

Marseilles is probably the only city in the world to give name to a national anthem. "Le Marseillaise" was so called because it was first sung by French people in the streets of this seaport city that faces the Mediterranean.

Venetian blinds are a reminder of Venice, while another Italian city gave name to Neapolitan ices. These were so named because Naples was one of the first European cities to sample ice cream when Marco Polo brought back the recipe from his Oriental travels.

Cremona violins are a trademark of the world's finest, because several families and several generations of expert violin-makers lived in the little Italian hill town of Cremona.—J. B. Sinclair in Girlhood Days.

DONNIE HELPS THE ROBINS

"I wish I could see the robins build their nest," said Donnie when Mother told him she believed they were going to build in the little maple tree. It was a pretty tree with foliage so thick that a nest could be hidden nicely.

"Perhaps we can help them," said Mother.

"How?" asked Donnie.

"The robins will gather grass and straw and leaves to use," answered Mother, "and they'll want something to weave them together. Maybe they will use pieces of strong grass or the little roots of plants, but if there is any string handy, I feel sure they will like that better, it would be so much easier to find."

"If I would give them a ball of string, would they use it to build a nest?" asked Donnie.

"They might not know how to manage a whole ball," said Mother, "but you could put out some pieces and see what they do."

Just outside the kitchen door was a little clothesline. Donnie cut pieces about half a yard long from his ball of string. It was good stout string. He stood on a chair so he could reach to hang the pieces on the line.

"We'll have to go inside to watch," his mother told him.

Donnie almost lost his patience watching, it was so long before a robin came. But at last one lighted on the honeysuckle vine.

He turned his head and cocked his eye. The strings were swinging in the breeze. He flew down and took one in his beak. It blew around and tangled in his claws. He jerked it loose and flew away with it.

"Will he come for another?" Donnie asked.

"We'll see," said Mother. "I'm sure he will."

In just a few minutes, back Mr. Robin came. He took one piece of string, then another and another until his beak was full.

"I think he's very greedy," laughed Donnie.

"No," said Mother, "he's not greedy. He sees how nice the string is to weave the straw and grass and little sticks into a nice nest, so he'll carry all he can at once."

"I guess he'll take a long time to weave that in," said Donnie.

"Do you know what I believe?" asked Mother. "I believe he's carrying the string to his wife and she'll weave it into the nest."

"Maybe she can build a prettier nest than he can," said Donnie. "Here he comes."

For three days Donnie kept strings on the line and the robin kept carrying them away.

At last he did not come any more. Donnie saw him hunting worms in the garden, but he didn't take any more strings.

"Their house must be done," Donnie decided.

"All but the plastering," said Mother. "The ground is so dry I don't see where they'll get mud to use in plastering their nest."

"Couldn't we make a little mud for them?" asked Donnie. "I know how."

"Sure enough," answered Mother.

So Donnie got a pan of dry earth from the garden and mixed it with water until it was a soft mud. Then he set the pan beside the bird bath and Mr. Robin and Mrs. Robin each came and took a beakful and flew away. They came again and again.

"They're plastering their nest now," Mother explained.

Presently Mr. Robin came alone to carry the mud.

"He's taking it to the nest," said Mother. "He will drop it in and Mrs. Robin will settle down in the nest and turn around and around in the mud until the nest is plastered with it. When that is finished, both of them will carry soft grass and drop it in the mud until it makes a cozy nest for the four pretty blue eggs."

One day Donnie got a peep at the nest with four little heads sticking out. They were the baby robins. Soon they could fly, and how they did cry for food. The father and mother birds had to work very hard to feed them. Soon they were as big as their parents.

"We'll always keep strings out for the robins to use, won't we, Mother?" said Donnie.—Etta W. Schlichter in Story World.

National Council April Meeting

Archbishop of York Expresses Church of England's Gratitude for Aid to Missions

New York, N. Y.—At its April meeting, The National Council received a short visit from the Archbishop of York, who expressed the gratitude of the Church of England for the aid to British Missions given by the Church in America, and urged a closer fellowship in understanding and service between the Church in England and in America.

Other visitors were the former Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. James DeWolf Perry, Bishop of Rhode Island, who spoke briefly, and the Rt. Rev. Harry Beal, Panama Canal Zone, who told of the opportunities arising from wartime populations in his territory, and plans for enlargement of facilities to meet new needs.

Council set up a "Committee on Projects and Appeals," membership to be appointed by the Presiding Bishop, its work being to secure through officers of departments and divisions of the Council requests from the fields, for funds which cannot be normally secured through budget appropriations for buildings, equipment, repairs, elimination of debt, etc. The Committee will gather information about such projects, approve or disapprove of them, when the project does not amount to more than $5,000, referring larger requests to the National Council for approval or disapproval then to present approved projects to the Church in general, in cooperation with the Department of Promotion; further, to cooperate with the Executive Board of the Woman's Auxiliary as to use of funds under its control for financing approved projects; and, finally, to recommend to National Council projects for which appropriations might be made from legacies or other funds available for work outside of the budget. The Committee at present is made up of Dr. Lewis B. Franklin, Chairman; Miss Edna Beardsley for the Auxiliary; Mr. J. Earl Fowler for the Overseas Department; Mr. Robert D. Jordan for the Department of Promotion; the Rev. Dr. George A. Weiland, for the Home Department.

Treasurer's Report

Council heard with pleasure a report by Treasurer Lewis B. Franklin to the effect that "there was due from those dioceses which have filed expectations, the sum of $277,977. Of this amount 108.3% was paid. This compares with 95% for the same period to April 1, 1943. Dr. Franklin reported also the largest receipts from legacies in any year since 1928.

Eindham House, National Council Training Center in New York City will have regular courses of study given in the House, Mrs. Arthur M. Sherman told the Council. Courses will be given by members of the faculties of General Theological Seminary and Union Theological Seminary.

Church in China

A plan to set up a central executive body of the Church in China was approved by Council. The plan was urged by the Bishops from China now in this country, as well as the American section of the Anglo-American Committee on Missionary Cooperation. The plan is to set up an organization much like our own National Council. At present a temporary setup is contemplated, with a permanent organization after the war. "It should be set up by and be responsible to the Bishops in Free China, and should in no way interfere with the direct relations between diocesan bishops, or their representatives and the mother Churches as at present established, the Council agreed, referring to the temporary plan.

The Committee of Reference of the Council is to make a study of missionary work in Mexico, with "a fraternal deputation to visit and study that mission field".

St. John's University

National Council approved the setting up of a St. John's University in Free China, with the expectation that it will ultimately be united with the existing St. John's University. Alumni have raised a considerable sum of money toward the project and the Council made a "token" gift of $2,000. In the name of St. John's University, Shanghai, National Council, acting as its Board of Founders, applied for membership for St. John's, in the Associated Boards for Christian Colleges in China. Council also accepted membership in the Committee on Cooperation in Latin America, a committee of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

Rev. Robt. A. Magill Elected Council Member

Vacancy in Council membership caused by the election of Dean Elwood L. Haines, of Louisville, Ky., to the Bishopric of Iowa, was filled by election and later acceptance of the Rev. Robert A. Magill, rector of St. John's, Lynchburg, Va.

New pastoral responsibilities growing out of the return of men from the armed services were discussed by the Rev. Dr. Almon R. Pepper, of the Council's Division of Christian Social Relations. Dr. Pepper emphasized that the need for such ministry will increase rapidly, and that the Church must be alert and awake to opportunities, and ready to supply the needed ministry, as well as to cooperate with Government and community projects on behalf of the men and women released from service.

Appointments

The Department of Promotion announced the appointment of the Rev. James W. F. Carman, rector of the Church of the Ascension, Pueblo, Colo., as the first member of the Field Staff which it is hoped to build up. Mr. Carman has a splendid parish record, Mr. Robert D. Jordan, Director of Promotion, told the Council, as well as an established record in diocesan work and community service. He will be assigned to, and will live within, the Third Province, and will take office late in the summer.

New Theme Plan of Action

Forward in Service Announces Subject of Emphasis for 1944-1945

New York, N. Y.—Forward in Service announces that its emphasis for the season 1944-1945 wil be "Christian Fellowship: International and Interracial Understanding." The Plan of Action for this period is to be presented to clergy conferences throughout the country during April, May and June. More than 70 of the dioceses and missionary districts are holding such conferences and adapting the Plan of Action to their local situations.

The Rev. Gerald F. Burrill, associate secretary for Forward in Service, comments on the new Theme and Plan of Action:

"One feature of the year's plan is the attempt that has been made to integrate the Plan of Action with the several departments of National Council and the various national organizations. This it is expected will give a more united impact on the whole life of the Church.

"The subject of this year's emphasis is of the greatest importance to our time. The most critical problem before man today is that of human fellowship. War and hatred, racial antipathies and class antagonisms are tearing asunder the human family. No greater gift could be offered man than help in solving this problem.

"These words from the Presiding Bishop's address to the Joint Session of General Convention make clear the task of the Church for this triennium:

" 'Bringing men to Christ and fellowship with one another in Christ are two ways in which we can help Him bring His redemptive power to bear upon the world of today. The scope of both these endeavors must be greatly widened if the Church is to make its proper contribution to the making of a new and better world. . . . World evangelism as a means to world fellowship must be the aim of every parochial, every diocesan, and every general Church program.'

"The Presiding Bishop urges Christian people to concern themselves with international and interracial understanding. The Christian Church has a real answer to this problem. In Christ there is a fellowship which transcends differences of nation, race, and class.

"The Lambeth Encyclical of 1920 says:

" 'The secret of life is fellowship. So men feel, and it is true. But fellowship with God is the indispensable condition of human fellowship. The secret of life is the double fellowship, fellowship with God and with men. . . . And so He has called into being a fellowship of men, His Church, and sent His Holy Spirit to abide therein, that by the prevailing attraction of that one Spirit, He, the one God and Father of all, may win over the whole human family to that fellowship in Himself, by which alone it can attain to the fullness of life.

" 'This then is the object of the Church. In the prosecution of this object it must take account of every fellowship that exists among men, must seek to deepen and purify it, and above all to attach it to God. But in order to accomplish its object, the Church must itself be a pattern of fellowship. . . . The more our minds are filled with the hopes of seeing the universal fellowship in full and free activity, the more zealous ought we be to improve and strengthen in every way the fellowship of our own Church.'

Plan of Action

"The Plan of Action for 1944-45 will endeavor to bring about a greater realization of the fellowship inherent in the Church. Members of the Church must realize that as Christians we are members of one another and that we are bound together in a unique way. The evidence of the concern of the whole Christian family for every one of its members is seen in the Book of Common Prayer in the use of the occasional offices—Baptism, Confirmation, Marriage, times of sickness and death. We are bound together by prayer and sacrament.

"A realization of this fellowship of the redeemed depends also upon an intelligent membership. Forward in Service recommends the study of the Christian Doctrine of God in Lent, 1944-45. Our belief about God will inevitably affect our relations with other races and nations.

"The Plan of Action urges that we use every effort to extend the fellowship not only throughout the world, but by personal evangelism in our parish at home. Furthermore, we must interest our young people in offering themselves for special work in the Church. The extension of the fellowship after the war depends largely upon our young people.

"At the spring conference now being held, methods material is presented to the clergy to assist them in applying this year's emphasis in their own parish. These method booklets are written by clergy who have been successful in carrying out such work in their own parish.

"Forward in Service presents a year's program of worship, education, and service that with God's help will help our Church to go forward."

BISHOP OF BRITISH HONDURAS CHOSEN

The Archbishop and Bishops of the Province of the West Indies have selected the Very Rev. William James Hughes, Dean of British Guiana, to be the new Bishop of British Honduras, to succeed the Most Rev. E. A. Dunn, who resigned a year ago as Archbishop of the Province, having served as Bishop of British Honduras for twenty-six years. The retired Archbishop is now living at Bergerville Placencia, British Honduras.

New Mission Consecrated

Building, Bought at Auction, Paid for by Competitive Bidder

New Roads, La.—Holy Trinity Church was consecrated on April 16 by Bishop Jackson in the presence of a large congregation which included many visitors. The Bishop also dedicated several gifts for the furnishing of the new church, one of which was an altar book and Missal stand, given by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Miller of Baton Rouge. Ten were confirmed in this old but newly activated mission of the diocese.

Holy Trinity had owned two well located lots for many years, but a building had never been erected. At one time the Council of the Diocese had seriously considered disposing of the land. But under the energetic leadership of the present Rector, the Rev. Mr. Edwin L. Conly, the congregation was revived and is now an active, though small, group.

The main portion of the new church was at one time a building owned by a government agency, which was offered at competitive auction sale. Mr. Conly, bidding for his people, reached his limit and reluctantly saw an outsider top his best bid, which he decided to meet. Turning to his opponent, Mr. Conly remarked that the bid had cost the church more than it had expected to pay. The other man said that he did not know he was bidding against a church, and said he would send a check for the difference. Mr. Conly received a check, but it was for the full amount of the cost, not simply for the difference.

The purchase of the building itself was merely the first step. The next was to move it to the land already owned by the church, on the main street of New Roads, to re-erect it on concrete foundations, and to add a porch, vestibule, and vesting room. The interior was then improved by white boardings, electric fixtures installed, and carpets laid down. The altar, before a blue silk reredos, and with a tastefully designed frontal, was the final step, making ready for consecration to God one more of the many smaller rural missions which are so important in the Diocese of Louisiana.

Bishop Barnwell Makes Strong Address at Annual Convention

Savannah, Ga.—Stressing two things, the Forward in Service program of the diocese and deploring the fetishes of nations and race prejudice, Bishop Barnwell made a strong address at the opening of the diocesan convention at St. John's Church, Savannah, on the evening of April 18. For the Forward in Service program the Bishop named three priorities: First, to remodel the Christ Church property in Augusta, where the parish house has been condemned by the city as unfit and unsafe for use. Christ Church is located in the cotton mill district of the city. The second priority is to build a combination parish house and rectory at Jesup, a thriving little city of southeast Georgia. There is already a beautiful little church there with an enthusiastic congregation.

The third priority is to merge the two Negro parishes of the city and to build a beautiful Church, parish house and rectory second to none in the city. The National Council will be responsible for the buildings, but the diocese is desirous of furnishing the building lot. One of these parishes is in a section of the city where few Negroes now live. The other is in great disrepair and is in an unattractive location. To make these improvements will require, according to estimates, about $25,000.

From here, Bishop Barnwell went on to speak of world conditions as they might be and should be. Of the unity that may not be possible now among the different religious bodies, but will some day exist; of the world in which national boundary lines will mean no more than those between states of our country; and of the fetish of race prejudice.

He said that "this world is passing through the Golgotha of today because of these arbitrary lines of national and racial division. . . . We have drawn imaginary lines to divide nation from nation, but God has not.

A boundary line may be a bond of union as it is between Georgia and Alabama, or it may be a barrier separating God's children from each other, as it is between ..... and Germany. What a boundary line is depends upon us and not on God. We can make it a bond or a barrier. What we make it depends on the kind of mind we have. If we have a cooperative mind, it becomes the tie that binds. If we have competitive minds, it divides. But never forget that our state of mind is the determining factor.

"The next fetish which must go is what we call national sovereignty. This means, of course, that a strong nation is free to knock a weaker nation on the head and take away its rightful possessions. . . .

"The next fetish which must go is that of race prejudice; a belief in the inherent superiority of the people of my race over the people of another. This is the thing which has made the Germans and the Japanese what they are. . . .

"These three things which are chiefly wrong with the world today, and they have nothing to do with the outward forms of life, but entirely with our inner attitudes.

"The world cannot be altered for the better by changing markets, boundaries or masters, but only by changing hearts, and I know of nothing which can do this except the renewing Gospel and the constraining love of Christ, and living faith in the reality of God, who is the Father of us all."

The Bishop said that the prejudice "that wars are inevitable because man is by nature a fighting animal is not true." He said, "that man by nature is a child of God and would rather have friends than enemies."

The convention and the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary opened Tuesday evening, with a short devotional service conducted by the Rev. Allen B. Clarkson of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Augusta. The men and boys' choir sang. Bishop Barnwell gave his annual address, following which the rector of St. John's, the Rev. Ernest Risley, welcomed the conventions and announced that the Woman's Auxiliary would meet for organization in order to shorten the next day's work. The convention formally opened the next morning with a celebration of the Holy Communion, the Rev. Thomas Mundy of Christ Church, Valdosta, being the celebrant.

Another matter of great interest that came before the Convention was the Laymen's Conference that is to be held at Camp Reese from Friday evening, June 9 through Sunday, June 11. Two laymen from each parish and mission will be selected by their rector to attend. The diocese will pay travel and other expenses. Among those to be present will be the Rev. William Campbell and the Rev. Louis Melcher of Trinity Church, Columbia, S. C.

The Convention voted to meet at St. Paul's Church, Albany, Ga., next year on April 14-15, 1945.

Five Camps at Camp Reese, Public School Teachers Request One

Savannah, Ga.—An additional gift of $750, to be used by the Bishop as part of the salary for a priest to take charge of the missions at Bainbridge and Baxley was decided upon at the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary held in St. John's Church, Savannah, April 18 and 19. Each branch of the Woman's Auxiliary has been prorated so much. Since the retirement of the Rev. Herbert Scott-Smith, some five or six years ago, Bainbridge has had no regular services, but there is a church there. Baxley will be a new mission.

At a joint meeting of the Convention and Woman's Auxiliary, arranged by the Department of Christian Education, it was announced that due to there having been such an overflow at the camps at Camp Reese last year, that there would be five camps this year. They will run continuously from June 12 through August 19. They include camps for boys, college and adult, girls 11-12 and another for girls 13-14, and high school.

A most interesting request was that from some of our public school teachers who are running into pupil problems with mothers doing war work, or otherwise employed, for a short camp for them to specialize in how to approach their pupils spiritually. So a camp will be held for them. Applications have also come from out of town teachers, also.

BEQUESTS

Owosso, Mich.—The will of the late Mrs. Jennie H. Osburn, long a communicant of Christ Church, Owosso, contained a generous bequest for Christ Church, and her home to be used as a rectory. Mrs. Osburn also bequeathed $5,000 to the trustees of the Diocese of Michigan, the income to be used for diocesan Missionary work.

MOTHERS' DAY APPEAL FOR WORK WITH DELINQUENTS

Richmond, Va.—Juvenile delinquency is a subject that is falling into the category of Mark Twain's proverbial "weather." We are talking about it a great deal but doing very little about it.

Dreams Do Come True

For six years we have been dreaming of answering a call for a special full-time director of religious education for the Bon Air Industrial School. Our hopes are about to be realized. We have secured a well-trained worker and six hundred dollars has been pledged for the support of the work.

This school is under the Department of Public Welfare of the State of Virginia and is charged with the responsibility of training and rehabilitating girls between the ages of twelve and eighteen who have been committed as wards of the State by the juvenile courts and local departments of public welfare across Virginia.

For many years we have had regular Sunday activities including worship services in which ministers of Richmond have cooperated and for several years we have had a Thursday night recreation program participated in by young people's groups of this area. Last summer a special committee investigated the possibility of having a Daily Vacation Bible School. There were many handicaps but out of this study came the conviction that we ought to have a religious education program integrated with the training program of the institution and that anything less than this would be inadequate. Immediately we began a search for a worker and now we are attempting to provide the financial means necessary to pay the salary and provide materials for the program.

Interest in Juvenile Delinquency

Church groups throughout the nation and in Virginia have been interested in doing something to stem the tide of juvenile delinquency. Our churches have a job at home which is preventive; this we must do. We have a job which is curative and this must be done also. This job has to be done cooperatively in the institutions to which our youth go.

STATEMENT

From the Dean of the Philadelphia Divinity School

Philadelphia, Pa.—As some confusion exists in the academic world, due to war conditions, it seemed advisable to the Joint Boards, of the Philadelphia Divinity School, at their meeting of March 20, to issue a statement.

The Undergraduate school will continue under the New Plan of Theological Education, which was begun in 1937; this includes Clinical Training as a part of that Plan, in the Department of Pastoral Theology.

Likewise the Boards desire to continue the Department of Women in accordance with the existing agreement between them and the Board of the Church Training and Deaconess House.

A Committee of the Boards consisting of the Rev. Dr. E. Frank Salmon, Chairman; Canon Ernest C. Earp, the Rev. James M. Collins, Dr. Owen J. Toland, and the Dean, is now at work considering the selection of a Professor of Systematic Divinity who should begin his work at the opening of school in September, 1944.

Another committee consisting of the Rev. Dr. James M. Niblo, Chairman; the Rev. Dr. Leicester C. Lewis, the Rev. Chauncey E. Snowden, Mr. Rowland Evans and the Dean, is now working on a revision of the constitution and by-laws and the reorganization of the Boards into one single Board. The proposed revision will be available shortly and after consideration at a special meeting, will be acted upon finally at the Annual Meeting in June.

As soon as the new appointments to the Faculty have been made the Graduate Department will resume its program under the direction of the Rev. Dr. Lewis.

The Bishop of the Diocese and the Executive Committee of the Boards consider the present financial condition of the school to be the best since it was reopened in 1937. In that connection several bequests have been received recently as follows:

1. The Arkin Bequest of $16,000, which has been added to the Endowment Fund.
2. The Beins Bequest to St. Andrew's Chapel of $2,000.
3. The Baird Bequest, which should amount to approximately $1,900.
4. The Pearson Bequest, subject to several life interests in an estate worth approximately $1,600,000. The school's one-sixth interest should ultimately be worth about $150,000.

Rt. Rev. Oliver J. Hart,
President for the Joint Boards.

New York, N. Y.—Columbia University conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws upon the Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Cyril Forster Garbett at a special Convocation held on Tuesday, April 25, in the Low Memorial Library.

The citation for the degree read:

"The Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Cyril Forster Garbett, Lord Archbishop of York, Primate of England, and Metropolitan: outstanding representative of the religious thought of the English people and forward-facing leader in their public service; scholar, author, and honored spokesman of the Church of England; now bringing to the American people a welcome message of faith, of friendship and good will.

"I gladly admit you to the degree of Doctor of Laws in this University and confer upon you all the rights and privileges which attach thereto."

FIDDESOF JOINS THE NAVY

Washington, D. C.—The Brotherhood of St. Andrew announces the enlistment of its Executive Secretary and Editor of Saint Andrew's Cross. Lt. (jg) Harrison Fiddesof recently volunteered and is now on active duty with the U. S. Navy. During the last four years Harry has been a member of the leadership group of this sixty year old men's organization of our Church. He is a communicant at St. Alban's in Washington, and in the past has been director of the Brotherhood chapter in this parish. He was a member of the Youth Commission of the National Church and was in close contact with Forward in Service, the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work and the Army and Navy Commission. He was also a member of Justice Roberts' Nominating Committee, which recommended several priests of the Church to the convention which elected Angus Dun Bishop of Washington.

The Episcopal Canteen at the Church of the Epiphany in downtown Washington was started by Harry and several of his associates and is now being copied in other cities because of its continued effectiveness. Saint Andrew's Cross, the official publication of the Brotherhood, has been markedly improved under Lt. Fiddesof's four-year editorship and continues to be a strong Church paper.

The Brotherhood also announces that the National offices have been moved from 1010 Vermont Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C., to 105 West Monument Street, Baltimore 1, Maryland, headquarters for the Episcopal Church in the Diocese. Bishop Powell has been hospitable in inviting the Brotherhood to come to the Church Headquarters in Maryland.

NATIONAL COUNCIL

Appointment of Mr. William E. Leidt as editor of "FORTH" was announced by the Presiding Bishop. Mr. Leidt has been doing much of the work on FORTH for some time, and he now becomes, officially, its editor. He has been at Church headquarters since 1922, first doing work in connection with Missionary Education, then as associate editor of The Spirit of Missions, and lately in charge of all the Council's printing production.

An appeal to be made privately to interested persons, was authorized by the Council for maintenance of Conscientious Objectors. There are 81 men who are members of the Episcopal Church, and who because of their religion, cannot engage in war, and the proposed fund is to aid in their support under the regulations laid down by the Government.

United Church Canvass Dates

United Church Canvass Dates and Episcopal Church Every Member Canvass dates will be the same this year, November 12-December 3.

Announcement was made of the forthcoming new publication of the National Council, CHURCHWAYS, a "methods" paper superseding five papers at present produced by departments and divisions of the National Council and the Woman's Auxiliary. The new paper will be out Sept. 1.

The critical situation arising as a result of the war, in the securing of recruits for the Ministry was described by the Rev. Dr. Alden D. Kelley, of the Council's Division of College Work. Acting upon his suggestion, National Council authorized the setting up of a committee of representatives of agencies interested in men in the armed forces who may be potential clergymen, to consider and take action on questions involved in meeting the needs of those men who will become the future ministers of the Church.

National Council discussed 1945 quotas. In accord with the action of General Convention, the 1945 budget is to be $2,677,132. The total of quotas to be apportioned for 1945 is to be $1,944,402. Items going toward the budget total include lapsed balances, estimated share of the United Thank Offering, Interest on Trust Funds, miscellaneous receipts, etc. A standing committee on quotas is to be appointed, to make a constant study of the whole quota question.

Just before closing, Council passed a resolution expressing gratitude and appreciation to the officers and staff at Church Missions House for "the extraordinarily efficient manner in which the Church's business is carried on."

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

Sundaies observe: think when the bells do chime,
'Tis angels' music; therefore come not late.
—George Herbert.

Force yourself to do little things well and you will do big things well from habit.—Stephens.

This is how people get to know God—by doing His will. And there is no other way.—Henry Drummond.

More prayer, more exercise of faith, more patient waiting, and the result will be blessing, abundant blessing.

God can use anyone of whom He has the whole personality.—Canadian Churchman.

He came, He said, to give men life, true life, a more abundant life than they were living. This is what He Himself possessed, and it was this which He offered to all mankind. And hence His direct appeal for all to come to Him who had not made much of life, who were weary and heavy laden. These He would teach His secret. They, also, should know the life that is life indeed. —Henry Drummond.

He is the freeman whom the truth
makes free,
And all are slaves besides.
—Cowper.

"The substance of the Gospel," concludes Bishop Lightfoot in the Preface to his great commentary on Philippians, "is neither a dogmatic system nor an ethical code, but a Person and a Life."

"I sometimes think we have spent time on picturing the united Church when we should have been practicing the way of fellowship to it. You cannot have reunion without fellowship, but you can have fellowship without reunion. When there is true fellowship there will also come the demand for the expression of this in corporate and visible union."—Selected.

One night a little girl fell out of her bed; but she was soon tucked in again by her mother. The next day, upon being asked how she happened to fall out, she answered simply, "I must have stayed too near to where I got in." And that is the cause for more than one person's falling out spiritually.

We are not out to build the New Jerusalem: God alone can do that, and she will come down from Heaven in His good time. Our task is to do the will of God as it confronts us in this world at this time; to tackle it in passionate conviction of faith, and to leave the issue to Him. If this generation can devise a workable scheme of international peace and security, it will do a notable bit of work for God. We should be able to do it—we can, if we care enough.—Scottish Guardian.

Christ is present as Judge in every opportunity which knocks at our door, and stands as an Avenger among us in every crisis which shakes the world. It is a tragedy that He should so often knock in vain and His Presence pass unnoticed. Therefore He bids us "Watch."—The Rev. S. Getty.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

NOTE OF REPENTANCE NEEDED

April 29, 1944.

My dear Mr. Boyd:

I just want to write this line of thanks to you for your editorial on the spirit of Invasion Day and the necessity of repentance.

As you probably know, Bishop Tucker telegraphed all the bishops, urging that we suggest to the rectors that we invite the people into "open churches for united prayer for God's blessing upon our armed forces and on all who minister to their needs, and for an early, honorable, and lasting peace."

To this, I added a portion of your editorial, when I wrote to the clergy, as I felt that this note of repentance needed to be sounded.

I wanted to express my appreciation for its help.

Yours faithfully,
W. APPLETON LAWRENCE.
Springfield, Mass.

PROJECT IDEA APPEALS TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

New York, N. Y.—Endorsement of the "project" idea comes from St. Mary's Church School, Reading, Pa., to the National Council. Miss Ethel H. Imschweiler writes that the school reached the goal set for its Lenten Offering, $178. The children seemed very much more interested this year in having a specific project for which to work, and we were especially interested in the Negro Parochial School, due to the fact that we have a Negro Mission in connection with St. Mary's, which, though small, is very active. In fact, they made a small but welcome contribution to the Offering.

SPEAKERS FOR THREE FAITHS MARKED RELIGIOUS BOOK WEEK ON BROADCAST

New York, N. Y.—A round-table discussion of the outstanding religious books of the year marked a special broadcast in honor of "Religious Book Week" Saturday, May 6 (NBC, 2:00-2:15 P. M., EWT). Representatives of the three major faiths spoke on the program under the auspices of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

This second annual "Religious Book Week" is being observed May 7-14. Eight special committees of prominent clergymen, educators, authors and librarians, representing all faiths, have been appointed to select 200 outstanding religious books.

The three participants on the broadcast are: Maurice Samuel, author of "The World of Sholom Aleichem," which has just received an award, representing the Jews; Mrs. Maisie Ward, author and lecturer and co-partner of the publishing firm of Sheed and Ward, speaking for the Catholics; and Dr. L. Wendell Fifield, pastor of the Plymouth Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y., spokesman for the Protestants.

SEMINAR FOR CLERGY SHRINE MONT, JULY 17-28

Shrine Mont, Va.—The Fifteenth Annual Shrine Mont Seminar for Clergy of the General Church will be held from Monday, July 17 to July 28. Some twenty dioceses usually are represented by attending bishops and clergy. Often members of their families accompany them and share in the congenial fellowship of the vacation season which extends from May through October.

As usual the Presiding Bishop of the Church leads the faculty with several lectures. Bishop Walker of Atlanta will give a full ten lecture course on Faith, so profoundly needed in this world crisis and tragedy.

The Rev. Gerald F. Burrill, of the Forward Movement, lectures on "Christian Fellowship." The Rev. William C. Roberts of the Diocese of Maryland gives a stimulating and scholarly course on "Current Religious Issues in Theology"—also a ten lecture course. The Chaplain of the Seminar will be the Rev. Dr. Edmund J. Lee, for a quarter of a century missionary in the heart of China, and now Rector of Chatham Hall, Va.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

MANY PEOPLE reach the point where they feel they can "stand it" no longer. When and if this moment comes to any of us, it is the signal for questioning: have I tried every possible means for solving the impasse? have I tapped all the resources available? 99% of the time we find there are avenues yet unexplored, one of which will usually relieve the tension and remove the terrific pressure which has brought us up to the breaking point. The things we have left undone or the things we have done are usually clearly a part of the total picture of the reasons for this "end-of-rope" state of mind. But the frantic grabbing at straws in prayer, and ripping through books, and talking with another, and making good resolutions often finds us no nearer the solution; in fact these attempts at getting something have only accentuated the condition and deepened the feeling that we can stand it no longer. What can we do?

FIRST, quit the panic approach. The jig is not up yet, and the fear for what will happen to "poor me" muddles the mind and leads one into the whirlpool of repetition and frustration. Even when leads are available, such a state of mind is too jittery and blank to recognize and grasp them. Calm the panic by attempting a quiet time, repeating the 23rd Psalm slowly or some other remembered phrases that remind us that "in quietness and in confidence" we shall find the way out.

SECOND, give up the expectation of a miracle at the instant of our demand. The situation has probably developed over a long period of time and we have undoubtedly been standing it more or less successfully for years. Therefore, we must realize that it may take some time to get things reasonably straight. We must keep moving toward every opening as fast as we can. Even when the next step looks as if we would go under—like Jean Valjean in the rescue of Marius through the sewers of Paris where the foul waters got deeper at every step. Jean Valjean went on because he saw a crack of light, even though the next step meant going down beyond his height. His second step, however, was up, and both were saved. God may be making some costly demands of us before we are released from a situation that is seldom all the other fellow's fault. Remember how the evil spirit convulsed the demoniac before he came out of him? Release is often costly. Are we willing to pay the price?

THIRD, we must honestly face the question, wherein am I to blame for this "unendurable" condition? This question usually leads us into a long journey of self-discovery and the need for getting many things straight with God and the other or others involved in our plight. We must be sure we have removed the planks from our own eyes. We'll find oftentimes our situation grows more bearable as we do all that lieth in us to make it right.

FOURTH, put aside your books. We read books only to help us catch that one thread which unravels the knitted garment of our misery. This same thing is true when we talk with others. It is fairly easy to get leads on what to do. The biggest difficulty is actually to do what we know is the right thing, especially if it involves self-discovery. We are too prone to weigh our chances of the survival of our own righteousness, and choose the path of least resistance. Some people had rather continue in an "unbearable" relationship than take steps toward the light.

O Lord, from whom all good things do come; Grant to us Thy humble servants, that by Thy holy inspiration we may think those things that are good, and by Thy merciful guiding may perform the same; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

COLLECT FOR THE ASCENSION DAY

Grant, we beseech Thee, Almighty God, that like as we do believe Thy only-begotten Son our Lord Jesus Christ to have ascended into the heavens; so we may also in heart and mind thither ascend, and with Him continually dwell, who liveth and reigneth with Thee and the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The Gospel of the Exaltation

By FREDERICK W. NEVE

THE FIRST FEW YEARS after the present war will constitute one of the most important epochs in human history because it is the general desire of all the leading nations to lay down the foundations upon which they will endeavor to build up such a new and better order of things as can be counted on to last for centuries to come. The creation of such a new order will depend, in a very great measure, upon the unselfish desire of those who will take a prominent part in this great work to provide for the universal good rather than for the special interest of their own particular nation or for the particular class to which they belong.

It affords, therefore, an opportunity to the Christian Church, through its leaders, to point out that the only way to insure the permanence of such an order is to recognize the fact that this world was specially created and man placed upon it in order to fulfill the Divine Purpose. This Purpose has been made clear to us by God sending His Son into the world to make Himself known to us and what His will and purpose is with regard to us. The rulers of the Allied Nations, or their representatives, may meet in conference to decide what is the best means of establishing permanent peace and promotion of good will and friendly intercourse between the different nations of the world. But unless such a conference is willing to put the Divine Purpose first and foremost before everything else, its plans and decisions, however promising they may seem to be, cannot hope to create an order of things which is destined to meet with lasting success.

IT IS WELL TO REMEMBER that Christ's coming into the world and the great work that He accomplished while He was here, formed merely the beginning of His connection with the World Order into which He had entered and become a part when He was born at Bethlehem. His Ascension did not mean that He was severing His connection with the world which He had come to save, for in one of His appearances to His disciples, after His resurrection, He expressly stated, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," thus promising that His Spiritual Presence would be with them at all times. And there are many occasions in the New Testament when He is mentioned as present after His ascension, as, for instance, more especially on the occasion of the conversion of St. Paul. It must be remembered that the period of His Humiliation ceased after His resurrection, for St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Philippians 2:8-12, draws a distinction between the two periods of His Humiliation and His exaltation in this way: "And being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

If Christ then is present with His Church here on earth, it is as the Exalted Son of God, as King of Kings and Lord of Lords, with all the power pertaining to Him, as holding this exalted position, for we must remember that Christ said after He was risen, not only "Lo, I am with you alway even to the end of the world," but also, "All power is given unto Me in Heaven and in earth." His humiliation is over, it is as Christ is now that His Church is endowed with the power which should carry all before her.

The Gospel of Christ's Humiliation reveals to us how completely Christ, the Son of God, made Himself one with us, and by so doing was enabled to carry out the great work of redemption which was completed by the offering of Himself to God, on our behalf on the Cross of Calvary. And it is because of this that He is able to bring all the divine resources to bear upon the needs of mankind, and His Church should be able, in union with Him, to establish His Kingdom here on earth. We cannot separate His Humiliation from His Exaltation, for God, Himself, knit them together when He exalted Him to His Right Hand, and what God hath joined together let no man put asunder.

THE GOSPEL OF THE EXALTATION not only assures us that Christ was raised to God's right hand, but also that all power in heaven and in earth was given to Him. That He would use this supreme power for the benefit of mankind is made certain by the fact that in His humiliation He gave all that He had to give in order that our redemption might be secured. Since He gave all then, we may be sure that He is willing to share all that He has to give now for mankind, and in the Epistle to the Ephesians, St. Paul states clearly that he prayed for his Ephesian converts as follows: "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened, that ye may know . . . what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of His mighty power, which He wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places." St. Paul evidently considered that the Divine Power was to be shared in by all of Christ's followers, and the question arises as to what Christians generally were to do with this power, and for what purpose they could use it. In their case it was certainly intended to enable them to carry forward the work of Christ in the world by making it what Christ wanted it to be, in other words, to bring in the Kingdom of God upon earth.

THE FIRST DUTY, therefore, of the Christian Church is to bring in the Kingdom of God by setting before the world, plainly and courageously, that Christ alone can save the world, not only as individuals but as a world Order. If this is the Divine purpose, then, however impossible to us it may seem to be, we must believe that the Power of God working through His Church can certainly bring it to pass.

"Now unto Him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto Him be glory in the Church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen."

Christ waits serene till we awake and see
His vision of the earth as it would be
If He could always count on you and me.

Address Before the Church Club of New York

By THE MOST REV. AND RIGHT HON. CYRIL FORSTER CARBETT, ARCHBISHOP OF YORK

DURING THE WAR, organized religion has experienced many difficulties. First and foremost there has been the destruction of many churches by the raids. In all, including all denominations, over 1100 have been completely destroyed or seriously damaged, while nearly 3000 have been less seriously damaged. In one night in Southampton six Churches were destroyed. Some of the largest parish churches in England have been destroyed—Great Yarmouth, Plymouth, and St. Mary Abbott, Kensington. Coventry Cathedral, the R. C. Cathedral of Southwark have been destroyed; Exeter and Manchester, in addition to St. Paul's, damaged.

The blackout has seriously interfered with attendance at evening services, often the most largely attended; it has often been necessary to move the hour of church service to the afternoon in the winter months.

In addition war work has made it impossible for large numbers of regular worshippers to attend Church. They are away from their homes on active service; or working in some munition factory; or drilling in the Home Guard. Nor must we forget that most of our younger clergy are serving as Chaplains, so that the parishes are understaffed and much work has had to be suspended.

These causes have led to a falling off in Church attendance.

ON THE OTHER HAND there are encouraging features in the present position: First, there is a growing conviction that the old scientific materialism is bankrupt; that neither nations nor individuals can live by bread alone. It is felt that it is absurd for a nation to fight for spiritual ideals if its people are ignorant of the source from whence they come. So there is the demand, largely met by a new Education Bill, that religion should be carefully taught in all our schools. The desire for some expression of the spiritual is seen in the large crowds which attend places of worship on special days of prayer, and the observance of the one moment of private prayer at 9 P. M.

Secondly, there is greater friendliness and closer cooperation between all Christian Churches. An illustration of this was the acceptance of the Pope's foundations of peace by all the leaders of religion in Great Britain.

Thirdly, there is increasing recognition that religion has a social message. That it must bear its witness against social injustice and demand food, homes, work, and good education for all.

Fourthly, there is every hope we shall have a good supply of ordinands when the war is over. Over 2000 now in the forces are enrolled as possible candidates for ordination. We shall require large sums of money to train them.

And I must add how fortunate we are at the present critical time to have William Temple as Archbishop of Canterbury. In intellectual power he stands head and shoulders above the rest of us. He has great courage and vision. Many of us believe he will prove one of the greatest Archbishops the Church of England ever has had.

I HAVE ALSO BEEN ASKED to give some impressions of my recent visit to Russia.

(1) I was deeply impressed by the vigor, vitality and strength of this great ally. Its resources are enormous; its population vast; the youthfulness of its citizens, nearly half under 21 years of age; the children I saw looked happy and well cared for. Russia has a great future, and whether we like it or not, will play a great part in the future of the human race.

(2) It is a socialist rather than a communist state. Its citizens can keep what they have earned; they may have savings, furniture, jewelry, motors, even houses of their own. There is considerable difference in the amount paid in wages. But while private property is permitted and all things are not held in common, the State possesses and works all the means of production and distribution. It owns all the land and all the industries.

(3) There is an undoubted revival of religion. Complete freedom of worship within their churches is granted to all religions. Anti-god propaganda has been suspended, godless museums are closed, and respect for religion is encouraged. The Orthodox Church has greater freedom than it ever had under the Tsars. The Churches are crowded, though many are still closed or secularized. The change in the Soviet attitude towards the Church is due to the recognition that religion cannot be eradicated, that a large proportion of the people of Russia are religious, that the Church now supports loyally the Soviet regime and strengthens national resistance to the common enemy.

IN CONCLUSION I WANT to answer the question, "What is the spirit of England after nearly five years of war?" Of course we are tired, we have gone through hard times, we are without many of the comforts of life. We have homes broken up. We feel the strain of suspense, and the bitter pangs of bereavement. But the nation is unshaken in its determination to fight until complete Victory is gained. We are completely united in this resolution. Men and women of all creeds and political parties are of one mind and heart in this. We have very few pacifists, though we all hate war. We have never wavered in our determination to fight until Victory is won and we never shall waver. We shall fight until the tyranny of Germany is smashed, and we shall then continue to fight until the tyranny of Japan meets the same fate. We have a splendid war leader in Winston Churchill and the nation stands solidly behind him. We are confident that Victory will be won, though we know only at a great cost. And when Victory is won with God's help we hope, with you and our other allies, to build up a new and better order, in which the nations are governed not by force and violence, but by law and justice.

At the Dinner Given in Honor of the Archbishop of York by the Church Club of New York at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel on Wednesday, April 26, 1944

Mr. President, Most Reverend, Right Reverend, and Reverend Fathers, Members and Guests of the Church Club:

WE WELCOME with all our hearts the guest of honor here tonight, the Archbishop of York, and we feel it an especially happy thing that the Archbishop is here at this dinner as the guest of our Church Club which represents so largely and generally the life of our Diocese.

In my own name, and in yours, I assure the Archbishop that our entire Diocese joins in welcoming him here among us. The Archbishop comes to us as the Representative of our Mother Church, the Historic Catholic Church of England, and he comes to us from the Ancient See and City of York. In 1927 I had the great honor and privilege of preaching at the 1300th Anniversary of the Glorious Minster of York, and of carrying a message from New York to Old York. It was the thirteen-hundredth anniversary of continuous worship on the site where that noble Minster stands. We have in New York, at present, no such history as that, but it has given me great pleasure to show the Archbishop the Cathedral that we are building in this metropolis of the Western Hemisphere, and I will tell him one of the numerous stories that are told about our Cathedral, a story which no doubt many of you have heard. The Nave of our Cathedral, from wall to wall, is eleven feet wider than St. Peter's in Rome. A boy from the West was shown through the building as thousands are, and was told that fact among others. In his letter home about it, he spelled the word Nave with a K— and he wrote "This Cathedral has a bigger Knave in it than St. Peter's at Rome." I enjoy telling that story to our Roman Catholic friends, because it is perfectly fair and cuts both ways.

The See of York has a marvellous history. For more than 300 years the tramp of the Roman Legions was heard in the streets of York. In 314 the Bishop of York attended the Council of Arles. In 627, Paulinus, the first Archbishop of York, baptized King Edwin of Northumbria, with many of his nobles and people, on the very site where York Minster now stands. But we are not envious of our brethren in York. We do not envy their wonderful history, because we claim it for our own, we claim that great Minster, and all that it stands for, as a part of the history and heritage of the Episcopal Church and we welcome the Archbishop among us, not as someone from the outside but as one of our own Communion and of our own Household of Faith.

IN THE NAME OF our whole Diocese I want to say three things to the Archbishop.

1st. We in the Episcopal Church and in the Diocese of New York value beyond all earthly measure the heritage of the Catholic and Apostolic Faith which we received from our Mother, the Church of England, and which we hold in common with the whole of the Anglican Communion, the Faith, the Sacraments, and the Three-fold Ministry of Bishops, Priests and Deasons, as they have been held in all the continuous life of the Holy Catholic Church from the Apostles' time.

We stand with the Church of England, and with the whole Anglican Communion, for that Faith in all its Divine Reality as it is given to us in the Prayer Book, and as it was expressed by our own great Bishop of New York, John Henry Hobart, in that Watch-Word and Rallying-Cry with which he called the Episcopal Church in this land out of a condition of deepest discouragement back to clear conviction, back to faith and life and realization of her Mission, the Watch-Word—"Evangelical Truth and Apostolic Order."

And we in the Episcopal Church know that it is by bearing our witness faithfully for the Divinely-given principles of Christ's Church that we shall do our true part for the coming of a true World-Wide Christian Reunion, and for the whole cause of Christ's Religion in this World.

2nd. We realize the immeasurable debt that America owes, and that the world owes, to Britain in this great World Crisis. We do not forget, and shall not forget, those days when Britain stood alone and Winston Churchill spoke those words to the British people which will live through all history.

We pay full honor to the magnificent achievements of Russia, and to the indomitable spirit of China, we honor greatly the heroic people of Greece and of Yugo-Slavia and all those who have resisted, and are still resisting, so far as possible, the brutal power which has attacked them, but we know that in the hour of supreme peril it was the British air-men and the British people who held the Gates of Liberty and checked the onslaught of the enemies of mankind.

It is because of what Britain did then, in those desperate years, that we are now confident of Victory.

3rd. We pray, and believe, that out of the agency and suffering of this war shall come a truer and more Christian World Order, and we know that this must be based upon the true and enduring fellowship of America and Great Britain and all the English speaking peoples. For the hope and future of the world, the two great English speaking democracies must stand always in full fellowship.

Anyone in this land who seeks to create anti-British feeling, or anti-Russian feeling, is disloyal to our country and to the cause for which our country is giving its life.

We ask the Archbishop to carry back to our brethren in Britain our most heartfelt greetings and to tell them that our prayer is that the war may speedily end with complete and righteous victory, and that America and Great Britain shall stand always together for the welfare and hope and peace of mankind.

HAVEN

should have come first—deal with the question: has God forsaken me or have I forsaken God—have I failed to keep in contact through fellowship with other Christians, through reading His word, through daily communing with Him? Or if all this has been done, has my own self-righteousness been the block? The answer to almost every difficult or seemingly impossible situation is that God has been left out in one way or another and must be brought in—for without Him there is not sufficient wisdom or strength to work things out or to endure.

"Choose ye this day whom ye will serve—God or gods?" And know that your choice will indicate whether to expect continued darkness or dawn.

Rogation Sunday

This Sunday before Ascensiontide, commonly called "Rogation Sunday," is deeply significant. In quiet and peaceful days one thought of asking God's blessing upon the seeds the husbandman was sowing. A blessing of the crops of the future. An anticipation of thanksgiving for an abundant harvest.

Today, men are sowing the seeds of suspicion, hatred, and a callous disregard for human life. We cannot ask God to bless such sowing. We can in the spirit of Rogation Sunday ask God to help us lift our eyes in penitence to the Mount of Ascension, where we may receive afresh the vision of His Goodness; and learn anew to destroy the tares of human sin, that do despite to the good seed God would have us sow.

The difficulty is that we acknowledge the existence of unchangeable physical laws, and deny the existence of God's immutable principles. Consequently we continue to sow destruction, and in turn reap destruction. By the power of the Risen and Ascended Christ may we in humbleness of spirit, ask for true forgiveness, and the vision to sow the seeds of righteousness, "that the Kingdom of this world may become the Kingdom of God."

What Price Religious Freedom?

The easy way in which we banter terms, sometimes appalls. Shortly after the historic meeting that set forth the famous Atlantic Charter, we read constantly about the "Four Freedoms." The countryside was placated with very attractive posters drawn by the distinguished Rockwell Kent. One of those freedoms we heard a good deal about was religious freedom. We believe that a great majority of the people of this country are interested in religious freedom. We are certain that the vast majority of Protestant clergy will do their best to see that religious freedom is preserved. We also believe that there are great numbers of Roman Catholic priests who would not welcome the establishment of a state church, even though on the surface it might appear to their advantage. The foundation of the great liberty that all forms of religion have enjoyed in this country is our heritage of religious freedom.

The Southern Churchman is as disturbed as the rest of the Protestant population of this country, with the recent ruling or decision of the Selective Service, cancelling the deferment of pre-theological students for the ministry. We are firmly of the conviction that a grave injustice to the cause of religious freedom in this country has been done either arbitrarily or inadvertently, by Selective Service in this ruling. We trust it was inadvertent.

Briefly the facts are these. It is a known fact that the Protestant Churches rely upon the public schools, some denominational private schools, and the colleges and universities for the pre-theological education of students for the ministry. The Roman Catholic Church, is exempt under this ruling, as it follows an entirely different system. As the prepared statement made by the official heads of twenty-three Protestant denominations puts the case: "In keeping with the official interpretation of the Selective Service Act, Roman Catholic students for the priesthood may be exempt from the draft when they are in junior seminaries—that is, when they are students on the college level. As a result, Roman Catholic students for the priesthood would not be affected by the new ruling. Protestant students for the ministry, however, although they are of the same age and at the same stage of educational preparation as Roman Catholic students—would not be permitted to continue their training." We believe this to be grossly unfair. The burden of feeding the ranks of our armed forces should fall equally upon all religious groups—Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish.

The Army and Navy are continuing to ask for chaplains. The religious forces of this country have responded admirably. The Chaplains Corps in all branches of the services has rendered a good account of its activity. The Army and Navy trust the denominational boards in the selection of suitable candidates for the Chaplains Corps. No Chaplain can remain in service whose denominational approval has been withdrawn.

Is Selective Service fearful that denominational boards will use less judgement in accepting candidates for the ministry? Does Selective Service think that Protestant groups will aid unworthy men, who may use the pretext of pre-theological training as an escape from service to the country? We cannot speak for all denominations. We can speak for the Protestant Episcopal Church's Seminaries. We know that the Deans of our Seminaries and the Committees on Admission, will exercise scrupulous care in the men they endorse. We believe that Bishops, Rectors, and Standing Committees will all exercise due vigilance in the men that they accept as Candidates for Holy Orders. The real responsibility rests upon the Bishops who accept men as postulants. We believe Selective Service can trust these men and the leaders in other denominations not to further the desire of any weak young man to escape service to his country.

To you who may read this editorial, we suggest that you get in touch immediately with your Congressional Representative and lodge a protest against this discriminatory ruling of Selective Service.

The Protestant Churches of this country have been and are loyal to the war effort. They feel that there are larger issues involved than a military victory. They have been looking toward the post-war world. If their supply of future leadership is seriously crippled they will be powerless to help maintain the moral foundation upon which any government must rest.

We are not asking for more than is being given to the Roman Catholic Church. We are only asking for equality. Upon that basis and upon that basis only, will religious freedom be maintained!

TWO MEN PRAYED

Two men prayed in the long ago,
Two men, much like the men we know;
One man prayed with his head held high,
With a square-set jaw and a tearless eye;
Convinced that his was a righteous cause,
He thanked the Lord for the man he was.
So, satisfied, he turned away,
The self-same man who had paused to pray.

The second man, penitent and lowly,
Dared not life his eyes to a God so holy,
But smote on his breast as he spoke this word:
"Be merciful to a sinner, Lord."
And God, who delights to forgive and bless,
Credited him with righteousness.
A guilty sinner, he paused to pray;
A justified saint he walked away.

Two men prayed in the long ago,
Two men, much like the men we know;
Two men facing eternity,
Which is like you? Which is like me?

FOR HIM WHO LIFTS THE ROCK

Once there lived a king who ruled his people wisely and well. But whether it was the heat of the country or whether it was just in the nature of the people they were a lazy set, and none of them would do a thing if he could possibly get out of it. "Leave it for somebody else," was ever their motto. So the king decided he would teach them a lesson.

Near the town where he lived the road passed through a narrow pass between two steep hills. The king went there one night and scooped out a hole right in the middle of the road. This he lined with pebbles, then put into it a purse with several gold coins, then covered it over with a rock as big as he could move, and went back to his palace.

Next morning came along a farmer driving a cart loaded with hay. "Look at that rock," he said. "Why doesn't somebody move it out of the road?" But it did not occur to him that he might be that somebody, and so he pulled his oxen to one side, although he almost upset his cart in so doing, and went on his way swearing at the lazy people who would not move the stone.

Soon came a soldier marching proudly along in his bright new uniform with his head up and his chin out as he had been taught to do. So, of course, he did not see the rock in the road, against which he struck his foot and sprawled in the dark. "Curses on the lazy people of this country who will not keep their roads in shape for an army," he exclaimed, brushing the dust as well as he could from his uniform, and went marching on his way. His chin was not so high, though, and his eyes kept nearer the ground, lest there should be other stones on the road.

Next came a company of merchants with a string of donkeys and pack horses going to the fair in the king's town, where they hoped to sell their silks and spices at a good price. "This seems like a fine country to live in if they only had decent roads," said one of them as his donkey stumbled against the rock and fell to his knees and almost lost his pack in the ditch.

So it went on day after day and week after week, every one cursing the rock and the people who would not remove it, but none of them lifting a hand to move it. Finally, the king called together his people about the rock and said to them:

"Three weeks ago I myself put this rock here in the road to see who would take it out of the way. For three weeks every one has passed by blaming his neighbor for not doing it, but not one doing anything himself. See what you all have missed." Then stooping down he pushed the rock aside and lifted out the bag he had placed there with all the gold coins still in it. Attached to the bag was a card with the words: "For the one who lifts the stone."

"See," said the people, "what we have lost because we expected others to do for us what we were too lazy to do for ourselves."—John R. Wilkie, in The Christian Century Pulpit.

WHY A STICK FLOATS AND A STONE SINKS

If you throw a stick or piece of wood into the pond, it will float. If you throw a stone in, it will sink to the bottom. Have you ever wondered why this is so?

You know that the earth is always trying to pull everything to itself. It pulls you and me, for, if it didn't, we would fly off into space. And the heavier things are, the more the old earth pulls them to itself.

The stick which you throw into the pond is not solid and heavy like the stone. It is full of tiny bits of air which make it light. The stone does not have bits of air inside of it, so it is heavier. The earth can get a better pull on it because this is so. That is why the stone goes right to the bottom and the stick floats about on the water.

Of course the earth is all the while pulling on the water in the pond, too. But the earth cannot pull the stick to the bottom of the pond because the wood is lighter than the amount of water which it pushes away. The stone, you see, is much heavier than the amount of water it displaces, so the earth can get a good, hard grip on it and pull it right straight down through the water of the pond to the bottom.—

THE PRACTICE OF THE PRESENCE OF GOD

Within you lurks a little Elf,
Thick-veiled in mystery.
They call it your sub-conscious self.
Paul called it "sin in me".

Habitual acts this Elf controls
As write or sew or walk.
Without its help you'd fall in holes
Or stammer when you talk.

But Elf is childish, willful, strong,
Stone-deaf to argument.
It eggs you on to grievous wrong.
And Oh! how you repent!

Saints tell us how to master it.
"Practice the sense of God";
Repeat, impress, reiterate
His healing, vital word—.

Especially at early morn
And just before you sleep
Let God within you be reborn
And Elf subservient keep.

Much more than this, for saints have found
The task most difficult.
Live joined to God in daily round.
Expect the grand result.

—Percy Foster Hall.

Forward-Looking Convention

Diocese of Massachusetts Holds 159th Annual Meeting

Boston, Mass.—A forward-looking Annual Convention, with promise of encouraging progress, was the 159th of the Diocese of Massachusetts, opening in Trinity Church on April 25 with a service addressed by the Bishops, and followed on the 26th by business sessions in New England Mutual Hall.

Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill began his charge for the future with severe strictures on the racial and religious intolerance which has appeared in our American life, saying, after mention of the race riots in Detroit and New York:

The Bishop's Charge

"Here in Massachusetts also, certain disturbing factors have made their unwelcome appearance, the most serious being the clandestine distribution of anti-Semitic literature in considerable quantities,—evidently, from the amount and expense involved, from some organized group. . . . Such action strikes at the very root of all that is most worth-while in the life of both Church and State. We must see to it that the authorities impartially and strictly enforce the law. Every violation should be reported at once and we can all be on the watch for evidence of intolerance. Nothing can be gained by mistaken concealment. This evil, if brought into the open, is already half defeated. For the longer range, there must be constant education in the true principles of both democracy and Christianity. . . . Here is a problem which calls for firmness, wisdom and courage."

Pastoral Ministry

The unparalleled opportunity for a pastoral ministry was next presented as Bishop Sherrill itemized the suffering and inevitable dislocations in ordinary conditions of living, the enforced separation of husbands and wives for long periods, the strain upon the children resulting in large measure in the wave of juvenile delinquency. He said, "As never before, the Church should keep in touch with her people, bringing the moral strength, the comfort and peace and compassion which the Master made so apparent in His Ministry to the souls and bodies of men. This is a matter for the clergy in constant and understanding parish calling; but it is also a responsibility of the laity equally."

"What is the atmosphere of our parishes?" the Bishop asked. "Are they cold and formal, or is there evidence that in the Church may be found a deep fellowship of the Spirit? The close of the war will accentuate the need. Already many thousands of men and women have been released from the armed services because of various disabilities. Some day millions will be coming home. Here is a call which should bring out the best that is in us, that we may measure up to their needs and expectations. I am not thinking merely of Welcome Home services and receptions, but of something far deeper which will show that we have understanding and wisdom. . . . It is not too soon to consider this matter. We in the Christian Fellowship are sent to heal broken minds, bodies and hearts."

Action on this part of the Bishop's address was taken by the Convention later when it passed the resolution asking the Bishop to appoint a diocesan committee to produce requisite machinery to aid readjustment of service men as they returned to their parishes, and to help the parishes meet the inevitable problems with which they will be faced.

Rebirth of Faith

With reference to the current hope of a rebirth of faith, Bishop Sherrill said:

"Once again we are talking of a new world of righteousness and peace. The religious experiences of a few are overemphasized as foretelling a rebirth of faith. We shall do well to be neither set up nor cast down, but to face realities as they are. So far as I can see, there is no evidence that we are on the eve of a rebirth of the Spirit. If we assume the contrary without basis of fact, there can be only discouragement ahead. . . . It is not clear that men and women have learned the lesson of these years. Already there are voices urging the claims of selfishness, and he would indeed be a foolish optimist who would deny that such claims have a large following. The making of a better world will be no easy task. . . . all plans and schemes will fail, unless undergirding all our efforts is the conviction that Christ is the Way and the Life."

This, too, was reflected in action taken at the business sessions where a resolution was passed referring to that part of the Bishop's sermon at the consecration of the Bishop of Washington that urged a unique quality of life within the Church, in order that inspired and determined men and women therefrom might help the world family of nations to be based upon the brotherhood of man. To that end, the Convention expressed unqualified agreement with the Bishop and petitioned the Forward in Service Commission of the Diocese to consult with him as to the means whereby the parishes may help.

Statistics of the Diocese given in the Bishop's address are: Clergy, 282; Parishes and Missions, including the Cathedral but omitting a number of summer chapels, 207; Postulants and Candidates for Holy Orders, 21; Lay Readers, 146; Ordinations to the Diaconate, 16; to the Priesthood, 10; Confirmations, 2,655.

Vivacity and diversity of presentation marked the business sessions over which Bishop Sherrill presided. The admission of new parishes, of missions newly come into union with the Convention, and of units relinquishing diocesan support received applause. In this list were Grace Church, Norwood: St. John's, Saugus; St. Andrew's, Marblehead; St. Andrew's, Framingham; Trinity Church, Rockland, and All Saints', Whitman.

Youth Urged To Participate

Special Emphasis Placed on Whitsunday Communion May 28

The Whitsunday (May 28) Communion as urged by the Youth of the Church, is to place special emphasis on participation by whole families.

Young people are urged by the National Council's Division of Youth to "Have a preliminary talk with rector or vicar. Make tentative plans now. Select a representative group of young people and adult leaders to make plans. In the smaller parish two or three are sufficient; in the larger, eight or ten may be needed. Set the time and place of meeting and notify those concerned.

"Begin the planning committee meeting with prayers. Present possibilities and suggestions for discussion. Go over available material carefully. Here are some of the things to be considered: How can we obtain maximum participation on the part of everyone in the parish? Could young people call at every home urging attendance and leaving literature? When should this be done? How many young people are available for this? If personal calls are not possible, how about calling by phone? What material should be mailed? How many copies of the folder and other pieces should be sent? Do we need a letter from the rector as well? How can young people help in the mailing? What is our time schedule for all these? Who is to do exactly what?"

SEVENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

Social Security Commended

Albany, N. Y.—Declaring that the Church cannot lag behind in a matter of simple justice, Bishop Oldham, in his address to the seventy-sixth diocesan convention, May 2, commended social security for Church employees. The Bishop spoke at some length on international matters, decrying isolation and stressing the importance of action now for the solution of post-war problems. He mentioned particularly the disunity of Christendom, saying: "Surely it is clear that to export a divided Christianity will add to rather than diminish the existing disunity of the nations."

The Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, D. D., was the preacher at the public service of the Convention in the Cathedral of All Saints. The music was furnished by the Diocesan Choirmasters' Association, thus continuing in wartime the annual traditional Choir Festival.

The Rev. C. Avery Mason, D. D., made an address on Forward in Service at a conference of the clergy preceding the convention sessions. Mr. Robert D. Jordan, director of Promotion of the National Council, spoke at the closing session of the convention on Wednesday morning, particularly in the interest of FORTH, which has recently been adopted by the diocese as its official magazine.

BISHOP POWELL SUGGESTS OPENING OF CHURCHES TO HIS CLERGY

Baltimore, Md.—Immediately upon receipt of the Presiding Bishop's suggestion regarding the day of invasion, Bishop Powell sent the following to his clergy:

"No doubt all of us are very sensitive to the imminence of the Invasion of the Continent of Europe with the inevitable result in loss of many lives and its results on the issues of the war. This invasion may come at any moment. When news of it is given to us, may I ask that special care be made to see that our Churches not only are open, but that you will urge your people to join in intercessions for God's guidance and protection and for an early just and lasting peace."

Many of the rectors have already announced their plans for Intercessions—some having continuous intercession, others have three and four hours set during the day.

Children's Lenten Offering

Baltimore, Md.—Mr. Ellis N. Tucker, former Professor at St. John's University, Shanghai, China, was the speaker at the annual Presentation Service for the Children's Lenten Offering in Christ Church, on Sunday, April 30.

The offering this year was the largest Maryland has had, amounting to over $12,000. Several parishes are yet to be heard from.

PARISH KEYMEN, FIFTY STRONG, ATTEND CONFERENCE

Cleveland, Ohio—Responding to an irresistible invitation, prepared by Maxton R. Davies, parish keymen of Ohio held a conference on laymen's work at Cleveland April 26.

Mr. Davies, who presided at the conference, applies professional skill in the advertising field to his work for the Church. Every man to whom his letter of invitation went replied, and most of them came to the conference. "The fact that out-of-town men will have to sacrifice time and pay their own expenses will not, I am sure, keep anyone away," the letter said. "This is not a tea party, but an adventure in faith that will yield dividends for the Kingdom."

Bishop Beverley Tucker and Archdeacon B. B. Comer Lile attended and fifty parishes were represented by their keymen. Delegates paid their own expenses. Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., chairman of the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work, spoke on "Mobilizing the Men." The Rev. Wilburn C. Campbell, executive director of the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work, followed Mr. Firestone and surveyed the work of the Laymen's Committee throughout the country and in particular the work in the Diocese of New Jersey. After dinner the Plan of Action for Forward in Service as it relates to men's work was discussed. A diocesan "Chain of Action" was set up with the approval of the Bishop and a program for diocesan, regional, and parish work was agreed upon. A laymen's conference for the diocese is to be held in the Fall. The conferences were closed with an inspirational talk by Bishop Tucker.

DIOCESE OF WASHINGTON

Children's Lenten Offering

Washington, D. C.—The Annual Presentation Service of the Church's Lenten Offering for missions was made in the Washington Cathedral Sunday, April 30, 1944, at the afternoon service.

This service, which is looked forward to every year by the Church Schools, is always a very colorful affair; over 802 children with their school banners marched in procession around the aisles of the Cathedral singing the great processional hymns before the congregation of twenty-three hundred, which filled the Cathedral.

The service was of special interest—the offering presented amounted to approximately $8,500, and was the largest ever given by the children of the diocese.

The Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, was present to greet the children of his diocese and to receive the offerings that symbolized their loyalty to and sacrifice for the Kingdom of God, and its spread through missionary service.

This, the first appearance of the newly consecrated Bishop, furnished an opportunity for him to take his children to his heart. This he did in simple, gracious words when he asked that they "take me as your Father in God", explaining that a father in God is one who "helps God to reach you and you to find God". His explanation of what it means when we say, "t is more blessed to give than to receive" held the attention of his listeners and showed his felicity in speaking to children by his story of a hen who seizes upon its food and runs off by itself to enjoy it, clucking all the while with a noise that sounds like "get, get, get". This, the Bishop pointed out, is the attitude of those who did not share what God has given them, an individual, selfish attitude, that is not "blessed", and the Bishop concluded, "you don't want to be a hen".

DEATH ANNOUNCED OF MR. A. T. L. TSEN

New York, N. Y.—The National Council has just received word of the death on March 18 of Archie T. L. Tsen, for years treasurer and later president of the Board of Missions of the Chung Hua Sheng Kung Hui. The announcement comes through Arthur Allen.

Mr. Tsen was 57 years old, and the information received gives no cause of death. He had been a compradore of a large business firm, a lucrative position, which some twelve or more years ago he relinquished to give his time almost entirely to volunteer work for the Church. He spent much time traveling at his own expense to the principal cities of China to raise money for the Board from among Chinese Christians, and several times he made the arduous trip to Sian to encourage the workers there, and help them solve the problems inevitable in such an adventurous missionary project. In 1937 Mr. Tsen had planned a trip to the United States, and attendance at General Convention in Cincinnati, but was prevented from making the journey.

Shortly after completing his studies at Boone School and Boone College, Mr. Tsen taught at Boone Middle School. At the meeting of the Synod of 1931 he undertook to raise $20,000 (CC) for the endowment of a missionary episcopate in Shensi. At the 1934 meeting of the Synod he was able to announce that over $25,000 had been raised, which permitted the Synod to elect Bishop Shen Tze Kao and send him to his field.

W. A., VIRGINIA BRANCH, ANNUAL MEETING

Richmond, Va.—The Virginia branch of the Woman's Auxiliary held its annual meeting May 2-3 in St. Stephen's Church, Richmond.

Thirty-three officers of the Auxiliary were present, with seventeen missionaries, ninety-two delegates and a great many visitors. All three Bishops of the diocese made addresses.

Dr. Lewis Franklin, Jr., of the National Council, gave the main address. He brought the latest information on the missionary field, saying that two years ago we had many missionaries at work in China. Today, in occupied territory, there are none, except thirteen in Japanese prison camps. He outlined the causes for the great increase in cost of living in China, and told of the vast influence of St. John's University, Shanghai. Most of the leaders in China, both political and in the arts attended that school, he stated.

One hour was given to missionaries. Those speaking were Miss Cecilia Nelson, Deaconess Mary Sandys Hutton and Miss Anne Park, all from the mountain missions of the diocese.

Among the resolutions passed were two to be sent on to the meeting of the Council of the diocese on May 24, one recommending the establishment of a church training center for girls, and one recommending that the salaries of mountain workers be raised, subject to the approval of the proper authorities.

The Auxiliary has been invited by St. Paul's Church, Richmond, to meet there next year.

LENTEN OFFERING SHOWS GAIN

The Lenten Offering for 1943 showed a gain of $38,000, a total of $344,000, Dr. D. A. McGregor, executive secretary for Christian Education, announced to National Council. He announced also that the objective of next year's Birthday Thank Offering will be to aid in building a parish house for a promising Negro mission in Savannah, Ga.

AID TO BRITISH MISSIONS DISCUSSED

New York, N. Y.—At its closing session April 27, the National Council heard from Bishop Tucker a summary of discussions he has had with the Archbishop of York, with special reference to aid to British Missions. It was made plain by Bishop Tucker that aid to British Missions has reached the stage where contributions of the American Church will take the form of specials over the budget, definitely designated for particular projects of work, and not as formerly, lump sums sent directly to the British Missionary Societies. It is expected that there will be close cooperation through the Anglo-American Committee in study of needs and determination of projects or areas to receive American aid. The Presiding Bishop said that he has been in correspondence with the Archbishop of Canterbury on similar matters, as well as special problems involving future work in China.

NOTICE CONCERNING SUMMER SESSION

Evanston, Ill.—In accordance with the suggestion made by the National Selective Service System, Seabury-Western Theological Seminary will hold a Summer Session beginning Monday, June 26, 1944, and concluding Friday, September 8, 1944. The course will cover the regular first term of the Junior year only. All prospective theological students are, therefore, expected to begin their seminary work on June 26. All regular members of the Faculty will be in residence.

Paul S. Kramer,
Secretary of the Faculty.

GIFT TO BE USED IN NEW GUINEA

New York, N. Y.—In acknowledging $2,500 sent as Aid to British Missions, the Rt. Rev. G. H. Granswick, D. D., Chairman of the Australian Board of Missions, writes that the money will be used in the diocese of New Guinea for reconstruction and advance. The Bishop states that it is the intention to send a "spiritual survey expedition into the interior of New Guinea among the Mount Hagen ranges where there are to be found some two to three hundred thousand untouched natives. Your gift will give great encouragement in the organizing of this expedition, and we shall write to you later about the plans when details are more apparent."

ANNOUNCING SUMMER SCHOOL ... OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Lawrenceville, Va.—The Twentieth consecutive Summer School of Religious Education is announced by President J. Alvin Russell of St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute. The dates this year are July 17-21, the place, as always, at the Institute in Lawrenceville.

Dr. Russell announces the theme as "Life in the Christian Community," and the school will offer courses in Leadership Training for Woman's Auxiliary Workers; Youth Workers; Church School Teachers.

Attendance by clergy is especially desired. The Rev. B. W. Harris, secretary for Negro Work in the Home Department of the National Council, is cooperating in the setup and program for this year's session.

BISHOP OF PANAMA CANAL REPORTS PROGRESS

New York, N. Y.—Bishop Harry Beal of the Panama Canal Zone visited the April meeting of National Council, speaking briefly of how the Church there is attempting ministry to the greatly increased military and civilian populations. He reported progress toward self-support by a number of Negro congregations, the largest number of Confirmations in the history of the Panama Canal Zone Mission, and the urgent need for new buildings for the fast-growing, fifty-year-old Parochial School at Colon. The present buildings, the Bishop said, are of wood, and close to disintegration.

Four Years Of Giving

The Rev. Dr. James Thayer Addison Makes Statement About Aid to British Missions

New York, N. Y.—Gifts to British Missions from the Episcopal Church during the last four years have developed somewhat as follows:

During 1941 we gave $300,000 as a blanket gift, to be distributed under the direction of the Archbishop of Canterbury.

During 1942, $200,000 was given, and distributed in the same way.

During 1943 we gave about $90,000 in the form of "designated" gifts, certain percentages of the total being allotted to certain fields. Like "designated" gifts to the National Council, these applied to the budgets of the various British Societies and served to increase their annual income.

During 1944, for the first time, we are giving "special" gifts directly to work in several specific fields, such as Southwest China, Dornakal in India, and Melanesia. The total for the year will be $30,000.

We expect that in 1945 a somewhat larger amount will be distributed in a similar manner.

After this triennium it is our expectation that annual gifts in "Aid to British Missions" will cease, and that in place of this type of giving our Church will undertake responsibility in supporting certain districts now chiefly supported by one or more of the British Societies.

A NEW HOSPITAL FOR ETHIOPIA

Service at Westminster Abbey

Princess Tsahai, one of the daughters of the Emperor of Ethiopia, trained as a nurse while in this country, and was hoping to give her life to the welfare of her people through nursing service, and in particular to establish an important hospital at Addis Ababa. This intention was cut short by her tragic death, and it has been decided to complete the hospital as a memorial to her. British Church leaders have issued an appeal on behalf of the scheme.

A crowded congregation filled Westminster Abbey on March 16th, when a special service was held in connection with the appeal. The Bishop of London (Dr. G. F. Fisher) was the preacher at the service. He took as his text Galatians 6:10, and we print some extracts from his sermon:

"Nine years ago, we in this country were watching with perplexity and shame the assault, base in its conception and hatefully cruel in its execution, which deprived Ethiopia of her freedom and of her independence. We watched with perplexity, because in this event we read the presage of greater ills yet to come upon the world: we watched with shame, because we seemed impotent to check this wrong or to avert others that might follow. We could but watch in sympathy and sorrow the crucifixion of a people. Indeed, those greater ills have come and are not yet ended. But those who would preserve freedom upon earth and a Christian civilization have passed first from impotence to stubborn defence, and then from defence to attack, and now press on towards that victory which by the grace of God we mean to achieve. And as we press on, we rejoice in the knowledge that Ethiopia, the first country to be a victim of the tyrannical system which we seek to overthrow, was the first country to be liberated and set free—and that by our own arms. Every Englishman rejoiced and felt more honest when in May, 1941, the Emperor returned again to his people and to his throne."

In connection with the hospital the Bishop said: "Of the resources which modern knowledge puts into our hands, not all are good—at least in the uses to which they are put. But there is one that is altogether good—Medical Science and all that it means for the alleviation of pain, and the healing of disease and the preservation of health. The gift of medical science we can give with both hands, to remedy the ills which medical skill knows well enough how to remedy, and to lead the assault upon tropical diseases still to be understood. We here are specially interested in the Princess Tsahai Memorial Hospital. That charming young princess dedicated her life to this very thing. Here in this country she trained herself to be an efficient nurse; she returned to her country, when it was liberated, ready and equipped in her own person to lead a national movement for the creation of a hospital system and health services there. The completion of this hospital is the best immediate gift we can make to her country, and is the best memorial for all time to her devoted life."

The Bishop concluded with the following references to Christianity in Ethiopia: "And, finally, let us remember that Ethiopia, though cut off from the rest of Christendom, has been through the centuries a part of Christendom. This is no time at which to trace the history of the Church of Ethiopia. It has suffered indeed from its isolation; and not without reason it rejected the few approaches made to it from outside in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Yet it has preserved its heritage unimpaired; it exhibits still the authentic Gospel of Jesus Christ and the faith of His Church. It knows the fruits of the Holy Spirit in piety and Christian character. How much help here, too, we should give in the fellowship of the Holy Spirit, not indeed to destroy their ancient traditions, nor to introduce ours, but to assist them in a rebirth of the Ethiopian Church to march with and to fashion in Christ the future that awaits the Ethiopian Empire."

Emperor's Message

The Emperor of Ethiopia sent the following message to Canon J. A. Douglas, general secretary of the Church of England Council on Foreign Relations, to be read at the service in Westminster Abbey:

"On the occasion of the services in commemoration of our dearly beloved daughter, the Princess Tsahai, in the sacred walls of Westminster Abbey and in churches of the United Kingdom we join in spirit with all present. We are profoundly moved by the steadfast devotion of the British people to the cause of Ethiopia and to the memory of the Princess, whose life work we hope, with the assistance and prayers of Christians throughout the world, to bring to full fruition."

Touching Testimony

News from Geneva, denying the announcement of a previous report that Cardinal Suhard and Pastor Marc Boegner had been summoned to Vichy, stated: "Suhard and Boegner themselves informed Laval of the growing feeling of public opinion at the mass deportations of French citizens who are not protected by any international convention, and in whom the Government gives the impression that it takes no interest."

The same source also reported: "A group of French prisoners of war has given a touching testimony to their attachment to the Church, by sending the Reformed Church at Lyons a parcel of flour saved up from their rations, with which they asked the Lyons Church to make bread for the Christian Communion, as a material symbol of the communion of the Church in Lyons and the Church behind the barbed wire in the same Bread and Body."—The Record.

SOUTH FLORIDA

Annual Convention—Church Shows Phenomenal Growth

Lakeland, Fla.—South Florida held its 22nd annual convention on April 25-26 in All Saints' parish, Lakeland, with an unusually large attendance, especially of laymen.

A telegram from the Presiding Bishop was read, asking that all churches be opened immediately upon hearing of the "Invasion of Europe," that people of all faiths might pray for those taking part therein,—for victory,—for a lasting peace. This plan will be followed throughout South Florida.

Bishop Wing spoke of a phenomenal growth of our Church in this diocese and of marked progress in reducing parish debt,—that two churches were consecrated last year on completing mortgage payment (St. Agnes, colored, Miami, and St. John's, Tampa). Other parishes have cleared debt on parish buildings, and several others expect to complete mortgage payments this year. The Bishop stated that 16 of the 57 parochial clergy are South Florida's own sons, who, while laymen, dedicated themselves to the sacred ministry.

Alluding to war difficulties, Bishop Wing said, "To us it is given to know that the only way to create the new world is first to create the new man, and we know that this is the task of the Church, divinely bestowed and bestowed upon her alone. Her main task remains, as it has ever been, to work with God and for God in the redemption of the world here and now,—that its kingdoms may become His Kingdom, that His Will may be done on earth as it is in Heaven; that there may come indeed a brave new world wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Stating that each year gave increased difficulties in holding this convention, Bishop Wing's address suggested that authority be given the Executive Board, with the advice of the Standing Committee, to abrogate a convention during a war if the emergency required such step,—also giving the Executive Board authority to prepare budgets for the operation of the diocese. A motion authorizing such action was passed. The Executive Board was authorized to take action to raise the missionary stipends as of January 1, 1944, and to increase the apportionment of parishes next year to maintain this. Bishop Wing advocated placing a suitable memorial to Bishop Mann in the Cathedral, suggesting that this be a reredos surmounting the High Altar. Convention moved that such memorial be arranged and that Bishop Wing appoint a diocesan committee to raise funds.

An invitation from Rev. Peter Carroll to hold the next convention in his parish in Clearwater on April 17-18, 1945, was accepted.

Laymen Held Enthusiastic Conference

The diocesan Laymen's League held an enthusiastic conference and a dinner before the opening service of this convention. An advisory committee of this League had advocated previously the appointment of a "Bishop's Man" in each parish and mission to promote laymen's work and is preparing a program for laymen's clubs, adaptable to all parishes. Bishop Wing and Rev. Rex Wilkes were speakers for the laymen's dinner,—the Bishop saying he "was grateful for the response from laymen in regard to the appointment of 'Bishop's Men' and the splendid attendance, this being the largest gathering of laymen I have seen in twenty years." Alluding to travel difficulties, he quoted an item from Bishop Weed's diary of 1888, where he "Took train in Jacksonville today for New York, on my way to Key West, this being the quickest and easiest way of getting there."

W. A. Holds 22nd Annual

The Woman's Auxiliary of South Florida held its 22nd annual diocesan meeting in Lakeland on April 25-26, in connection with the diocesan convention. Officers of the past year were re-elected. Twenty-eight parishes were represented by 74 delegates and 25 missions by 43 delegates, these, with visitors, giving an attendance of 154. Two new branches were reported, one in St. Mathias' mission, Clermont, and one in Coral Gables. An excellent report of Auxiliary work in the colored congregations of this diocese was given by their diocesan president, Mrs. Kate S. Dean. The next meeting is to be held in Clearwater, April 17-18, 1945.

LAYMEN HOLD ANNUAL STATE MEETING

New Orleans, La.—Lewis R. Graham, of Trinity Church, was elected President of the Church Club of Louisiana, Statewide organization of Episcopal laymen, at the annual meeting held in New Orleans, succeeding J. A. M. Wilson, of St. Andrew's, New Orleans. The date of the meeting, May first, was set to observe the fourth anniversary of the Consecration of Bishop Jackson, and appropriate resolutions were passed by acclamation recognizing the great advance in diocesan activity during his Episcopate.

The Rev. Montgomery H. Throop, formerly Dean of St. John's University, Shanghai, and now locum tenens at Grace Church, told of his experiences in a Japanese internment camp, and of his return on the steamer "Gripsholm." The Club voted $50.00 to the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, $50.00 to the Diocesan Bishop's Discretionary Fund, and $50.00 to the Youth Commission in the diocese.

BISHOP MORRIS DIES AT HOME IN SEWANEE

The Rt. Rev. James Craik Morris, D. D., retired bishop of the Diocese of Louisiana, died May 5 at his home at Sewanee, Tenn. He was 73 years of age and had been in failing health for several years.

Funeral services were held at 2 P. M., May 6, at All Saints Chapel, Sewanee, with interment there.

Born in Louisville, Ky., June 18, 1870, the Bishop was a son of the late John Hite Morton Morris and Fanny Craik.

He graduated at the University of the South, Sewanee, with the degree of B. Litt. in the class of 1890 and, in 1891, won the degree of Master of Arts. In 1892 he graduated at the Louisville Law School with the LLB degree. Later he pursued his theological studies at the General Theological Seminary, New York City, where he graduated in 1893.

He was ordained in the priesthood in 1896 and served as assistant at St. Matthew's Cathedral, Dallas, Texas, from 1896 to 1898; as curate at St. James' Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., from 1898 to 1901, and from 1901 to 1916 as dean of St. Mary's Cathedral, Memphis, Tenn., and as rector of Grace Church, Madison, Wis., from 1916 to 1920.

He was consecrated in 1920 as Bishop of the Panama Canal Zone and Parts Adjacent and became Bishop of the Diocese of Louisiana September 24, 1930. On March 1, 1939, he retired and had since that time made his home at Sewanee, Tenn.

Bishop Morris was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and of the Society of the Cincinnati.

He married, October 31, 1900, Miss Edith Tucker, of Dallas, Texas, who survives her husband.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two daughters, Miss Edith Nelson Morris, of Sewanee, Tenn., and Mrs. Howard Wells, of New Orleans, La.; one son, James Craik Morris, Jr., of the faculty of St. Andrew's School, Middletown, Del., and by four sisters, Miss Mary Morris, Miss Juliet Morris and Mrs. Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, all of Richmond, and Mrs. F. D. Kalley, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Good Church People: Support the Seminaries

The seminaries of the Church, unlike colleges and universities, cannot charge students the full cost of their training. After four years at college to obtain a bachelor's degree, required for admission as a regular student, many worthy aspirants lack the means for three years more at a seminary. Yet the Ministry needs such men as well as those who can afford further study.

So the charge to students is for little more than board and lodging. Tuition is free or nearly so. For the rest, the seminaries depend upon donations, past and present.

Endowment income derives from former donations and bequests. Present donations make a living endowment.

Whether your contribution be small or large, do your part in maintaining seminary training at high standard.

DEATHS

MRS. JULIET CARY SITWELL

MRS. JULIET CARY SITWELL, who passed away in Richmond on April 7th, was the daughter of Major Nathaniel Robert Cary, C. S. A., of Hampton, Virginia, and Susan Fisher. Born May 26, 1860, at "Hollybrook", Northampton County, Virginia, she was educated by governesses, and was later an honor graduate of Leach and Wood Seminary, Norfolk. Known and beloved by the older residents as Miss Jewel Cary she was for several years a teacher in the Norfolk Public Schools, and a member of the "Fireside Club".

Mrs. Sitwell was married at St. Luke's Church to Mr. Herbert Wellington Sitwell of Derbyshire, England. She made her home in later years in Bedford, Virginia.

A founder of the Bedford Library and an ardent member of the Daughters of the Confederacy, she was better known to many persons whose lives she influenced through her private school. These felt for her a real affection.

A life long member of the Episcopal Church, she never doubted God's wisdom and love.

She was laid to rest in Longwood Cemetery, Bedford, Virginia, April 10, 1944.

"Faith's journeys end in welcome to the weary
And Heaven, the heart's true home, will come at last."

Two children survive. Miss Evelyn Sitwell, formerly American Red Cross, and Capt. Herbert Cecil FitzRoy Sitwell, U. S. Army. Also a grandson, Lieutenant George FitzRoy Sitwell, U. S. Army.

PERSONAL NOTES

The Rev. Mr. Frank E. Walters, rector of Helena, Arkansas, has accepted a call to St. Mark's Church, Shreveport, La., one of the great parishes of the South. Mr. Walters will succeed the Rev. James M. Owens, D. D., who has been rector of St. Mark's for nearly thirty years, under whose charge St. Mark's has grown from a modest Parish in a quiet southern town to a great, firmly established Church in one of the more important cities of the South. Mr. Walters is to take charge on June 1, 1944.

The Rev. Paul Clark Martin, rector of St. Thomas' Church, Newark, N. J. has assumed his newly accepted duties as rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd at Forest Hill.

Before going to St. Thomas', he was vicar at Christ Church, Totowa, and St. Paul's in North Arlington.

The Rev. Mr. Martin, who was born in Somerville, Mass., was graduated from Harvard in 1932 and from Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass., in 1936. He was ordained in 1935.

Bishop Dun's First Ordination

Washington, D. C.—The Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, new Bishop of Washington, conducted his first ordination since his consecration when he ordained to the priesthood, the Rev. Philip C. Bentley, of Washington, on St. Philip and St. James Day, May 1, 1944. Mr. Bentley is the son of Dr. John E. Bentley, professor of psychology at the American University of Washington. He is a graduate of the American University and of the Virginia Theological Seminary. Since his ordination to the diaconate he has served as assistant to the rector of St. Alban's Parish.

Chaplains Appointed

Two more Episcopal clergymen have been appointed Chaplains in the U. S. Naval Reserve, according to announcement by the Rev. Henry B. Washburn, D. D., secretary of the Army and Navy Commission. The new chaplains are the Rev. Jack Leather, formerly curate at St. Stephen's, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and the Rev. Chester L. Weems, formerly in charge of St. Luke's, Valley Park, and Epiphany, Kirkwood, Missouri.

Chaplain Graduates

Two Episcopal clergymen, formerly Chaplains in Church institutions, were graduated in the last class of the naval Training School at Williamsburg, Va., and will soon be assigned to duty as Naval Chaplains.

They are the Rev. Stephen F. Bayne, Jr., formerly Chaplain of Columbia University; and the Rev. George D. Hardman, formerly Chaplain of St. Mark's School, Southborough, Mass.

Commended for Outstanding Service

Capt. Iveson B. Noland, Chaplain U. S. A., formerly rector of Trinity Church, Natchitoches, La., has received public commendation for outstanding service. His citation, issued over the signature of the Colonel Commanding, reads as follows:

"1. At the end of a long voyage with a long transport, carrying important personnel shipments, it is my duty, and a privilege, to commend Captain Iveson B. Noland for exceptionally meritorious and efficient performance of the essential and arduous duties of Transport Chaplain.

"2. These duties have been performed with great initiative and efficiency, and have done much to insure the success of our undertaking. I shall be very gratified to have this officer assigned to serve with me at a future time, because by such assignment I would be assured of the services of an officer possessing much initiative, and capabilities for wise, loyal, and efficient service."

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL

This is a day for action. It is a day when God is mightily striving with the nations. The Lord of Hosts calls to us each in our place. He summons us to throw even our earnestness, our effort, our faithfulness into the strong current of His providence.—Rev. H. A. Wilson.

In every quarter of the earth men long to be delivered from the curse of war and to find in a world which has regained its peace a respite from the harshness and the bitterness of the world they have known till now. But so often they want the Kingdom of Heaven without its King, the Kingdom of God without God, and they cannot have it. The Cross makes its appeal to all nations: come back to God.—Archbishop of Canterbury.

Each of us should seek the fullest experience of the Saviour possible for us, and then pass it on in the glorious ministry of reconciliation. The need is universal, first in my heart and yours, and then in many and many a case that comes before us in our daily lives.—Exchange.

"We make plans for the future—for peace among the nations and for social security at home. That is right enough, and to neglect it would be wrong. But all our plans will come to shipwreck on the rock of human selfishness unless we turn to God, not once only and then turn away, but in daily recollection of His righteousness and His love in daily renewal of our dependence upon Him."

All that the world needs lies in that story. Out of it have come peace and gladness to the soul, light for the understanding, cleansing for the conscience, renovation for the will, which can be made strong and free by submission, a resting place for the heart, and a starting-point and a goal for the loftiest flights of hope.—Alexander Maclaren.

There are two freedoms—the false, where a man is free to do what he likes; the true, where a man is free to do what he ought.—Charles Kingsley.

We are at one of those critical periods that can readily mark the end of our greatness. There comes a time in the life of every great nation when its work of creation ends. Perhaps that hour has struck for us. But it need not be so. . . For guidance, let us turn to Jesus Christ, who revealed to men, not only the way of spiritual salvation, but how to create a fellowship on earth.—Dulles.

All this world is heavy with the promise of greater things.—H. G. Wells.

The Christian sees God in all things, and all things in God.—Bishop Gore.

The hour demands the brave, reverent, even cheerful heart. He who may strike no blow upon the battlefield, heal no wound where the suffering soldier lies, can carry into the daily life of store and shop and office this heart. So he too will serve his country and his time.

"The Resurrection of Christ is not primarily an historical question; it is news, and it always has been, and the spread of Christianity is part of the news."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WITH POMP AND CEREMONY

Mr. Editor:

The editorial in the April 29 issue takes issue with the press for saying "with pomp and ceremony." I take issue with your editorial for saying it was not "with pomp and ceremony," but with "ancient ceremony, moving with simplicity." As one reads the account of the consecration one feels the "pomp". I have a dictionary in front of me and under pomp, grandeur, parade—and thus the procession surely was. I note under simplicity, artlessness, clearness, innocence, unsophisticated. You prefer simplicity, the reporter "pomp." The reporter is nearer correct than you are. There is no sin in a 'pompa". At the time of the great Roman games, a "pompa" was dedicated to a god, and, therefore, no Christian could participate in or even glance upon one—but the "pompa" at the Washington Cathedral was to the glory of God and in furtherance of His Body, the only Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church. Christ did not condemn the beautiful Palm Sunday "Pompa". Scripture does not tell us that Christ withdrew, but it does say He permitted them to lead Him to the very temple. The march to Calvary was also a "pompa", leading Him to His throne of the Cross. In the editorial of April 15 you speak about the Roman Catholic misuse of terms. Now, I'd say that you are guilty of the misuse of terms.

HENRY A. LINK.
Rock Springs, Wyo.

Mr. Editor:

Please send me three additional copies of May 12 issue, or of the editorial "What Price Religious Freedom?" I desire to send these to our representatives as suggested along with a letter, as I feel that all of us should work to see that this thoughtless and unfair ruling is done away with. Thanking you, I am, Sincerely,

R. H. WALKER, M. D.

FROM OVERSEAS LETTERS

Easter Service in Bamboo Basha in Jungle

New York, N. Y.—A letter from a soldier who had received a copy of the Prayer Book for Soldiers and Sailors in a far-distant outpost needs to be shared, Presiding Bishop Tucker thinks. He received it from a man who is, he says, "one of a few of the officers and men of the U. S. Army serving with the Chinese forces in India and Burma. Capt. J. L. W. MacRae is the writer, and he says:

"Lately there has been a good bit of hardware flying around, nor has there been any lack of the pestilence that walketh in darkness. I just wanted to tell you that this book is a truly fine idea and that those responsible for selecting its contents did an inspired job throughout. I am very grateful for it indeed.

"You would have enjoyed our Easter service and Holy Communion. It was held in the little bamboo basha chapel at one of the American outfits. The rain was coming down in torrents and there were little puddles here and there on the dirt floor where rain was dripping in through the palm leaves on the roof. We sat on bamboo benches, and when more men came in, they sat on empty ration boxes, and finally men sat in the chancel on the ground, around the Chaplain. The Altar had been constructed of scrap lumber and ration boxes, but it had a fine altar cloth on it, and a cross and candles, and a small portable field organ provided music. We sang the Easter hymns that we knew our people were singing back at home, and we prayed for them in our prayers, just as we knew they were praying for us. Chaplain Taylor led us in a prayer 'Above all for Resurrection, and next of all, to be home by next Easter,' Holy Communion on the dirt floor of that basha in the jungle had the beauty and dignity of Holy Communion in a Cathedral. We left the chapel to find that the rain had stopped and the sun was shining, and we went about our business."

Capt. MacRae is the son of the veteran missionary, the Rev. Cameron F. MacRae, who was in China for over forty years. The Captain went out as a Lieutenant, to instruct Chinese troops in American artillery action.

CHURCH PENSION FUND ENLARGES BOARD

New York, N. Y.—The election of the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., to the Board of Trustees of the Church Pension Fund has been announced by Bishop Cameron J. Davis, President of the Fund. The Rev. Mr. Stokes, rector of Trinity Church, Columbus, Ohio, is a member of the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Southern Ohio and was a Deputy to the General Convention in 1940 and 1943.

At the General Convention last October, authority was given to enlarge the Board of Trustees of the Church Pension Fund from 18 to 24 members. Since then, three of the newly created vacancies have been filled by the election of Mr. Leighton H. Coleman and Mr. Jarvis Cromwell, as previously announced, and by the recent election of the Rev. Mr. Stokes. Bishop Davis states that the Twenty-sixth Annual Report of the Fund is expected to be published shortly and will show assets at the end of 1943 of $37,629,423, and a total pension roll of approximately $1,400.000.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

LONG HOURS of pain and waiting are considered as nothing to be borne if the fruit thereof is worth the share of life expended. Jesus said, "A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come; but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world." No matter how long the hours of labor; no matter whether the baby is a girl or a boy, or even twins; all is forgotten of anguish, when the sight and sound and feel of the living child fills the heart with a "joy no man taketh from you." All mothers and fathers understand what I mean. They both feel that it was every bit worth while. Life is adding to life, and the miracle of it mutes the wild sound of our joy and subdues the moment of our rejoicing with a prayer of thanksgiving to the God of life who used a human vehicle for one moment of His creation. We are grateful for our share in the never-ending process of creation, and we give God the praise.

But what of the life that is still-born or that flutters awake for a moment to lapse again into the realm where we cannot yet enter? What then of the suffering borne and the frustration of fulfilment? I know three mothers facing this question at this very moment. In this hour of quiet I would seek thoughts their grief prevents and answers their numbness cannot find. One mother's baby was dead at birth—the life line was not long enough to extend into earth time. Another mother's baby lived for a day and then returned to the only refuge it had ever known—God's loving arms. The last mother's child was taken by accident a few months after birth—the aching sense of blame clouds the very sun of life for her. What can come to comfort them? What of their long awaited joy choked off at its very first cry? These are the thoughts that have come in quiet to one free from the nearness and the blindness of the pain, and the sense of frustration and futility.

GOD CARES for these little ones and those whom He has chosen to bear them. He will keep them from all harm of spirit in life or death. He will quiet the pent-up agony of their hearts and spill over them the quietness of His presence, provided they turn to Him and not away from Him; provided they trust Him with the answers and go on faith until light shines again.

God gives us adequate resources for such times of blind hurt, and does not willingly grieve or afflict us. We cannot know all the answers, but we can leave our questions with God and continue to love Him. We may be spared further suffering of an even more grievous nature by what has happened. We don't know. We must leave it in God's hands, knowing that He will do for us better things than we can desire or pray for.

God would not have them brood and turn their very souls to darkness and bitterness. There is a much better way through such moments, the way of faith and seeking next steps to take out of tragedy. We are tested and strengthened as we walk through the valley of the shadow of death, but with God near us we need fear no evil, for He is with us to comfort us and to open a way through whatever has happened.

God would have them know that this is not the end of life, but an accident of creation no one of us can completely understand, which happens only occasionally; that life must go on, and in the days to come they must seek ways of fulfilment which the moment of sorrow seems to have blocked.

When we seek the sound of His voice, God speaks the right words through such channels as E. Stanley Jones' little book "When Sorrow Comes," and through the Bible.

We need not worry about the babies, for they are in the loving arms of God. Nor need we worry about ourselves, for God has filled us with the necessary strength to endure, and has made us for continuing the long journey from darkness, through deeper darkness, to dawn.

O God, the King of glory, who hast exalted thine only Son Jesus Christ with great triumph unto thy kingdom in heaven; We beseech thee, leave us not comfortless, but send us thine Holy Ghost to comfort us, and exalt us unto the same place whither our Saviour Christ is gone before, who liveth and reigneth with thee and the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The Other Room

By B. S. MURRAY

AT ASCENSIONTIDE our thoughts soar upwar and we long to get out the wings of faith and visit our loved ones in the Other Room. Dimly here we dream how great must be their joys and bright their glories of being "with Christ." Such a reflection sobers and challenges us to prepare to join that long procession, that great cloud of witnesses.

The other day a friend of mine, whose only son was recently killed in action, said: "He is just gone upstairs and closed the door!" That was all he could think of. A closed door. There it stood. What was going on behind that door concerned him deeply, but it was closed. Everything was still, silent. Owing to the War's toll of the brave, there are so many going upstairs and closing the door in the noontime of their lives that there is a growing interest in what is taking place in the Other Room. Then, too, with the passage of Time we have more friends over there than here. We remember them; they were, and are, a part of us. Their laughter still rings in our ears, the light in their eyes haunts us. They were more to us than all the world and now . . . silence! Airplanes soar high; there they do not go. Somewhere the Silent Land is. And we long to communicate therewith. This maddening silence more than earth's noises is playing havoc with our nerves.

TODAY, HOWEVER, the educated mind, tired of the negativism found in the road from Lucrtius to Schopenhauer, is turning in the opposite direction. Scientists and philosophers are stressing a definitely spiritualized view of the universe, so much so that we are beginning to realize that the problem of the life to come is involved in a new way with the problem of the life that now is. Now is embedded in then; here with there! Undoubtedly our senses are so dulled with material contacts that we sense not things spiritual. The veil that hides things from us is not death; it is our own limitations. And this is to be expected from those who have patterned their thought modes after those of the materialistic, practical West. And as the long procession wends its way to the Silent Land, life becomes a vast expectation, a waiting, till the curtain shall be raised.

Too long we have been viewing life horizontally; now we must take the vertical view and ascend. All life is a progression, an ascent. If here, why not there? And "if matter, as we now know, is indestructible, preserving its being through infinite changes of form, what is there in the nature of things to forbid our belief that its noble partners, spirit and personality, are no exceptions to the rule," asks a modern writer. If lower organisms are immortal and that death has, co-operatively, come in as part of the struggle towards a higher structure, then we are justified in looking for higher fruitions as well as the solution of all our unanswered questions from the Silent Land.

Keen as we are on spiritual adventure yet we hesitate when we come to communication with the dead. Listen to a recent statement by an outstanding thinker "The real issue for Churchmen is not whether it is possible to communicate with the dead or not in this way, but whether it is right to attempt to do so; with the evidence of Holy Scripture behind her with its prohibition of necromancy, the Church leaves no doubt of the answer."

SOMETIME AGO Lord Dowding, a retired air chief marshal, read, at a noon day service of the Church in London, England, a letter from the spirit of a sailor missing in action. "I have the largest number of messages from men who have passed over in this war," said Lord Dowding. "The fact I want to stress is that the tone of these messages is, 'We are O.K. . . Don't grieve for us . . . We are the lucky ones . . . We have never been so happy.'" "There is a great organization of the Air Force on the 'Other Side.' and I receive frequent messages from them," he concluded. In the war of 1914-1918, Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir Conan Doyle asserted that they, too, successfully communicated with the dead. This subject was explored by a committee of eminent men of all schools of thought, who then concluded that: "the souls we have known and loved when disengaged from the body enter upon spheres of being too refined and too remote to be cognized by our mortal sense, and that those within reach are only inferior or degraded types." In this war, I suspect, we shall hear more about communication with the dead, for those who mourn want to know what their loved ones are doing and feeling.

There is a ministry of Silence. It is, however, a golden ministry, for the heavens are silent, not because they have nothing to say, but because the time is not yet. The silences and separations of life, then, are a part of the Divine plan and we must accept and transform their disciplinary course into constructive, spiritualized channels. Our question is not "Why?" but how are we to meet these separations and endure manfully this silence. They must be spiritualized. Viewing life steadily ,in totality. "Hear you not that sweet melodious music?" said Jacob Behmen to his son, when dying at Gorlitz. To trained, initiated ears there is even now spiritual music audible to attuned ears. The elect souls are already free of the world behind the veil. They are on pilgrimage towards that fatherland. "For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country . . . But now they desire a better country, that is, a heavenly."

LET US, THEREFORE, be on our guard against that famous falsehood that repeats glibly: "No one ever came back from beyond." One did. Jesus. And He taught us all He thought was necessary for us to know. In fact He said, going away, "If it were not so I would have told you." . . That surely was the plainest kind of a statement that silence is an affirmation. The Easter Message affirms that before Jesus came back He visited the spirits in the prison house of the Intermediate world. That day the grave lost its victory; that day death lost its sting. Now we know that our loved ones, in His waiting room preparing for entrance into Heaven, are with Him. What or where that may be is beyond our human power of location or definition. We do know, nevertheless, that the dead are safe in the arms of Jesus. And we may here have fellowship of heart with heart, for we on earth may, through Christ, contact them, for love and prayer are identical and cannot co-exist without each other. "In Christ," in sacrament and prayer, we and they are one! Nor shall we allow any morbid, inquisitive curiosity to cause us to peer within the veil, unduly and indiscreetly for that would be distrust

The Duty to Think

By C. LESLIE GLENN

ONE NIGHT, in the course of their missionary journeys, Jesus and the Disciples came to Capernaum, where they were going to spend the night. "And being in the house," presumably to be alone, He asked them, "What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?" "But they held their peace; for by the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest." (Mark 9:33-34).

This was going on all the time. Disputes, misunderstandings, not only about selfish matters such as who should be greatest, but about the fundamental teachings of Jesus. Again and again He took them off by themselves to explain what they misunderstood. Often we are told, "He opened unto them the scriptures" to show them that they had failed to read their deepest meanings. Just before the end He said, "I have yet many things to say unto you but ye cannot bear them now," but, "When He, the Spirit of Truth is come, He will guide you into all truth."

What we mean by the third Person of the Trinity, God the Holy Spirit, is that there is part of God which agitates our minds as well as our wills to inform them, just as in Jesus' life here on earth He would inform His followers by words they could hear.

And through the ages, Christians have gone on learning more and more of what Christ's life means. As new situations develop in history, Christians have made wrong decisions sometimes. (There are dark pages in Church history.) But mistakes are corrected, progress is made in knowing the will of God. And the process of learning that His disciples underwent in their lifetime has been undergone through the centuries. The and obviously is not yet. "The end of the earth" 'is not "fallen on us," as the ancient prophet observed. Sometimes our most serious failure is in knowledge. "Israel doth not know, my people do not consider" is still true. "Their zeal is not according to knowledge" will always be true until that last day when we know even as also we are known. Until that day, "Fresh light will continue to break forth from God's word."

FOR THE PAST twenty years this truth about the progressive revelation of God's will has been used to arouse people to the unchristian character of war. We were told that even though many saintly people took part in war in the past, now we know better what the mind of Christ was, and sincere Christians would no longer fight. We were told that even though in the past there had been just wars, victories which had won something for the world, this would be impossible in the future. A complete grasp of the heart of the Gospel meant an understanding of the hopelessness of war for settling anything and a consequent refusal to take part under any circumstances.

Nearly every thoughtful Christian went through some modification of that thinking in the years 1925 to 1935. It is hard now to judge the results. In bitter mood I sometimes say that it led to our unpreparedness and was the chief thing that encouraged the Nazis. As a character asked in a recent play, The Watch on the Rhine, "Why does our side have to fight always with bare hands?"

But it may be that this extreme pacifism was in a deeper sense a stage through which God the Holy Spirit was leading us. It was an exaggeration of the truth which we had to hold for a time in order to prepare ourselves for the next aspect of the truth.

By 1936 some began to see that our task was not only to hate war, but to do something about maintaining order in the world so that wars could not be started. We began to see that there was something worse than the sharp suffering of war and that was the long continued dull suffering of injustice and tyranny. Maybe we always knew that, but we came to it with a fresh understanding because we had become more aware of the frightfulness of warfare. We were better soldiers of the Gospel because we had sat down and counted the cost as our Master had urged us to do. And so as we were led into a new responsibility for maintaining order and fighting injustice, we realized that pacifism was leading toward world anarchism and irresponsibility.

The arguments among Christians as to whether the Gospel permitted fighting in a war was of a piece with the arguments that went on in the New Testament times. They were part of the process of learning God's will. I was, therefore, glad when the statement denouncing bombing came out in the papers recently written by Vera Brittain, and signed by twenty-eight clergymen and other leaders, because it brings the question out into the open. Discussion has gone on privately. People have been thinking about this. Many who are not thinking about Christianity and war, mean to do so as soon as the war is over. They have closed their minds to the question temporarily, put their religion upon the shelf for the duration. But the time to think is now.

OUR LORD IS ALWAYS calling us into a house asking us, "What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?" He wants to get the thing out into the open.

On the surface, the statement against bombing is impertinent and infuriating, like the pleas to General Marshall not to use flame throwers, because it assumes that our military leaders are unmerciful men making the war more terrible than it need be. Perhaps there is some compensation in the realization that we are living in a free country where such criticism of the conduct of a war may be permitted. On the surface, too, one may be annoyed that some pacifists have simply become obstructionists. Frustrated in their attempt to keep us from fighting, they criticize details and become opportunists in appealing to thoughtless sentimentality. Beneath the surface, however, whatever the first unfortunate impression of this statement, it may have value because it gives an opportunity to bring once more into the open that many Christians flatly disagree with pacifism.

As P. W. Wilson wrote, "Many millions of Christians have examined their consciences with as searching a scrutiny as any apparent in the criticisms levelled against them, and, after a study of the Bible and especially of the most authoritative teachings in that great literature, have arrived at a conclusion which happens to differ from what is called sometimes pacifist. The people are as reverent toward God and as considerate of men as the signatories of the manifesto under discussion, nor have they ignored the 'stern verities and realities' to be found in the words of Him who founded the Christian faith and in the writings of His immediate followers."

It happens that there are two views of this grave matter. In believing in fighting, we have not turned away from the ideal of pacifism to an obsolete standard; we have gone through pacifism to a vision of responsibility for order and justice. That progression is so important in the days after the war that pacifism must be met honestly now and answered whenever it appears.

It does not matter about the people who think this manifesto is an example of the impracticality of Christianity. But it does matter about those who wistfully regard this as a statement of an ideal too good for this world, and who think war is a compromise and retreat into refusal to deal with the problems with which history confronts us.

The practical question is, for example, how to keep the peace afterwards. One suggestion, which may be adopted in one form or another, is that after peace is established, if in any place there is an attempt made to arm secretly for what would inevitably be a third world war; that place, those factories be bombed and destroyed from the air. The proposal is that we do in the future what we should have done in 1931 when the Japanese marched into Manchuquo, or in 1935 when the Italians started into Ethiopia, or in 1938 when Nazi aggression first openly showed itself. If there are sentimentalists who do not want us to bomb the enemy today almost at our throat, what will the outcry be when we do some bombing to prevent the start of future aggression against the order of the world? As Christians we must think our way through to see that our religion allows us to use force to maintain order.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY, writing for a large company of thoughtful Christians, says, "It has to recognize that society is made up of competing centers of power, and that the separate existence of contending vitalities, and not only human sinfulness, make the elimination of power impossible. What has to be aimed at is such a distribution and balance of power that a measure of justice may be achieved even among those who are actuated in the main by egoistic and sinful impulses. It is a modest aim, but observance of political life leaves no doubt that this must be its primary concern.

"One national State cannot love another. The members of one may love the members of the other so far as opportunities of intercourse allow. That will help in negotiations; but it will not solve the problem of the relations between the two groups. Consequently, the relevance of Christianity in these spheres is quite different from what many Christians suppose it to be. Christian charity manifests itself in the temporal order as a supra-natural discernment of, and adhesion to, justice in relation to the equilibrium of power. It is precisely fellowship or human love, with which too often Christian charity is mistakenly equated, that is not seriously relevant in that sphere. When the two are identified it is just those who are most honest and realistic in their thinking and practice that are apt to be repelled from Christianity."

Frankly, when great Christian leaders talk this way, I do not clearly understand the words. Or rather, I feel as if we were on the edge of a new world; and what these men see in the future, it is not possible to reduce to syllogisms. There is something ahead of the human race that we have never had in the past, a chance to eliminate war. But it will not be done by applying the ethics of the family to the world at large.

For example, the lessons in the Bible today do not apply. How many times shall my brother offend, until seven times? No! until seventy times seven. Forgiveness and fellowship apply to individuals. Order and justice apply when dealing with "separate contending vitalities." The Germans after the last war did not want forgiveness, but protection from the chaotic conditions that led to Hitler. That is what the world will want after this war.

If the bombing of Germany is frightful, it is not as frightful as the thousand years of injustice that would descend on the world with the victory of German arms. We may modestly aim for a measure of justice, three or four years of frightfulness instead of a thousand. (This does not sound Utopian, but Utopianism is not Christian.)

TO SEARCH OUT the mind of Christ in these puzzling decisions is the thrilling task before Christianity. The lessons for today, however, apply in our personal attitude. Forgiveness will save us from bitterness and the distortion of personality that comes from hate. A woman wrote, "My boy did not hate the Germans. I do not hate the Germans, even though they have taken my dearest treasure." Her son gave his life to beat Germany, one more symbol of the life of America poured out to destroy the present German system and to achieve some order and a measure of justice.

When people say, "You cannot abolish war," they mean "with anything now in sight." And that is terribly true. Specifically it touches us Christians in the irrelevance of our application of the Gospel. A fundamental change of outlook is demanded of us. We can never abolish war with our present Christian thinking. But what is going to happen is that in the days ahead our Lord will often get us into the house, as He did long ago in Capernaum. Into His house, the church. And into some careful reading of Christian scholars on the side. And then quietly ask us, "What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?" And under the guidance of His Holy Spirit we will be led into new applications of the Gospel to opportunities the world has never seen before.

"Treating With Communists"

A great deal of publicity has been given to the recent trip of the Rev. Stanislaus Orlemanski, an obscure Roman priest, to Moscow. All the facts have not been revealed. It is still a mystery as to why our State Department should issue a passport to an individual who may have had the best intentions, but whose influence, on the surface at least, would not carry much weight. The evidence points to some higher source being responsible for the Polish-American priest's twenty-six day pilgrimage to Moscow and his audiences with Marshal Stalin and Foreign Minister Molotoff. The trip itself is intriguing. But it is the after-math of the pilgrimage that interests us.

The obscure priest returns, and is immediately disciplined by his superiors. That is the privilege of the Roman Church. We only question the second ground upon which suspension of his priestly functions was imposed. We quote from the New York Times of Sunday.

"While he would not detail the specific violations, Father Shea (chancellor of the Diocese) said they included first his absence over Sunday without permission of the Bishop, and second, "treating with Communists," in particular, Marshal Stalin and Foreign Minister Molotoff of the Soviet Union. According to Father Shea, Father Orlemanski's trip to Moscow invoked activities contrary to the general doctrine of the Catholic Church as enunciated by Popes Leo XIII, Pius XI and Pius XII.

Since when did it become a sin to treat with sinners? The Roman Church claims through its head to be Christ's Vicar on earth. We seem to recall that the Founder of the Christian faith did not fear to treat with sinners! In fact, He converted many by His close personal contact with them. Granting the sincerity of Father Orlemanski's intentions, he apparently was solely interested in seeing that his brethren in Poland would be granted the right to live by their faith. If by going directly to headquarters he could make some contribution to this cause, we feel he should not be disciplined and certainly not condemned. The whole basis for this disapproval by his church is, to our mind, childish. And further, it may have dangerous repercussions for the whole cause of the Christian religion in Soviet Russia.

Some years ago it was our privilege to have listened to the distinguished Monsignor Fulton J. Sheehan. On this particular occasion Father Sheehan blasted away at the whole Communist philosophy. He told how he had gone into Russia incognito and had traveled extensively in that guise. He gathered information that was valuable in building up his and the Church's case against Communism. This was all done secretly.

An obscure priest goes openly and on his own initiative and is condemned. It is hard for those of us, who do not understand all the operations of Roman Canon Law, to understand the distinction that has been drawn. Again as the editor of the Times Dispatch (Richmond, Va.) pointed out in an editorial, no disciplinary action was ever instituted against a certain priest who called the President of the United States a liar, and whose paper, Social Justice, was ordered discontinued by government action, yet an obscure priest is severely disciplined because he treats with Communists.

Regardless of what we as individuals may think of the Soviet system and the leaders, the people of the Soviet Republics are our allies. By their gallant fight against the Nazi invaders, they have literally saved the lives of millions of American soldiers. We are not afraid to treat with Communists.

We do not condemn the Roman Church for disciplining one of her priests, for a flagrant violation of her canon law. But when she charges this priest with an error in treating with Communists, it sounds childishly absurd. Not only is it childishly absurd, but it has dangerous ramifications. Good-will in this world is not going to be built up upon continued distrust of the motives and intentions of another group. We shall never understand each other unless we deal with one another on a friendly plane.

This country, through Lend Lease, through Russian War Relief, both officially and unofficially, has been treating with Communists for a number of years. Does the Roman Church disapprove of our Government's action and the work of a large group of individual citizens?

Let's treat with Communists. It is the only sensible way to build up good-will.

Stewardship

As Christians we are Christ's stewards. Christian stewardship is extremely important. Beginning with next week's issue we intend publishing a series of brief articles on Stewardship. The author of this series is the Rev. C. Avery Mason, S. T. D. Dr. Mason, as we all know, has been the executive head of Forward in Service, for the past three years, and has done a magnificent job. These papers of his are the outgrowth of the many conferences which he has had with both clergy and laity. We believe that they will prove valuable to all who are attempting to raise to a higher level the Church's thinking in monetary terms.

Convention Address

By BISHOP MANNING

THIS IS THE FIFTH YEAR in which we have gathered at our Diocesan Convention under the black shadow of World War.

As we all know, this is a World Battle against the very Powers of Darkness. Never in history has there been so fateful a struggle as this. Never in any War has there been so clear an alignment between the forces which make for evil and the forces which make for good in this World. There can be no compromise between the things for which the Axis Powers stand and the things for which Christianity and Democracy stand. There can be no hope of Peace, or Security, or Decency among men until this Evil Power is completely defeated and overthrown. Today, all over the world, our men are serving in the Armed Forces in this great Conflict. From all our homes and congregations our young men have gone to do their part, and great numbers of our young women also. From this Convention we send them the message that our hearts, and our constant prayers, are with them, and that we who are at home will do our uttermost to support them in their service and sacrifice for our Country, for Right and Freedom, and for all that is sacred in human life.

The whole life of the Church is deeply affected by the War but the work of our Diocese has gone steadily forward. In our Parishes and Missions, and in the work of the Diocese generally, there has been a deepened earnestness, a keener realization of our need of Divine help, a strengthened purpose to make the Faith and Work of the Church a reality and to carry its help to all whom we can reach. In the hearts of clergy and people alike there has been the realization that when our men at the front are giving their lives to make this a better world, we at home are called to show a like consecration.

Bishop Gilbert and I can both report an active year of work, I think we can say that we have never known a more active year, but we have been able to keep fairly abreast of the work with the indispensable help of Bishop Campbell and also of Bishop Littell, to both of whom I express our most grateful thanks and appreciation. . . . .

IN REGARD TO our Cathedral we are, as you know, doing no building during the War, but as soon as the War ends the work must be actively resumed and I am hoping that the remaining units of construction may be undertaken as a great offering of thanksgiving for a Victorious and Righteous Peace. In the meantime the influence of the Cathedral is felt more and more in the Diocese and the Church and in the life of the Community. Among the many great services and gatherings held in the Cathedral during the past year have been the Service of Prayer for God's Blessing upon the Officers and Men of the Merchant Marines of the United Nations which was attended by contingents from all the United Nations carrying their National Flags; the Community Service to launch the National Christian Mission on World Order; the Graduation Exercises of the Ensigns from the Midshipmen's School held every few weeks with from seven to eight thousand persons present at each Graduation; and the recent notable services which marked the visit of the Most Reverend and Right Honorable Cyril Forster Garbett, Archbishop of York and Primate of England. In his sermon the Archbishop declared that never in his life had he spoken to so large a congregation as those which he saw in our Cathedral except in Moscow last October, and I may add that this distinguished visitor from the Historic Cathedral of York spoke most appreciatively of the dignity and beauty of the Service in our New York Cathedral, and of its complete accord with the rubrics and teachings of the Prayer Book. The Archbishop's simplicity, sincerity, and strength, impressed everyone and his visit was a most helpful and memorable one. Both by his presence with us and by his words the Archbishop emphasized the unity and fellowship of the Episcopal Church with our Spiritual Mother, the Church of England, and with the whole of the Anglican Communion, in the Faith and Order of the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, the Faith, the Sacraments, and the Three-fold Order of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, coming to us in unbroken succession from the Apostles' time.

And at this time the Archbishop's visit had a further value and significance in emphasizing the fellowship between our Country and Great Britain. Nothing is more important for the welfare of the World than the close and enduring fellowship of the English Speaking Peoples. The hope of Peace in this World for generations to come will depend upon right understanding and cooperation between the United States, the British Commonwealth, and Russia, acting with the cooperation of China and the other Peace-Loving Nations. Anyone in this land, any individual, any newspaper, any organization or group, which seeks to create or foster Anti-British feeling, or Anti-Russian feeling, is disloyal to our Country and to the Cause for which our Country is giving its life. The two great English Speaking Democracies, the United States and the British Commonwealth, must stand always in full fellowship for the welfare, hope, and peace of the World.

BEFORE I CLOSE, I must speak of that which is in all our minds, and hearts, and prayers, the Invasion of Europe, now soon to begin.

We stand now at the very crisis of this World Conflict, and at one of the gravest moments in history. Our Nation needs now to be strong in faith and courage. We have firm trust that Right and Truth will prevail, but we know that the struggle will be a fearful one, and that sorrow will come to many of our homes.

This is a time for our whole Nation to lift up its soul in prayer to God.

When the Invasion begins and while it continues I ask the Clergy of our Diocese to call their people to special prayer in all our Churches. Everywhere the people of our land will gather in their Churches and Houses of Worship to ask that God will uphold the Cause of Justice and Freedom.

We must pray that God will give speedy Victory to the Forces of the United Nations for the sake of all mankind.

We must pray that God will uphold, strengthen, and protect those who are serving in our Armed Forces, and that He will receive into His Own care and keeping those who lay down their lives for us and for their fellowmen.

We must pray that the peoples of the enslaved Countries may now be delivered from the almost unimaginable cruelties and sufferings which they are enduring.

We must pray that we on the Home Front may be given faithfulness to do our part and strength to bear whatever losses and sorrows may come to us.

We must pray for complete, decisive Victory, for without this there can be no hope of Peace or Freedom.

Only by Victory can a lasting Peace be won, but we know that Military Victory alone will not bring Peace among men. Our hope, our prayer, and our purpose as a Nation is that out of the agony and suffering of this War shall come a better and more Christian World.

May the tragedy and cruelty of this War summon all of us to strive more earnestly that God's Will may be done here on earth.

May God stir and strengthen us to do all that is in our power to make this a World in which all Nations shall share in the riches of the earth which God has provided, a World in which, through wise and enlightened measures, the well-being of all shall be advanced, a World ruled not by the spirit of covetousness but by the spirit of service, a World in which men shall be delivered from the evils alike of grinding poverty and of excessive riches, and, with full freedom, shall walk in the paths of Justice, Peace, and World-Wide Brotherhood.

This is our "War Aim." This is the ideal which we have before us. This is the Cause for which our Country is giving itself, and for which our men are giving their lives.

WAIT-A-MINUTE WALTER

By Lillian E. Andrews

Walter got his nickname because no matter what he was asked to do he always answered, "Wait a minute". This morning he was sitting on the back step watching a spider spin a web and fasten it to a twig of the lilac bush, when his sister called to him.

"Walter, where are you?" she asked. "Mother wants you right away."

"Wait a minute," said Walter.

It was hot even though it was early, and he liked sitting in the shade. He was glad he didn't have to work as hard as that busy spider. At last he got up and went into the house.

"Where's Mother?" he inquired in surprise. "You said she wanted me, Agnes."

"She did want you," said Agnes, "but you said, 'Wait a minute,' so she went to the store alone. She was going to buy you the red ball you told her about."

Walter was astonished and grieved. "Why didn't she wait?" he burst out. "I—I didn't know she was going to the store. And she went out the front door, too."

"Yes," agreed Agnes. "She said she thought it might teach you a lesson, if you didn't get the ball."

Walter ran down the street. He thought perhaps he might get to the store before his mother finished her shopping, but he didn't. He met her coming home.

"Did—did you get the red ball?" he panted.

"No," said Mrs. Birtwell, "I thought a boy too lazy to come and see what I wanted was too lazy to bounce a ball. You said, 'Wait a minute,' so I let you wait."

Walter hung his head and scuffed slowly along the sidewalk. It hurt to be called lazy, but down in his heart something kept saying his mother was right. He tried to stop the little voice. Suppose he was a little lazy sometimes; people needn't make such a fuss about it. He felt cross and "grumpy" all the way home.

Dinner was so good it made him feel better. After awhile he went out on the back steps again. The spider had been working hard. He had spun a great, round web. As Walter was looking at it, Thad Blake and his sister Doris came along. Each of them had a tin pail.

"We're going berrying up on Rocky Bluff," announced Thad. "Don't you and Agnes want to go with us?"

Agnes had heard Thad. "I'll get a pail for Walter and one for me," she called.

It was only a mile to Rocky Bluff. The little, low bushes were bending over with sweet blueberries. "Sugar" berries the children called them. It was fun to pick them. Walter loved to go berrying, but he began to get a little warm and tired. His pail wasn't very full because he had put more berries in his mouth than in the pail. He looked around for a good place to sit down. A big, hollow log under a shady pine tree seemed a wonderful place to rest. The log was covered with moss as soft as a carpet, and it was nice and cool under the tree.

"Let's go a little higher up the bluff," said Doris. "It looks as if there was a big patch of berries up there."

"Come on, Walter," shouted Thad.

Walter was too comfortable to move. "Wait a minute," he replied.

"Come along, Walter Birtwell," fussed Agnes. "You're the pokiest boy I ever saw."

Walter didn't answer, but he began to drum his heels against the hollow log. The next minute the air was full of hornets. "Buzz! Buzz! Buz-z-z!" they went. But they did more than buzz. They began to sting.

Walter gave a frantic yell, as he jumped up and ran. "Hornets!" he cried. "Oh! Oh! Oh!"

"Break off some leafy branches and swing them around your head," said Thad. "That will keep the hornets away a little. And run! The farther away we get from their nest, the sooner they'll turn back."

That was right. In a few minutes the hornets buzzed back toward the old log, leaving the children to pick berries. All of the children had a few stings, but Walter had a lot.

"They must have had a nest inside the old log," he said, "and I made them mad when I drummed on it. I guess I deserve to get stung. Next time anybody asks me to do something, I'll get up and do it. I won't say, 'Wait a minute'. I'll get up and do it!"

"Maybe you'll forget tomorrow," said Agnes, as she bathed his face with some cold water from a little spring.

"No, I won't!" retorted Walter. "If I do, just you 'buzz', and I'll hop right up."

Sure enough the next morning Walter forgot and started to say, "Wait a minute", just as usual, but when Agnes began to "buzz" he jumped up quickly.

"I'm not going to be 'Wait-a-Minute Walter' any more," he said. "Folks will have to find some other name for me. I'm tired of being lazy."

Mrs. Birtwell laughed. "I think I'll have to buy you the red ball," she told him, "if you keep your word."

"I'll keep it," said Walter. And he did.—S. S. Times.

Bishop Carruthers Consecrated

Service Attended by Presiding Bishop, Some 60 Bishops and Clergymen

Charleston, S. C.—The Rev. Thomas Neely Carruthers was consecrated Bishop of South Carolina on May 4, in historic St. Philip's Church, Charleston. Beginning with a procession from the parish house to the church, in which the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, other bishops from various parts of the country, visiting clergymen, clergy and lay officials of the diocese, crucifers, flag-bearers, and a large choir took part, the ceremony continued with the service of Holy Communion and the service for the consecration of a bishop.

The congregation numbered more than 1,000 persons, and the outdoor procession was seen by a large crowd on the street. Some 60 clergymen, of whom 13 were bishops, were in the procession. The Rt. Rev. E. P. Dandridge, coadjutor of Tennessee, read the Epistle, and the Rt. Rev. John J. Gravatt, bishop of Upper South Carolina, read the Gospel. Bishop Clinton S. Quin was the preacher.

Bishop Quin's Address

Opening his address with comment about his twelve-year association with the bishop-elect, Bishop Quin noted the qualifications, both negative and positive, that are expected of a bishop and required of him by the exhortations of the Scriptures and the canons of the Church.

He reminded those present that any follower of Christ has to set a good example for a critical public, half of whom know or care nothing about Jesus Christ and the Church.

Listing characteristics necessary for leadership of the people of a diocese, Bishop Quin said that a bishop must be "a good shepherd who breaks the trail for his sheep; who protects and feeds them, knows them by name and stays with them; a diocesan who would mold into one compact, loyal family the followers of God; one who is concerned with the progress of the whole Church; a soldier of Christ, in the front line, bearing witness against the forces of evil; and a champion of the Church of God, fighting for Christian unity, but not for any compromise that will reduce the Church to the level of a fraternal organization, an ethical culture club, a paupers' union or a literary society, believing, and if necessary, dying for his belief. The Church does not expect a bishop to be an expert in economics, science, medicine or education, but he must teach the Word and Work of God."

Bishop Quin, in conclusion, told the bishop-elect that he should stick with his diocese; that he should not neglect his family in the midst of other duties; that he should devote hours to meditation and communion with Jesus Christ; that he should renew his consecration vows regularly; that he should be always faithful to the Church and not ashamed to confess the faith of Christ crucified.

The bishop-elect was presented by Bishop Everett Jones, of West Texas, and Bishop Arthur R. McKinstry, of Delaware. Bishop Frank A. Juhan, of Florida, read the Litany, and the attending presbyters were the Rev. Messrs. J. Francis McCloud, Prentice A. Pugh, both of Nashville, Tenn. Serving as co-consecrators were Bishops James M. Maxon, Tennessee, and A. S. Thomas, whose successor as Bishop of South Carolina, Dr. Carruthers becomes.

Dr. Carruthers was elected last January 18. He has been rector of Christ Church, Nashville, and previously had been rector of St. Peter's, Columbia, Tenn., and of Trinity, Houston, Texas. He was born in Collierville, Tenn., June 10, 1900. His degrees of B. A., B. D., and D. D., are from the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., and his Master's degree is from Princeton. He is married to the former Miss Ellen Douglas Everett. They have two children.

The congregation of Christ Church, Nashville, gave Bishop Carruthers his Episcopal ring. His pectoral Cross is from Trinity Church, Houston. Several sets of vestments were given him by organizations and individuals of his former parishes. A Bishop's Book was given by St. Andrew's, Collierville, Tenn., where he was baptized and confirmed, and one from the Clericus of Nashville.

The service was followed by a luncheon, in honor of the Presiding Bishop and Bishop Carruthers, with short speeches by General C. P. Summeral, a member of the Standing Committee and president of The Citadel. Mrs. Frank A. McLeod, president of the diocesan Woman's Auxiliary, Capt. Sydney S. Bailey, of Trinity Church, Houston, Bishop Maxon, Bishop Barnwell, of Georgia, and Bishop Thomas. Later, Bishop Thomas gave a dinner to Bishop Carruthers.

FROM MOSCOW

May 8, 1944.

New York, N. Y.—The following has just been received from Moscow:

Russian War Relief has received the following message to Bishop William T. Manning from Sergeii, Patriarch of Moscow:

Russian War Relief has informed me you are heading clothing campaign for peoples of the Soviet Union who are victims of war. On behalf of my Russian Orthodox Church congregation I thank you for your brotherly care for our war victims and call down the Lord's blessing on all Americans who at your appeal will come to our succor. May these cruel ordeals of war be for our peoples a salutary bond cementing the joint efforts of our American and Soviet peoples in the name of a common happy future.

Sergeii,
Patriarch of Moscow.

Great Service To Louisiana

A Tribute to James Craik Morris from His Former Diocese

New Orleans, La.—The Rt. Rev. James Craik Morris, D. D., fifth bishop of the Diocese of Louisiana, passed away in Sewanee, Tenn., on May 5, 1944. He had suffered an attack of heart disease a few days previously. He would have been 74 years of age on June 18. Funeral services were held at All Saints' Chapel in Sewanee on May 6th, and interment followed in the Sewanee Cemetery. Bishop Jackson officiated at the services, which were attended by a number of clergymen from the Diocese.

Few realize the full extent of the great service which Bishop Morris gave to the Church in Louisiana during the ten years of his Episcopate. Coming from Panama in 1930, he found a diocese badly disorganized and handicapped by a heavy burden of debt. He left it debt free, with a good beginning of an endowment, and ready to again march forward in the work of Christ on earth. The great progress of the diocese in more recent years has been largely made possible by the past accomplishments of Bishop Morris. Much of the magnificent work did not bear fruit until after he gave up his active leadership.

Born in Louisville, Ky., on June 18, 1870, of distinguished lineage, Bishop Morris received his education at Sewanee, which awarded him a Bachelor of Literature degree in 1890, followed by a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1891. In 1892 the University of Louisville conferred upon him the degree of LL. D., and in 1915 Sewanee again recognized the achievements of its distinguished son by awarding him the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

In 1930 he was elected Bishop of Louisiana at the Council of the Diocese, which met that year in St. James' Church, Alexandria, and, accepting his election, he was translated to the See of Louisiana with ancient ceremony in Christ Church Cathedral, New Orleans, on October 15, 1930. For ten years he served Louisiana faithfully and well. He won countless friends throughout the State, and was respected and honored in every corner of his large diocese by men and women of all faiths.

Bishop Morris was not only a great prelate, but an author and musician of note. He was the author of several widely read religious books, and was an authority on Music, Church Music and Hymns especially. As a member of the National Commission on the Revision of the Hymnal, his knowledge of music was of great value. He frequently conducted his own choir, and played the organ on many occasions. Even as a Bishop, he would sometimes act as organist, conduct the services, and preach the sermon.

The memory of the departed Bishop will live long in the hearts of all who knew him. Few men possessed the

Forward in Service Conference

What Will the Birmingham Conference Do?

Birmingham, Ala.—The eyes of the whole Church will be focussed on Birmingham on May 23-24 when the National Council. Forward in Service Conference will be held for the purpose of discussing the Plan of Action for 1944 45. The scope and the significance of this meeting are seen in the fact that it will be attended by the Bishops and department heads of all the dioceses of the Province of Sewanee and all the executive officers of the National Council, together with the Executive Secretaries of the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work and of Forward in Service.

For two days the conference will (1) meditate on the theme: "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another," (2) discuss next year's emphasis on "The Christian Fellowship: International and Interracial Understanding," (3) hear National Council officers tell how the departments of Christian Education, Finance, Missions, Promotion, Social Relations, Woman's Auxiliary and Youth intend to carry out the Plan of Action, (4) draw up tentative plans by and for each diocese, (5) hear a closing address by Bishop Carpenter, host to the Conference.

Admittedly, the problem of human fellowship is the most critical problem before man today. War and hatred, racial antipathies and class antagonisms are tearing asunder the human family. No greater gift could be offered man than help in solving this problem. It is to be hoped the Birmingham Conference will face the momentous questions before it "reverently, discreetly, advisedly, soberly, and in the fear of God." It would be a major calamity to our people who are looking to the Church for leadership for the Conference, after prayerful consideration, to present a workable plan of action for our parishes and missions (where, after all, the work of the Church is done) only to have the plan filed in clerical waste baskets, or lost through sheer laziness, or sabotaged by fearful and timid Church people who have forgotten our Lord's promise: "Ye shall re- ost it-disciples. If we today attempt great things for God because we expect great things from Him, it may be that He will pour out His spirit again upon us to help us build a new life of love in which the ills of this present time may disappear and the glad day of brotherhood and mutual service may dawn.

DIOCESE OF ALABAMA

Teen-Age Activities

Dothan—The Church led the way in teen-age recreation in this city when the parish house of the Church of the Nativity was opened more than a year ago for games and dancing on Friday nights. Later, Saturday night was added at the request of the young people. In April of this year the local Exchange Club opened a Teen Club in spacious quarters nearer the center of town; teen-agers continued to visit the Parish House Club, too. The vicar, the Rev. G. Ralph Madson, was the speaker at the opening of the new club. (He is not a member of the Exchange Club.)

Pictures in Bible Teaching

Atmore—Using pictures, in colors and black and white line drawings, to teach the Bible, Church symbolism, Church services, etc., is proving highly successful in Trinity Mission here, the Rev. George C. Merkel, rector, reports. His Sunday school contains rural as well as urban youngsters, the children of farmers, woodsmen and sawmill workers being brought in from ten miles away by bus. The same picture methods work in other missions in the field, including two for Creek Indians.

Parish House Serves Whole Community

Spring Hill—St. Paul's parish house serves the whole of this Mobile suburb. While the Presbyterians are without a church building they hold services there, and conduct a summer Daily Vacation Bible School. Red Cross, Civilian Defense, government housing and other organizations make it their headquarters. The Rev. Robb White, Jr., cooperates with the representatives of the Mobile Council of Churches, who are assigned to local housing projects.

Youth Group of Missions Meet Together

Foley—The Young Churchmen of South Baldwin is the name of the youth group for the mission field centering in St. Paul's Church, here, containing four other missions, the whole field being about fifty miles in diameter. Once a month the group meets for corporate Communion, a meal, recreation and business, rotating among the missions.

Citizenship Day May 21

Day Can Be Made Act of Friendship and Good Will

New York, N. Y.—Churches are being urged to observe Citizenship Day this year on May 21. The Federal Council, the Home Missions Council and the Missionary Education Movement join in presenting this observance as of special value in making newly naturalized Americans feel that their Americanization means something in their lives. The day, often called "I Am An American Day" was set aside four years ago by a Congressional resolution at a time when exercises should be held "to assist our citizens, both native-born and naturalized, to understand more fully the great privileges and responsibilities of citizenship in our democracy".

As President Roosevelt in this year's proclamation said, "Our nation has been enriched, both spiritually and materially, by the naturalization of many thousands of foreign-born men and women and by the coming of age of great numbers of our youth, who have thereby achieved the full stature of citizenship, and these citizens have strengthened our country by their services at home and on the battlefield."

Home missions study this year has been devoted to the understanding of the relationship of the Church to various cultural, racial, and foreign language groups in America. "A citizenship day program, designed to make the advent into citizenship a spiritual occasion to be cherished and remembered for life, can be the high point for many churches in a year of study of fellow-Americans," according to a joint statement issued by Mr. Franklin D. Cogswell, secretary and editor of the Missionary Education Movement; Dr. Mark A. Dawber and Miss Edith Lowry, executive secretaries of the Home Missions Council of North America. "The day can be an act of friendship and good will to mark the beginning of a new understanding between the Christian Church and foreign-born and minority groups in America and to emphasize the spiritual significance which becoming an American must have if our democracy is to be reality."

Churches have held separate pro-

DIOCESE OF KANSAS

Annual Convention Hears Bishop Fenner's Report on Progress

Emporia, Kansas—The floods which have swept over central and eastern Kansas resulted in a postponement of the 85th annual convention of the Diocese of Kansas from April 24 to May 1. The convention met in St. Andrew's Church, and heard Bishop Goodrich R. Fenner report on progress in the diocese in the seven years of his episcopate. Definite advance is noted in communicant strength, which grew from 8,376 to 10,037, a total increase of 1,661 and an average increase of 237 communicants per year. The total number of confirmations was 3,851, an average of 536 per year. Total giving increased from $161,936 to $193,722; diocesan endowments from $111,078.04 to $187,589.50.

Reduction of mortgage indebtedness has been notable in the seven-year period. Seven years ago it was $132,813. Bishop Fenner said, "Today it stands at $21,398. In the seven years the parishes and missions have cleared off debt amounting to $111,415. All the debts that remain have systematic amortization plans behind them."

In 1939 Kansas was an aided diocese, receiving $3,075 from the National Council and giving $6,500 for general missionary work. Nothing has been received from the National Council since 1940. The diocesan and General Church program quota for 1945 is $5,800.

During 1943 a new mission was established at Marion, and an old mission, long inactive was re-established at Elgin. The Bishop Vail Foundation has authorized the purchase of property to be used as a site for a new church in northeast Johnson County, near Kansas City, in the midst of a great new residential area that grew rapidly before the war and gives promise of developing still more when building restrictions are removed. Good Shepherd Mission, Fredonia, whose members could be counted on one hand five years ago, has accumulated a fund of $1,000 during the last four years and recently authorized purchase of a site for a church. Improvements throughout the diocese have been numerous and active post-war planning is being done.

During the last quarter of 1943 a Church Extension plan to facilitate and implement missionary expansion was launched. This plan will be continued during 1944 with more active promotion. Under this plan each member of the Church will be asked to give $1 each year. Prospects to date indicate that it will prove as successful in Kansas as it has elsewhere.

The Bishop gave an extremely clear picture of the work of a diocese, helpful to all those who have difficulty in seeing beyond their own parish boundaries.

"I wish, as your chief pastor," he said, "that I had the faculty to draw together all the scattered congregations of the diocese and show them how one helps the other and how interdependent they are. A diocese is really just that: a group of churches, large and small, rich and poor, located in a certain geographical area and banded together to help each other and in the strength of their union to do their part in carrying on Christ's work. A diocese is so much more than an administrative cog in the machinery of the Church. Again, it is the summation of our combined spiritual energy and our sacrificial service for the larger cause of Christ. The means by which we have communion and fellowship one with another and through which we touch the whole life of the Church is our Diocese."

PRECIOUS DRUGS TAKEN BACK TO CHINA

New York, N. Y.—Friends of the Rev. Walter P. Morse will be glad to have relayed information about his return to China, as contained in a letter to Mr. J. Earl Fowler, of the Overseas Division of the National Council.

Mr. Morse wrote January 11 from Bombay, reporting an uneventful journey that far. The precious drugs which he is taking with him for Chinese sick are, he says, "intact at the Customs House and are going bonded through India. American Red Cross is helping me from here to Calcutta, the Indian Red Cross Society has offered to pay the moving charges on my drugs which will go with me on the passenger train by special concession of the railroad."

An additional "500 pounds of excellent drugs and surgical supplies, all free", was acquired at Durban, Dr. Morse says . . . "So now I have about three-quarters of a ton.

"I was two months and a half on the sea," Mr. Morse writes, "the longest voyage I have ever taken. It was all on the same old tub you saw me board in Brooklyn. We laid over a month in Durban, where I had to rebook at the cost of 70 pounds. I jacked like a steer as you can imagine, but to no avail. pay up or stay behind! No charge was ever made for the excess weight of drugs, so that is something to be thankful for, I suppose. I shall stay with Mr. Allen when I get to Kunming, and then find out what the Bishop wants

161st Convention Diocese New York

From Bishop Manning's Convention Address, In Part

New York, N. Y.—Almost all our missions and assisted parishes report increasing interest among their people and in many cases this is shown by increased contributions towards their own support. In the several Convocations the Deans and Councils have done their work effectively and with excellent results. In the Convocation of Westchester one of our missions, St. Mary the Virgin's, Chappaqua, has reached the status of a self-supporting parish and is applying to this Convention for admission as a parish, and at least three other missions in the diocese are expecting soon to be able to take this step.

One of the most encouraging facts in our diocesan life is the growth of the work among our colored people. We have more than 10,000 colored communicants in our parishes and missions and many of these Churches are filled with great congregations not only on special occasions, but morning and evening, Sunday after Sunday. At this time when we are hearing much of juvenile delinquency it is encouraging to know that there is also juvenile excellency, and that there are more than 5,000 colored children enrolled in our Church Schools, and in addition there are many young people's organizations which exercise wide and wholesome influence among the adolescents in their communities. The work of the clergy, and of the faithful communicants, in these congregations is deserving of the highest praise. . . .

Our great diocesan organizations and institutions have, I believe, never functioned more effectively than during this past year. The Woman's Auxiliary has steadfastly and unfailingly carried on its work all over the diocese; the City Mission Society with its splendid staff of twenty-seven chaplains and many other trained workers has ministered daily to people of every kind and condition, helping them to face their trials and meet their problems; the Seamen's Church Institute, which has just observed its 100th anniversary, has continued its noble and unequalled work among seamen, with the demands upon it immensely increased by the War, and the same may be said of all our diocesan agencies. . . . I am especially happy to tell you that St. Faith's House, our New York Training School for Deaconesses and other Church Workers, which has been temporarily closed, owing in part to financial difficulties, is now reopening under the direction of the Executive committee of the National Conference of Deaconesses in conjunction with the Board of Trustees of the Training School and with Deaconess Ruth Johnson in charge. The Deaconesses are undertaking this important work with great faith and courage, the outlook is distinctly promising, and I ask you to give this work your interest, your cooperation and your support.

The past year has seen a marked improvement in the financial status of the diocese and also in our business methods. . . . In 1943, contributions for The Program of the Church increased about $20,000, and 107 congregations paid their quotas in full. This compares with an average of only 83 in the previous 19 years. The committee on The Program of the Church, by means of its literature and its meetings with the clergy and with various groups of laymen, has helped greatly to make this result possible. In January I called the attention of the clergy to the fact that this diocese had been apportioned a quota of $200,000 for the work of the National Council in 1944, and invited their acceptance of their proportionate share of this figure. The response on the whole was very gratifying, and I was able to inform the National Council that we could expect to contribute at least $155,000 towards our quota. This would represent an increase of $27,000 above the previous year. . . .

Through the contributions of the missions themselves, the sale of unused properties, and Board appropriations, the mortgage indebtedness on our mission properties has been reduced by nearly 50% during the last four years. Further than this, the missions and assisted parishes receiving support from the Board have since 1940 increased their pledges towards the clergy stipends by $16,000 per year. . . . Our recently organized Diocesan Investment Trust has made good progress during the past year. Its books were open for subscription on July 15, 1943, and it now holds funds for some 42 churches and 8 Diocesan organizations. Its net assets weer valued as of April 17, 1944, in excess of $3,450,000.

Retirement of Bishops

I want to say a few words as to the recent action of the General Convention in regard to the Retirement of Bishops of the Church.

The Convention adopted an amendment to the Constitution, which reads as follows: "Upon attaining the age of 72 years a Bishop shall tender his resignation from his jurisdiction."

The great preponderance of legal authority holds that such legislation cannot take effect retroactively and that this amendment cannot, in law or in equity, apply to Bishops who were consecrated before this amendment was adopted and who accepted office on the universally established and accepted contractual principle that the office of Bishop includes a life tenure.

In the House of Bishops this amendment was adopted with the distinct understanding, and with the declaration of the Presiding Bishop from the Chair, that it could not apply ex post facto.

It seems clear that this ruling was correct, but the Presiding Bishop has requested eminent legal authorities to give their opinions on the question, and the matter will be further considered at the meeting of the House of Bishops next year and at the next meeting of of the Compulsory Retirement of Bishops of the Church needs far more careful and serious consideration than it has received. There are spiritual and constitutional principles involved which have certainly not had adequate consideration. It is a grave question whether the relation of a bishop with his diocese should be terminated by an authority outside the diocese, acting, quite possibly, against the judgment and desire of the diocese.

But, whatever may be said upon those questions, I hold as do many of our bishops, and as most of the legal authorities who have been consulted hold very decidedly, that the recent amendment adopted by the General Convention does not apply ex post facto and therefore, as the matter now stands, I shall continue to serve you as your Bishop so long as I am given health and strength sufficient.

HERE'S TO YOUTH BROADCASTS

Starting May 20

Chicago, Ill.—Sponsorship of radio's most popular program for young people, "Here's To Youth," includes the United Christian Youth Movement for Protestantism during the second series of 13 broadcasts which begins Saturday, May 20, as announced by the National Broadcasting Company. The UCYM is administered through the International Council of Religious Education, Chicago.

More than 150 radio stations will air the 13 programs during the summer months which are designed to enlist the aid of the listener "in helping youth to contribute its full share to the solution of modern problems." The announcement, which is directed to adult listeners, states: "You can help youth build by assuming increased responsibilities for their welfare, in the homes, in the schools, in the churches, in your communities and in voluntary youth agencies."

The opening half-hour program of the series, broadcast from Hollywood at 1:00 P. M. Eastern War Time, May 20, will present a running commentary on the achievements of America's youth in wartime. Bob Hope will act as master of ceremonies. Each program includes a person identified with the cause of youth as the speaker. Nationally known leaders in several fields have been chosen for the broadcasts.

The 10 youth agencies sponsoring the NBC "Here's To Youth" broadcasts include, in addition to the United Christian Youth Movement, the Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts, Jewish Welfare Board, American Junior Red Cross, Camp Fire Girls, Boys Club of America, National Federation of Settlements, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.

Prayer for D-Day

By H. ST. GEORGE TUCKER
Presiding Bishop

Almighty and most merciful God, Father of all mankind, lover of every life, hear, we beseech Thee, the cry of Thy children in this dark hour of conflict and danger.

Thou has been the refuge and strength, in all generations, of those who put their trust in Thee. May it please Thee this day to draw to Thyself the hearts of those who struggle and endure to the uttermost. Have mercy on them and suffer not their faith in Thee to fail. Guide and protect them by Thy light and strength that they may be kept from evil.

May Thy comfort be sufficient for all who suffer pain or who wait in the agony of uncertainty.

O righteous and omnipotent God, who in their tragedies and conflicts, judgest the hearts of men and the purpose of nations, enter into this struggle with Thy transforming power, that out of its anguish there may come a victory of righteousness. May there arise a new order which shall endure, because in it Thy will shall be done in earth as it is in heaven. Forgive us and cleanse us, as well as those who strive against us, that we may be fit instruments of Thy purposes.

Unto Thy most gracious keeping we commend our loved ones and ourselves, ascribing unto Thee all praise and glory, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

CATHOLIC FOR EVERY TRUTH OF GOD, PROTESTANT AGAINST EVERY ERROR OF MAN

DR. FLETCHER JOINS CAMBRIDGE FACULTY

Cambridge, Mass.—The Episcopal Theological School has announced that the Rev. Dr. Joseph Fletcher, formerly dean of the Cincinnati School of Applied Religion, has joined the Cambridge faculty as Assistant Professor of Practical Theology. This announcement completes the arrangements whereby the Cincinnati School, founded in 1923 by Dr. William S. Keller, will become affiliated with the Episcopal Theological School.

The new affiliation will benefit both of the schools concerned and the general Church. The Summer School conducted in Cincinnati by Dr. Fletcher will be continued at Cambridge with a field work arrangement with social agencies and institutions in the greater Boston area. The year of graduate study formerly given in Cincinnati will likewise be continued in Cambridge. The students of the Episcopal Theological School will benefit because of the addition of Dr. Fletcher to the faculty, and the Cincinnati School will benefit from the faculty of Cambridge and the greater resources of the Cambridge School. Affiliation with Harvard likewise makes courses of study in sociology and psychology available to all students. Thus the transfer of the resources of the Cincinnati School to Cambridge will help to train clergy more adequately for effective leadership in the social field.

As in the past the courses of training and graduate credit for them will be open to students for the ministry of all communions. The enrollment in these courses will be separate from the regular course of study for the A. B. degree, although all courses will be open to enrolled students.

HAVEN . . .

By J. W. KENNEDY

WE ARE NEARLY ALL guilty of using dull spiritual tools and weapons in our construction of the good life and our destruction of the evil in life. Therefore, this week we might think on how to sharpen our dull spiritual tools. This thought occurred to me as I cut the grass in my yard last Friday evening after dinner. Time and again the blade would attack a wild onion stem and be vanquished, just skimming the side of it, leaving it standing erect and victorious behind! The mower blades were dull of course. I thought how futile our dull spiritual weapons and tools are against the enemy of good and the obstacles to construction. The warrior keeps his weapon well-oiled and gleaming; the artisan keeps his tool sharp and in good repair. The warrior knows his very life may depend upon the condition of his weapon and his ability to use it; while the artisan knows his livelihood, his very future happiness and worth depends upon the effectiveness of his tools and the expert manipulation of them. But how do we sharpen spiritual tools and weapons, and what are they anyway? Paul listed a few spiritual reserves to be used as weapons or tools as the need demanded—all of them are convertible and will either help us to fight or to work.

TRUTH is the uniform of the warrior and the leather apron of the artisan. Peace is the heavy duty shoes of both warrior and artisan. Faith is the protection against the temptations of the warrior to give up, to fear and run away; and the temptations of the artisan to do a shoddy job, to be bored with the monotony of it. Salvation is the headgear of both, the metal helmet of the warrior and the wide-brimmed hat or tight skul cap of the artisan—both protection for the directing center of action, the brain. Lastly, Paul mentions in Ephesians 6:14-17 the word of God as the sword of the Spirit for the warrior and the plow or blade for the farmer and artisan. Very few Christian warriors and workers are so well equipped, and even if they are so equipped they often fail to keep their equipment in good shape—sharp, well-oiled, at hand, tested and ready for instant use. Too often they and their equipment are dull and require a bit of limbering up and practice to be at all adequate for the job to be done. When the enemy attacks there is not time for anything more than to grab your weapon and fight; and evil is a stealthy subtle opponent, against whom we must be on 24 hour alert. Nor is there time to take a refresher course when a job needs to be done in the field or in the shop. Delay may mean failure and loss and suffering.

BUT OUR INITIAL QUESTION was, how are we to sharpen spiritual weapons and tools? Let us consider them both together as instruments of the Spirit to be used for whatever purpose there is need at any given moment—to fight or to work.

Take truth. We sharpen truth against the emery wheel of desire. For if our desire is sufficiently strong we shall seek without ceasing until we find the maximum of truth needed. But truth has jagged edges until we buff it against our willingness to accept its judgment and its leading. Truth must be kept bright by familiarity with it.

Take righteousness. We sharpen our concept and our conduct of righteousness against the rough raw surface of injustice, corruption, greed, brutal selfishness, and against the rub of all other things contrary to the right. That is why Christians are the greatest champions for righteousness when most exposed to its opposite. Do not attempt to escape contact. It will dull righteousness as a weapon and a tool.

Take the Gospel of peace. We keep it sharp and shining by comparing it with the gospel of hate and the gospel of physical power, and by seeing the terrible need of it and our responsibility for proclaiming it.

Take faith. We sharpen it against the file of doubt and despair, for such testing removes the rust and

The Collect

O God, who as at this time didst teach the hearts of thy faithful people by sending to them the light of thy Holy Spirit; Grant us by the same Spirit to have a right judgment in all things, and evermore to rejoice in his holy Comfort; through the merits of Jesus Christ our Saviour, who liveth and reigneth with thee, in the unity of the same Spirit, one God, world without end. Amen.

The Church and the Returning Soldier

By OLIVER J. HART

RECENTLY A MOTHER told me about her aviator son who was home on furlough after having flown over fifty missions. She said, "He is very different from the way he was when he left home. Sometimes when we are alone, he will talk. I never say anything. I just listen and try to understand." When a wise mother is bewildered and finds it so terribly difficult to understand her own son, it is obvious that it will be well nigh impossible for the general public to understand the returning soldier.

Those of us who have had some experience in combat areas have, at least, a faint idea of the problem, but a chaplain who has served over eighteen months with the Air Force in Europe told me that there was a distinct barrier between the men who have flown on missions over enemy territory and those who have not. This being true, how much greater will be the gap between those who have served in the areas of combat and the civilians here at home who have never experienced even a bombing raid. It is impossible to over emphasize the difficulties in our way if we want to escape the fate of being well meaning but very blundering people in our efforts to help the returning soldier to help himself.

I do not profess to have any inside knowledge of what the attitudes of returning service personnel will be. I do know that those in the Services who have for months been most closely in touch with returning service personnel are the first to admit that they do not know and that they have had to change their methods of procedure from time to time in the light of newly acquired insights. I shall mention three specific things which I think that the Churches should be doing.

FIRST, the Church should keep in touch with their Service personnel wherever they may be. In many, many churches this is being carefully and lovingly done. In some churches this most important matter is left almost entirely to the pastor, but in many others it is joyfully done by the members as a whole. Obviously the more contacts there are between members of a Church and the service personnel, the easier it will be for the Church to minister to them when they return. One soldier writes to me, "When the members of the military are discharged and return to their communities the men from the parishes should immediately make contact with them. Unless an acquaintance is made now, the plan will accomplish little at the end of the war." This is only one of many reasons why the contact with the men and women in service should not be left to the pastor alone. I know what it means to a man in the service to get a note from his home Church, with a reminder that he is remembered in the prayers offered there. I would like to stress the necessity of the families keeping their pastor informed of the correct address of the men in service. This is imperative. If a man is returned to a hospital in this country his family is notified at once. If the family will immediately notify their pastor, he in turn will write to the minister nearest that hospital and ask him to be of any assistance possible to the man or his family. For example, the rector of a church in Boston writes to the Rev. William Lanigan, of Phoenixville, that Robert Jones of his parish is in the Valley Forge General Hospital. The Rev. Mr. Lanigan immediately contacts the man and is able to be of help to him and his family. The clergy in the neighborhood of the Valley Forge Hospital are all willing to help, and will do so if they get the names promptly, and the best way for the local pastor to be able to do this is to have the full cooperation of the families of service personnel in keeping his addresses up-to-date.

Particularly should the local church keep in close touch with the Service men and women who are returning to civilian life by the thousands each month. This must be done immediately. The first two weeks are the most important. We pray that the time will come quickly when all the service men and women will return, but now they are returning quietly, one or two at a time. If we can learn now how to minister to those who are returning to civilian life, we shall be better prepared to minister to the larger number when the fighting ceases. Some are physically incapacitated. Many more are suffering from spiritual, mental, and social disabilities. If the Church is to serve their spiritual needs it must understand them. It must realize that these men and women cannot be expected to settle down into the routine existence from which they have been uprooted. They need a vast amount of personal friendship. To do the job, we must care enough to listen. The most important thing is our attitude. If we are critical or sentimental, we will not be helpful. So much depends on the way in which we listen. It must be genuinely interested listening. Otherwise we will do more harm than good.

SECOND, the Church leaders should keep themselves informed about the provisions of the federal, state and community agencies for returning service men and women, but the Church should not seek to compete with these agencies. The Church has a special mission. A Marine officer wrote to me, "I hope that you will emphasize that the Church is still the one agency which, because of its long experience, is equipped to do and give something which no secular agency can give. Urge the Church not to compete with the United States Employment Service, the American Legion, the Chamber of Commerce, the Labor Unions and other agencies which are working in the employment field." I agree with this officer. The Church should not enter the re-employment field, but should be able to direct the returning soldier to the proper agency if such assistance is needed. An employment opportunity may be lost for want of information, but there is not much likelihood of that happening. The Rehabilitation Division of the various arms of the services are being adequately organized to take care of the re-employment, hospitalization, vocational training, pension claims, and other things affecting the returning service personnel. A National Conference on the Ministry of the Church to the Returning Service Men and Women is being held in Baltimore this week. Real-

Understanding the Prophets

ABRAHAM

God's Pioneer

By WILLIAM R. MOODY

I AM BEGINNING today a series about the Old Testament Prophets. I am doing it deliberately, and after much thought. I know that the Old Testament is not popular among Christians today. I have heard many people,—and not a few of them clergymen,—express themselves about that. They feel that there is nothing good in the Old Testament that is not better said in the New; and they point to the undeniable fact that there are many things in the Old Testament which are well below Christian standards of belief, and some things which are actually repugnant to Christian standards of belief. In spite of that, I believe that the Old Testament is worthy of our respect; that it has a message for us, and for our time; and that, properly understood and interpreted, it takes its place beside the New Testament in the revelation of the character of God, and of His will for the world.

We, who are Christians, should by no means forget that it was the Old Testament which prepared the minds and the hearts of men for the coming of the Lord Jesus. It formed the setting in which He appeared like a jewel. It was from this Book,—or I should say from these Books,—that He learned His lessons as a youth. He took its great moral principles for granted, built His Gospel upon its idea of God, quotations from its pages were ready on His lips even when He was upon the cross, and He looked upon His life and work as the fulfilment of its promises.

IF THE STUDY of the Old Testament had no other purpose than to show Christians the rock out of which they were hewn, that, in itself, would be enough; but there is another and a deeper reason for its study. The New Testament does not show us the whole of God's revelation; it shows us the climax of the revelation. The fruit of the tree is not the whole tree, and to continue to enjoy the fruit we must preserve the tree.

The Gospel of Jesus takes the great moral and theological principles of the Old Testament as its foundation, and does not take the time to restate them. The house of the Gospel rises above its foundation of Old Testament teaching, but the foundation is there; and you cannot build the house of the Gospel in the life of any man, with the assumption that it will stand, until you have taken the trouble and the time to put down in that man's life the basic foundation in thought and morality upon which alone the Gospel may be built. It is impossible to understand the Sermon on the Mount until you have first understood the Ten Commandments, on which that Sermon is based. It is impossible to understand the Holy Communion until you have first understood the doctrine of God out of which the Holy Communion came as the perfect flower.

Our modern distrust of the Old Testament has come as a natural and perhaps a necessary, reaction against the pernicious and mistaken doctrine of literal inspiration. The theory which laid it down as a fact that God dictated the Bible word for word, and that every phrase in it, and every comma, and every period, from cover to cover, carries the stamp of Divine approval, was a fearful error. It threw the whole Bible out of focus. It destroyed the picture of the gradual ripening of man's understanding of God. It put pre-Christian, and even sub-Christian statements on exactly the same basis of authority as the words of Jesus Himself. It made the dawn of man's religious understanding equal with its noon. It was inevitable that such an erroneous interpretation of the Bible would be overthrown; and, the mind of man being what it is, it was also inevitable that the force required to overthrow such an error should carry us on beyond the point of its overthrow.

THE TIME HAS NOW COME to call a halt! The time has come to make a restatement of the value of these Old Testament writings,—for the value is there! God did not dictate the Bible, word for word, but His inspiration is in it. Not every word of it is worth the same, but taken together, and, as a whole, it gives us a clear and unmistakable record,—the only clear and unmistakable record that we have in the whole history of man,—of God's progressive revelation of Himself to men.

The Christian Religion asserts that God has revealed Himself to men. This assertion runs counter to much modern thinking, but the Christian Church makes it, and stands or falls by it. If God has not spoken to us, revealing His nature and His character and His will for mankind, then what we have to say of Him comes with no authority other than that of the human intellect, feeble and partial. If we have discovered God for ourselves,—or have created the thought of God out of ourselves,—and know nothing of Him save what we ourselves have discovered, we cannot be sure that we know enough. A God, content to remain in the shadows, waiting for man to draw aside the veil is unworthy of a free man's worship. The Christian Religion asserts that God has spoken, and that His great act of self-revelation came to its climax in the life of Jesus Christ.

Jesus is the fruit of the tree of life, whose very leaves are for the healing of the nations; but the tree which bore the fruit has branches, and a body, and roots that run deep into the soil. It is my purpose, in these articles which will follow, to show you how they run.

Nothing of importance comes into the world full-grown. The Revelation of God which came to its climax in Jesus of Nazareth had a definite and a determinable beginning. It began when God called Abraham.

SUCH A MAN as Abraham did live, and we have excellent modern evidence corroborating the Old Testament account of his life. I have here beside me as I write a book entitled, "Abraham: Recent Discoveries and Hebrew Origins," published in 1936 by Scribners, and written by Sir Leonard Woolley,—not a clergyman, but an archaeologist,—the man in charge of the excavation of the city of Ur of the Chaldees, Abraham's city, the city from which the Patriarch set forth on his momentous journey.

Sir Leonard Woolley found at Ur no written record of Abraham's life, no plaque bearing the Patriarch's name; but he did find as he uncovered that ancient city, buried for thousands of years,—he did find as he and his assistants reconstructed the daily life of the people of Ur, countless indications which cast a flood of new understanding and of confirmation upon the Old Testament stories of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob.

I cannot take your time to go into all this. Here is a whole book about it. I can only say that if you are interested in such things this is a fine book to read.

I will mention one incident only, as typical of the kind of evidence this book presents. The archaeologists found that the life of the city of Ur centered around the great Temple of the Moon-goddess who was the reigning deity of that land. The date of the Jewish Passover,—and as a consequence of our Easter,—follows the spring-festival of this pagan deity in that long-forgotten land.

The temple of the Moon-goddess in Ur was a vast structure, built much like the sacrificial pyramids in ancient Mexico,—like the great pyramid at Chitchen-Itza. It rose, terrace after terrace, and story after story, out of the very center of the great, flat, sprawling town, culminating at the top in a Sanctuary, a Holy of Holies, where the goddess herself was supposed to reside. That Sanctuary, lifted up above the town, dominated the life of Ur. The people of the city had a name for it,—they called it "Heaven".

There, on the summit of the great pyramid, before the "Heavenly Door", rose the smoke of perpetual sacrifices. And up each of the four faces of the pyramid ran a broad stairway; and up and down those stairs all day passed the processions of the priests in the holy vestments of their office.

Many years after Abraham had left the city of Ur, his grandson, Jacob,—who had never been in Chaldea, went out from his father's house in haste and in troubled mind to go into exile. The night came upon him as he journeyed; and he spread his cloak upon the naked ground and lay down to rest, pillowing his head upon a stone. As he slept a fitful sleep, he dreamed; and in his dream he saw the great Temple of Ur, in Chaldea, with its broad stairway leading up from the earth to the Sanctuary of God, which the people of Ur called "Heaven". And moving up and down the stairway he saw the heavenly priests, in their holy vestments.

And Jacob awoke in the cold dawn; and he was afraid because of the vividness of his dream. And he said, "How dreadful is this place! This is none other than the house of God! And this is the Gate of Heaven!" And that place where Jacob dreamed is called "Beth-el," which means "The House of God", to this day!

The memory of Ur, and of its Temple, in the mind of Jacob, was not his own memory,—it was a family memory. God spoke to this man out of the family memory, and we must remember that; for we, spiritually, are the children of Abraham, and God speaks to us, today, out of the pattern of belief which had its beginning then.

When this story of Jacob's dream, faithfully preserved from father to son, from father to son, from father to son, was finally written down, the city of Ur had been buried in ashes and dust for a thousand years. The memory had outlived the Temple, the dream had outlived the city. The Voice of God, speaking in the hearts of men, using the stuff of memory and of experience, had begun the building of another city, a fairer Temple, not made with hands.

Everything has its beginning, and the beginning of every living thing is small. When we go back to the time of Abraham, we go back to the dawn of man's religious understanding, and not to its noon. God's purposeful revelation of Himself to man had a beginning, and it began in pagan Ur, of the Chaldees. In that city, encrusted with pagan prejudice, and dark with the ignorance of ten thousand years, God spoke to a man, and said, "Follow Me!"

HOW GOD SPOKE, we cannot say,—yet speak He did. Perhaps through some vague restlessness within that man's soul,—some dissatisfaction with things as they were; perhaps through some turmoil within him, some inner struggle which laid his spirit bare, and prepared him to hear the Voice of the Almighty. We know that he had lost a brother whom he loved more dearly than he loved himself.

How God spoke we do not know, yet speak He did. God sought Abraham, and found him. God broke through the crust of paganism, and the piled up weight of inherited spiritual night to reach that man's soul. And God said, "Abraham! You must leave this place and this people! You must come out of this city and shake the dust of it from your feet! You must leave your home behind you, and follow Me!"

And Abraham believed God; and it was counted unto him for righteousness. He went out from Ur at God's command, seeking that other city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God!

And I say to you that everyone who puts his selfishness behind him, to follow Christ, is numbered among Abraham's children!

We, brethren, as Isaac was, are children of God's mighty promise, which He made to His first Pioneer, of old,—"In thee, and in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed!" Amen.

WHEN I WAKEN

WHEN I waken in the night
Roused by training planes in flight,
Strange the sound should bring you near—
You, three thousand miles from here.

Also strange I do not find
Doubt or fear within my mind—
Fear for you who nightly fly
Through a troubled alien sky
That people in the darkened lands
May be released from ruthless hands.

When I waken in the night,
Hearing hidden planes in flight,
I turn again to sleep and know
That God is always where you go.

the dirt and keeps faith rubbed to a high gleam of certainty and dependence upon the only One who is able to stand and help us to stand in the midst of such a world.

Take salvation. It is kept sharp and ready through the sandpaper of repentance, which is used whenever rough spots and slivers appear.

Take the Word of God. This keeps all of our weapons in shape and grinds them all into the finest degree of usefulness. As we read His word it sharpens our desires for knowledge of Him and of service for Him and of living life to the full for Him. He keeps us clad with the whole armor and equipped with the complete tool chest of the Spirit, and we use them for Him as He directs each day's dawn.

Whitsunday

This Whitsunday, 1944, finds God's Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, continuing its work in a world torn by wars and dissensions. The Church was not born in a peaceful world. The world of the first centuries of the Church was far from Christian. In a real sense our world today is not Christian. But in this semi-pagan world the Christian Church is at work. Men have attempted to kill its influence, but without success. The Church is of divine origin, and the world cannot kill that which is divine.

One thing should be uppermost in the thoughts and prayers of all sincere Christians today—may God's Church present a united front. Pray for our own Commission on Approaches to Unity and all other agencies within the Church that are working for a re-united Christendom.

The Power of God came to a group of His waiting disciples. They believed in that Power. They learned that through it and by it, they could revolutionize the world. The world again waits to be made over by the Power of God, and that Power is resident in His Church.

A Singular Event

The Virginia deputation to the Cleveland Convention was much surprised and in a mild degree shocked, when one morning the Cleveland Press came out with this headline—"Tucker Quits Virginia." One's mental processes could not absorb the thought of a Tucker quitting Virginia. Of course the headline had reference to Bishop St. George Tucker's resignation as Bishop of Virginia, effective this June 1st.

When the one hundred and forty-ninth Council of Virginia meets in All Saints' Church this week, it will be the last Council of the Diocese over which Bishop Tucker as Bishop of the Diocese will preside. He was elected Coadjutor to Bishop William Cabell Brown in 1926, and became Bishop upon the death of Bishop Brown in 1927. So for fourteen years he has guided the Diocese of Virginia.

His great talents for leadership were recognized by the Church at the Cincinnati Convention, and he was elected Presiding Bishop, which office he will hold until 1946. In spite of the pressure of work caused by this additional office he has kept in close touch with his diocese. Virginia will miss his fine leadership but is happy in recognizing that he is still our bishop.

Virginia is indeed fortunate in having a man follow Bishop Tucker who is in every sense qualified to carry on the heritage of the diocese. Frederick Deane Goodwin was elected Coadjutor Bishop in 1930. Bishop Tucker and he have worked together as a fine team. So with regrets that events have made it necessary for Bishop Tucker to resign, the Southern Churchman salutes the new Bishop of Virginia and bids him Godspeed in his work.

"Why Invite Another War?"

The ways of the Roman hierarchy are strange. Even their most severe critic acknowledges the influence and weight of the Roman Church's influence. When an individual or an organization has great influence great responsibility goes with that influence. We are baffled by the attitude of the Roman Church in relation to the Soviet government. The following letter, first published in the State Journal of Madison, Wisconsin, expresses our view:

Editor, The State Journal: News of great interest is the announcement made by Archbishop Grigori, of Stalingrad, that the Russian Orthodox Church is soon to open a theological institute in Moscow. This will mark the reestablishment of theological schools in Russia for the first time since 1917. The recent welcome of the Archbishop of York in Moscow and the strong leadership given by the Patriarch of Moscow are facts worth our attention.

Russia has won the admiration of the world by courage and effectiveness in this world war. The war is truly a deadly and decisive conflict. The fact is Russia is fighting in the same cause as our own country! therefore, it seems to me strange that Father Fulton J. Sheen should be so pointedly quarrelsome in his constant public speeches against Russia. Christians know they have to fight in such a war as this, but why set about being quarrelsome and invite another war?

The Russian Church, in the past, sought temporal power. The people rose against the Church, and it lost its property, but saved its soul. Father Sheen has been quoted in the New York Times as crying out for world pestilence if the city of Rome, which the Germans are now using as a fortress, should be attacked by our troops, who are now fighting in Italy. We know from the Gospel that our Lord wept over Jerusalem; we also know our Lord did not ask special privilege for the Holy City.

With due regard for the Christian Gospel and respect for a great Christian tradition developed in Rome, I ask Father Sheen why he cries out for a world curse if, unintentionally, a church building is damaged in Rome while the Germans are using it as a fortress?

I fail to find any record of the Dean of St. Paul's, London, or the Archbishop of Canterbury calling down maledictions while they were deliberately bombed. On the natural level, is it good sportsmanship, and on the supernatural level, I ask Father Sheen if he is worried about the future of a city which is as great in Christian and cultural tradition as Rome? Would he have Rome disassociate itself in tradition from our Lord's izing that the picture will be constantly changing, this Conference will endeavor to work out ways in which church leaders can keep themselves up-to-date on all agencies of a local, state, or federal nature, organized for the rehabilitation and welfare of former service personnel. It is in this way that the Church can best show its concern for the physical and economic welfare of the returning service men and women.

THE CHURCH AND THE RETURNING SOLDIER

THIRD, the Church's specific and definite responsibility is to get these men and women to be active members in the Fellowship of Christ's religion. Ninety percent of this task lies with the local church. Denominational headquarters or Church Federations may be able to offer suggestions, but success or failure will largely depend on your imagination, your devotion; the thought and action of vestries or boards of parishes and the interest of individual congregations. The corporate worship, life, and work of our local churches must be enlarged and vitalized to hold their interest. The Church must offer the moral equivalent for war, a genuinely Christian cause in which service personnel may give themselves as completely as they have done in war. One soldier writes, "The traditional parochial approach will never touch the returning servicemen. The average minister who has led a cloistered life, whose interests have been limited to the paltry problems of church finance, or who has been compelled to pull his punches because of the social or political aspect of his official board will never be able to reach the men who are fighting this war. The traditional sermon will not interest him. The small and circumscribed interests of the average parish will seem nostalgic in the light of his own service pilgrimage. The talk of sacrifice will seem paltry compared to his own experiences of personal suffering."

Whatever else we do, we must not forget that the paramount need will be for wise counsellors and pastors. Here I would make two specific suggestions. Professional and specially chosen laymen and women should be recruited to assist, but the burden of leadership in each congregation will largely fall on the clergy. The clergy, therefore, should be given every possible encouragement by their laypeople to attend conferences such as the one being held this week in Baltimore in order to prepare themselves to be wiser counsellors and pastors. The laymen should free their pastor from absorption in work which they could do as well or better and thus give him the opportunity of preparing himself for this ministry. Wherever possible, conferences between chaplains and local ministers should pool their ideas as to the best ways to meet the religious needs of the returning service personnel. It is particularly valuable to consult with chaplains who have had combat area experience and who are in a position to tell us what the men think of the Church and what kind of militant spiritual leadership the service men need.

THOSE IN SERVICE are very critical of selfishness on the home front. Their condemnatory attitude in many instances is based on incomplete knowledge but who would be so foolish as to claim that there is no evidence to support their contention! Whether their criticism is right or wrong, of this I am convinced that what happens immediately after the war will shape the life of the world for many years to come. These returning Service men and women will instinctively crave a chance to live in a world of fair play and decency and honesty. They may be inarticulate and even deny the existence of any such craving but it will be there nevertheless. If the Church is ready to offer genuine spiritual guidance, their faith will grow and the energies of these millions of men and women will be spent in constructive ways. If the opposite should happen, these men and women will become completely disillusioned, take their cue from what they see, and pursue a policy of dog eat dog. The influence of the men and women now in the Service will definitely shape the future of our Nation. Never has the Church had a greater opportunity nor a more difficult one. As a highly trained athlete often goes to pieces as soon as his competition is over, so likewise those in Service, who are making the greatest sacrifices, will surely deteriorate upon their return unless they have something to challenge them. If the Church is awake to her responsibilities, she can offer the necessary lead.

A doctor in the Navy writes to me, "The Church has failed at home and will find it difficult to salvage much at the expense of war." The recognition of failure—and those who love the Church most are most conscious of her failures—should spur us on to a realistic solution of the problem of how to bring about a spiritual readjustment in the lives of those returning from bitter war experiences. Every day counts. The greatness of the need should wake the Church up and lead to many practical steps of dealing wisely with the problem.

IF WE JUST SIT in our churches and wait for something to happen, there will probably be a worse reaction from religion and Christian morality than after the last war. When the senior warden of one of our large churches was asked about their plans to minister to returning service men and women, he replied, "There is no particular need to make any preparation. They will be automatically and readily absorbed, as they were after World War I." The fact is that they were not absorbed and, if we fail again, our failure will be the most tragic of all time. The task will require forthright and vigorous thinking, and the will to sacrifice. If the returning service personnel become integrated into the full life of any church, it will be a church which has a militant spiritual leadership. All of our churches should be on the alert in the name of Christ to welcome the returning men and women back and to integrate them in the worship, life, and work of the Church.

Own City, Jerusalem?—Francis J. Bloodgood, Rector, St. Andrew's Church.

Dr. Bloodgood, it seems to us, has placed his finger upon a very vital point. It is not only the Roman Church but other groups and individuals, in this country, that are continually furthering suspicions as to the intended motives of Soviet cooperation with the Allied Nations. This attitude does not make for a just and lasting peace. We do not wish to see the Soviet form of government adopted in this country. We do not believe it fits into our heritage, our way of life. It has done great things for the people of Russia, and they in turn have done great things for us. Let us cast out suspicions and learn to trust our Allies.

Mediterranean Ports Visited

Church of England Bishop Confirms 920 Officers and Men

A ten-day visitation to Mediterranean ports, for confirmations and conferences with chaplains, is described by Bishop B. F. Simpson of Southwark in the Gibraltar Diocesan Gazette:

"The invitation came suddenly. Of course I jumped at the opportunity, flying from a west country aerodrome at one A. M., dropping down at the entrance to the Mediterranean for breakfast, and reaching Algiers in time for lunch the same day. I flew to Naples and then on to Foggia, where three of us set out in two cars for a ten-days' trip. I returned to Naples and again went forward on the western coast, across the Volturno, and then crossed to Bari on the east coast. After going back to Naples for two days, I flew to Sicily and had one sunny day under Mount Etna, hurrying on by plane to Tunis, where the deputy chaplain general met me and we had a week's car journey together through North Africa back to Algiers, from which I flew home via Marrakesh.

"This meant some 5,500 miles in the air, 1,100 by car in Italy and 750 in North Africa, with stops at sixteen centers, where the program was always much the same; a confirmation in the morning and a short service or conference for chaplains in the afternoon. On Sundays there were usually two or three large services in the cinema of an occupied Italian town.

"I confirmed about 920 officers and men and met some 280 chaplains. I have brought back some wonderful memories; nights spent in villas, hotels, caravans, tents or less; thirty headquarter messes where senior officers gave me a delightful welcome; wonderfully reverent confirmation services, from three men in a hospital to 175 in the banqueting hall of an old Italian castle; long days of travel through the Apennines, or through snow on African mountains; the blue Mediterranean seen from the air above, among fantastic islands of white cloud all around; evening sunlight on the snow of the Atlas mountains succeeded next morning by rain in Scotland.

"I have also brought back a keen appreciation of the work of our chaplains, endorsed by every senior officer to whom I talked, who all felt that the army now expects a padre to put his spiritual duties first, and that most of them were rising to this demand in circumstances of difficulty and danger, and were respected and trusted by officers and men alike.

"I was much impressed by the solid pastoral work which they were achieving as evidenced by the number and spirit of the confirmation candidates and by the excellent attendance at voluntary services. One chaplain told me that he had taken seventeen services for scattered units on a single Sunday. It was all good and encouraging, and gives point to my appeal that our parish churches at home should be ready to welcome our men when they return, into a very vigorous and living fellowship."

DESSERTLESS DINNERS

New York, N. Y.—A Church family which assures that it is anonymous by not signing the letter, wrote to the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief and enclosed $7.60. It was explained that the amount was saved by "giving up desserts at meals. Each night we would decide what we were or might be having, estimate its cost, and put the money in a box on the table. It was fun. Apple sauce and cookies would net the box only about 25 cents, but once in the spring we played we were having strawberry shortcake and we had to put in $1.25."

The dessertless days were through Lent, and the family cheerfully advises other families to practice this useful kind of self-denial during Lent next year.

Available For Prayer

Minute News of Invasion Comes Archbishop of Canterbury Urges Opening of All Places of Worship

London, England—Following the suggestion made to the Bishops of the Episcopal Church throughout this country, the Archbishop of Canterbury has urged that all who have charge of parish churches and other places of worship make them available for prayer the minute news is received of the opening of the invasion of Western Europe.

In the United States, Presiding Bishop Tucker has seen ample evidence that his suggestion has been accepted widely, and that everywhere churches will be opened, and special prayers said, when the invasion starts.

"They should be ready," said the Archbishop of Canterbury, "to lead services of intercession and dedication at times when in each locality people can most easily come together, and they should be prepared to lead great congregations in prayer on the following Sunday."

The following two new prayers are suggested by the Archbishop:

"Heavenly Father, God both of righteousness and peace, have mercy upon the nations now engaged in bitter war. Cleanse both us and our enemies of hatred and covetousness. Make us so worthy of our cause, so steadfast in Thy strength, that no weakness may delay the victory of our arms, and no selfishness mar the righteousness of our peace; through Jesus Christ our Lord."

"O Lord God, we humbly dedicate to Thee ourselves, our nation and our cause, place in Thy hands all we have and all we are and all we desire, in the Name of Jesus Christ our Lord."

WORKING TO BECOME UNAIDED DIOCESE

Mishawaka, Ind.—Northern Indiana hopes to become an unaided diocese by the end of this year. The diocesan convention so voted. The action requires an adjustment of the budget, so was referred to the Bishop and Council to work out details.

The National Council appropriations to Northern Indiana for 1944 are $900 for white work at South Bend, $634 for white work at Valparaiso, Hobart and Gary; and $1,320 for a woman worker, a total of $2,854.

NEW OFFICE BUILDING

Nenana, Alaska—Bishop John B. Bentley, of Alaska, has bought a building to serve for the present as District office. The building was formerly a barber shop in the town, and it was hauled out to Nenana by a huge "caterpillar" loaned by the airfield, and is now being put in readiness for use. Says Miss Olive Tomlin, "We are so amused at the front of the building, which is white, and has large black letters on it: 'Barber Shop, Candy, Baths' ".
